Beaufort Hotel

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

What is the total amount of money owed by the Beaufort Hotel to the Northern Territory government for electricity, water and sewerage charges and payroll tax?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not in a position to give the exact details. I can give approximate figures owed by the Beaufort Hotel. In doing so, I advise honourable members that the Northern Territory government is in a secure position in that it could close the Beaufort Hotel down and regain those moneys owed to it at any time. Indeed, the Leader of the Opposition was reported in an article in the Katherine Times in September last year as saying that the NT government had no option but to support Burgundy Royale, the financially troubled owners of the Beaufort Centre. He is now asking how much financial support we have provided to them by way of leniency in respect of their electricity account. I understand the figure is somewhere in the vicinity of $800 000 for electricity. The amount owed in payroll tax would be somewhere in the vicinity of $250 000. I do not have the figures for water and sewerage charges but I will provide them during the course of question time.

Alice Springs to Darwin Railway

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

What is the nature of recent developments regarding construction of the Darwin to Alice Springs railway line?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is with pleasure that I take the opportunity to inform the Assembly of the position with respect to the construction of our much-awaited railway line from Alice Springs to Darwin. Honourable members will be aware that, over the last several years, our government has used every available avenue to try to promote the development of this line and to have the federal government honour its clear and unequivocal undertaking to the people of the Northern Territory, given in an agreement reached in 1910, that it would construct a railway line to Darwin. Territorians do have some patience, but I think that really is stretching patience to its absolute limits.

During the 1983 election campaign, there were clear and unequivocal promises, without qualification, by the current federal government that it would build a railway line. That promise lasted less than a month after it was elected. Despite that, we proceeded as diligently and as expeditiously as possible towards the construction of a line. Members will be aware that we formed a Railway Executive Group which prepared reports in 1986 on the financial viability of a railway line to be operated by private enterprise. That project was found to be viable in a 20-year time frame. The income generation would exceed well beyond the 20-year period. As a 20-year repayment period, it would work. I have made 2 statements in the Assembly in the last 12 months with respect to that.

Mr Speaker, recently, I visited Japan as part of the work towards the development of a private enterprise consortium for the construction of this rail line. I know there is degree of scepticism in the community as to whether or not this will be at all possible, and there is no doubt that it will not be an easy task to achieve a private enterprise line. However, it is far from being an impossible task. I have been very heartened by the response that has arisen in the last month and I suspect that that has been stimulated further by the recent re-election of a CLP government in the Northern Territory so that people will have the confidence of dealing with a government that is in existence.

It was our first visit to Japan and we anticipated opening the subject up and that, perhaps after several visits, we might arouse interest. The interest was far higher than that and, as a consequence, we have formed what we have called a Japan Australia Transport Study Group. This comprises, from the Japanese side, representatives from the Japan Railway Technical Services, known as JATS, Japan Railway and Freight Company and the Long Term Credit Bank of Japan, and from Australia, Henry and Walker, with the involvement of 1 of its shareholders, Kumagai Gumi. The study group will be chaired by a gentleman called Dr Robert Ishizaki. He is from Japan and he will be working as a coordinator of this project in Japan without consultancy fees or other costs. Dr Ishizaki will be in Australia next month and he will visit Darwin.

I was even more pleased when I arrived back in Australia on the morning of Good Friday and received a message at the airport that TNT Ltd had expressed keenness to be involved in the operational side of the railway. I have had brief discussions with Sir Peter Abeles since that time and, after these sittings, I will be taking the opportunity to have further discussions with Sir Peter Abeles and other potential Australian participants to bring together this consortium to develop a private enterprise line. I reiterate that it is and has been our intention that this be a completely private enterprise line if that is at all possible physically. I will not exclude the possibility of some government involvement, although my objective is to have no government involvement in the line.

I might say here that the project may involve more than a railway line. The line is really the linchpin in the development of a transportation system which involves shipping, ports and rail as related transport modes. It is possible that other projects can be mixed and matched with the railway in a consortium-backed, multi-project venture which could well improve the viability of the total scheme and provide more investment opportunities for the Northern Territory.

Mr Speaker, we have a long way to go. I am hopeful that I will be able to make a more definite statement to the Assembly in June. I am proceeding steadily but carefully, without making any wild claims. I made the statement yesterday and I repeat it again now: we will not rest until we see the railway line in place and the first train arrives in Darwin from Alice Springs.

Meat Inspection Services

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Mr Speaker, I asked this question of the previous Minister for Primary Production but, not having received a satisfactory reply, I ask it again. Can the minister assure me that, when contractual arrangements regarding meat inspection services are finalised between the Department of Primary Industry and the Northern Territory government, there will be no detriment to our export and local abattoirs if a Mudginberri-type situation should arise?

ANSWER

The transfer of meat inspection services has taken place between the Commonwealth and Northern Territory officers. It occurred on 15 December last by proclamation of federal regulations by the Governor-General. At that time, we amended the act in the Northern Territory to enable the Administrator of the Northern Territory to send to the federal minister an instrument requesting that the act no longer extend to the Territory. The agreement affecting the transfer was signed in March this year by the then Minister for Primary Production. However, physically, it had come into force in December last year.

To come to the nub of the honourable member's question, the agreement includes provision for the Northern Territory government to keep specific Northern Territory public servants competent in meat inspection services and to assign those officers to any establishment where the Commonwealth cannot supply domestic meat inspection services. There is also an ability for the Northern Territory to terminate the agreement unilaterally if the Northern Territory government seeks to do so.

Those were 2 conditions which the Northern Territory government insisted upon with the Commonwealth as part of the arrangement for the Commonwealth government to take over meat inspection services for domestic abattoirs as well as export abattoirs. The proposal that the Commonwealth run meat inspection services throughout Australia really stemmed from reports following the meat substitution scandals of a couple of years ago. The Northern Territory government refused to accept that it would relinquish meat inspection services in the Territory for domestic abattoirs unless 2 conditions were met. The first was that we would keep designated public servants capable of instantly taking up the duties of meat inspector and use those people in our domestic abattoirs at any time that the Commonwealth could not provide a meat inspector. The second was that, if we felt that the whole arrangement was unsatisfactory over time, we could terminate the arrangements completely.

Dangerous Chemicals Incident at Woodcutters Mine

Mr McCARTHY to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What were the results of investigations carried out by the Department of Mines and Energy into a report of an incident of inhalation of dangerous chemicals at the Woodcutters mine near Batchelor recently, and how has that incident affected operations at the mine?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can provide the member for Victoria River with some details on the incident. He took a great interest in this incident, as indeed I have myself. The report explains in detail the incident of exposure of an employee to gases at the Woodcutters mine. It also covers actions which were taken and some of the results of investigations subsequently conducted over a period by a number of safety officers within the Department of Mines and Energy and some chemical suppliers involved with the supply of the material. The reports are quite detailed and I will make those details available to the member for Victoria River without taking the time of the Assembly to read them in full during question time.

However, as a result of the investigations and the report, I can say that a number of changes have taken place at the mine site and I believe that we have now reached a satisfactory conclusion for the continued operation of that particular mine.

Electricity Supply to Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What action has he taken to have power restored to sections of the central business district of Alice Springs, particularly to the Anzac Hill high school, and to resolve the industrial dispute which is behind the problem?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question of electricity supply seems to be very much to the forefront these days and nowhere more so than in Alice Springs. The Alice Springs situation was caused by a line fault which could have been rectified in a very short period of time. In fact, I have been told the supply could have been restored within 10 minutes. However, there was an industrial dispute and a stop-work meeting ensued. Unfortunately, I think some 9 consumers were without power in Alice Springs from lunchtime yesterday. An emergency generator was taken to the school.

It was very unfortunate that the opportunity was taken by the unions concerned to have a stop-work meeting and to stay out at a time when the power supply could have been restored quite simply. One has considerable sympathy with the Queensland Premier and some of the actions that he has taken when unions seize on opportunities such as this to inconvenience people and to have their own way. This type of opportunism should not be tolerated and I will be conducting further investigations about that stop-work meeting in an attempt to have such meetings curtailed in the future.

Federal Industrial Relations Legislation

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

He may be aware that today's National ABC radio news carried a story that the federal Minister for Industrial Relations, Mr Ralph Willis, will introduce a bill for a new industrial relations act into federal parliament in 2 weeks time. The report went further and noted that this new act will negate recent amendments to Queensland's industrial relations legislation. What right has the federal government to introduce legislation that may negate state legislation, and what impact would this proposed act have on the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it has no moral right. The amendments to the Conciliation and Arbitration Act in the federal parliament raise the old issue of states' rights. The concern that this government has had in relation to states' rights over a long period is supported by all the states. As far as Queensland is concerned, the situation is a matter for Queensland and those people have to address those particular issues.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The question is out of order because it asks the minister to comment on something that is not within his province. It is not part of his portfolio responsibility and is not even a responsibility of this Assembly.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I would like to challenge the point of order. The matter of the Conciliation and Arbitration Act is of vital importance to the Northern Territory and does impact on this Assembly and, in fact, on the responsibilities of this minister because all of our public servants are covered by that act.

Mr SPEAKER: The question seeks specific information pertaining to industrial relations within the Northern Territory and, as such, there is no point of order.

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, I thank you for your ruling. To continue in relation to matters within our borders, this is one of the concerns that we have in the Northern Territory because, as the Chief Minister has just said, unlike the states, we do not have industrial legislation. The federal act covers the whole of the field in the Northern Territory in respect of industrial legislation. The Leader of the Opposition is aware of that. It is a major concern and it is one of the reasons why we need statehood as quickly as possible so that we can set in place legislation which will have effect in the Northern Territory.

I am most concerned at the way in which the legislation will be introduced into the federal parliament. I have just attended an industrial relations ministers' conference in Fremantle where the issue of whether or not impending federal legislation should be made available to state ministers was discussed. Some 18 months ago, the federal Minister for Industrial Relations, Ralph Willis, said that the states would have the opportunity to view any impending legislation which would have an impact on them. However, in this case, we were not able to get hold of the legislation and, this morning, we heard on the radio that it will be introduced in a couple of weeks. It will have a vital impact on the Northern Territory and I am sending a telex to Ralph Willis today asking that copies of the proposed legislation be made available as soon as possible so that we can have an input.

The Commonwealth's centralist policy of controlling all the states is not on. Each state has a constitutional responsibility to look after the people within its boundaries. Industrial relations should be a matter for the states. I repeat that I have every right to answer questions in relation to this issue. The Leader of the Opposition may laugh, but this is a serious matter and it needs the serious consideration of this Assembly.

Development of Tolmer Falls

Mr TIPILOURA to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Is the Tolmer Falls area under consideration for development as a tourist resort? If so, what is the nature of the proposed development, and will the minister make available to the public all the studies and submissions in relation to the development proposals?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, Tolmer Falls within Litchfield Park has been under consideration for development of a resort facility at various times in the past and at present. It was mentioned in a preliminary report conducted by the Conservation Commission of the Northern Territory. In addition, further feasibility studies form part of a trade agreement that was reached with various parties involved with the provision of generators at the Katherine power station. As recently as last week, I dealt with the terms of reference for that continued feasibility study into the suitability of various types of resort development within the Litchfield Park area. Tolmer Falls is not the only area under consideration. There are other areas including Wangi Falls and the Sandy Creek area. Each is subject to very tight terms of reference which protect the interests of all parties.

I do not expect to receive the final deliberations of the people conducting the feasibility study for at least another 3 months. I would certainly give an undertaking to the member for Arafura that, when it is appropriate, the proposals will be made available to members of this Assembly and the general public.

I would point out that the Conservation Commission, in conjunction with the Northern Territory Tourist Commission, has an ongoing program to develop a road link from the Berry Springs Nature Reserve to Wangi Falls and back through Batchelor, thus enabling people exiting Darwin to traverse across that country en route to Katherine or the back road to Kakadu.

Tolmer Falls area is under consideration for development of a resort and all the necessary environmental issues have been taken into account in the terms of reference and will continue to be monitored closely. I think it will be some time before we reach a decision-making stage. Nevertheless, the efforts of the government over recent years to develop these resorts in accord with proper environmental considerations stands alone. I think that we can stand on our record. The member for Arafura can be assured that the government will make the appropriate decisions in the best interests of all members of the community and its environment.

Work Health Court

Mr SETTER to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

There have been recent allegations that the new Work Health Court cannot operate because rules for the court have not yet been drawn up. Is this correct and, if so, when will the rules be put in place?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in answering the honourable member's question, I would like to express my anger at recent allegations made concerning the Work Health Court. I do not know how many honourable members are aware of what was said but the allegations were raised in a very irresponsible manner by the Miscellaneous Workers' Union spokesman, Mr Peter Tullgren. If they reflect the advice that he has been providing to his members, I feel that he should be looking for another job. The simple fact is that the Work Health Court has been in a position to hear applications since the first day that the Work Health Act commenced. That meant that any person who needed to have a claim decided by the court was able to go through that process. From the date when the act came into force to the date when Mr Tullgren made his allegations, the number of people who applied to the court or who made inquiries about applications to the Clerk of Courts, who always has been and always will be the appropriate person to receive such applications, has been zero. The number of applications to that court or even inquiries totals zero, zilch, nothing. That raises 2 questions about Mr Tullgren's claims. Either there have been no people who needed to make application to the court or people have been advised, by people who do not know or who are mischievous in their actions, against making inquiries to the Clerk of Courts. Either of those scenarios is a damning indictment of Mr Tullgren's behaviour and I suggest that members of his union replace him immediately.

The formal rules for the Work Health Court have indeed taken some time to draft. However, that was anticipated, given the complex questions and discussions which had to occur before those rules could be finalised. There has been some suggestion that those rules had not been finalised because the Chief Magistrate was too busy and had to travel to Alice Springs frequently and was unable to set her mind to the task. I am appalled that such a suggestion should be made. The Chief Magistrate is certainly extremely busy, as all members would realise. As a result, she had to put in many hours of her own time to ensure that those formal rules were drafted as soon as possible.

I must point out that the drafting of those formal rules involved considerable liaison between the Law Society, the Department of Law and the Work Health Authority. The formal rules have gone through all those processes. They have undergone final drafting by the Department of Law and they were signed by the Chief Magistrate on Friday of last week.

Members opposite are laughing. We will go right back to the beginning for the benefit of the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr Smith: No one knows the procedures.

Mr MANZIE: He says he does not know the procedures. He is a man who has been involved with unions. Obviously, he is a man who has been involved in workers' compensation matters.

Mr Smith: If I happened to be an injured employee ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, obviously he does not want to listen to the answer because he wants to remain ignorant. He seems to be adopting that attitude quite frequently of late; he would rather not know how things work. He would rather stay ignorant because, in that way, his conscience can operate a little better. If he does not know how things work, he can throw his hands in the air or he can tell people untrue statements.

I will just go back to what I said at the start. Since day 1, there has been provision for the Work Health Court to operate in the way that court operated in respect of the Workers' Compensation Act. Application is made through the Clerk of the Courts for any action that needs to be taken in that court. That has always been the case and always will be the case. Obviously, in his union days, the Leader of the Opposition had no experience of that but, in future, when he ends up going back to union work - because, as we all realise, he will not be the Leader of the Opposition for that much longer, because that is a job based on performance and he has not shown any - he will know the right place to go to make applications relating to work health.

I would like to point out that the Chief Magistrate has done an excellent job. The claim made by Peter Tullgren was completely inaccurate. Applications could be made to the Work Health Court as from the commencement of the act. I would like to point out also that all magistrates have had considerable experience in resolving workers' compensation claims because of the previous operation of the Workers' Compensation Act. Any suggestion that people have not been able to proceed with applications to the Work Health Court is absolute rubbish. It is untruthful and it is mischievous.

Safety Inspections at Mine Sites

Mr LEO to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Has the Work Health Authority the obligation to carry out safety inspections at mine sites and, if not, who has that responsibility and why was the power devolved from the Work Health Authority?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the 1 area that is still being spoken about relates to mine safety inspections. Industrial safety has moved across in the rational change to integrate or collocate services. At present, we are discussing the issue with officers of the Department of Mines and Energy and, as soon as I have information on that, I will make it available to the member for Nhulunbuy.

Department of Education Reorganisation

Mr REED to MINISTER for EDUCATION

I understand that the Department of Education reorganised its supply section recently. What steps have been taken to ensure that bush schools will not be disadvantaged by that reorganisation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Department of Education has reorganised its supply section and that move will devolve the responsibility for repairs and maintenance of audio-visual and computer equipment to the private sector at no extra cost to government. Also, the stores function has been rationalised to maximise private sector involvement.

The need to ensure that standards are not lowered and that bush schools are not disadvantaged has been one of the department's priorities in organising this move. I would take the opportunity of assuring all honourable members that we are aiming to maintain the level of services to bush schools and the department will be monitoring the new system to ensure that this aim is achieved.

I would like to outline the arrangements which will operate in relation to the department's regions throughout the Territory. First, in respect of bush schools in the Darwin south and east Arnhem regions, no change to the arrangements has been made. The local store in Katherine has been abolished. However, the department has period contractors making deliveries to schools in the region. This is in addition to trips by Darwin-based stores personnel and normal airfreight and road services. The only change is that the department will not have a storeman based in Katherine. The store and 2 storemen in Tennant Creek have been removed.

The department believes that there will be no difficulty in private enterprise taking over this role. In fact, already 1 freight business has indicated that it will definitely deliver to schools, either on a period contract or on an ad hoc basis. Other air and road freight services will be used also. Equipment needing repair will be picked up by period contractors of the Department of Transport and Works who service the region. Those arrangements have been made. On other occasions, such equipment will be collected by government department personnel who are moving through the region. Again, that is something that happens at the moment.

Schools in the Alice Springs region will still have the services of 2 stores people, a dispatch and receipts officer and a storeman. Deliveries in the region will be made by the storeman, period contractors and by normal road and freight services. The present arrangement for the collection of audio-visual equipment and computing equipment that needs repair are ad hoc. The equipment is picked up by whoever happens to be at the school at the time - stores personnel, departmental personnel, period contractors or any other government officers.

The only change will be that visits by stores personnel certainly will not be as frequent as before. However, if there is an urgent need that cannot be met under the normal arrangements, Department of Transport and Works period contractors will be used to transport equipment. I believe that there will be no risk that bush schools will be left high and dry by the reorganisation of the supply system.

It is important to point out that the actions that have been taken are consistent with the government's aim to promote greater private sector involvement in the Territory's economy. It is our aim to ensure that services are provided to the community at less cost to the government. To achieve this, the government will have to step back and the private sector will have to move in. As mentioned in His Honour's speech, that is something that we will be promoting. We also stated this aim in our undertakings prior to the election.

Tennant Creek Airport

Mr BELL to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Will the Northern Territory government reopen negotiations with Ansett Airlines for the upgrading of the Tennant Creek Airport?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question of upgrading of Tennant Creek Airport is a matter that has continued to be of concern to us. During the short period since I have had responsibility for the Department of Transport and Works, we have continued to talk not only to Ansett Airlines but to the federal government in relation to that matter. Ansett Airlines was asked some time ago whether it would like to contribute to the upgrading. The upgrading is entirely the responsibility of the federal government for a number of reasons. The most obvious is that the airport belongs to the federal government. Secondly, the federal government has neglected that airport for some 8 or 9 years. The ultimate failure of parts of the pavement resulted in the airport being precluded from F28 services.

In his wisdom, the federal minister thought that a commuter-type, light aircraft service was all that Tennant Creek was entitled to. The Territory government quite naturally was offended by that and, when Ansett Airlines was not prepared to make some contribution to ensure continued access for F28s, determined that it would contribute $1m from NT taxpayers' funds to top up the $1.1m that was dramatically overdue for spending on the strip to enable F28s to resume landing there. It is ludicrous that a jet airline flying that route should need to overfly Tennant Creek.

Tillair recently ran an interim commuter system from Tennant Creek to Darwin using light aircraft but found it totally uneconomic and discontinued it. The decision was purely economic and I guess was somewhat affected by consumer resistance to travelling long distances in light aircraft, particularly into the northern part of the Territory during the wet season. Naturally enough, passenger numbers dropped off to a level at which Tillair was losing money. I seem to recall that Tillair announced through the media that it had lost around $130 000 in the first 2 months of this calendar year. I am sure honourable members will agree that Tillair was justified in reconsidering its position. It did not want to leave Tennant Creek people high and dry, although it had no direct responsibility under the regional airline agreement, so it increased its services from Tennant Creek to Alice Springs. This meant that those people who needed to travel to Darwin at least had access to flights from Alice Springs.

The question of the timing of upgrading and of funding has been put repeatedly to the federal minister. I understand that re-documentation of the proposals is well in hand. New drawings and specifications have to be drawn up to cater for access by F28s and the project is now scheduled for completion by mid-December. Some recent discussions have been held with Ansett Airlines to ensure that Tennant Creek people are minimally disadvantaged. There have been talks regarding various types of subsidies and the question of an Ansett contribution towards upgrading the strip was raised again. Those negotiations are not yet complete. However, the honourable member can rest assured that the Territory government will continue to pursue these matters to ensure that all Territorians have access to the best possible transport system.

Government Consultation with Unions

Mr PALMER to CHIEF MINISTER

On 16 March this year, the secretary of the Clerical and Administrative Officers Association, Mr Rod Ellis, accused the Chief Minister of not being keen to consult with the unions. Is that an accurate reflection of the Northern Territory government's attitude towards the trade union movement?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is a grossly inaccurate description of the Northern Territory government's attitude towards negotiations with unions. My own record in some 20 years of work in the field of industrial relations clearly shows that I have never had difficulty in consulting with unions. I have not always agreed with the unions but I have never had difficulty consulting with them, discussing problems or seeking solutions to problems. Nor have I ever had difficulty in sitting down with members of the trade union movement to discuss issues of moment to the community and to trade union members.

