QUESTION ON NOTICE 6.16

How much is it costing to house, treat and care for the male client who resides part-time if not full-time at a McMinns Lagoon property, which involves two correctional officers, rental of the property, insurance on the property and the cost of carers for the male client?

ANSWER

The rent on the property at McMinns Lagoon is approximately $35 000 per annum.

Two support workers were provided to support the client at the property for three to four hours, twice a week. The cost per week for the carers is approximately $4370.

The insurance is covered by the landlord because the Department of Health is a tenant. There is no insurance on contents because the Northern Territory Government self insures.

The question on the cost of the correctional officers will need to be referred to the Department of Justice.
