

LEGISLATIVE ASSEMBLY OF THE NORTHERN TERRITORYWRITTEN QUESTION

Ms J Carney

to Minister for Police, Fire and Emergency Services

Humpty Doo Police and Fire Station

The Humpty Doo Police and Fire Station is intended to provide services for Darwin's growing rural population but key facilities have not been included. For example, there is only one holding cell which means that only one male can be held at a time with no facilities to hold female offenders. Similarly, there are no toilet facilities available meaning prisoners must be taken out of the cell to access these facilities to the toilet block.

The holding cell does not have Closed Circuit TV (CCTV) monitoring which is a requirement under the Aboriginal Deaths in Custody recommendations and with the Palmerston cells also not compliant, it means that indigenous prisoners and excess prisoners at the Humpty Doo Station have to be driven to Police Headquarters in Mitchell Street in the city.

The Berrimah cells are not available as they are currently being used to store archives and records. This will mean that the whole process will take Police off-line for up to four hours while they are taking prisoners to the Mitchell Street holding cells. If there is more than one prisoner that needs to be transferred, it effectively takes out one officer from active duty for a whole shift.

1. What was the reason behind failing to plan for simple things like holding cells, CCTV and toilets. Is this really the station police wanted or is this a result of police not having sufficient funds to do the job properly.
2. How many police have been allocated to the facility and what hours do they operate from.