One example occurred shortly after I became Chief Minister last year. Because of our very difficult budgetary situation and the draconian fringe benefits tax, which placed considerable budgetary pressures on the Northern Territory, we took the decision to attempt to reduce the size of the public sector by some 400 employees during the course of the financial year. I am pleased to say that we have achieved that objective. I might say that that was done in close consultation with the public sector trade unions. If my memory serves me correctly, the Interpers records indicate there has been a reduction of some 570 persons in the public sector. With the recruitment of additional teachers and the school leaver program, which we maintained in the new year, that is of the order of 400 persons or slightly below that now. The target is still a reduction of 400 persons.

I might say that I was very appreciative of the positive approach adopted by the trade unions in that process. We are all aware that that proceeded properly and did not cause any industrial disputes. Obviously, individual problems arose but those were dealt with by the Office of the Public Service Commissioner and the trade union movement. Quite clearly, we are prepared to consult with trade unions.

Mr Speaker, of course, my view with respect to Mr Ellis is entirely different as a result of an incident that occurred last year. I know that there are some honourable members opposite who have been involved in a professional capacity in the industrial relations field and they would appreciate that a crucial element in the process of consultation in industrial relations is the maintenance of trust and the honouring of confidences. Once that trust is broken between people in the industrial relations profession, it is almost impossible ever to put it back together again. Any person on either side, employer or trade union, knows that, if he deliberately breaks a trust, he does almost irreparable damage to his own position in that profession amongst fellow professional people.

Inevitably, when you are discussing complex and difficult issues, you provide information that you do not necessarily want to be made public or revealed to other people. You do this to give people background information so that they may understand your position. That situation is not generally recognised by those who do not work in the industrial relations field. Many problems and disputes are resolved as a consequence of that. Once that trust is broken, that person's ability to work is dramatically reduced.

Last year, we had an incident with Mr Ellis where exactly that circumstance arose. Mr Speaker, you will know that we had a very complex, difficult and emotive situation in respect of the attempts to create a Water Authority and bring together the various water functions as part of the rationalisation process we were working on. Some information was provided by the Public Service Commissioner to Mr Ellis on a confidential, background briefing basis. I am advised that that information was then misinterpreted and misrepresented to the public service employees who were directly affected by that. This led to an industrial dispute and, in the end, to a breaking down of the negotiations to amalgamate those functions. We are now dealing with the issue as a fresh exercise. I say that that process was broken down quite deliberately, not inadvertently. I have been advised that Mr Ellis advised senior public servants that it was done for the purpose of ensuring that there would be no resolution of that dispute and that there would be embarrassment to the government, in particular to the minister concerned, then the member for Berrimah, with the intention of supporting Mr Ellis' mates in the Labor Party because they believed that that particular member was vulnerable in the coming election.

Any trade unionist who wants to play those games with my government has broken that element of trust. We have great difficulty in providing any confidential information to Mr Ellis. We want to work with the Administrative and Clerical Officers Association and re-establish that relationship with it. It is important for us as much as it is important for public servants. As a consequence of that action, I would be very surprised if my minister were prepared to provide Mr Ellis with any sort of confidential information again.

The statements made by Mr Ellis following Cyclone Kay were equally mischievous. I have never criticised public servants or the public service over the circumstances surrounding the Cyclone Kay exercise. Following that incident, I made the point that we had some problems in our administrative procedures and that we needed to tighten up certain things so that we could better clarify the process of advising government officers when they should close down. I might say that the Emergency Service and the Counter-Disaster Council are already working on that. It is not a matter of criticism of the public service; it is a matter of our procedures needing to be tightened up.

I thought it responsible to be honest with the community. I said that we had found a glitch and we would fix it. That was all I said, but Mr Ellis has chosen to beat this up into some giant story that I was attacking every public servant in the Northern Territory. I might say that certain members opposite tried to do the same thing. It was a falsehood to even suggest that. I say here, and I have said it to the public service people before, that they performed excellently in the course of that particular counter-disaster exercise. The Emergency Service people, the liaison groups and the organising groups within the government performed excellently. It was a very good exercise in cyclone emergency procedures.

However, in that process, we found that people in the private sector were looking for some signal that would help them to determine whether they should send their employees home. They tended to look to the public sector as a guide. No one told the private sector employers to send people home. In the public sector, there was no set procedure to advise departmental heads and public servants as to when it was appropriate for them to go home, even though individual departments have their procedures well sorted out. Those procedures are now being linked through the Counter Disasters Council and will be built into the Darwin cyclone plan, and I do not anticipate that those problems will occur again. However, I refute totally any suggestion that that is a criticism of the public service, nor do I accept that there was negligence on the part of our government over that exercise. We have identified a problem. If there is a sin, we have committed the sin of being honest with the community, and that is something which I do not apologise for.

Mr Speaker, we are continually upgrading our plans and will continue to improve them. The beating-up of these issues by people like Mr Ellis and members opposite, for some short-term political gain, does more to cause trouble and dissension within the ranks of the public service than anything our government could do. I do not think they are doing the public service or the Northern Territory community any favours by these nonsensical headline-grabbing exercises.

Generator for Chan Building

Mr EDE to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I draw the minister's attention to an enormous generator which, at this moment, is being installed next to the Chan Building. Is this indicative of a complete lack of faith on his part in the electricity system in Darwin or have his ministerial colleagues finally decided that, just because the rest of Darwin is in the dark and has to cope with cold meals and warm beer, there is no reason why they should have to do the same? It is not a gas turbine; it appears to be a diesel generator. Does it indicate that he has knowledge that we do not and that we are in for a series of blackouts over coming days, weeks, months and years?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise the Deputy Leader of the Opposition that I do have knowledge that he does not have. I was prepared for this because I saw the Deputy Leader of the Opposition come back into the Chamber with a big grin on his face and talk to the Leader of the Opposition. I immediately turned to the page concerning the upgrading of computer facilities for the Chan Building. I am coming to know his small mind, and the issues that strike a chord. He does not have a lot of space up there and he has to handle things issue by issue. If the truck had run over him out there today, I think this subject would have been raised earlier in question time. However, it did not. He observed it, and it has taken him an hour to bring it to our attention.

The Northern Territory government would be amongst the most computerised governments in the world. Certainly, it is the most computerised government in Australia. The member for Ludmilla may be able to assist me with a figure on how much our computers are worth. I think it is somewhere in excess of $80m. The basement of the Chan Building is installed with the most sophisticated computers for government operation in Australia.

The Northern Territory government was faced with a decision whether or not to build a purpose-built facility to house NCOM. Costing to provide such a facility originally came in at $8m. In fact, in January 1987, the government took a decision, based on the revised estimates of $15m for such a purpose-built facility, to upgrade the Chan Building to accommodate the computer facility. So far, this is estimated to cost $1.7m which represents a considerable saving to Northern Territory taxpayers.

Computers are very expensive items and they run on electricity. I will put this into first grade terms so the Deputy Leader of the Opposition can understand it, if he pays attention. The importance of continuity of electricity supply is recognised by people who install emergency generators. The generator that is being installed now will provide continuity of electricity supply to a very valuable resource, a resource which operates in every department right across the Northern Territory. We must be able to ensure that continuity of supply.

Today's question indicates once again the crisis mentality and retarded thinking of the opposition. It is the reason why members opposite are in opposition. I would have thought that, in March, they might have sat down and asked themselves why they were in opposition. Perhaps they could have come up with some ideas. They have not.

There will be considerable activity in the field of energy this year in the Northern Territory. More generators will be shifted in and out of the Territory as the $33m Katherine power station is constructed and the $10m upgrading at Tennant Creek takes place. Energy, as I will outline in a ministerial statement during the course of these sittings, is what the Territory will be about this year.

Certainly, we are having some problems with power at the moment, but let us not become retarded in our thinking. Let us look to the future. Let us look at bedding down some of the problems that we are experiencing now. Let us look forward to the very bright prospects that will be available to us with the computer centre opposite. Let us not deny that a basic commodity, such as emergency power, is required to upgrade a facility that will save Northern Territory taxpayers millions of dollars.

I would also like to take this opportunity to give the Leader of the Opposition some information that I promised him. He is just leaving. If he leaves the door open, I will yell it out for him. The matter is of that much importance to him. I refer to his question relating to the Beaufort Hotel. The figure for electricity was $925 000 I do not want him saying that I have misled the Assembly. The figure for the water and sewerage is $50 000 or, more specifically, $49 914 and the figure for payroll tax is $275 000.

Mining Companies and Aboriginal Land

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

With regard to recent efforts by the Northern Land Council to extract disjunctive agreements from mining companies for entry on to Aboriginal land, what is the government's attitude to such agreements and what are the advantages or disadvantages to the Northern Territory of such agreements?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Ludmilla's question is timely indeed because I understand that, at this very moment, Pat Dodson, Director of the Central Land Council, is meeting with Clyde Holding in Canberra. I would like to be in that room to hear the conversation. It would be very interesting, taking into account Mr Dodson's stated position on Michael Mansell's recent trip to Libya. Indeed, I should imagine they will be discussing the amendments to the Aboriginal Land Rights Act. No doubt, the Minister for Mines and Energy, Senator Gareth Evans, would like to be present at that meeting because he would like to put through the federal parliament amendments to the Aboriginal Land Rights Act to allow greater access to Aboriginal land for mining companies.

As I outlined to honourable members in the Address-in-Reply debate, there has been a 30% growth in the mining industry in the Northern Territory over the previous year. For the first time, we have exceeded $1000m in mineral production throughout the Territory. If you will excuse the pun, Mr Speaker, we know that we have only just scratched the surface in terms of our mineral wealth in the Northern Territory, and that most of the access to prospective areas is being locked up because of the Aboriginal Land Rights Act and the Northern Land Council's inability to negotiate. In fact, despite all the proposals that have been put to it, it has managed to negotiate only 1 agreement with 1 company to explore on Aboriginal land. That is a very sad track record indeed. At the moment, we have another problem with disjunctive and conjunctive agreements. I refer to the application by Queensland Mines to explore an area known as 2508, which surrounds Nabarlek.

I think Justice Toohey was the first to recommend that the act be amended to allow mining companies to explore on Aboriginal land. That is a disjunctive agreement. If they find something, they have to go back to the negotiating table and work out a whole new procedure to mine that particular area. There are great costs involved in exploration. For example, Petrel No 4 Well, in the Bonaparte Gulf, will cost $13m to drill, and to test it will cost $100 000 a day. In all, there will be a total cost of some $20m just to explore. Getty Oil has spent $40m proving up the magnificent Jabiluka gold and uranium fields. No mining company will spend that kind of money without an assurance that, if it finds something, it will be able to bring a mine into production. Thus, a conjunctive agreement is the preferred way to travel. The member for Stuart should be very pleased with the mining activity which is occurring in his electorate at the moment ...

Mr Ede: I am. On Aboriginal land!

Mr COULTER: ... in particular, with North Flinders at The Granites. If he would lift his head a little towards the horizon and have a look at some of the other mineral-rich areas in the Northern Territory and lend his weight to the development of mines such as Jabiluka, I am sure the mining industry would appreciate it. If he used the same philosophy ...

Mr Ede: Why blame the traditional owners for that one not going ahead? Why not get some facts into your argument?

Mr COULTER: ... as he uses in his own electorate.

What we need are conjunctive agreements that allow mining companies to spend millions of dollars on exploration and, if they find something, to develop a mine. In particular, the Goodall Mine of the Western Mining Company is a good example of a recent mine that has been brought into production after the company entered into a $10m drilling program. That money is expended to explore what is in the ground. It is a very risky business with a success rate of 1 in 10.

I hope very sincerely that today is a significant day for the Northern Territory in Canberra, with Mr Dodson present in Mr Holding's office. I hope that common sense prevails, the amendments to the Land Rights Act go ahead and that Mr Holding has the courage of his own convictions because he has said on several occasions that he would introduce those amendments. Perhaps he has said that for too long because it has been going on for nearly 2 years. I hope that today there is agreement with Mr Holding and that he will agree with the Minister for Resources and Energy, Senator Gareth Evans, to allow the amendments to the Aboriginal Land Rights Act, to provide greater access to that vast area of mineralised country which currently is locked up ...

Mr Ede: The question was, would you agree with disjunctive agreements?

Mr COULTER: ... by the Northern Land Council. This government supports conjunctive agreements. The disjunctive agreement is a matter for companies to enter into as are private royalties. This government is against private royalties, and we have said so and have signed papers to that effect. Minerals are the property of all Australians. They belong to all Australians, not to any particular individual. The royalties paid by mining companies are the price they pay to exploit a resource that belongs to all Australians; they are the property of the Crown. This government prefers conjunctive agreements and is not inclined to support private royalties, on the ground that the minerals belong to all Australians.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Is the TIO's investment in Hungerford Refrigeration on the basis of equity through the purchase of new or existing shares or through the purchase of debentures previously held by Carrington Confirmers Pty Ltd or through a loan, either secured or unsecured?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am happy to provide the Leader of the Opposition with details of the agreement that has been entered into by the TIO, but the question sounds all too familiar to me in terms of what he would use that information for.

The TIO was in competition with a number of commercial companies which had the opportunity to buy into Hungerford Refrigeration. It did so after having the company investigated by a firm of chartered accountants and, indeed, it enlisted the academic experience of a professor from a university to investigate the proposal. On that basis, it entered into negotiations to purchase a percentage holding in Hungerford Refrigeration. In fact, it has a controlling voting power on the board. I understand that the actual paid up capital to that company was something like $125 000 which is what it cost the TIO in terms of the capital equity that it now has in the company.

The Leader of the Opposition will come back soon and say that he thinks that the TIO invested something like $700 000 in the operation and that, in fact, Hungerford Refrigeration was in debt for something like $400 000 at the time. Let me see if I can pre-empt the argument of the Leader of the Opposition; it is not that difficult to do because he has a line of gloom and doom that he runs with continuous monotony. He will say that the TIO has bailed out a company in Queensland. I imagine the Leader of the Opposition obtained his information from a person who has recently been removed from Hungerford, although maybe I am wrong. We will see if that comes to light soon.

Mr Smith: I have never come across that person.

Mr COULTER: I am just trying to present the scenario that the Leader of the Opposition will paint for us. He will say that the TIO bailed Hungerford out, because it was hopelessly in debt, and and that the TIO made a very stupid, commercial decision to buy into such a corporation. The facts are simple. This was a commercial decision and the TIO was in competition with 3 other companies. The decision was made on the best of economic advice provided by a firm of chartered accountants and also on the best academic advice provided by a professor of an Australian university who investigated the Hungerford product and gave it a clean bill of health.

I have with me a heads of agreement for a $500 000 contract under which Hungerford, operating from the Trade Development Zone, agreed to supply kenaf to Papua-New Guinea. This is only the first of many opportunities that will be realised as a result of TIO taking this commercial decision and bringing Hungerford into the Trade Development Zone. It will produce full-time jobs for Territorians and it will bear fruit in the very near future. I congratulate the TIO for its commercial decision.

Northern Territory AIDS Program

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Can he provide this Assembly with a report on the present position of the AIDS program in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

I will take the opportunity to give an update on Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome, AIDS, at this time because I believe that it is appropriate that I take advantage of the listening audience on the various radio networks.

I would like to give a little background about precisely what is happening in the Northern Territory in terms of our management of this rather frightening disease. The number of cases of category A, or full-blown AIDS, reported so far in the Northern Territory is now 2. One of those people has died. The number of reported cases of category B, or lymphadenopathy syndrome AIDS, is 5 and, in category C, antibody positive and symptomatic AIDS, we have 17 reported cases.

Screening services are now well developed for HIV - human immuno deficiency virus. Screening is offered free of charge to all persons in the Northern Territory. Nightcliff Community Health Centre has been publicised as the main centre for screening in Darwin but an individual may present to any health facility or to a local doctor. All blood is forwarded to the Royal Darwin Hospital Pathology Laboratory. The screening is performed by consent of the individual concerned with the exception of new prisoners entering Northern Territory prisons for whom blood testing is compulsory under legislation. This is one of the areas in which the Northern Territory is leading Australia, and the current prison population in the Northern Territory is AIDS free.

Confidentiality of results is essential in order to secure public cooperation. All blood donors are screened. A statutory declaration is also required in order to cover the 'window period' during which a person may be infected with and transmit the AIDS virus whilst not having developed any antibodies. Almost all cases are antibody positive within 3 months of infection but some individuals have remained negative for up to 6 months. Pregnant women have been offered screening for AIDS for about 12 months. Compulsory screening of new prisoners in all Northern Territory prisons has been under way also for nearly 12 months.

A new program has recently been developed concerning the screening of individuals with sexually transmissible diseases who present to any health facility and this is proceeding region by region. Special clinics have been established to provide clinical facilities and screening for AIDS and other sexually transmissible diseases for prostitutes and the gay community of Darwin and other centres of the Northern Territory. Counselling facilities have been developed following the visit during February 1987 of Dr Michael Ross, the National Aids Task Force expert on the psychological aspects of AIDS and AIDS counselling. Dr Ross conducted courses in Darwin and at Alice Springs in a 'train the trainer' format. Participants were invited from community groups as well as government organisations. They include representatives from the areas of community health, social work, psychiatry, the gay community, escort agencies, churches and crisis line. Subsequently, government participants conducted training courses for relevant personnel of their departments. A counselling training program is being developed by the Communicable Diseases Centre at Royal Darwin Hospital to include participants from each health centre in the Darwin region over a period of time. Staff of the Communicable Diseases Centre in the other regions are developing similar programs. It should be noted that the program was instigated on the initiative of the Northern Territory, not as a result of the national program.

In Darwin, 2 community-based organisations have been established. They will provide AIDS counselling services and education awareness programs throughout the Territory. The Northern Territory AIDS Council focuses its activities on the gay community, prostitutes and IV drug abusers. This organisation has recently received a grant from the Commonwealth and Northern Territory governments, on a cost-sharing basis, to establish an office at Darwin and to employ a full-time coordinator.

The AIDS Community Awareness Group includes members from the Departments of Health and Community Services, Education, the Police Force of the Northern Territory, the Darwin City Council, family day-care centres, the Northern Territory AIDS Council, the Aboriginal community, the churches, the gay community, prostitutes and the IV drug rehabilitation program. This group has selected youth as the target for an AIDS education program and is presently planning the launch of the Northern Territory edition of Streetwise comics.

These comics are ready for distribution to young people throughout the Northern Territory. A submission has been made to the Commonwealth in the 1987-88 AIDS budget for cost-shared funding of an AIDS youth worker.

The AIDS education program in rural Aboriginal communities is well developed in all regions with mobile teams consisting of a trained nurse and an Aboriginal health worker. These teams are responsible for education of Aboriginal communities concerning the transmission and prevention of AIDS. Condoms are now provided free of charge in these communities. The first antibody-positive category C (a symptomatic) tribal Aboriginal was detected in March 1987 in the Alice Springs region, but subsequently she moved to South Australia. Contact tracing and education programs were immediately commenced throughout the area involved. A team was sent to Western Australia to provide an education and awareness program for Aboriginal communities in the area bordering the Northern Territory. Additional funding will be required to increase the number of teams in high risk areas and, in March 1987, a senior staff member of the Commonwealth Department of Health, Canberra, visited the Northern Territory to assess this additional cost. It is anticipated that funding will be provided for the remainder of the 1986-87 financial year, but a further submission will be required for the 1987-88 budget.

A National AIDS Education Program, developed by the National Advisory Committee on AIDS, NACAIDS, commenced on 5 April 1987, launched by Dr Blewett. This campaign will provide media coverage throughout Australia. The Northern Territory has developed a 24-hour, 7-day-a-week telephone counselling service for the period of the campaign, commencing on 6 April until 10 May 1987, with 5 counsellors being employed on that project. The service is available on all weekdays between the hours of 7 o'clock in the morning and 9 o'clock in the evening, including public holidays, and from 4.30 in the afternoon until 7 o'clock in the evening on Saturdays and Sundays.

As a result of the AIDS Grim Reaper television commercial, AIDS telephone counselling calls have increased. 75 calls were received in the first week of the campaign and the average call rate prior to that was 12 to 20 per week. There were 5 telephone inquiries and 39 persons visited the Nightcliff Community Health Centre during the first week of the campaign. Prior to this, there were only 5 phone calls and visitors per week.

The Northern Territory government has taken a very responsible attitude to trying to make the community aware of AIDS and to educate people as to how they can prevent this rather abominable problem in our community. It is my personal priority that the high risk group in the Northern Territory comprises people between the ages of 13 and 20, no matter what their colour or creed. That is where the department will be giving some priority in so far as its educational programs are concerned.

It probably has been noted by most people that the retail industry has taken the initiative and has put condoms on sale in all night garages and in independent supermarkets. I am encouraging all retail outlets to take up that initiative so that condoms are readily available to those young people when they are more likely to want to use them. It is no good having these things on sale between 9 o'clock and 4.30 pm on weekdays. That is not the time that these young people will choose to decide whether or not a condom will be required. I congratulate the retail industry for its initiative in this matter. We look to the community of the Northern Territory to take a responsible attitude towards the education of all people in the Northern Territory in relation to this phenomenon. The Northern Territory government will be very straightforward in its application of an education program.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

I am seeking confirmation of remarks that he made in answer to my previous question. Did he say that TIO has a controlling interest on the Board of Hungerford Refrigeration? Secondly, did he say that the total investment made by the TIO in Hungerford Refrigeration was $700 000? Thirdly, did he say that, at the time that Hungerford Refrigeration received some capital injection from TIO, it had debts of some $400 000?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will make figures available to the Leader of the Opposition but it is my understanding that the ballpark figures for the TIO's investment were somewhere in the vicinity of $700 000 or $750 000. I understand that Hungerford had debts between $350 000 and $400 000 on its books. The TIO does have control by way of voting rights on the board and has control of the company.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

He also said that the TIO's contribution to Hungerford Refrigeration in the form of paid up capital was $125 000. He is now telling me that the total investment was $700 000. What was the other $575 000 used for?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I believe that the paid up capital is about $125 000 and the balance of the money, as I said in the previous answer, was made available to pay out those loans which had been incorporated ...

Mr Smith: You did not say that.

Mr COULTER: I did say that, as Hansard will show. I will read it for him because he probably has difficulty with reading as well as listening! I will make the exact figures available to the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr Smith: So the money has been used to pay out Hungerford's bad debts?

