Dear Member,

Recently, it was brought to my attention that the Northern Territory government is considering introducing a bill into Parliament to legalise Voluntary Assisted Dying.

I oppose this proposal.

Now is the time to stop this folly of treating human beings as something you can get rid of when their so called, "use by date" is up.

We are not to treat people as a liability and an expense when they become old and weak and not able to be productive. Life is precious and older people still have a lot to contribute to society, they have wisdom of years and are very necessary to educate and warn the young of the perils of inexperience. There is a severe shortage of wisdom and caution in the world today in government and in the family. To remove these older and steady citizens from society before their "used up" time will be to great detriment of our nation, state and territories.

It is an indictment on our nation for even considering it, let alone passing it into law.