Mr COULTER: Bear in mind the commercial sensitivity of these types of figures. This is a commercial transaction that the Territory Insurance Office has entered into. The TIO is a body that is discrete from government and enters into commercial decisions in its own right. It has policyholders to whom it is responsible and it may consider that this is of such a sensitive nature that the full details may not be made available to the Leader of the Opposition because it knows full well the purpose that he would use it for. He would simply run with it: the Grim Reaper Revisited. If ever there was an example of the Grim Reaper, it is the Leader of the Opposition, given the way he walks around with his doom and gloom and his crisis week air. He is well assisted by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition.

The fact is that a great deal of that money was used to pay out debts owed by the company. I have not spoken about the amount of money that was owed to the company. It would never enter the Leader of the Opposition's head that maybe it was owed a substantial amount of money.

Mr Smith: Why didn't it use that money to pay off its bad debts?

Mr COULTER: In the 12 months to last March, it had an operating profit of some $890 000. There are a whole range of other figures which I will not divulge in this forum because they are commercially sensitive. They will be available in the various documents that will be produced in time. Those figures will be available to the Leader of the Opposition through the Companies Act. At the moment, he is hell-bent on creating mischief over an opportunity that the Territory Insurance Office has taken in order to bring this company to the Northern Territory to enter the Trade Development Zone and create meaningful full-time employment for Territorians.

Accommodation Development for Litchfield Park

Mr MCCARTHY to MINISTER for TOURISM

Yesterday, in this Assembly, he mentioned proposals for accommodation developments for Litchfield Park, including studies of the Wangi, Tolmer and Sandy Creek areas and a hotel motel presently under construction in Batchelor. What are the details of accommodation developments proposed for Litchfield Park and when is the development likely to take place?

ANSWER

As I explained yesterday during question time, the developments at Litchfield Park are subject to a feasibility study. While we have a general idea of the type of developments that are likely best to succeed, based on tourism projections, the types of tourists - whether they be motorists, campers, budget-type tourists or 5-star tourists - the projections, as formulated by both the Tourist Commission and the former Department of Business, Technology and Communications in conjunction with the Conservation Commission, reveal that the feasibility study is essential to identify the proportion of those visitors who would go to Litchfield Park.

An interested party has presented information to the government that identifies and puts beyond any shadow of a doubt that there is a certain segment of the market for whom the Litchfield Park will be most suitable: the exclusive tourist, the 5-star-plus. Similar developments are occurring at the moment in the jungles of Malaysia, South Africa and other parts of Africa. We are incorporating that part of the tourist market into the feasibility study as well as making allowance for the campers, the budget-type and day tourists looking to visit Litchfield Park. Prior to receiving that feasibility study, the Conservation Commission has commenced work to expand the camping facilities at Tolmer Falls, Florence Falls and Wangi Falls. At this stage, we are preparing for the opening of the road which will occur later this year.

Part of the terms of reference, which I am sure will keep the member for Victoria River happy, are to take into account the planned development of additional tourist facilities in the Batchelor area. I am as conscious as is the honourable member that the economy of Batchelor will rely largely, in future years, on the development of tourism and the tourist market. We are looking at every possible angle. However, in the short term, I can say that the exclusive market has been identified. The campers' needs are being addressed immediately and whether budget-type accommodation will exist at various spots throughout the park or be concentrated into 1 area will probably come down to a matter of economics.

One thing is certain and that is that the Northern Territory government is moving in accord with the demands placed on it by the tourists wishing to visit the Territory. It is no secret that the value of the tourist dollar to the Territory economy is becoming more and more important every day. I would compliment those in the Tourist Commission, the development arms of government and the Conservation Commission who readily make themselves available and take into account all the rapid changes that are occurring in respect of tourism. A few years ago, I am sure no one could have predicted the growth that we are experiencing today, and I take my hat off to all those involved who are able to move with the times and change circumstances to accommodate the tourists. As a final point, I might add that it is encouraging to note that the complaints across my desk are becoming fewer and fewer. Obviously, Territorians are facing up to the fact that tourists are valuable and possibly we are becoming a very friendly community.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Why was the last annual financial statement of Hungerford Refrigeration submitted to the Corporate Affairs Officer, Queensland, in 1984, and can he confirm that that annual statement of 1984 revealed that Hungerford Refrigeration was a $2 company with total assets of $14 000?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will try to explain 1 small thing to the Leader of the Opposition before I answer his question. In today's economic situation, it is very difficult to do business. It is very difficult because of the constraints that are placed on new companies by federal government taxes, payroll taxes, awards which people are forced to adhere to, the addition of the fringe benefits tax and a whole range of other disincentives which have been heaped on pioneer industries in particular. It is very hard to get one's head up above the sand. I guess that is why the Leader of the Opposition and his deputy keep theirs in it; it is hard to get up above it and make a go of something in today's economic climate. However, Hungerford was able to do that. The export orders that it has and, indeed, the proposed orders that it has from places like China, Vanuatu and Papua-New Guinea, are excellent and they have been extremely profitable. Hungerford Refrigeration has been successful right around Australia, operating out of Brisbane to places like the RAAF base at Derby, where it obtained a $750 000 contract. Not only has it done all that, it has developed a mechanism for and a means of chilling concrete.

Mr Hungerford's reward for this has been that he has had a cash flow problem. The tremendous growth of his company has taken place over a very short period. This innovative individual has risen above all the constraints and odds, and most of the constraints were placed on him by government. I guess that is why he is now seeking the security of the Trade Development Zone where he can rid himself of much of the red tape and bureaucracy that holds him down. I want to pledge my support and the support of my colleagues to all Australians who are trying to have a go, who are trying to rise above the bureaucracy and red tape and who are trying to succeed in spite of the attitudes of people like the Leader of the Opposition. Those people are trying to make this great country of ours a goer, and it is not easy.

As I said, the company has an operating profit this year. Its trading profit for the 9 months to 20 March 1987 was $826 196.

Mr Smith: Where is the information? Why isn't it at the Corporate Affairs Office?

Mr COULTER: The Leader of the Opposition now asks me a question about how the company was structured in Queensland ...

Mr Smith: I asked you a question about its last annual financial return.

Mr COULTER: ... whether or not its paid-up capital was $14 000 and whether its last financial report was made in 1984.

Mr Speaker, as I said, the firm of chartered accountants that was selected by the Territory Insurance Office to check out the figures did so very thoroughly and I am confident that the TIO would not have entered into any deal had it not been confident about the opportunities available and unless it were certain that everything was okay.

I do not have the precise information in my head, although I am sure it is in the Leader of the Opposition's head. There is probably little else there at the moment. However, if he so requires, I will provide him with the information during the course of these sittings.

Drink-Driving Sentences

Mr POOLE to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Could he provide this Assembly with details of sentences on drink-driving charges handed down in the Alice Springs Magistrates Court during the months of January, February and March 1987?

ANSWER

The question requires extremely detailed information. This is indicated by the report in yesterday's newspaper that the number of 0.08 charges heard before a particular magistrate in 1 morning was 75. The question concerns events of up to 4 months ago and I would appreciate its being put on notice so that I can supply the information in detail. As I said, it will take quite a long time to compile.

Dairy Farmers

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

What is being done to bring justice to a small-scale dairy farmer in the Top End and a large-scale dairy farmer in Katherine with regard to paying the dairy produce levy demanded under the federal Dairy Produce Act which came into operation on the 1 July 1986 and which will have an extremely adverse effect on this fledgling industry in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I noted that the member for Koolpinyah raised this matter in the adjournment last night. I can advise that the Territory government was aware of the preparation of this legislation by the Commonwealth. I have seen 2 or 3 letters from the then Northern Territory Minister for Primary Production, written in 1986 or prior to that, protesting to the federal Minister for Primary Industry that the proposed legislation should not apply to the dairy industry in the Northern Territory on the grounds that the Territory had only a fledgling industry. There had been dairies here before, as the honourable member knows, but it has been a struggling industry developed by a few innovative people who were determined to demonstrate that milk can be produced successfully and commercially in the tropics.

As the member for Koolpinyah mentioned, there are 2 small dairy herds in the Territory at present, and this is a very commendable effort. No doubt the dairy farmers concerned are putting in a great deal of their time and resources. However, they seem to be having a degree of success which the Department of Industries and Development is encouraging at every opportunity. Recently, the Commonwealth Department of Primary Industry took the unusual step of sending an officer from Adelaide to Darwin, at goodness knows what expense to the taxpayer, to demand that these 2 dairies should produce their records and hand over a cheque for a couple of thousand dollars. Both dairies expressed amazement and I believe they have refused to pay, although some records were handed over in accordance with the law.

As I understand it, this levy has been imposed on the industry Australia-wide on every litre of milk that is produced. A very small portion of it goes toward research and development of dairy products. The balance is used by dairies which would like to subsidise their export of milk. I presume that we have to subsidise exports of milk to compete internationally. Obviously, it would make an exporter's product cheaper to sell elsewhere and it would encourage him to export milk out of Australia. What the levy seems to be designed to do is to attempt to reduce some of the production of milk in Australia by encouraging people to export it, because there is an oversupply.

The proposed levy is not really working inasmuch as some farmers in Victoria are proposing to move into NSW to sell milk at some 8¢ per litre less than the NSW dairy producers. This has caused quite a storm and the Victorians are not going to back off. As Australians, it is their right to sell their product wherever they like. The NSW people are applying to the federal minister to have the levy taken off the NSW producers and so provide a competitive edge for NSW producers to fight their Victorian counterparts.

All this sounds pretty alien to people who promote free enterprise in the country. However, there is a question that we do need to ponder on in the Northern Territory. If we are happy to allow a complete free-for-all in the dairy industry and abolish all forms of levies or apply them in some cases and not in others, the end result may be a very large and viable dairy industry in Victoria and none anywhere in the rest of Australia. That is a possible scenario if we remove all the levies and let them go for their lives.

I have protested to the federal minister about the demand by his department for these levies from Territory producers. I believe that there are some dozen or more producers in Queensland who also have refused to pay the levy and are not being 'monstered', as it were, as much as the Territory fellows are. Perhaps they regard the Territory producers as weak-kneed because the industry is small here and, if they can push them into paying the levy, they can then move against the Queensland producers and others as the next links in the chain.

The federal minister has called a meeting on 5 June in Canberra of ministers responsible for primary production across Australia and I will be attending. The subject of the meeting is the dairy industry levy and its imposition across Australia. It will give me an opportunity to meet the minister and introduce the Northern Territory's point of view on this matter. Before doing that, I will be holding talks with both the Territory producers.

Government Centre at Katherine

Mr REED to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

As the minister responsible for property rented by the Northern Territory government, can he clarify what is happening with the proposed government centre at Katherine?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, members would be aware that the government called for expressions of interest in relation to the construction of a Katherine centre earlier this year. There were a number of very good applicants for the construction of that particular facility. In fact, 9 applications were received. The 9 initial proposals were the subject of deliberations in mid-April by a committee comprised of representatives of the Departments of Lands and Housing, Treasury, Transport and Works, and Labour and Administrative Services. I will be receiving a detailed report of this committee's recommendations in the near future.

Eventually, the 9 applicants will be reduced to a short list which will then be brought forward for consideration by government, and the construction of the centre should be completed by the end of 1988. It will provide a one-stop shop for the people of Katherine. The aim is to assist the public and to make the public service more efficient and effective. The people of Katherine will see the benefits once this facility is up and running. It will provide the opportunity for coordination with its inherent economies of scale as far as the government is concerned. I am very pleased to inform the member for Katherine that the facility should be completed by the end of 1988.

Grant to Katherine Racing Club

Mr COLLINS to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he explain how some $100 000 was suddenly found for the Katherine Racing Club just before the last election - a club which has only 4 meetings a year - somewhat to the annoyance of the Alice Springs racing fraternity which received $90 000 last year even though it holds meetings almost every week? I digress. Why was this money granted when the Minister for Education finds it very difficult to raise a few thousand dollars to buy lockers for all students at the Sadadeen Secondary College who attend something like 200 times a year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the only problem the honourable member has with the question is that he has asked the wrong person. He should read the administrative arrangements orders. I ask him to redirect the question to the minister responsible for Racing and Gaming.

Television Capricornia and Imparja Television Joint Venture

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

What are the principles of the proposed joint venture arrangement between Television Capricornia and Imparja Television, and what is the government's attitude towards this new proposal?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the government's position on the Remote Commercial Television Service has been consistent throughout the duration of the issue and remains unchanged. The Northern Territory government gave a commitment at the time of the hearings for the licence in central Australia that it would commit up to $2m towards the purchase of a package of TV services for remote areas for at least 1 year, provided that the government was completely satisfied that the operator had the financial and technical expertise to provide a high-standard service. The government's attitude has not changed at any time on that.

Honourable members may be aware that negotiations have taken place recently between Capricornia and Imparja, the 2 parties who were applicants for the licence in central Australia. Negotiations between those 2 parties have been continuing and 1 of the 2 parties hopes to reach an agreement for a joint venture agreement whereby the Centralian licence takes on board the expertise and technical capacity of Capricornia as well as the input that Imparja is able to make to programming for the groups that it is particularly interested in. Should this venture arrangement come to fruition, the government's stated impediments to providing the services to Imparja would seem to be removed. My only reservation there is that, clearly, we would need to see the terms of the arrangement that the 2 parties might come to. The government is prepared then to meet its longstanding commitment and would be prepared to purchase a package of television services for up to $2m for at least 1 year, which has been the offer all along. In talking to some media people on this matter over the last month, I noted that there had been a perception that the government had offered virtually a cheque for $2m up front on the day on which the licence was settled in an undisputed way. That has never been the government's offer and I refer any member who may think otherwise to the submissions made to the tribunal.

Mr Speaker, I can advise members that the satellite that was to be launched by the French to provide the central footprint for the Remote Commercial Television Service for the Northern Territory, which was due to be placed into orbit in June or July this year, may not materialise. The project is in some doubt as the French have indicated that, due to delays in the project, a guaranteed date of launch cannot be given. That is sad news for the Territory government and those people in remote areas of the Territory who were hoping to have the facilities offered by that satellite, including television, at an early stage. However, I am also informed that there are no technical or managerial reasons why Alice Springs and areas on the centre route, such as Katherine and Tennant Creek, could not be provided with commercial television services almost immediately, subject to the lead times required to purchase transmitters. Such a service could be achieved with the installation of a satellite receiving dish in Alice Springs connected to a rebroadcast transmitter which is precisely the way the ABC television is delivered to Alice Springs currently and the same method used by NTD8 to provide commercial services to Darwin.

In addition to that option of transmitting via the existing satellite to Alice Springs and other centres in the Territory, there is also the possibility of the use of the terrestrial link from Darwin heading down to Alice Springs, because it is a service which is now available. Formerly, it was used by the ABC, which now transmits its services via satellite. Thus, there is a terrestrial link as well which is much cheaper, I believe, than the satellite link, and which could be used to provide commercial television services to Katherine, Tennant Creek and Alice Springs virtually within the time taken to purchase transmitters. I am advised that could be in the order of 5 to 6 months because of the specialised nature of that equipment.

Grant to Katherine Racing Club

Mr COLLINS to the TREASURER

I redirect my previous question to the Treasurer.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure whether the member for Sadadeen has been to the Alice Springs Race Track at Pioneer Park recently, but I would look forward to seeing him out there for the Alice Springs Cup next Monday. I would like the opportunity to show him around the facility and explain the amount of money that has been spent by the Racing and Gaming Commission and the TAB through the Race Course Development Fund and the Industries Assistance Fund, and the amount of money that has been made.

We have spent a considerable amount of money on Alice Springs racetrack this year. We have spent the money that was made available from the TAB betting facility. We have shifted the betting ring from the fenceline into the centre field of the area to make that more enjoyable. $78 000 is being made available for various facilities at the racetrack this year, and it is becoming a very picturesque and enjoyable place to visit. It has had a very good run this year in terms of financial assistance.

The Katherine racetrack would be one of the most dangerous racetracks in Australia today. It was built before pipe benders were available. The pipes were simply butted together and several horses have been gouged in the flanks as a result of coming in close to the rails. There is a 90° bend and it is not easy to negotiate at speed. In fact, it is quite dangerous.

For some time, I have sought the assistance of 2 very prominent racing personalities, Noel Buntine, in particular, and Richard Sallis, to go down to Katherine and get racing going again there, bearing in mind the tremendous development that that town is undergoing at the moment and the population increase there. To their credit, Noel Buntine and Richard Sallis have put a great deal of work into this. Membership is flooding in from the stations. Many people have signed up for membership and Noel Buntine, with his usual entrepreneurial skill, has recalled some past debts. With the $100 000 that I mentioned, we have become the junior partners in the development that is occurring there. I believe they will spend somewhere in the vicinity of $250 000 this year, with the help and assistance of business houses throughout the Katherine area and the help and assistance of some of the stations in the area. It is a magnificent tribute to the abilities of Noel Buntine and Richard Sallis that they have brought everybody together there.

I would like to pay tribute also to some of the contractors who are working on the Tindal Air Base. They have been able to pool resources and establish the facility there and I believe it will be a track worth somewhere in the vicinity of $300 000. For $100 000 outlay, it is a magnificent achievement and it shows that the community is prepared to help itself, get racing going again in Katherine and remove what could only be described as a very dangerous situation.

In relation to the lockers for Sadadeen Secondary College, I will take the matter up with the Minister for Education on behalf of the member for Sadadeen, if he so wishes, and I will see if it cannot be treated as a matter of urgency.

Video Loans Scheme

Mr McCARTHY to MINISTER for EDUCATION

It is rumoured that the Video Loan Scheme, which provides isolated students with the ability to receive ABC programs which are available to all urban schools as well as other video learning materials, will cease. The scheme is operated by the federal government and is a valuable support service for students of School of the Air. Has the scheme ceased and, if so, what action does he propose to take?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can inform the Assembly that the federal Minister for Education has not taken me into her confidence about this matter, but there are strong rumours that there is a possibility that the Video Loan Scheme may be tightened up or even removed. That is causing a great deal of concern. It is an excellent scheme which was initiated by the federal government. The scheme itself relates to the loan of video sets and the provision of video cassettes to supplement the normal lessons of children involved with School of the Air and who are living in remote areas of the Northern Territory. It has played a considerable role in helping children in isolated areas to come to grips with many of the complex aspects of their education. It has provided information that is available to urban students throughout the country.

As I said, I have received no official information about this scheme and I certainly intend to make contact with the federal Minister for Education to encourage her to fight hard for the continuation of the program. I hope that she is successful but 1 of the most unfortunate things we must face is that people who live in isolated areas of this country are in the minority and there has been a tendency over the last couple of years for the federal administration to cut programs for people in remote communities, especially those in the Northern Territory. Even though the federal Labor government has been particularly vindictive to Territorians, most people are aware that the Territory has been suffering this sort of treatment for years. Some governments, however, are harder on the Territory than others and the current Labor government certainly has been a little bit harder than the previous coalition government was.

Students should not be suffering because of politics and I hope that the federal Minister for Education is successful in preventing the Video Loan Scheme from ceasing. I will be doing everything in my power to encourage her to keep the program going and to encourage the federal Labor government to continue to provide that very important service to Territory students.

CAT Scan Facilities in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is it the government's intention to have CAT scan facilities installed in the Alice Springs Hospital?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, at present, the Northern Territory Department of Health and Community Services is looking at what services we can provide right across the board for the people of the Northern Territory. I must confess that, at this stage, I have had no briefing on any time scale for introduction of CAT scan facilities for the Alice Springs Hospital. However, I will obtain that information and pass it to the honourable member before the close of these sittings.

Staff Reductions in Public Service

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

What is the outcome to date of the statement he made on 14 July 1986 that it was the government's intention to reduce the public service by some 400 staff over a 12-month period from July 1986? Are efforts to achieve this target continuing and, if so, are the efforts being monitored and is the target of 400 achievable by 30 June 1987?

ANSWER

Since taking over responsibility for this area, I examined, over the weekend, the detailed briefings entailed for today's sittings. I must advise the Assembly that the information that I provided last week was dated. Last week, I referred to having achieved a reduction of almost 400. I think I indicated a figure of 375. In fact, as at the end of March, the service had been reduced by 305 from the figure at 30 June 1986. There are good and sound reasons for that. I will quote some figures so that members can gain an idea of what is occurring. On 30 June 1986, the public sector employed 15 456 people. By 31 December, that figure had been reduced to 14 910 which was a very considerable reduction in the size of the service. Since that time, to 31 March, it has increased to 15 151.

We sought deliberately to get the size of the service below the target of 400 in December because we were aware that there would be need for recruitment of additional teachers. There has been the effect of the recent new recruit intake into the police force and, of course, a requirement for nurses. In the rationalisation approach, it was made quite clear that, those categories of government employees such as teachers, policemen, prison officers, and nurses where there were specific formula requirements, would not be affected by the ceilings on the total number of people in those positions.

This has been a very successful program and, three-quarters of the way through the year, we are three-quarters of the way to our target of a reduction of 400. We are on track in the process of achieving the necessary reduction of 305. I have heard whispers and read newspaper articles about this being offset by everything coming off the bottom. I can advise that it has been achieved, as we indicated, by natural attrition. There have been no compulsory redundancies in the process of the reduction and rationalisation. The largest percentage reduction in the service, almost 9%, was at the CEO level. Reductions were made in the professional, administrative clerical, technical and semi-professional areas and so on down the line. In the schools area, there has been an increase.

By way of salary ranges, the largest percentage decrease was in the over-$45 000 salary bracket, followed by the $35 000 to $40 000, followed by the $25 000 to $30 000 bracket. The largest increase was in the $20 000 to $25 000 salary bracket which indicates that the decrease has been spread fairly consistently right through the public sector. The reason for the increase in the $20 000 to $25 000 bracket is that that is the level where teachers come into the service.

This process is being monitored carefully through the government's computerised personnel records system, which was substantially upgraded last year with the implementation of Interpers. That is providing us with month-by-month records and is enabling us to carry out some assessment of where the turnover is occurring within the service. Much more attention will be paid this year to taking that statistical data and developing programs to address problems in the turnover area.

I will give the figures without the extensive detail that is available here. The major turnover appears to be among female workers in the 20 to 39 years age group in the $20 000 to $25 000 per annum salary range. From other indications, particularly in relation to the teaching and nursing services, these are the categories to which attention needs to be directed.

I would think that we are, without doubt, the most advanced public sector in terms of being able to identify and direct our attention to developing modern personnel practices, addressing problem areas within the service and overcoming industrial relations problems. As a consequence, I have no doubt we will see a continuing improvement in standards and turnover in the service. Such improvements are already showing themselves in efficiency and performance within the Northern Territory public sector. I say here and now that I believe that the Northern Territory is well served by what is, in my view, the best public service in this country.

School Leavers in NTPS

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

During the election campaign the Chief Minister indicated that, at any one time, approximately 250 school leavers were employed in the Northern Territory Public Service. Is he able to confirm that official public service figures, dated 31 March 1987, in fact reveal that only 18 school leavers are currently employed in the Northern Territory Public Service?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I find that an amazing statistic. I will check the details and come back to the honourable member because it is contrary to advice that I received from the Public Service Commissioner prior to and during the election campaign.

Horticultural Extension Officer for Katherine

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Having regard to the urgent need for additional government support for the promising horticultural industry, when will the vacant position of Horticultural Extension Officer in Katherine be filled by his department?

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I suggest that it be pointed out to the honourable member that, when he is phrasing his questions, adjectives like 'promising' are scarcely apposite in that they are expressions of an opinion and therefore contrary to standing orders.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, no doubt, all members hold the view that the horticultural industry in the Northern Territory has a very bright future. I was concerned that the vacant position in Katherine for a Horticultural Extension Officer be filled at the earliest possible time. However, when I came into this position, action was already in train for that. I am pleased to inform the honourable member that an officer has been appointed and should take up duties today. I am advised that the gentleman, who comes from Tasmania, is very well qualified for the position. The officer will probably spend the first few days in Darwin on some orientation courses with the department before moving down to Katherine to take up duties there.

On the matter of horticultural support by government, I am hoping that, in the near future, we will be able to put at least an additional person in Katherine to assist the Horticultural Extension Officer and the Cropping Advisory Support Officer there. I am hoping to give both those gentlemen some additional support in their roles because horticulture certainly shows great promise for growth and the government should divert some of its resources to encourage maximum development of this exciting industry.

Darwin Prison

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is he aware that Darwin Prison, which was built to house 150 prisoners, today is housing 257 prisoners, of whom 33 are sleeping on mattresses in C Block, and that there are only 2 toilets? What immediate steps is he taking to ease this tension?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure whether the honourable member is referring to the tension in respect of the toilets or not. It is a fact - and I have a press release prepared on this - that, at the close of business on Friday last, the Northern Territory prison system had the highest number of inmates ever recorded: just in excess of 490 prisoners. I must say that this is a trend throughout Australia. It is not unique to the Northern Territory.

It must be stated that 70% of our prison inmates are Aboriginal and honourable members would know that we have taken a great deal of notice of this fact. We have officers working in some of the Aboriginal communities to counteract many of the offences that are being committed. It is hoped that, in the near future, these facilities will be extended to other communities also.

There is no doubt about the pressure which overcrowding puts on prison officers as well as prison inmates. It cannot be denied. It must be realised, however, that the situation would be even worse but for the Northern Territory government's initiatives such as community services orders. Approximately 150 people have taken up the option of those orders and, if that were not the case, the overcrowding situation would be even worse. One must understand that we have about 50 prisoners at Beatrice Hill, a prison situation which is quite unique to the Northern Territory. Honourable members would understand that, if those 50 people had to be spread throughout our other institutions, we would have many problems.

It is my intention to introduce legislation at the June sittings concerning home detention orders. Under these, people who commit minor offences can be restricted in their free movement around the community, but they will be able to go to work and sustain their family units and they will not be thrust upon welfare institutions around the Northern Territory. They will be able to maintain the dignity of their family units. The children will not have the stigma of a parent being in an institution and the wife or husband who is left to look after the family unit will not be plunged into the welfare system. The family unit will maintain its integrity.

Mr Speaker, in the Northern Territory, we are leading the way in the penal system throughout Australia, and that is well and truly recognised. I am sure that that will be restated by the Correctional Services Ministers' Conference that I will be attending in a fortnight's time in Melbourne. In the Northern Territory, we stand with our heads high for the way we are endeavouring to combat the very high numbers of people going into our institutions.

I do not place any stigma whatsoever in saying this - I state it simply as a fact of life - that some 70% of our inmates are Aboriginals, and that means that we must place a great deal of emphasis on that particular area if we are to cut down the intake to our penal institutions. Given that the opposition members are responsible for most of the major Aboriginal population areas in the Northern Territory, for the first time in their existence, I would see them supporting the Northern Territory government in the initiatives that we have in place and in talking to the leaders in the Aboriginal communities about the various ways in which they can assist us in keeping law and order within those communities.

I have had a great deal of influence in introducing community government to a great number of those communities in the 12 months since I have been minister. Through my work in that particular area, I happen to know that the people in those communities are willing and able to take on responsibility for proper management of those facilities.

During the last 3 or 4 working days, a leader of one of those communities contacted me about a Department of Health vehicle being used by members of his community for running grog to the community. He was asking me for help and I intend to give it. I may have to implement some moves that are pretty unique, but I can tell the rest of the Northern Territory community that, as minister responsible for the new Department of Health and Community Services - and 'services' is the key word - I do not care to what lengths I have to go to introduce the various services that we as a responsible government know must be introduced right throughout the Territory.

Mr Speaker, I challenge the opposition, for the first time in its existence, to get behind the Northern Territory government, to get out into the communities ...

Mr Ede: We have been telling you for years what you should be doing.

Mr DALE: ... where 70% of the penal population comes from, and to help introduce a learning process into those communities so that we can, in a sensible and responsible way, reduce the number of prisoners in our system.

National CPI Figures

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer to the national CPI figures issued last Thursday. Could he advise on the figures relating to Darwin compared to those for the states?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I was quite surprised last week to find that, for once in his life, the Leader of the Opposition was silent when the CPI figures were released because he has gone to great pains to paint himself as a watchdog over the cost of living in the Northern Territory. He introduced a so-called price watch. All he was doing was duplicating work that has been carried out by the Consumer Affairs section of the Northern Territory government for the past 7 or 8 years. He does not take the time to examine the work that is already being carried out by the Northern Territory Public Service.

He never wants the facts to get in the way of a good story. That is quite obvious from some of the statements he has made in recent times. I think they are important when one considers the figures that were released last Thursday. He has said that the CLP government is a total and abject failure because it has failed to control prices, taxes or charges. The Centralian Advocate, in an article of 18 March said: 'Labor leader Terry Smith has urged the government to establish tax reduction goals to slow the growth of the Territory's cost of living. Mr Smith said the government should aim to slash its contribution to the consumer price index movement. Acceptable levels should be achieved by mid year'. That is what he said.

Mr Smith: Perhaps you could take my advice.

Mr HATTON: We all heard him ad nauseam during the recent election campaigns. The actual situation in relation to the cost of living became available through a document published by the Australian Bureau of Statistics last Thursday. Given that the Leader of the Opposition made great play during his Address-in-Reply speech last week of how the opposition would be fair and reasonable when the government did something good and achieved something, it should give us credit for it. Nevertheless, silence was the stern reply from the Leader of the Opposition when these figures were released which indicated that the Darwin figures were low on the national scale. Most importantly, when one examines the figures, they show that rents of privately-owned dwellings increased in all cities except Darwin. Also, there was no increase in health insurance contributions whereas these increased in all other cities.

Mr Speaker, that is fairly consistent. Only on the odd occasion since 1981 has the CPI for Darwin been above the national average. A simple examination of the CPI figures shows that there has been a reduction in the relative cost of living in Darwin since 1981. That is a fairly consistent trend. The odd hiccup where it has been higher than the national average has occurred in only 3 or 4 quarters since 1981.

Mr Smith: It goes up when there is an increase in taxes.

Mr HATTON: He is digging an even deeper hole for himself, Mr Speaker. I hope he keeps talking.

Because of policies of CLP governments and the growth that we have generated, the increased productivity in the Northern Territory, which flows back to the community in terms of more competition and a wider range of services and goods at prices relatively comparable to those in the rest of Australia, our cost of living is consistently becoming closer to the national average. The Leader of the Opposition has been blaming the Northern Territory government for increases over and above those at the national level. He has said that the government's aim to slash its contribution to the CPI movement to an acceptable level should be achieved by mid year.

These are figures from last Thursday. There is a section on page 4 that indicates the contribution of selected state and local government charges to total changes. The figures are not available for Sydney because of strikes in the Australian Bureau of Statistics. For every other state, there has been a nil increase and, for Darwin, the figure is minus 0.01%. There has been a decrease in the government charges contribution to the CPI. I would have thought that the Leader of the Opposition, being such a fair-minded citizen and member of this Assembly, and making such a play of how fair and honest he is going to be and how cooperative with the government, would have stood up and praised the Northern Territory government for achieving reductions in the cost of living as a consequence of government charges.

Mr Speaker, the figures are for the period up to 31 March. The figures were relevant at the time of the Northern Territory election which was held in that quarter. The Leader of the Opposition's advice had already been acted on because our government has worked consistently to reduce the relative cost of living in the Northern Territory, unlike the members of the opposition who carp and criticise at every opportunity, whose only goal in life is to attack the morale of the people of the Northern Territory, the business community of the Northern Territory and the Northern Territory Public Service. As indicated by their cheap political moves, that is their only goal. They should examine the facts which speak loud and clear. This government is working solidly to reduce the relative cost of living. Opposition members could save themselves some time and effort with their nonsensical price watch if they read the document produced by the Consumer Affairs Unit of the Northern Territory government which has been reporting on the CPI for years and is somewhat more expert at the task than they are.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

In the Assembly last Thursday, he undertook to provide me with information on the agreement between the Territory Insurance Office and Hungerford Refrigeration. When will I receive that information?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I undertook to provide the Leader of the Opposition with some details regarding the Hungerford proposal and the negotiations that had been entered into by the Territory Insurance Office. I had several calls from the Leader of the Opposition's office and it is my understanding that that information is either on its way to him or that he has that information at the moment.

Alice Springs Traffic Planning Study

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

What are the results of the traffic planning study recently conducted in Alice Springs with regard to plans for the Wills Terrace and Stuart Highway intersection?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am now in a position to advise the honourable member of the outcome of the traffic study in Alice Springs. If we could get drivers to accept their responsibility to obey normal traffic laws, we would not need to go to the expense and trouble of putting in expensive traffic light systems at various intersections in the major towns.

The intersection of the Stuart Highway and Wills Terrace has been under observation and statistics have been gathered. The police have advised that, during 1985 and 1986, reported accidents at that particular location numbered 18 and 23 respectively. Some of those accidents have been of quite a serious nature. The traffic study was undertaken principally by the Alice Springs Town Council, at a cost of $25 000, and I gather that there is some discussion between the council and the Department of Transport and Works about some financial contribution towards the study. The outcome indicated that the intersection required some regulatory provisions through traffic lights. An estimate of $150 000 was obtained and that item has now been included in the 1987-88 draft capital works program and will be subject to budgetary determination, as is normal.

In the meantime, design and documentation for the intersection is progressing with a contract target date of September 1987. The installation of traffic lights at that intersection should greatly improve road safety aspects, but I caution honourable members that the installation of traffic lights is not always the be all and end all. For example, in many cases, the installation of lights might be counterproductive and lead to a more dangerous situation than if they had not been installed. I am most conscious of that as, of course, are the technical sections of the department. Certainly, we need to be assessing all matters relating to road safety around towns and I commend the Alice Springs Town Council for the work that it has done in its traffic study which, I am sure, will lead to much safer roads for our people in the long term.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Was approval sought from the minister by the Territory Insurance Office Board before it made its investment in Hungerford Refrigeration?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will give the Leader of the Opposition and the member for Nhulunbuy a few basic facts about the operation of the TIO under section 7 of the act. Last week, I tried to explain to the Leader of the Opposition some of the basic facts in respect of the Hungerford Refrigeration deal. I also pointed out to honourable members what I believed would be a long-drawn-out scenario that the Leader of the Opposition would enter into as a result of the TIO acquiring an interest in Hungerford Refrigeration to bring it to the Northern Territory.

The simple fact is that the TIO is responsible to its policyholders. They are the people that the Territory Insurance Office is responsible to. It has to provide a return on their investments and adequate insurance coverage, etc. It is the TIO and the TIO Board that does that, not the Northern Territory taxpayer. It is necessary that the honourable Leader of the Opposition understand that very basic point. The TIO can enter commercial deals, have them investigated and make commercial decisions, knowing that it has the full power to do so. Section 7 provides the government with the power to direct. In this particular case, the Territory government did not direct the Territory Insurance Office to acquire. The TIO made that commercial decision on information that was provided to it, as I explained last week, after the commercial aspects of the company had been fully investigated by a firm of chartered accountants and after academic advice had been obtained from a professor who is involved with the particular processes that are being entered into by Hungerford. The board then made that decision.

Mr Speaker, I would point out to honourable members another example of the vacillation of the Leader of the Opposition in what he has said about the Trade Development Zone. The Chief Minister pointed out this morning how the Leader of the Opposition changes his figures. We have had examples of it in the budget debate, in his contribution to the Address-in-Reply debate last week and in relation to the Trade Development Zone. Once again, the Leader of the Opposition has decided to change his stance. In his column in the Sunday Territorian the other day ...

Mr EDE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! This is not relevant to the Territory Insurance Office. He is talking about the Trade Development Zone and the Leader of the Opposition's column.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, these matters are inseparable because the TIO has invested money in a company to bring it into the Trade Development Zone and the Leader of the Opposition is attacking that zone rather than the Territory Insurance Office.

Let me point out what he said in this Assembly on Wednesday 23 August 1984 whilst speaking on the report into the feasibility of a free trade zone. He said: 'This will be one of those occasions where there is complete unanimity between the various parties in this Assembly. Hopefully, the occasion of the tabling of this report will become a quite significant day for the history of the Northern Territory. The opposition is as excited as the government in the potential opportunities of a free trade zone. Certainly, it has our wholehearted support'.

He has turned around 180° since then. In his column he says: 'Wouldn't it be good if any business company could have the same opportunities as Hungerford Refrigeration and line up at the Treasurer's office for support?' Yet, on Wednesday 23 August 1984, he said: 'Obviously, a primary benefit would be in generating economic activity in Darwin where previously none existed'. Now, because of some incentives, when the zone is in its infancy and at its most vulnerable, he starts kicking heads. We are trying to attract firms to the Northern Territory and he is trying to condemn this one before it gets off the ground. He is trying to condemn the commercial realities of the world. He is trying to suggest to this Assembly that something has gone wrong.

Mr Smith: I am trying to find out whether you have been doing your job, and you have not.

Mr COULTER: He is in more trouble than the early settlers. He really has a problem with this one because he will stand condemned by the Northern Territory for his anti-development stance. I can assure honourable members there is nothing wrong at all with the deal that has been entered into by the Territory Insurance Office.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

I draw his attention to section 6(2)(n) of the Territory Insurance Office Act. The preamble to the section reads: 'Without limiting the generality of subsection (1), the office may, for the purpose of carrying out its function or exercising its powers, including the powers conferred on it elsewhere in this or any other act ...'. Paragraph (n) reads: 'invest its money in any investment available to the Public Trustee under the Public Trustee Act and in investments or investments of a class of investments approved by the minister'. The Public Trustee Act certainly does not provide the Territory Insurance Office with any precedent for this. If the minister did not approve the investment by the Territory Insurance Office Board into Hungerford Refrigeration, why not? He has a clear legal obligation to do so.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not have the benefit of having the act in front of me. However, what the Leader of the Opposition wants the Territory Insurance Office to do is to buy Commonwealth bonds so that it can help finance the national deficit. He does not want us to become involved in any other product or any innovative projects.

Mr Smith: Did you or did you not carry out your legal responsibilities?

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will be heard in silence.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I draw the Leader of the Opposition's attention to the facts that I have pointed out to him. Under section 7, the Territory Insurance office is responsible to its policyholders. The member for Nhulunbuy was talking to us the other day about taxpayers' money. He does not understand that it is the policyholders who have their money invested in the Territory Insurance office.

Mr Leo: But it is propped up by the taxpayers.

Mr COULTER: Maybe they are taxpayers as well, but not all taxpayers have their money invested in the Territory Insurance Office. It is necessary to distinguish between those groups of people.

I can tell the Leader of the Opposition that I have no hesitation in endorsing the deal that has been entered into with Hungerford Refrigeration. The point I was making is that the Northern Territory government does not direct the Territory Insurance Office to enter into any particular deals, neither should it!

Crocodile Industry

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

What is the status of the Northern Territory's crocodile industry?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am happy to advise the Assembly of details relevant to the Northern Territory's fledgling crocodile industry because, when I have heard the word 'crocodile' of late, I have sometimes not known whether to laugh or cry. One important point needs to be made at the outset: the Northern Territory's wildlife management program includes the development of a viable, commercial industry based on the utilisation of crocodiles. Many people often overlook the fact that the course of action that is taken under the program has the support of the International Union for the Conservation of Nature and Natural Resources, IUCN. It also has the support of its specialist crocodile group and the parties to the Convention on International Trade in Endangered Species of Wild Flora and Fauna. Honourable members will recall that the Northern Territory Conservation Commission sent quite a delegation to the convention seeking support for its moves to commercialise the crocodile industry. An integral part of that program is the protection of the species as well.

There are 3 commercial crocodile farms in the Northern Territory at the moment and 2 of them are gearing up to begin slaughtering farm stock and to build flesh-processing facilities. It has been necessary for the third farm to undertake a rebuilding program and it is unlikely that this farm will commence processing crocodile flesh before 1988. The rebuilding of this farm has come about largely because the industry has formed an association to represent all 3 farms in terms of marketing not only the flesh but also the skins, skulls and teeth. I am happy to report that the government's marketing arm, Nortrade, is assisting the association in developing its marketing expertise and ensuring that the product comes on to the world market.

One of the integral parts of developing this marketing philosophy has been the development of a quality product. To that end, the freshwater crocodile skins are being sent to France, Japan and the United States for testing and international assessment of their quality and tanning requirements. We are dealing with a fledgling industry that must have all the correct criteria attached to it. It is important to note that commercial tanning of skins and their export to world markets has not taken place officially for some time. Therefore, the product is being tested so that its value and quality are known to the association.

Prior to exporting the skins overseas to France, Japan and the United States, it has been necessary to seek approval for these trial shipments from the Australian National Parks and Wildlife Service in Canberra. One would assume and hope that, because of the great lengths that the Northern Territory Conservation Commission and the association representing the 3 crocodile farms have gone to to investigate the marketing of the product and to seek the support of the international organisations involved, the Territory will not be subjected to the normal delays in obtaining approval to send these skins overseas to have them tested.

I am sure all honourable members here today will be more than happy to support any move that the Conservation Commission, and myself as minister, will make to ensure that the relevant approvals are received speedily from the Director of the Australian National Parks and Wildlife Service in Canberra, who is known to all of us. We are all working actively at converting him to an avid supporter of the Northern Territory. I am sure honourable members are aware of the difficulties that we face in that regard.

The Conservation Commission of the Northern Territory is coordinating approaches to state agencies so that crocodile artefacts, the by-product of the marketing and processing of crocodiles, such as skulls, claws and teeth, can be legally transported interstate. We all know that the crocodile is a protected species and we do not want any illegal shooting or processing of crocodiles in the wild to the detriment of the industry and to the detriment of many years of support and progress that have been made towards the commercialisation of the animals.

Mr Speaker, the crocodile industry, the Conservation Commission, the Department of Health and the relevant division of the Department of Industries and Development have reached agreement on minimum standards for processing the flesh which now satisfies public health requirements and allows for interstate trade. It is a very important aspect of the development of the industry and shortly I will come to the point that is most relevant: the value of the skins for export trade as compared to the value of the flesh.

The use of crocodile meat for human consumption is a side issue. As far as the industry is concerned, the prime value product is the skins. I know that recently the crocodile flesh that has been made available at 2 local restaurants has been imported into the Territory, under strict regulations and agreement between the Conservation Commission and those restaurateurs, for sampling and tasting within those Darwin restaurants. It has proved very popular and I am sure Darwin people will remember the reports in all local media which gave the restaurateurs, who were handling the crocodile flesh for human consumption, quite a boost. In fact, it was a great novelty item and I think the restaurants had quite large queues and several inquiries, especially from overseas tourists who, at that time, seemed more willing than the locals to sample some unique foods. For the benefit of honourable members, I have not had the pleasure - which I am advised it is - of consuming any of the crocodile flesh but I look forward to my first tasting. The Chief Minister advises me that it is A1.

One of the difficulties that we have with the commercialisation of the industry is a difference that relates to people who live elsewhere in Australia. They do not fully appreciate that commercial crocodile farming and production are key factors in the conservation of this unique natural resource and, of course, I am talking about the crocodile in the wild. Many people reading the local and interstate newspapers might believe that crocodiles are nothing but a very dangerous species that inhabits the wild and which has no right to be there. Certainly, that has never been the view of the Northern Territory Conservation Commission or the Northern Territory government. We believe in an ongoing education program aimed at making this reptile a valuable resource to the community. We feel that we can gain the support of the general public for the direction that the Northern Territory government is taking. The future of both species of crocodile in the Northern Territory is assured by the carefully planned and executed balance between conservation in the natural environment and farming in the commercial environment. The Conservation Commission can be justly proud of its activities in catching nuisance animals in the wild and in places that are frequented on a regular basis by tourists and local people.

Territory-based research shows that 80% of the value of the farmed crocodile is in the skins. I have had to point that out to the restaurateurs who, unfortunately, have not yet had a ready supply of crocodile meat. I have pointed out that the industry is targeted towards profitability and therefore gives highest priority to the development of its skin trade. I anticipate that crocodile skin production in the Northern Territory will be worth a conservative $1.5m a year within about 2 years. That is why there is no great rush of crocodile flesh onto the market. The 3 crocodile farms, in forming their association, have obviously determined that, for the success of the commercial venture, priority must lie with the skins. In contrast to this conservatively estimated $1.5m per annum value for trade in skins, the value of the flesh product over the same period is put at only $300 000 per annum during the same period. Unfortunately, the avid eaters of crocodile flesh will have to wait just a little longer until the farms are developed further. Having said that, I expect that production will begin early in the new financial year, at least from 1 of the farms. That is not a long time for restaurants to wait for crocodile flesh to be available.

Problem crocodiles, that are trapped and removed by the Conservation Commission rangers, form a nucleus of the commercial farm breeding stock in addition to the continuing harvesting of eggs from the wild and from farm crocodile nests. We have all heard reports about many problem crocodiles. For example, many have been caught in the Gove area recently. One was taken recently at Buffalo Creek and there are other places throughout the Territory where problem crocodiles have been caught. They are not simply hit on the head or hit with a bullet. They are taken to the crocodile farms and become an integral part of the breeding stock. We all know that the industry could not survive unless it had adequate breeding stock. The egg harvest has the potential now to produce 4000 hatchlings each year and 4000 hatchlings each year from the current breeding stock is quite an incredible achievement by the industry. As far as breeding goes, we are really only talking at the moment of 2 crocodile farms with a third yet to come on stream.

I fully support the Northern Territory's crocodile industry and I think it has every chance of being highly successful. The success of the industry is the culmination of many years of research and planning. It commenced many years ago with the initiative of the Northern Territory Tourist Commission to attend the overseas organisations. I believe that this fledgling industry deserves the support of all honourable members. Not only does it add to the protection of the species but it is a very interesting step that the industry has taken and it will continue to be a major tourist attraction. I am sure I do not have to advise honourable members that that is a major point in generating income within the Northern Territory.

Mr Speaker, in closing, may I thank the member for Jingili for his interest.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
School Leavers in NTPS

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister)(by leave): Mr Speaker, I would like to respond to a question asked by the Leader of the Opposition earlier in relation to school leavers. I now have the information.

In the period of the school leaver program, from 1 December 1986 until 31 March 1987, the Northern Territory government employed 246 school leavers. This figure does not include NTEC. I might say 78 of the 246 are technical trainees and apprentices. We still have 260 apprentices and technical trainees employed through school leaver programs in past years. I would be curious to obtain from the Leader of the Opposition the official report that he is referring to so that, if there is any discrepancy, I can deal with it. However, this is the information that I had available to me previously. It is consistent with the advice I have always received and it is still more than the program the Leader of the Opposition tried to promote as his 'Youth Guarantee Program' which would have reduced the number of school leavers being employed by the Northern Territory government.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

In question time yesterday, he intimated that the Territory government had not approved the TIO entering into an arrangement with Hungerford Refrigeration. Subsequently, outside this Assembly, as I understand it, the Treasurer indicated that a minister of the government had, in fact, approved that transaction. Did a minister of the government approve a transaction under the terms of the Territory Insurance Office Act section 6(2)(n)? If so, who was that minister and what was his responsibility for the Territory Insurance Office Act at that time?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am happy to answer the Leader of the Opposition's question. Honourable members will be aware that he was the economic spokesman under the previous Leader of the Opposition and that his responsibilities included the Territory Insurance Office. I said that this saga about Hungerford Refrigeration would be a drawn-out one. I outlined how it would go to honourable members at the outset.

The answer is that a minister did approve the Hungerford deal. The Leader of the Opposition asked what minister, at what time, under what authority. Remember, he is the shadow spokesman on economic affairs with responsibility for any comment regarding the Territory Insurance Office. It has been described best by a public servant who wrote to me last evening and said: 'Please note that Mr Smith was interviewed on the lunchtime news and said that you have not done your job because you should have been the one to sign the approval, not your Cabinet colleague, Mr Hanrahan. Mr Smith is confused'.

We all know that he is confused but it is interesting to note that the message is getting out to the public service as well. It is the responsible minister who is required to sign, not the Treasurer, and the member for Flynn was the responsible minister at the time. He was the minister who had responsibility for the Territory Insurance Office. Under the administrative order signed on 15 May 1986, he became the minister responsible for the Territory Insurance Office. He retained that position until 19 March 1987. At the time, the Leader of the Opposition was the opposition spokesman on the TIO. The agreements were signed on 13 March. For 10 months, the Leader of the Opposition did not even know which minister was responsible for the Territory Insurance Office.

Mr Smith: You did not know the answer to the question yesterday.

Mr COULTER: That is the type of representative that the Labor Party has put in this Assembly to answer questions for 10 months as the shadow spokesman. He did not even know who the responsible minister was.

Mr Smith: I did not know when the thing was signed so how could I know that?

Mr COULTER: He did not know a lot of things, Mr Speaker. I do not believe he knows what day it is.

I can advise the Leader of the Opposition that the member for Flynn, as the responsible minister, approved this particular deal with Hungerford Refrigeration on 13 March.

Mr Smith: Thank you. Why didn't you know that yesterday?

Mr COULTER: I would hope that other honourable members opposite would learn by the mistake that the Leader of the Opposition has made and avoid the sort of ignorance and arrogance that he has displayed over the last 4 or 5 days. Have a look at the administrative orders and make sure what you are the opposition spokesperson for, and get to know your portfolio areas so that we can get on with government in this Northern Territory with, at least, an effective opposition to provide some meaningful and worthwhile debate in this Assembly.

Education Department Policies on AIDS Sufferers

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

I understand that the Department of Education is to develop policies in relation to teachers and students suffering from AIDS. In view of the importance of this issue, will the general public be given the opportunity to contribute to the development of these policies?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this issue is extremely important. I think honourable members will be aware that information about AIDS is already included in a number of areas of the curriculum in Territory schools. However, that does not address the question of what action the Department of Education should take when it is discovered that a teacher or a student has AIDS. Certainly, it would be unrealistic to believe that that situation will never arise. Clearly, we have a responsibility to ensure that we can deal with such a situation when, inevitably, we are faced with it. It is also fair to say that we have a responsibility to ensure that the community has the opportunity to contribute to any policies or guidelines that may be established.

As a result, I have directed the department to establish a task force to consider the issue and to develop policies in relation to the matter as quickly as possible. I intend that the task force have representatives from the Department of Health and Community Services, the Department of Education and the Department of Law. I have asked that we have representation from the Council of Government Schools Organisation, the Teachers Federation, the Principals Association and the Institute of Senior Education Officers. The task force sounds a bit large and unwieldy but it is a very important issue and we must involve as many people in the community as we can. I have also said that submissions should be accepted from concerned individuals and groups in the Territory.

The first meeting of the task force has been set for 8 May. I want the matter finalised by the end of June. It is an issue on which we must act quickly and decisively but it also requires considered consultation with the community. I intend to ensure that that consultation takes place and that, when the inevitable happens, we are in a position to take steps which will result in the least number of problems. We must also ensure that the victims of this terrible disease are not discriminated against in such a manner as would cause undue stress to them and their families.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, last night, I gave the Treasurer a series of questions concerning Hungerford Refrigeration. I leave it up to him whether he wants to answer those collectively or one at a time and whether he wants me to read them out or he can take them as read.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition provided me with a list of questions and I will read them out to the Legislative Assembly and supply the answers. The first question is: 'Is Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Limited a trustee company for the Hungerford Family Trust Sheetmetal Fabrication?' The answer is no. A company by the name of Epilawn had been a trustee for the Newcombe Family Trust and the name was changed subsequently to Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd. The company ceased to be a trustee in August 1984.

The second question is: 'What form is the Territory Insurance Office's capital investment in Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd - shares, debentures or loans?' The answer is 122 500 fully paid up shares at $1, and a loan of $627 500.

The third question is: 'What charge, if any, does the Territory Insurance Office have over the assets of Sheetmetal Fabrication?' The Territory Insurance Office has a first floating debenture charge over the assets of Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd.

The fourth question is: 'How has the $700 000 investment of the Territory Insurance Office been disbursed within the Hungerford corporate structure and how has the investment been secured?' Territory Insurance Office involvement will enable a complete financial restructuring of the company. Existing loans will be paid out, capital equipment purchased and working capital increased. A small portion will go towards a reduction in the trade creditors. I spoke about Hungerford's operating profit this year. The Leader of the Opposition painted negative scenarios and spoke about how much the company is in debt. There is a considerable operating profit in Hungerford Refrigeration.

The fifth question is: 'How many directors from the Territory Insurance Office have been appointed to Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd board and who are they?' The answer is 2. Mr Phillip Temple is the Chairman at Territory Insurance Office and Mr Vivian Hawke is the General Manager.

The sixth question is: 'Has the charge over the assets held by Carrington Confirmers been discharged?' The answer is that it will be lifted during the next few days.

I believe I have answered those questions in detail. I thought there were more than 6 questions. Indeed, they were taken from the list supplied by the Leader of the Opposition. However, may I put members of the opposition on notice. In future, if they ask me questions that are of a confidential nature or which follow their anti-development strategy on some of the issues which they have raised in this Assembly which have demonstrated their negative attitude towards the development of the Northern Territory, as a responsible minister, I will not be rising to my feet in question time to answer such questions as I have done in the past. I am sick and tired of the negative attitude of the members opposite. There is too much to do in terms of the development of the Northern Territory. The opportunities are enormous and I do not intend to waste my time in debating issues which are meaningless and which undermine the confidence of the people of the Northern Territory and the companies that I spend considerable time trying to attract to the Northern Territory. I have been fortunate. When they ask me about what the alternate government is likely to be, I say: 'Don't you worry about that'.

Land Councils Meeting at Lake Bennett

Mr McCARTHY to CHIEF MINISTER

Is he aware of the reasons for the joint land councils meeting at Lake Bennett today?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, my knowledge of the meeting at Lake Bennett today is derived from information received unofficially from Canberra and information that I have been able to glean from the media. Given that it appears that this meeting concerns negotiations on a matter of vital importance to the Northern Territory, the amendments to the Northern Territory Land Rights Act, a matter with which this government and many sectors of the community have been deeply involved for a lengthy period of time and into which they have put an incredible amount of effort, time and patience, not even to be given the courtesy of advice as to the current circumstances is a gross breach of propriety in my view.

Mr Bell: You blokes were not interested in the Land Rights Act last night.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell ought to know that the Northern Territory Land Rights Act is one of the most vitally important pieces of federal legislation affecting the Northern Territory. The proposed amendments have been the subject of intensive negotiation and discussions between the Northern Territory government and the federal government.

Mr Bell: A fundamental Territory issue.

Mr HATTON: The member opposite presumably is criticising the fact that I made some comment yesterday.

Mr Bell: You have turned through 180°.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell will cease his running commentary and the Chief Minister will be heard in silence.

Mr HATTON: The member for MacDonnell is obviously perturbed that I made some derogatory comments about the member for Arafura's speech in the Address-in-Reply debate yesterday, because he was specifically addressing a federal Liberal Party Aboriginal affairs policy.

Mr Bell: Which relates to the Northern Territory.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr HATTON: I made it quite clear that a federal Liberal Party policy had nothing to do with the debate in the Assembly. I felt that it was a shame that, in his maiden speech, the member acted in contravention of the conventions of this Assembly. If a member wants to speak controversially in his maiden speech, it happens to be a convention of parliament that he advises members opposite of his intention to do so. This then invites interjection. If members opposite studied parliamentary convention, they would know that. I have no problem with members opposite debating Liberal Party policies. I would thoroughly enjoy it and I have no doubt that this side of the Assembly would win such a debate.

I was asked a question about the Lake Bennett meeting. I understand that this meeting was called last week at the insistence of the Prime Minister. I understand that it has been funded by the Department of Aboriginal Affairs on the instructions of the Prime Minister and that the land councils have received a direct payment in the order of $70 000 to convene it.

The circumstances that have led to the calling of this meeting are of particular concern to me. I have had advice from pretty reliable sources which I am not at liberty to reveal. Of course, it is unofficial because I have not received any official advice from the federal government and, in fact, we cannot get responses to telephone or other communications concerning this particular meeting. For some reason, it is particularly secret and the federal government does not want to communicate officially with the Northern Territory government about it.

The situation is curious. Since 1985, the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs has been giving undertakings to this government and Northern Territory industries on amendments to the Land Rights Act. In April 1985, the first undertakings were given on some important matters such as stock routes, stock reserves and non-conversion of pastoral properties. Undertakings were also given in 1985 and 1986 to the mining industry in respect of special provisions in amendments to the Land Rights Act. These undertakings were reiterated as recently as 23 April this year. I understand that the proposed amendments, which were to go to the parliament, were approved by the Caucus subcommittee on Aboriginal Affairs. They received the approval of the Cabinet, but the full Caucus of the Australian Labor Party in Canberra decided that it would hand over the reins of government to the land councils of the Northern Territory.

Mr Ede: You do not know what you are talking about!

Mr HATTON: I understand that the instructions ...

Mr Ede: You do not understand. You have got it completely wrong.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I have already warned one honourable member about constant interjections. I now warn the member for Stuart. The next member who runs that line will be named. The Chief Minister will be heard in silence.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I understand that the instructions from the Caucus were: 'We do not want any arguments, justifications or cases to be brought forward. We simply want to know what the land councils want and we will do what the land councils say'. They are handing over government decisions to the land councils.

What about the views of the other 75% of Northern Territory residents? What about those other people, such as those in the pastoral industry, who have particular interests in these issues and who have honoured the undertakings they gave to the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs with respect to excisions? What about the views of the mining industry which finds itself continuously hamstrung because of the procedures required under the Land Rights Act? What about other Territory citizens who believe that they should have a right to the use of public purpose land in the Northern Territory and not have it handed across to specific individuals or groups for control and direction? These are fairly legitimate interests and they should be the concern of every person in this Assembly. What about undertakings that have been given by a federal minister of the Crown to those interest groups and to the people of the Northern Territory? Why is it that we are not invited to engage in further consultation?

Contrary to the allegations of Mr Bob Collins, the ALP Senate candidate, this is not a normal process of consultation. It is a meeting called at short notice. I could be wrong, because they keep changing the arrangements, but I believe that the Minister for Resources and Energy and the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs are flying up with the Caucus subcommittee on a VIP jet with the requirement that they report back tonight to Canberra. They are coming for their riding instructions on how to handle the federal parliament. That is a disgraceful way to carry out government.

A process was undertaken concerning the development of amendments to legislation. Considerable goodwill was generated in the community and, for the first time, there were signs of cooperation on many of the very contentious land rights issues.

I noted the remarks of the member for Arafura yesterday and I congratulate him for recognising the plight of people on pastoral properties and the needs for excisions, a process which this government has been addressing with vigour. We have been far more effective than 20 years of federal government efforts on that problem. That is being undermined by this backdoor lobby.

Members know that Warren Snowden, the CLC man from central Australia, just about lives in Canberra. He spends his time running around amongst his left-wing mates, drinking in the stranger's bar at Parliament House, promoting his particular views and the land councils' views and trying to undermine considerable intergovernmental and conscientious work to resolve some of the really contentious problems in this land rights legislation so we can get this Territory going in a direction whereby we can all live together without these sorts of nonsensical fights.

It is a tragedy that this sort of nonsense continues. After 2 years, after several draft bills, and after round after round of legal opinion and consultation with the land councils, the Aboriginal communities, the pastoral industry, and the mining industry, it is about time that the federal government should honour its undertakings and introduce legislation so that it can be debated. Only in that way can this contention be removed so we can get on with the business of building the Northern Territory for everybody.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, I must make a point about the so-called confidential information and commercially sensitive information that we are seeking, including the 6 questions that I asked. If the Corporate Affairs Office were operating properly, that information would be freely available. If the TIO was aware of its responsibilities in this matter, it would have ensured that that information was available there.

Having regard to the previous answer, that TIO has 2 directors on Hungerford Refrigeration, and having regard to the fact that the latest information available to us on the structure of Hungerford Refrigeration, which was that, in 1985, Hungerford Refrigeration had 4 directors - 2 Hungerfords, a Mr Dick and a Mr Stack - how does that relate to his statement last week that TIO had a controlling interest in the company and was controlling the affairs of the company?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I understand Mr Stack is no longer in the employment of Hungerford Refrigeration. Perhaps the Leader of the Opposition may like to confirm that?

Mr Smith: I have no idea.

Mr COULTER: He has no idea. That is not the only thing that he has no idea about. I understand that he has now left the employment of Hungerford Refrigeration. As I explained to honourable members last week, the voting rights on the board have been organised to give the TIO control of the company.

Access to Aboriginal Land for Mining Companies

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER FOR MINES and ENERGY:

With regard to statements by the Chairman of the Northern Land Council about ready access to Aboriginal land for mining companies in the Territory and, in particular, the chairman's claim that mining companies are dragging the chain in respect of exploration applications, can he clarify the situation and advise the real position?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Ludmilla for the question. I would like to take the opportunity to provide the facts on land applications to the Assembly, how many land applications have been requested by various mining companies, how many companies have been vetoed by the Northern Land Council and how many have been successful. There has been some misleading information in the media of late. In this Assembly last evening, the member for Stuart was trapped into making similar misleading statements. For example, he made claims about the location of the major mines of the Northern Territory today. He did not tell anybody that they were all deposits that had been explored and developed and which were governed by agreements that were entered into before 1976 - before the Lands Right Act came into force. That applied in every case and, by that, he condemned himself. That was when access to Aboriginal land ceased and it was good of him to point out just how much exploration had taken place and how much activity had occurred in the Northern Territory before the enactment of the Lands Right Act. The mines at Koongarra, Ranger, Nabarlek, Gove and Groote were all developed before 1976. The thing that stopped everything was the Land Rights Act. I would like to clarify that for the member for Stuart.

Mr Bell: Tell us about the Alice Springs to Darwin pipeline.

Mr COULTER: You will get yours in a minute too, honourable member for MacDonnell.

The NLC effectively vetoed some 32 applications for exploration licences in Arnhem Land. In marked contrast, consent has been given to 1 application only. The member for Victoria River tried to display graphically the location of some bombs yesterday evening. I am not sure how the Hansard reporters will handle this, but I will try to show a bigger bomb. For the benefit of honourable members, on this map, the areas shaded in yellow are areas of land where mining has been vetoed. Companies such as Comalco, Stockdale, CRA, BHP, United Uranium, Total, Esso and so on have all applied for land out in that area. In fact, the land that has been applied for covers some 18 554 km². The amount of success that mining companies have achieved is indicated by this little purple dot which represents a miserable 64 km² of a total of almost 600 000 km² which are now under Aboriginal or national park control in the Northern Territory.

That demonstrates the success rate of the Northern Land Council in negotiating. As I said in the Assembly last evening, the traditional owners have now lost faith and confidence in the Northern Land Council and its ability to represent their interests. A good example of that would be the Queensland Mines negotiations which broke down. I brought the parties together again but negotiations have broken down since. I received a telex today indicating that the Chairman of Queensland Mines wrote to me on 4 May saying that negotiations have broken down. It is a ridiculous situation. I received a telex from the Northern Land Council today which says it does not accept that negotiations have broken down. It is a bit like a marriage where 1 partner says, 'We are divorced', and the other says, 'We are not divorced'. It does not promise a very happy union for the future or for development if that type of situation exists.

When the honourable member spoke of the 4 major mines in the Assembly last evening, I said that he had the timing spot on. They are significant areas of Aboriginal land which have been mined but mining was stopped on the day the Land Rights Act came into force. The Koongarra agreement, of course, was based on pre-1976 discovery and, therefore, was not subject to the veto provisions of the act. 12 of the 13 which the Chairman of the Northern Land Council referred to are exploration licences on land under claim and are not agreements under the provisions of the Land Rights Act. Once again, that is testimony to the fact that, if a company wants to mine and there is a claim over the land, it is in big trouble.

In answer to the member for Ludmilla's question, the Department of Mines and Energy offered some 179 mineral exploration licences to a number of mining companies provided an agreement could be reached between them and Aborigines under the Land Rights Act. The act has failed dismally in the years that it has been in force. As the member for Fannie Bay mentioned last evening, the amount of wealth that is now locked up is incredible. 4 km² at Ranger have produced in excess of $1000m of mineral wealth for Australia in 5 short years.

In last night's adjournment debate, I mentioned that Senator Walsh, the Minister for Finance, has said that the Northern Territory economy is parasitic but more parasitic than it needs to be because of outside influence. All we are asking of Senator Walsh is that he take his foot off our neck and give us the opportunity to mine this vast mineral wealth. Let us get on with the job of developing the Territory, creating wealth and removing this social welfare umbrella that has been created over the top of Aborigines and the industry that has been set up to ensure that a social welfare mentality is maintained and, in fact, strengthened. Give the traditional owners the right to negotiate with mining companies directly so that they can create meaningful full-time employment and extract themselves from the situation that is forced on them by white advisers, lawyers and people who work for the Department of Aboriginal Affairs who are ensuring that these people will never rise above the poverty line. An industry has been created by these people to ensure that they keep their jobs. They would not get a job anywhere else.

A number of mining companies are actively negotiating or seeking to negotiate with Aboriginal land councils. Others have held back waiting to see what happens to those. Given the mining industry's experience with land councils, such caution is readily understandable. Mining companies have expressed considerable concern to me about the way that the Northern Land Council handles applications and the way that it claims to represent the traditional owners. There are many examples of this that can be gathered throughout the Northern Territory. We have witnessed situations like that at Coronation Hill, where traditional owners were prepared to agree to mining but where, all of a sudden, a magic sacred site appeared out of the ground. It was alleged to be a sacred site that had been mined extensively, which is why it was named Coronation Hill.

None of the applicants is satisfied that the proposals were adequately or fairly presented to the traditional owners by the Northern Land Council. I am talking in particular of those 32 applicants that have been knocked back in Arnhem Land alone. In early June, the Director of the Bureau of the Northern Land Council, Mr John Ah Kit, publicly berated mining companies in general, and BHP in particular, for being dilatory in forwarding detailed proposals. Advice of the NLC's resolution was not forwarded to the companies until early in September. In that advice, the NLC suggested that the traditional owners would like to have met with the applicants. As explained in the BHP letter, the company would have more than welcomed the opportunity to discuss the question of exploration with the traditional owners, but the NLC did not inform it of the meeting.

In the meantime, representatives of BHP had held meetings with the NLC in July. At those meetings, BHP proposed a reconnaissance of the areas to assist with the development of detailed proposals. The proposal included the use of traditional owners as guides, and was to be restricted to very preliminary assessments only. At those meetings, the NLC made no mention of the council's June resolution, nor was the traditional owners' desire to meet with the company conveyed to BHP. How can companies have any confidence or faith in the Northern Land Council? How can the traditional owners have any faith or confidence in the land councils? What has happened ...

Mr Ede: Why don't you make it a ministerial statement so that we get a chance to rebut this nonsense?

Mr COULTER: In response to that interjection, I am trying to bring home the facts.

Mr Ede: Those are not the facts.

Mr COULTER: The facts are simple, and the honourable member for Stuart pointed them out in this Assembly last evening. As soon as the Land Rights Act came into force, mining ceased. That is a fact, and he knows it. Yesterday evening, he said: 'what about the 4 major mines in the Northern Territory?' It just so happens that those 4 major mines came into production before the Land Rights Act came into force. It is farcical to say that 13 mining agreements have been concluded. It is not true.

This map says it all, Mr Speaker, even in respect of Arnhem Land alone. If you look at the 32 applications, the vetos and the approvals, it is a shame and a disgrace. This is a matter which involves millions of dollars of wealth and meaningful full-time employment for Aboriginals, which would bring them out from underneath the social welfare umbrella created by the leaders of the Australian Labor Party and propped up by mining companies because of the royalty payments they are forced to make. These royalties are paid for the right to exploit a resource which belongs to all Australians. They are paid to prop up the Northern Land Council and the Central Land Council. Millions of dollars are involved, and the companies are quite concerned that this snake they have created is biting them on the ankles with their money.

It is a suicidal situation, as I said in this Assembly last night. What are we doing to this great country? What are we doing to the Northern Territory? Give us a go, Mr Walsh. Take your foot off our neck and we will show you that we are not parasites on the national economy. We have great wealth. We have some great Aboriginal people who want to create meaningful jobs for their children. They do not want to live under the social welfare umbrella that is propped up by the white advisers, the Department of Aboriginal Affairs and the land councils. All they are asking for is a fair go.

Nuclear Waste Disposal Facilities

Mr BELL to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I refer to the member for Karama's speculation yesterday about the placement of nuclear waste facilities in the Northern Territory. Secondly, I refer him to a report emanating from his department about the prospect of siting such facilities to the north-east of Alice Springs, presumably in my electorate. Which government members have indicated their willingness to have such nuclear waste disposal facilities in their electorates?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I understand that negotiations are occurring between a very close colleague, who is involved in the Aboriginal movement, and the member for MacDonnell. I think the facility might be going to Libya now.

The fact is that involvement in the nuclear industry is an opportunity which should exist for the Northern Territory. Certainly, Senator Button thinks so. He has just formed a Base Metal Industry Council which is to look at ways of processing raw materials mined in Australia. There are a number of examples of this already occurring. You would be aware, Mr Speaker, of negotiations with BHP in an attempt to develop a manganese dioxide facility.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I refer the minister to standing order 113 which says that an answer shall be relevant to the question. I will repeat my question in case he did not hear it. I asked which government members have indicated their preparedness to have nuclear waste disposal facilities sited in their electorates? I do not want a rundown on the nuclear energy industry. We have had a number of debates about it in this Assembly.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The minister may answer the question in any way he sees fit, provided that his answer is relevant to the question.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I am not sure that the member for MacDonnell is not actually getting in early with a lobby to ensure that the facility is sited in his electorate. Perhaps he is worried that competition from other members of the Assembly might result in his missing out on his opportunity to become involved in this industry. Perhaps he has taken note of my point regarding full-time employment for some of his constituents. I will bear that in mind and no doubt he will speak to me further about the issue as time goes by.

The fact is that we have to become involved in the total processing of our mineral wealth in the Northern Territory. Recently, I had the opportunity of looking at a nuclear reprocessing plant at Le Havre in France. It is Europe's biggest project. It is a $12 000m project and employs some 4000 people. I believe there are some wonderful opportunities for the Territory to become involved not only in the processing of yellowcake but in developing and leasing fuel rods to the various companies involved. Those fuel rods would be returned to the Northern Territory for reprocessing and eventual storage. The only way we can really guarantee the safety of our nuclear material in world markets is by having total control of the product, just as Howard Hughes had some years ago with his drill bits. If we were in a position in the Northern Territory to mine, process, develop and bring the rods back to the Northern Territory for reprocessing and eventual storage, we would be able to tell if anybody was milking the plutonium out of them. We would be able to contribute much more to safety in the nuclear industry. It is simply a discussion paper but, no doubt, there will be many members in the Assembly who will now vie for the opportunity to become involved in such a venture should it happen. At the moment, it is merely a discussion paper.

Funding of FORWAARD

Mr REED to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is it true that the federal government is withdrawing funds from FORWAARD?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, FORWAARD is the Foundation of Rehabilitation with Aboriginal Alcohol-related Difficulties. I touched on this yesterday when the member for Arnhem asked me a question relating to overcrowding in Territory prisons. Over the last 12 months, I have tried to warn the Legislative Assembly, particularly the opposition, that the federal government is adopting the attitude that it must cut the social welfare budget. The most expedient way it can do that is to cut funds to the Aboriginals, the majority of whom are in the Northern Territory. This is yet another example of the federal government taking that attitude.

FORWAARD operates from premises in Stuart Park and offers a medium stay for a 6-week rehabilitation program for alcohol dependent persons. It has been funded entirely by the Commonwealth government. In February this year, the Commonwealth government decided, as a matter of policy - and I want the opposition to note that it is the federal government's policy to withdraw funding to all Aboriginal residential treatment programs - that this funding is to cease on 30 April 1987. The federal government ran the pen through it in February and dropped it cold. In a matter of 6 weeks, they run like mongrel dogs from a matter that is extremely important to 25% of the Territory's population.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I believe the expression 'mongrel dogs' is scarcely parliamentary.

Mr SPEAKER: I ask the minister to withdraw that remark.

Mr DALE: I certainly withdraw the remark unreservedly. I would like to explain that I was not referring to the federal government as mongrel dogs. I was simply indicating that the manner in which they retreated from this particular issue may be likened to the scampering feet of a dog.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will withdraw without comment.

Mr DALE: I withdraw it without comment.

FORWAARD has been directed to change its direction towards the provision of outpatient services, with particular emphasis on education and prevention services. I believe the opposition should be taking some note of this point. The implications of this redirection will have impact on the Northern Territory government. FORWAARD is the only residential program for Aboriginal people which is used by the judiciary as an alternative to prison sentences. Its closure will mean more Aboriginal prisoners and these people now make up 70% of the prison population.

FORWAARD provides a valuable social service by taking alcohol-dependent persons out of the community for a period of rehabilitation. If the residential component closes, this will place more stress on other services, including the police, emergency accommodation and welfare services in general. My departmental officers and this government are taking a far more responsible attitude to this matter. We are negotiating with the people involved in running FORWAARD to see if we are able to keep it operational.

Mr Speaker, in answer to a question from the member from Arafura yesterday, I said that I need members of the opposition to play their part in overcoming the problems relating to the penal system in the Northern Territory. What have they done in relation to this?

Mr Ede: I have written letters about FORWAARD.

Mr DALE: To whom?

Mr Ede: To the Department of Aboriginal Affairs.

Mr DALE: Good on you. Perhaps this is an example of the worth of the opposition when it comes to negotiating with their leaders down in Canberra. How many times have I stated that they are the puppets of their leaders in Canberra? Here is another example. They made representation, on behalf of the Aboriginal people in the Northern Territory, relative to FORWAARD, but still the pen went through it. They are useless at representing the people of the Northern Territory, particularly the Aboriginal people of the Northern Territory. They do nothing to represent their constituencies in this Northern Territory.

Beaufort Hotel's Outstanding Accounts

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Last week, he stated that he was having discussions with the management of the Beaufort Hotel about arrears in electricity, water, sewerage and payroll tax. What was the result of those discussions and is the Northern Territory likely to recoup the cost of supplying electricity, water and sewerage services and the arrears on payroll tax?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, my filing system does not seem to be working terribly well at the moment. I had a letter from the company involved. I will make a copy of that letter available to the Leader of the Opposition.

I had discussions with some of the people involved in Burgundy Royale concerning the sale of the facility. Last week, I had discussions with people from Westpac Bank which is involved in the financing of Burgundy Royale for its development on the Esplanade. A Westpac representative was in Hong Kong during the previous week negotiating the sale of the facility and Westpac is confident that a buyer will be found within the very near future, and discussions are at a point where an announcement will be made within the next 30 days.

In response to the Leader of the Opposition's question, the Northern Territory government is in a very good position to obtain the moneys that are outstanding. It has entered into an agreement with the banking company that will ensure that the Northern Territory government will be paid the amount of money that is owing to it in payroll tax and for electricity, water and sewerage services before connections are granted to the buyer. When the government controls some of the basic facilities, it puts it in a very strong position. That is the position that the Northern Territory government is in. I believe that a satisfactory resolution will be announced within the next 30 days. Indeed, the letter that I have come from Hong Kong and contained the latest information. I intended to make a statement on it yesterday.

Land Councils Meeting at Lake Bennett

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, I would like to make a correction to a position that I put to the Assembly earlier this morning with respect to the Lake Bennett meeting. I wish to ensure that I am not in any way misleading the Assembly on information that is available to me. In my statement, I indicated that the federal government's Caucus subcommittee on Aboriginal affairs was supportive of the amendments proceeding and that that was supported by the Cabinet. Mr Speaker, I am advised that I was in error in that respect. In fact, the Caucus subcommittee was opposed to the amendments going through. It was overruled by the Cabinet and the Cabinet, in turn, has been overruled by the full Caucus.

In no way do I withdraw the rest of my comments, and I would ask honourable members to think of the implications of that. Effectively, the Caucus is saying that it has no confidence in the Cabinet.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister stood up to correct a misleading impression that he said he gave, and has now gone on to advance the comments that he made earlier this morning.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I believe that my additional comments are relevant to the correction that has been made, and are important to give a complete statement in the context of the implications of that alternative information.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the point I was making was that I believe that, effectively, that is a vote of no confidence in the Cabinet. If a decision is made at Lake Bennett that the amendments should not proceed, the people of Australia will be placed in the rather awkward position, within our Westminster system of parliament, where a federal minister puts proposals of that kind to people. In these circumstances, I would think anybody in the Northern Territory, indeed anyone in Australia, would be quite entitled to say: 'Have you obtained permission from the full Caucus of your party to speak as a government minister and make undertakings on behalf of your government? If you do not, I have no confidence in accepting your word as a minister of the Crown'. That is the effect of that decision and I think that it is absolutely reprehensible. It is sufficient that, if the Cabinet is comprehensively rolled and that legislation does not proceed, then that is a vote of no confidence in the government, and it should resign and allow its Caucus to elect a new Cabinet.

Lockers for Sadadeen Secondary College Students

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Has the Department of Education made provision for lockers for students at the Sadadeen Secondary College?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, certainly the lack of lockers for the use of students at the Sadadeen Secondary College is receiving the attention of a number of members of this Assembly. The member for Sadadeen raised this matter the other day. You, Mr Speaker, have made a number of representations to the Director of Education in Alice Springs, and the member for Araluen is now pursuing the matter. I think that the sort of interest shown by local members in Alice Springs is quite worthy and appropriate. 168 lockers have been ordered and installed at the college, as you would be aware, because I believe you have correspondence that shows this to be so.

Mr Collins: For the matric students. What about the Year 11s?

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will be heard in silence, and the member for Sadadeen will allow him to reply to the question.

Mr MANZIE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I have not forgotten the Year 11 students. I wished to tell members that the 168 lockers that have been supplied will be used by Year 12 students. There are some extra lockers which will be utilised by Year 11 students.

The principal has made a request for an additional 200 lockers in the next financial year. Obviously, I hope that we can fund those lockers but I cannot give any undertakings because that will depend on our budget allocations and Territory-wide priorities in relation to education. I can assure honourable members that I will certainly keep the subject of the lockers in the forefront of my mind. I am very sure, Mr Speaker, that you and the members for Araluen and Sadadeen will continue to make representations and keep me up to the mark in relation to lockers at Sadadeen Secondary College.

Fruit-fly Outbreak in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

He is aware that there has been a fruit-fly outbreak in Alice Springs area over the last few months. What do he and the department intend to do about that outbreak?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not have details in front of me in relation to a fruit-fly outbreak in Alice Springs. However, I will undertake to obtain the information and provide it to the member during the course of these sittings.

Teachers in Outstation Schools

Mr McCARTHY to MINISTER for EDUCATION

My question relates to matters raised by the member for Nhulunbuy on Tuesday. I was concerned to hear his claim that teachers in outstation schools are laid off at the end of each school year. Is this indeed the case?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I must admit that I have some difficulty in answering this question, not because I do not have information from my department but because, as usual, it was very difficult to understand what the member for Nhulunbuy was talking about. First, he claimed that teachers in the East Arnhem region were laid off at the end of the school year. He then said that those teachers did not receive any holiday pay. He went on to say that the people referred to are not teachers. He then went on to say that there are often delays at the start of the new year because these teachers - the ones that are not teachers - have to wait until they are reappointed before they can start teaching again. I will try to do my best to sort out the question that I think the member for Nhulunbuy was trying to raise and which has led to the member for Victoria River's question this morning.

First, I would like to make it quite clear that no teacher employed by the Department of Education works on the basis that he or she is laid off at the end of each school year and is then reappointed at the beginning of the next school year. Obviously, that is absolute rubbish. Teachers who are servicing outstation schools automatically begin their rounds at the start of each school year and certainly there is no delay while they are re-appointed. I think the member for Nhulunbuy may be referring to the department's assistant teachers on outstation communities. Even if that is the case, he still has not got it right.

Assistant teachers are employed on a limited-tenure basis, usually for the period of the school year, but it is not true to say they do not receive holiday pay. They receive a pro rata payment which is based on the percentage of the year that they have worked. That means that an assistant teacher who works a full year receives full holiday pay. If he works half the year, he receives half holiday pay. I hope that the honourable member for Nhulunbuy can understand that concept.

Mr Speaker, limited-tenure teachers are automatically considered for re-employment at the start of each school year. That means they are not expected to reapply. They are reappointed automatically provided their prior service has been satisfactory and that their school is still entitled to the position and, of course, if they are available for reappointment. This system enables assistant teachers on outstations to begin teaching automatically at the start of each school year. Delays in reappointment and, therefore, salary payment can occur if the principal or the regional officer cannot find out if the assistant teacher is available for reappointment or if recommencement papers have not yet been submitted. If there are any initial difficulties along those lines, the department back pays those people accordingly.

The department has developed a process, which will be introduced next year, which will simplify this process even further. This process will enable the department to notify assistant teachers before the end of the school year that they will be required for the following year. I must point out that there are many problems associated with taking education to outstations.

Obviously, the problems range from teachers not being able to travel because of flooding, to students not turning up at the right time. However, the claims made by the member for Nhulunbuy seem to be extremely confused and grossly exaggerated. I would like to suggest that, if the member has any specific cases that he is worried about, he should provide me with details of those cases immediately and I will have them investigated. I would also like to suggest that, before the honourable member thinks about running off at the mouth again, he should check his facts more carefully rather than cause concern about circumstances which in fact have not occurred.

Prison Facilities

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Will he give an undertaking that he will support his department's proposal, which was put to the prison officers on 5 May, for its building of a remand facility in Darwin, a new prison in Katherine, a new industrial complex in Darwin, a prison reserve and an extension to the women's section at Darwin Prison? When can we expect the building to commence?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, perhaps I ought to put the honourable member in contact with the parents of a number of disabled people who are looking to me to spend some money to build respite care facilities. Perhaps I can direct him to the aged or to the people who require child care. I have not yet received the submission from the prison officers or the department, as the member put it, but I would imagine that it has come from the Prison Officers Association. I certainly hope it has. I can tell this Assembly that it is a financial impossibility for this government to build any institution whatsoever in the forthcoming 12 months as a priority within my department. I think it is time that I took some of the Assembly's time to outline what the penal system is all about for the education of members opposite.

Let me first give a profile of our prisoner population. 95% of people in the penal system are male and 40% have not previously been in prison. 33% are married and 54% are single and I do not know what the rest are. 70% are Aboriginal and 45% have primary or lower education. The usual offence categories are driving or property offences. 74% were unemployed at the time the offence was committed. 15% are under 19 years of age and 52% are over 25. 62% were born in the Northern Territory and 60% of offences were alcohol related. 34% of sentences are for fines or estreatment of bail and average 7 days each. 64% of convicted prisoners serve less than 3 months evenly spread between urban and rural areas.

The most recent figures, obtained in the last week of April, indicate that there were then 477 prisoners held in Territory institutions as follows: Darwin Prison, with a design capacity of 150, was holding 242; Gunn Point Prison Farm, with a design capacity of 60, was holding 60; and Alice Springs Prison, with a design capacity of 110, was holding 130. The Northern Territory has the highest imprisonment rate in Australia and it is 4 times higher than the Australian national imprisonment rate. The April figures show that 926 adult offenders in the community have been placed in conditional liberty programs by the courts. Of these, 538 offenders were on probation, 131 offenders had been released from prison on parole and 246 offenders were working on the community service order program. At that date, 43 juveniles were in custody in the Northern Territory and, on the same date, there were 203 juvenile offenders who had been placed on conditional liberty orders by the court. These included 143 on probation and 59 on community service orders.

Let me remind honourable members that the factor of 70% Aboriginal runs right through the juvenile area as well. It costs approximately $90 per day to maintain a prisoner in custody. It costs approximately $10 per day to maintain an offender in the community on some form of conditional liberty. The cost to build a new maximum security institution, and I hope the honourable member keeps this figure in mind, is around $150 000 per cell. I think the figures that the honourable member just ran past this Assembly as being from the submission that is coming from the POA, or the department, as he said, would be in the vicinity of 400 to 450 cells. I would like the honourable member to do his own arithmetic on how much that would cost and what the opposition is expecting us to do in the next 12 months. Those are capital costs alone. When the figures of $90 per day to institutionalise offenders as against $10 per day to have them on some conditional liberty are considered, it is clear why it is common sense for this government to pursue the latter course rather than the former.

Since March 1985, prisoner numbers have increased by 45% to 480 on 18 April 1987. The current figure is some 488. This is a system peak and we are nearly 30% overloaded. Rated capacity for adult institutions is 370. There has been an increase of 71% of offenders on probation or adult conditional liberty, with numbers rising from 313 in March 1985 to 538 in March 1987. Those systems have been successful in keeping 225 offenders out of institutions. In the parolee area, there has been an increase of 72%, with numbers rising from 76 in March 1985 to 131 in March 1987. Once again, this represents a significant increase in the number of people out of institutions. There has been an increase in community service orders with numbers rising from 14 in March 1985 to 246 in March 1987 following the introduction of the legislation in this Assembly late last year. One in every 90 people in the Northern Territory is currently under some form of correctional program.

The correctional policy is: to restructure the prison system; to provide secure custody, and protection for the public; to make prisoners productive to earn revenue to offset costs; to teach prisoners work skills and ethics and to use prison labour to rehabilitate land and pastoral holdings which can be made viable as commercial enterprises; to provide conditional liberty programs acceptable to the courts and the community; and to divert as many juvenile and adult offenders as possible from the costly imprisonment custody option; to aggressively implement juvenile programs for offenders which will cause behaviour modification and subsequent diversion from graduation to adult criminal behaviour. The wilderness camp is an example of the last mentioned aim.

I will give some examples of what we are doing in the fine default diversionary program. During 1985-86, 34.6% of all persons received into Northern Territory institutions were admitted as a result of fine default. The figure was somewhat similar for the previous financial year. On 19 January 1987, the government introduced a fine default option program to divert significant numbers of these people from costly and apparently unnecessary imprisonment. Since that time, 105 persons have been diverted from fine default imprisonment to the community service order program, 266 persons have been able to work off their fine at a rate of $100 per day for every 8 hours of community service order work performed. This program offers the courts the option of requiring offenders to perform useful, unpaid work for the community during their free time as an option to imprisonment. Currently, 89 offenders are working under the community service order program in addition to the 157 involved in the fine default diversionary program. Notwithstanding these initiatives, prison numbers have risen from 329 in March 1985 to 480 as at midnight on 18 April 1987. As I stated earlier, they rose to some 492 late last week.

The Beatrice Hill rehabilitation project was brought on line during the last 12 months. This minimum security institution is able to take up to 50 minimum security prisoners, who are fully employed rehabilitating a rundown cattle venture which will eventually be given back to the government.

The 1986-87 appropriation for the Northern Territory correctional services is $17.1m which is a 58% increase on the $10.8m provided 2 years previously in 1984-85.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! We have been fairly lenient to the honourable minister on this particular question because it is of interest. But, he was asked a very specific question concerning the government's building programs in the prisons area. He has answered it comprehensively and we do have a very limited time for questions.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I think this question is the second or third that I have been asked on correctional services by the honourable member. He asked whether I would be accepting a submission put to me by the department, as he said - and I believe that would be from the Prison Officers Association and possibly the Senior Prison Officers Association. I certainly will be receiving it and I am trying to tell him how I will respond to it.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The honourable minister may reply in any manner that he sees fit, provided it is relevant to the question. However, I would ask ministers and members to keep both questions and answers as brief as possible.

Mr DALE: Thank you, Mr Speaker.

The simple explanation for this increase in costs is that correctional services take offenders into the criminal justice system by the order of the court. There is no function discretion.

The following programs have or are being implemented in effect to reduce the number of juvenile offenders either coming into contact with the criminal justice system or being placed in costly custody.

Pre-trial diversion: this concept will enable juvenile offenders, charged with relatively minor offences for the first or perhaps second time, to be diverted from the court system provided they enter into an agreement which will address the problem which led to the juvenile's conflict with the law and will ensure the juvenile avoids further conflict with the law.

Community care program: this program will provide accommodation in a family environment for juvenile offenders who have no proper home environment or parental control. The concept provides for a juvenile to be placed with a specially-selected, trained family rather than the juvenile being remanded in custody whilst his or her case is being considered by the Juvenile Court. Currently, it costs in excess of $200 per day to remand a juvenile in custody in a detention centre. The payment to a care-giver family is significantly less at $20 per day.

Wilderness camp work: this concept provides a realistic, rigid custodial treatment program for juvenile offenders. The community, particularly tourists, are benefiting from the work projects carried out by the juveniles placed on this program. While allowing for the protection of the community, this program provides punishment and self-help for juvenile offenders through their participation in every aspect of day-to-day activities at the camp - its initial construction, meal preparation, camp industries and undertaking useful community work. Young offenders placed on this program learn on-the-job skills and life survival skills with the aim of improving their self-esteem, pride, their spirit and team spirit as well. Following the success of the first wilderness camp, which operated for 8 weeks on a trial basis during 1986, the government has now given approval for the camp to become a permanent element in offender treatment programs for juveniles. A major emphasis of the wilderness work camp program is placed on education, particularly remedial education for the young offenders going through the program. Close consultation with the Department of Education is being maintained in this regard.

The home detention program: this concept is available for juvenile and adult offenders, particularly those ...

Mr COLLINS: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I refer to standing order 113. I believe that the question was answered very early in the minister's reply. He said that there would be no money available for any major project. It was a very clear answer. We are listening to a prepared answer and the time available for questions is being wasted.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I wish to speak to the point of order. The question did not mention money. It mentioned the prospect of my receiving a submission from the department.

Mr Ede: It referred to building.

Mr DALE: I have been asked several questions in this Assembly and outside of this Assembly on what I am doing about various aspects of the correctional services system. I am trying to give the answer to those various questions, including the matter that has been raised by the honourable member. If the honourable member did not want me to answer the question, he should not have asked it.

Mr SPEAKER: I would remind the honourable minister and the honourable member of my previous ruling, and again request that answers be kept as brief as is humanly possible.

Mr DALE: The home detention program: this concept is available for juvenile and adult offenders, particularly those who have been convicted ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Obviously, the honourable minister is not taking any notice at all of your ruling. You ruled, quite specifically, that he should provide as brief an answer as was humanly possible. For the third time, the minister has resumed at the place in his prepared script where he was interrupted and has simply continued to read.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I most certainly wish to speak to the point of order. I am offended by the Leader of the Opposition saying that I am not abiding by your ruling. I am terribly sorry if the Leader of the Opposition believes that an answer to a question of this nature can be given in 1 minute. That is not my understanding of the seriousness of this matter. We have a crisis situation in our prisons and I believe the matter ought to be addressed. I am addressing it and I am trying to tell the Assembly how I am addressing it. If the Leader of the Opposition is not interested, he should direct his members not to ask such questions.

Mr Leo: You can make a ministerial statement.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, the opposition is interested in this matter and we are prepared to extend to the honourable minister any cooperation he needs to have this matter placed before the Assembly today. However, he has been given a fair go in question time. He has been on his feet for 20 minutes and we have 35 minutes left of question time. In the view of any reasonable person, he has been given an appropriate amount of time to answer the question fully.

Mr SPEAKER: Again, I rule that there is no point of order and that the minister has the right to answer the question in the way that he sees fit. However, I would remind the minister again that answers should be as brief as possible.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I thank you very much. In the spirit of giving the opposition members every chance to make some of the feeble points that I believe they have been wasting the time of this Assembly on during the past 5 sitting days, I will cut my answer short. I want to indicate to the honourable members opposite that I have another 8 pages of comprehensive notes containing the explanation of what we are doing to address these problems. I will make those available to the honourable member and I will make a briefing available, at a time to suit him, on precisely what we are doing in relation to correctional services.

I think it is vitally important that not only the honourable members opposite, but the people of the Northern Territory, understand that correctional services do not advertise the wonderful facilities that are available for inmates. We do not commit offences on behalf of the people of the Northern Territory to build up our numbers. We do not go to the courts to be convicted and sentenced to various institutions. The Department of Correctional Services has no choice. It has to accept those people who are sentenced by the courts.

As a member of a responsible government, and a responsible minister, I have to find ways whereby we can accept those offenders into whatever facility we see as being the most viable as far as their security is concerned. We have people in institutions who need to be in institutions. Quite frankly, I do not believe the public at large would like some of the people we have in institutions to be roaming the streets. However, the dollars that would need to be spent on the proposition put by the honourable member both on television and in this Assembly, that we should simply build more institutions, make the idea almost irrational. Suffice it to say that this government is addressing all possible angles to alleviate what I confess is a crisis situation in the penal system of the Northern Territory. I say again that 70% of adults and juveniles in prison are Aborigines and I say again that the communities must play a role in managing not only people who are in the penal system but people who are likely, because of their actions, to become involved in the system. Therefore, I call upon the members of the opposition, who are representatives of the majority of the Aboriginal population in the Northern Territory, to get off their backsides. They should work with the leaders in their communities, who are only too eager to cooperate with the department in preventing their people from being placed in the penal system.

Proposed Changes to Aboriginal Land Rights Act

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Following his meetings yesterday with the federal Minister for Resources and Energy, can he outline the ramifications of the proposed changes to the Aboriginal Land Rights Act and, in particular, the effect they are likely to have on the Northern Territory mining industry?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I shall try to be brief in answering the question, but I would like to point out to honourable members that the proposed amendments should be treated with extreme caution. I will probably be condemned by the opposition for suggesting that such caution should be exercised and perhaps even by the media and certain segments of the community, but I say it with very good reason. It worries me when people like Gayler, Blanchard and Hand, the lunatic left of the ALP, arrive up here from down south and say it has been a magnificent achievement at Lake Bennett.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The minister will not refer to members of other parliaments in derogatory terms and I ask him to withdraw that remark.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I unreservedly withdraw that remark.

These people have public views which are known to us. They are southern experts who trespass from time to time in and out of the Northern Territory telling us what to do and how to do it. I become very cautious when I read newspaper reports like the one I read the day before yesterday. On 5 May, the NT News had a headline 'No Compromise Over Veto Power' to an article written by Mr Dave Nason. It indicated that the land councils would not compromise over veto. When I hear that 200 Aboriginal people unanimously supported the amendments and that Mr Pat Dodson and Mr Yunupingu are saying that it has been a magnificent day and a wonderful day, I become concerned.

When I heard that the mining industry supports these amendments, I rang the Australian Mining Industry Council. I was told that it had not seen a copy of the draft bill or any information, but it had been told yesterday that such action would take place in Darwin. The Chief Minister responsible for the government of the Northern Territory did not receive a copy of the draft bill and was not even told that the meeting would be held.

The rest of the community should become concerned. The headline in yesterday's NT News was 'Mining Veto To Go Says Evans'. I think that the correspondent, in particular Mr Dave Nason, has been conned because something is not just right when you consider the people involved. The Chief Minister and I were given a verbal briefing yesterday by the federal Minister for Resources and Energy. I intend to wait. From what I hear, it is his first step on a long march. I am extremely concerned that amendments may now be rushed through the federal parliament without the Northern Territory government seeing a copy of the draft bill.

One of the things that concerns me is the fact that the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs will have the power to decide now whether mining goes ahead or not after the land councils have negotiated with the traditional owners. Let us have a look at the current situation. Since last August, there has been an agreement on Mr Holding's desk which simply needs his signature. That has been agreed to by the traditional owners, it has been approved by the Northern Land Council and it has remained on the desk of the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs since last August. We have been waiting 9 months.

Mr Ede: How many are awaiting your consent? 41.

Mr COULTER: He talks about 41 being on my desk. This could develop into a war of words in terms of the number of applications.

The scenario is starting to build up now and the press clippings will make the picture very clear to Northern Territorians. In The Australian of 30 April, there was an excellent article by Mr Yunupingu about Aborigines and mining. The trouble was that it contained incorrect information. The member for Stuart talks about how many applications are on my desk awaiting approval. Let us have a look at some of the ones that are on NLC desks, remembering that it claims to have processed 13. We have already pointed out to the member for Stuart that the NLC has, in fact, processed 1 application.

Mr Ede: It is 17 now.

Mr COULTER: He says it is 17 now. He really must do his arithmetic. Let me explain to him, as I did in yesterday's question time that the 4 mines producing 90% of the $1000m that is being produced on Aboriginal land in the Northern Territory were all approved before the Aboriginal Land Rights Act came into force in 1976. 12 of the 13 applications were on land under claim and had nothing to do with the Land Rights Act at that stage. These related to places such as Nicholson River. The figures are wrong.

The claim was made that there are 11 exploration licence areas over which the traditional owners have sought, but are still awaiting, proposals from the mining companies. The fact is that the Department of Mines and Energy does not have details of that claim but, even if the NLC's own figures are correct, its performance is woeful. Of 200 applications, it says that 97 are being proceeded with at this stage. This leaves a balance of 103 applications which, by implication, are being processed. Nevertheless, the NLC admits that it is negotiating only 14.

Paragraph 11 of Mr Yunupingu's statement in The Australian refers to 44 cases where the NLC is either negotiating, has entered agreements or is waiting for proposals. The quoted figures simply do not add up. I intend to make those figures available today so that honourable members can have an opportunity to do some basic arithmetic. I will give a hand to the Leader of the Opposition and to the Deputy Leader of the Opposition because I know that they are not very good at it.

Mr Ede: Have you heard of the traditional owner identification program?

Mr COULTER: The point I am making is that, as Territorians, we should take this very cautiously, and I will point out another reason for that.

Mr Ede: How do you negotiate if you don't know who the traditional owners are?

Mr COULTER: One reason for this amendment package was the inability for Aboriginal people to purchase pastoral leases and then convert them to Aboriginal land under the Land Rights Act.

Mr Ede: First tell us about all 41 on your desk.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I have been fairly tolerant to date with the member for Stuart, but his interjections will cease.

Mr COULTER: I ask honourable members if they remember McLaren Creek, which was bought as a pastoral lease and immediately converted to Aboriginal title under the Aboriginal Land Rights Act. It is locked up and cannot be touched now. The same occurred with Eva Valley Station. That amendment is being discussed now which means that the other 50% of the Northern Territory that is available for miners to get on to pastoral leases etc may no longer be available. I may be condemned by the opposition which means that I am on the right track. I say that honourable members should treat this very cautiously. It is like the wooden horse. Let us wait and see what comes out of its belly.

New Berry Springs School

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Can he assure me that, in the building of the new Berry Springs school, the wishes and the interests of the people of the rural area regarding the education of their children have been and will be taken into consideration?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for her question. I see that some children from the Berry Springs school are in the gallery today. I take this opportunity to assure the honourable member that the basis for building the school is to provide first-class educational opportunities to students in the Berry Springs area. That role will be carried out with maximum consultation with the community at all times. Consultation is something that our government is noted for, especially in relation to education. I can assure the honourable member that at all times we will be considering the well-being of the students in the Berry Springs area.

PubTAB Agencies

Mr LEO to TREASURER

How many PubTAB agencies have been opened since the passage of legislation allowing the introduction of PubTAB, and is it still the government's policy not to allow PubTAB outlets to open in areas already serviced by TAB sub-agencies, as was stated when the legislation allowing PubTAB was passed?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Nhulunbuy for his question. I would like to have a prepared briefing to give him exact details on that. I am prepared to make available to the honourable member the full details of the proposals for PubTAB. At the moment, there are many requests for PubTAB. There are 2 agencies and they are working extremely well. One is in the electorate of Palmerston and the other at Jabiru. I believe there is also provision for an agency at the Stuart Tavern in Alice Springs and I understand that is being proceeded with at the moment.

It is the government's policy not to approve PubTAB agencies where they would be in competition with existing agencies. This is of particular concern to a number of people. It is a magnificent facility and I can assure honourable members that it is working extremely well in the areas where it has been implemented. At the moment, the priority is to have it implemented in areas where there is no agency. That is why Palmerston and Jabiru were considered first. Negotiations are continuing whereby, if an agent wants to operate out of an hotel, that application may proceed. The problem is that the number of inquiries far outweighs the amount of equipment that we have available to enable us to enter into agreements to provide the facility. Because of the financial constraints that are upon us and the limited amount of machinery that is available to us through which to introduce PubTAB across the board, agencies will be established on a fairly selective basis for some time to come.

I will be happy to provide a more exact briefing for the member for Nhulunby because I know of his interest in this matter. I will provide him with full details on that during the course of these sittings.

Daly River Road

Mr McCARTHY to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

The government, through the Department of Transport and Works, has promised the people of Daly River for some time that the Daly River Road would be fully sealed. Due to financial constraints, the work has been delayed for several years. Can he assure me that he will do his utmost to ensure that faith is kept with the people of Daly River and beyond by completing the sealing of this road during the 1987-88 financial year as promised?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can assure the member for Victoria River that the Northern Territory government's commitment to road development throughout the Northern Territory will remain as high as ever. That commitment has been somewhat constrained of late as a result of a number of cutbacks, particularly in federal funding. During the Address-in-Reply debate, I mentioned the effects of the implementation of the Cameron Report and, more pertinently, the fears that I have that the Cameron Report resolutions may be carried forward into future funding. At present, the resolutions will be directed at 10% of the next 3 years' ALT program but I fear that they may be directed across the board.

The Victoria Highway comes under the national highway network and is regarded as being of fairly low priority. It is a responsibility of the federal government and is subject to federal funding. The traffic across that area has been fairly low. Despite that, a few years ago, the Northern Territory government was able to persuade the federal government to give some priority to construction of the first 15 km west of Katherine. The cost of the further extensions towards the King River, which are expected to begin in June, will be some $5.5m.

In addition, members will be aware of the substantial commitment that we have given to ongoing maintenance to keep the road as trafficable as possible. Considerable work has been done on the shoulders of the Victoria Highway. The total cost involved in upgrading the Victoria Highway to the border would be some $150m. Naturally enough, that work will have to be programmed over quite a few years.

The Daly River Road involves about 80 km of road of which half remains unsealed. The Northern Territory Department of Transport and Works has included in the draft 1987-88 capital works program some $2.5m to continue works in that area. That would cover another 12 km of road. Naturally enough, the inclusion of those works will be subject to the constraints of the budget.

The federal minister, Mr Morris, announced recently that the Cameron Report would form the basis of future funding. In the next 3 years, it will involve at least a $0.5m cut in funding for local roads and urban roads in particular. The federal mini-budget next week may involve some more bad news, particularly for projects related to the more remote and undeveloped areas of Australia. The full impact of the Cameron Report is something that ought to be dealt with as a separate matter. The tales reflect the federal government's attitude towards providing facilities and infrastructure for people in remote areas. Honourable members opposite, who have electorates in the scrub, will be finding that the pressure will really be on to meet their needs.

In summary, the member for Victoria River can be assured that I will do my utmost to ensure the continued development of roads throughout the Northern Territory.

Alice Springs Gas Pipeline

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he report on the conclusion of the investigation into safety of the Alice Springs gas pipeline?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am in a position to advise honourable members of the safety of the Alice Springs gas pipeline. Honourable members will remember that it has been the subject of considerable debate in this Assembly. We have had people suggesting that the sky will fall in etc. I presented to honourable members recently the report of Mr Alder who was brought up from the Gas and Fuel Corporation to inspect the line and determine its safety. Since then, we have run the intelligent pig down the line. Honourable members will remember the definition of an 'intelligent pig'. They will also be aware of a pig that is not intelligent, the dummy pig. In fact, both pigs have been along the pipeline and, in some sections of the pipe, they showed 5 defects which needed further investigation. The pipe has been excavated in specific areas and honourable members will be pleased to hear that the defects that were located during that exercise were external. They were external marks on the pipe and these small problems will be rectified quite easily.

I will explain for the Leader of the Opposition just how an intelligent pig works so that he will be able to recognise one the next time he sees one. The pig actually has the capability of measuring the wall thickness of the pipe. It can measure very small indentations, external bruises or corrosion which may be occurring inside the pipe. Next time he sees one, he will be able to recognise it. I guess he comes across them from time to time.

I have written to the member for Stuart giving him a full briefing and I notice that he has been fairly silent during these sittings. I would say that those people of Alice Springs who bought bomb shelters as a result of his telling everybody that the sky would fall in, can now emerge from them. The small number of defects that need repair will be attended to. I can assure the people of Alice Springs of the safety of the line, having had these exhaustive tests carried out. The survey contractor has been requested to re-evaluate the results in light of the information that is now available to him.

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, earlier this week, I indicated that there was a public service document that revealed that there were 18 school leavers employed in the public service as at 31 March. Subsequently, the Chief Minister informed us that 246 had been employed in the period between 31 December and 31 March. How many of those 246 are still employed and how many of the 246 are employed in permanent positions in the public service?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I must humbly apologise but I do not keep in my mind the details of the employment history of all of the 15 000 people who work in the Northern Territory Public Service. I ask that the question be placed on notice and I will obtain an answer for the honourable Leader of the Opposition.

Proposals for Dam in Batchelor Area

Mr McCARTHY to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Mr Speaker, land transactions and proposed developments in the Batchelor to Adelaide River area and the various proposals for new dams have caused considerable concern to persons who have settled on small holdings in the region. In some cases, people have spent large sums of money on development of land which would be flooded if proposed dams were constructed. Can he inform me and affected landholders of the government's intention with regard to future water supplies for Darwin and whether any of the options affect the Batchelor Adelaide River area and, if so, when dam developments will take place?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I acknowledge the interest of the member for Victoria River because I understand that 1 of the sites that was considered for the development of a dam was near Batchelor. The other option is to develop what is known as the McMinns Lagoon bore field. Water supply is quite vital to our survival and, in Darwin, we have 2 options. One is to use the underground water that is available to us and the other is to dam water. Unfortunately, we do not have any mountains that would enable us to avoid the very expensive cost of having to pump water. Yesterday, the member for Koolpinyah mentioned some of the problems being experienced in the Darwin River Dam area as a result of that. No doubt, she would be interested in the McMinns Lagoon bore field because that is in her electorate as well.

There are a number of options available to the government and we will be examining those in the near future. I will make available to the member for Victoria River full details of those options. Indeed, I will make them available to the member for Koolpinyah too, just to show there are no hard feelings.

Uluru Board of Management

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

Whom does the Northern Territory government intend nominating to the Uluru Board of Management?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise the Assembly. If my memory serves me correctly, we have already sent our nomination to the federal minister, Mr Cohen. The Minister for Lands and Housing and Minister for Conservation, Mr Hanrahan, will be the nominee. The honourable minister was one of the nominees that we forwarded to the federal minister last year. Immediately before Christmas, he finally responded to us and indicated that we could nominate only 1 person. He would not allow the Northern Territory to have equal representation with the federal government. We nominated Mr Hanrahan and that has been confirmed. The honourable minister holds the relevant portfolios of conservation and tourism.

Review of Domestic Air Fares

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

What was the outcome of the recent review into domestic air fares and what effect will this review have on Territory travellers?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, a couple of days ago, I received a copy of a press release issued by the so-called Independent Air Fares Committee on their triennial cost allocation review. The heading of that news release was: 'Better News for Shorter Distance Air Travellers'. Therefore, air travellers from the Northern Territory, Western Australia and other more remote areas will pay increased air fares. The purpose of the triennial review is to set the formula for passenger costs for the ensuing period. That is broken into 2 components: flag fall and mileage components. It is quite obvious from the summary of the news release that the flag fall component will be reduced and offset by increases in the mileage component.

Examples given by the IAFC included 1 for Darwin. Darwin to Sydney passengers will pay an increase of 1.2%. The Sydney to Canberra route has a cut of 5.6% for those federal politicians who will be travelling between Sydney and Canberra and Canberra and Melbourne. One would have to suggest that it might be more in the national interest that Canberra be isolated altogether. That might be the way to pay for some reduction in air fares for people in the more remote areas. We probably ought to consider building a moat around Canberra and cutting off the telephones. That would be a better approach than giving them cheaper air fares to trot backwards and forwards at the taxpayer's expense. I suppose it is fairly cynical of me to suggest that relatively lower air fares to the golden triangle in election years could only be an absolute coincidence.

While this increase is only 1.2%, it means that, as future air fare increases are implemented, as they inevitably will over the next 3 years, Territorians will be paying a greater share of those increases. Not only that, they will be paying for the reductions and relative decreases in other areas, particularly the Melbourne, Sydney, Adelaide triangle. We all know that internal air fares are a prohibitive factor in the proper development of tourism in the Northern Territory. We ought all to be concerned that we are witnessing another example of a Canberra-influenced, derogatory, retrograde step.

Mr Bell: Do you mean it is bad, Fred?

Mr FINCH: It is bad. It is bad for Territorians, although it is probably good for Canberra bureaucrats and politicians. It is another example of how people in remote areas, who are working towards the increased productivity of the nation, are trodden on again. I can only suggest that, the sooner we correct the imbalance of power in the nation which leads to this sort of determination, the better it will be for all of us.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
CAT Scan for Alice Springs Hospital

Mr DALE (Health and Community Services): Mr Speaker, earlier in these sittings, the member for Sadadeen asked me a question about a CAT scanner being made available to Alice Springs Hospital. I can now advise him that negotiations have been in progress for some time with a private doctor. I am extremely hopeful, whilst I am not committed to the fact, that a CAT scanner will be available in the Alice Springs Hospital in about 10 weeks time.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Fruit-fly in Alice Springs

Mr PERRON (Industries and Development): Mr Speaker, I have an answer to a question asked by the honourable member for Sadadeen in relation to fruit-fly in Alice Springs. Since 1980, a regular fruit-fly monitoring program has been maintained in Alice Springs. In December 1985, an outbreak of Territory fruit-fly occurred in the east side area of Alice Springs. Following this outbreak, the monitoring program was upgraded and, on entomological advice, it was decided not to conduct any eradication and control program until the effect of the 1986 winter was assessed. This was done in October 1986. Given an estimated cost of $250 000 for eradication of the pest, and the absence of any commercial horticulture in Alice Springs township, it was decided not to carry out a government-sponsored eradication and control program. Instead, the public were advised by the press of the measures which could be undertaken to control the pests in individual fruit trees. Monitoring of fruit-fly in the Ti Tree-Pine Hill area was intensified at this stage and no fruit-fly have been identified in that area. Regular certificates of area freedom from fruit-fly are issued for the Ti Tree-Pine Hill area and negotiations are taking place to ensure access to markets in South Australia.

Further assessment of fruit-fly spread in Alice Springs will be made throughout the year and it is expected that a severe winter may eliminate the pest.

25 June 1987

2. University College of the Northern Territory
Enrolments

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many full-time students are enrolled at the University College of the Northern Territory?
2. How many part-time students are enrolled?
3. How many students who completed Year 12 at Northern Territory schools are:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents at the University College?
4. How many:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents are in the Arts faculty?
5. How many:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents are in the Science faculty?

2 June 1987

1. Prisons - Accommodation

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for COMMUNITY SERVICES

1. Is Lot 282 Kempe Street, Alice Springs, currently being used to house prisoners from Alice Springs Prison?
2. Does the Department of Community Services propose to publish its 'Rural Venues' as an alternative to existing prison programs; if so, what are the details?
3. Will Lot 282 Kempe Street, Alice Springs, be used permanently as a prison annex; if so -
 - (a) what will be the size of the building(s) to be used;
 - (b) how many prisoners are to be housed;
 - (c) what is the security classification of the prisoners to be housed;
 - (d) what facilities are to be provided in the prison; and
 - (e) how many prison officers will be employed to operate the prison?
4. Why was Mr Devine, the former Superintendent of the Alice Springs Prison transferred from the prison?
5. Does the government have any plans to use Gunn Point Prison Farm; if so, what are the details?

ANSWER

1. No.
2. Proposals for 'Rural Venues' as alternatives to existing prison programs in the Southern Region are currently under development. One live-in community work services program in conjunction with the Ghan Preservation Society is operational at present.
3. Lot 282 Kempe Street is proposed as a temporary annexe.
 - (a) Converted 2 bedroom domestic dwelling with extensive grounds and some outbuildings.
 - (b) Normally 4 'permanent' prisoners, but able to cater for additional numbers should there be a short-term need.
 - (c) Anticipated will house all classes of prisoners. Would be able to hold maximum security prisoner/s only on a temporary basis. Disruptive prisoners would be transferred to Darwin Prison.

- (d) Usual domestic facilities (kitchen, laundry, etc); outdoor recreation and garden area; security fencing; lighting; detectors; direct communication link with main prison.
 - (e) 1 x Senior Prison Officer, 8 x Prison Officers all transferred from within existing prison establishment.
4. Mr Devine's transfer has upgraded the work performed in areas such as prisoner classification, investigation and the provision of custodian advice. His new role in Alice Springs mirrors the structure in the Darwin Region.
 5. There are no plans to alter current operations at Gunn Point Prison Farm.

Transport Study Group

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer him to his statement during the last sittings in answer to a question on his recent trip to Japan and the formation of the Japan Australia Transport Study group and to recent press articles dealing with that same matter. Could he advise on the status of what is known as the Japan Australia Transport Study Group and the involvement in that study group of the companies that he named in the last sittings?

ANSWER

I can well understand honourable members' confusion on this matter following the barrage of misleading and confusing information and allegations that the public has been subjected to in recent weeks. The fundamental points at issue are whether there is a study group and whether the companies I named are members of that study group. I am pleased to have the opportunity of confirming my advice to the Assembly at the last sittings regarding the setting up of a study group to further a proposal to construct the Alice Springs to Darwin railway line.

Let me make it quite clear to honourable members: a study group has been set up to examine the Darwin to Alice Springs railway. The organisations mentioned by me are involved in the study group. The first formal meeting of the study group, including representatives of those companies, together with representatives of a number of other companies that I shall not name, will be held at 10.30 am next Tuesday in Tokyo. As late as yesterday, I received written reconfirmation from Tokyo of the attendance of representatives of those organisations at the meeting.

One final point I would like to make concerns the involvement of TNT in the railway project. As I said earlier, TNT has expressed an interest in being involved in the operational side of the railway and I have written confirmation that this is still the company's position. As was our experience with the Alice Springs to Darwin pipeline, I would expect that companies will move in and out of the study group as the project evolves. As I said, I do not intend to release names of any more study group participants. The lesson I have learnt from this saga is the wisdom of not providing names or details at an early stage. I do not intend to make that mistake again. Mr Speaker, I intend to put my best endeavours into seeing this dream become a reality.

Transport Study Group

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he provide this Assembly with written evidence that indicates that the Long Term Credit Bank of Japan and the Japanese Railway Freight Company have made a commitment to this government that they are prepared to be involved in the Japan Australia Study Group, as distinct from being prepared to be involved in a meeting in Tokyo next Tuesday 9 June to discuss certain railway issues?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that question is almost impossible to answer. It is like asking if you have stopped beating your wife. The meeting next Tuesday is a meeting of the study group. I have here written reconfirmation from those companies.

Mr Smith: Table them.

Mr Hanrahan: Not on your past efforts.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, those companies and a number of others ...

Mr Smith: Are you going to table them?

Mr HATTON: ... will be involved in that study group and I am happy to show the evidence to the Leader of the Opposition. I am not going to table it, but I am happy to show it to him. It reconfirms that those companies are involved in this study program and they will be at the meeting next week. I repeat that I have never given, nor will I ever give, a cast-iron guarantee that these companies will be involved in this particular project for ever and a day. At this stage, they are involved. They have been involved and I faithfully reported the facts at the last sittings of this Assembly.

Free Bus Travel

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

In view of the government's stated financial constraints, why does the government, through the Department of Transport and Works, allow and in fact encourage free bus travel on private buses contracted to operate on government bus routes, in contrast to the user-pays system of payment on government buses?

ANSWER

This is a question that needs answering and I am glad the honourable member gave prior notice that she would ask it. The government does not encourage free travel on private buses operating under contract. Free travel is provided to school children if they live more than 5 km from the nearest appropriate school, if they must attend a particular school at the government's direction and it is located more than 1.6 km from their place of residence - an example would be a senior high school, if they are disabled, if they need to attend intensive migrant education programs or a special unit such as the deaf unit or if there are special circumstances approved by the director. Those are the circumstances in the Darwin rural area where members of the public do not tender a fare on boarding the bus.

Bus services from Noonamah and Humpty Doo to Palmerston primarily service the needs of school children. However, since those services are operating at a convenient time for members of the public and, to avoid duplication of service, it was decided last year to allow members of the public to travel on those buses. Since the buses are private, the driver is not permitted under the Transport Workers Passenger Vehicle Award of 1984, as defined by the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission, to collect a fare. Only members of the Transport Workers Union working in the public transport organisation - in this case, the Darwin Bus Service - are permitted to collect fares. To overcome this problem, the government has established period ticket outlets throughout the Darwin rural area and members of the public are required to present a current period ticket to the driver upon boarding the bus.

Beaufort Hotel Debts

Mr HARRIS to TREASURER

The minister would be aware of concerns being expressed about the outstanding debts of the Beaufort Hotel and, in particular, outstanding debts connected to electricity charges. What is the current situation regarding the outstanding debts to the Northern Territory government and what security has the Northern Territory taxpayer in relation to those debts?

ANSWER

I thank the member for Port Darwin for his question. Honourable members would be aware that I said during the last sittings of this Assembly that I would have further information within 30 days on the eventual sale of the Beaufort Hotel.

I can advise honourable members that I have been visited by a number of people during the last 30 days, including Mr Bruce Cohen from the Westpac Banking Corporation. Indeed, I was on the phone to him yesterday. Many overseas investors have also visited the Northern Territory in the last 30 days and, having included on their itinerary a review of the Burgundy Royale asset in Darwin, have subsequently gone away to put together proposals for the eventual takeover of the facility. In addition, Mr Brian Snodgrass, Chief Manager of the Loans Management Division of Westpac Banking Corporation, has been in Hong Kong negotiating with potential investors concerning the eventual sale of the Beaufort. Thus, there is action on both fronts. Westpac is certainly keen to have the matter resolved in terms of the commitment which is owed to it and, of course, this has been complicated by the liens which are now placed on the building by Jennings Industries.

I can assure honourable members that the Northern Territory government is protected in relation to the sale of the facility. As we have said, we will not be reconnecting services until the debt to the Northern Territory is paid in full. That includes the figures for outstanding amounts which I mentioned to honourable members in the last sittings: the electricity account of just over $1m, a water and sewerage account of some $76 000, and payroll tax of $250 000.

There is one other complication, however, that has crept into the issue. It concerns the amount of group tax which is owed to the Commonwealth on this particular facility. I understand that quite a large sum of money is involved although the Commissioner for Taxation would not release exact details of the amount. The Northern Territory government has said it will not precipitate the closure of the hotel and throw 250 people out of work. We are looking for a walk-in, walk-out deal with the potential investors we are currently negotiating with. I can advise honourable members that negotiations are still continuing at a very senior level within the Westpac Banking Corporation and also with the directors of Burgundy Royale themselves.

The Northern Territory government, as I have said, is protected. It will not be reconnecting services until it receives full settlement. Honourable members would be aware that taxes and charges are paid out first in the case of any liquidated damages proceedings.

Exercise Sure Bet

Mr POOLE to CHIEF MINISTER

A few weeks ago there was an article in the NT News concerning 2 journalists who impersonated policemen during exercise Sure Bet. I would like the Chief Minister to advise what action is to be taken in respect of those 2 journalists?

ANSWER

I am advised that a prosecution against the 2 journalists is unlikely to succeed as they claim there was implied approval for their actions by way of challenge. The 2 persons formally approached a policeman to borrow uniforms but this request was denied. At this stage, it has not been ascertained how the uniforms were obtained. I suggest it probably will never be ascertained. The question of trespass is a matter for the Commonwealth Attorney-General to consider and not a matter for the Northern Territory government.

Frankly, I found the actions of the 2 journalists rather juvenile. While they claim to have penetrated the cordoned area of the airport, the journalists attended a briefing session where the exact extent of the perimeter guard was outlined. This was on the day prior to their excursion. It is interesting that a technician involved in the exercise reported the presence of those 2 people. He considered that they were either acting irresponsibly or were intoxicated. It is a pity that the 2 journalists did not attempt their stunt on the following night, when the SAS regiment was in place, as they might have become involved to an extent that would have made them rather uncomfortable, to say the least.

I might add that, on the particular night when the breach occurred in the cordon, 5 other people were apprehended attempting breaches at locations where the cordon was in place. They were people who were deliberately sent to test the cordon where it was in place for the purpose of the exercise. It is a fact that that area was not completely cordoned off, as it would have been in the event of a genuine terrorist incident. This was simply an economic decision in terms of the allocation of resources. A cordon was in place and, for the purpose of the exercise, a cordon was presumed to be in place in other areas.

Mr Speaker, I can also confirm that, on the final night of the exercise, when I was personally observing activities in 'Sure Bet' there was at least one attempted incursion. The person was apprehended and I can assure members that I for one would not want to try to tangle with either the Northern Territory Police Task Force or the Special Air Services of the army by trying to break through cordons or carrying out other actions in those situations. I do not think anyone would find himself in a very comfortable position, particularly in a real situation.

I was debriefed by the person who spoke with the journalists and told that the impression received was that they were a couple of very irresponsible Northern Territory police officers. In fact, their behaviour had caused that person to form a low opinion of the Northern Territory police because of the way the 2 men were openly lampooning the exercise whilst approaching people. As a consequence, the person complained about the performance of the Northern Territory police. When they turned out to be journalists, the police did not have to wear that criticism.

I must say quite categorically that the Northern Territory Police Force performed quite magnificently during that exercise. From my personal observation - and I am sure the member for Ludmilla, who was actively involved, will confirm this - our police and our emergency services personnel demonstrated a high level of competence in dealing with what could be a very difficult and delicate situation. It certainly improved my confidence in our ability to handle an incident of that nature. Certainly, there were problems with the exercise and lessons have been learnt. That will only improve our ability to deal with a genuine situation if it ever arises in the Northern Territory.

Mr Speaker, I repeat my commendations to all those involved: the army, the Commonwealth people, the Northern Territory Police Force, the task force and the emergency services personnel. All performed admirably and we have learnt a great deal from the exercise. It will improve our ability to deal with this disease of the late 20th century.

Tabling of Documents

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

I draw his attention to standing order 255 which reads:

A document relating to public affairs quoted from by a minister, unless stated by the minister to be of a confidential nature, or such as should more properly be obtained by address, shall, if required by any member, be laid on the Table.

Mr Speaker, as I require the documents that he referred to in a previous answer this morning to be tabled, will he table those documents?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the simple answer to that question is that I did not quote from them. I referred to them but did not quote from them. The standing order therefore does not apply.

Pastoral Industry Study

Mr BELL to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

When will the GRM study of the Northern Territory pastoral industry be made public?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there is indeed considerable interest in the pastoral industry study which has been conducted over the past 12 months in the Northern Territory. It is a very comprehensive study. At present, we are in the process of organising sufficient copies for the document to be tabled in this Assembly and for items to be made available to the many other interested parties. I am seeking Cabinet approval to table the report and I expect that that will be done next week.

Pastoral Industry Study

Mr BELL to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Is he able to advise which public interest groups were allowed the opportunity to have input into draft stages of the GRM study?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot answer the honourable member's question specifically. I have read a very late draft of the pastoral industry study and I understand that there are only a few words changed in the final copy, which is now available for Cabinet consideration. I am sorry that I am unable to name the groups approached by the consultants who undertook the study.

Privatisation of Darwin Airport

Mr REED to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

I ask him this question in his capacity as Acting Minister for Transport and Works. Could he advise the House on the possible privatisation of Darwin Airport?

ANSWER

When I first heard of the proposal to sell off Australia's international airports, I thought that possibly something might be happening with Darwin Airport at long last. However, as events unfold, it seems that, once again, the Commonwealth is about to let us down in respect of the airport because no one seems to know what is happening with the sale of international airports anywhere, let alone in Darwin. The Federal Airports Corporation, which is supposed to take over the running of our international terminals in less than 4 weeks' time and turn them into profitable concerns, has no indication of what assets there are, how much debt it will have to service or what limitations will be placed on its borrowings. That hardly augurs well for the possibility of Darwin Airport being sold off to private interests and, hopefully, being rebuilt. We are all aware of the inadequate facilities at Darwin Airport and the Territory's vital need, in relation to our tourist promotion effort, for that terminal to be rebuilt to service both domestic and tourist requirements. Until that terminal is developed, we have to put up with second-rate facilities which prevent international air carriers looking at Darwin as a possible entry point for tourists.

A number of private businesses have indicated their ability and enthusiasm to develop a terminal at the Darwin Airport in a private capacity. However, the federal government's attitude has meant that, under no circumstances, will anyone be allowed to do anything which might improve facilities there. We have already had the debacle of $19.2m being spent on developing a new terminal at a site on the northern side of the airstrip. We saw the Prime Minister hop in a brand new bulldozer hired specifically for the occasion. What hypocrisy! He dropped the blade down and said that he had turned the first sod. After an expenditure of $19.2m in development fees, engineering studies and works, the project was abandoned. What a waste! It is typical of the federal Labor government and the present Prime Minister whose attitude towards the Territory is one that all Territorians are well aware of. It is a great spot for a few pictures, driving a bulldozer and sightseeing at Kakadu. That is terrific, but when it comes to anything which might allow Territorians to develop our facilities and our economic base, it must not be allowed to occur. That is what has happened with the airport. I bet that, at the end of the day, there will be a number of international terminals in private hands throughout the country while Darwin will still be stuck with a World War 2 shed which is totally inadequate now and was totally inadequate 10 years ago. That is typical.

Mr Ede: It is a defence strip.

Mr MANZIE: It is a defence strip! Mr Speaker, there we have a great example of the Deputy Leader of the Opposition's attitude towards any possibility that we might be able to do something for ourselves in the Territory. Don't let development happen! The excuse is that it is a defence strip. Of course it is a defence strip. People have been living with it for years. A number of defence strips in this country have airport terminal facilities that are adequate for the use that is required of them. Townsville is a good example, and I think even in the ACT ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister was asked a very specific question. He has answered that specific question. He is now attempting to breach standing order 112(1) which quite clearly and distinctly says that questions cannot be debated. The minister has far exceeded his brief. He has far exceeded the bounds of the question that was asked of him and now he is attempting to debate a much wider issue.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order but I would ask the minister to keep his answer as brief as possible.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, obviously there is no point of order because we are talking about development of the Darwin air terminal. If the Leader of the Opposition wants to prevent me from enlarging on the question, he will instruct his deputy to make no comments and to try not to embarrass the Labor Party any further. Members of the opposition try to stick up for their federal colleagues. The fact is that they do not want to see any development and they get touchy and twitchy when it is suggested. It is a defence airport. It already has a terminal on it which is inadequate, and $19m has been spent on an abandoned project to build a new one. If we could privatise it, we would possibly be able to do something for the benefit of the Territory and for the benefit of young people who will need jobs in the future.

DISTINGUISHED VISITORS

Mr Roger Steele and Mr Jack Doolan

Mr SPEAKER: I draw the attention of honourable members to the presence in the gallery of Mr Roger Steele, the former Speaker of this Assembly, and Mr Jack Doolan, the former member for Victoria River. On behalf of all honourable members, I welcome them both.

Administration of Mines Safety Control Act

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Will the Mines Safety Control Act be administered by the Work Health Authority or the Department of Mines and Energy?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I understand the honourable member's particular concerns on that issue. I might say that the mining industry has raised the same concern with us. It revolves around the valid desire of the mining industry to develop what it calls a one-stop-shop approach in dealings with government. Traditionally, that has been the approach with the Department of Mines and Energy concerning matters associated with industrial and mine safety. It has worked successfully over the years.

I might digress with respect to this matter because it is a fact that the mine in the member's own community of Nhulunbuy is working under a very successful program of self-regulation, and has been doing so for quite a number of years. It has worked very successfully. I know the honourable member would recognise that, particularly given the diligence of the trade union movement in the town which I can speak of from personal experience. There are a number of mines where self-regulation can work quite successfully to provide an economical and effective industrial safety management regime.

However, that is not necessarily the case throughout the Territory. The intent is to try to develop umbrella legislation in all matters associated with industrial safety, industrial health and rehabilitation, through the Work Health Authority. The administrative arrangements were made in such a way that all those areas would come under the Work Health Authority. Because of the concerns that have been raised by the mining industry, discussions are continuing between the Department of Mines and Energy and the Work Health Authority on how the administrative arrangements can work to meet both of those objectives. The matter is not resolved at this stage. Because of the fundamentally large changes that have occurred in the administrative arrangements, there is a need to tidy up areas of detail to achieve the most practical and efficient working arrangements.

I can assure honourable members that the overall aim is to ensure that the objectives of the Work Health Act, covering proper and effective industrial safety, compensation and rehabilitation programs, will be attained right across the spectrum in the Northern Territory. We want to do that in a manner which will not create unreasonable administrative difficulties and red tape for industry, workers or the community generally. Questions of day-to-day management in terms of our objectives are being addressed by the Department of Mines and Energy and the Work Health Authority. We are talking with the industry and the community in respect of that process.

Televising of National Sporting Events

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Has the government undertaken appropriate measures to persuade the ABC to televise national sporting events, such as the Melbourne Cup, the VFL Grand Final, the Adelaide Grand Prix and the finals of the one-day cricket competition, to areas of the Territory which do not receive live commercial television?

ANSWER

I would have thought, as I guess many Australians do, that no lobbying would be necessary for Territorians to receive this sort of service from a national television station which receives $400m of taxpayers' money to operate without advertisements. However, this matter has long been a sore point in the Northern Territory. The issue has been raised in this Assembly many times and I have taken it upon myself to see if the Territory can finally receive a clear resolution from the ABC regarding the broadcasting of national sporting events to which it does not hold primary rights.

The ABC has recently adopted a firm policy in relation to picking up the secondary television rights for such events. This policy states that 'in areas where no regional commercial services exists, the ABC will be willing to transmit what it regards as a suitable coverage at what it regards as a suitable time'. The ABC policy further states, with reference to broadcasting via the AUSSAT HACBSS transponders: 'Providing coverage of such events, therefore, to the remote areas, inevitably means these coverages must also be available from the ABC television regional transmitters in these states. Thus, there will be conflict with any regional commercial television stations who may hold rights to the same event'. That statement needs some interpretation. In plain English, it means that, if the ABC coverage in remote areas clashes with existing commercial coverage, there will be little possibility of the ABC taking up the secondary broadcasting rights. The ABC policy has ignored the Territory's special circumstances. Because of that, in April this year, I wrote to Mr David Hill, General Manager of the ABC, to explain these circumstances to him. I have asked him to treat the Territory's situation as a special case for the transmission of major sporting events to remote areas based on certain considerations. I use the term 'remote areas' fairly loosely because we are talking about such population centres as the capital of Centralia.

Mr Bell: Hear, hear! I've never been brave enough to say that.

Mr PERRON: These special circumstances are that the Northern Territory has only one commercial television station capable of providing live transmission and that station broadcasts to Darwin only and, secondly, according to current information, the remote television service will not be able to provide services to remote areas for perhaps 18 months. I pointed out to Mr Hill, in the light of these special circumstances, that it is easy in technical terms for the ABC to isolate Darwin for the live broadcasts of major sporting events. This has been done successfully in the past for events such as the Grand Prix, the VFL Grand Final and the Melbourne Cup. With Darwin isolated from the transmission, there is no interference with the commercial rights of the primary carrier. The ABC can then simply broadcast some prerecorded programs in Darwin for the duration of the particular event.

In most cases, the sporting events to be telecast are shown on a Saturday or Sunday and thus do not interfere with regular serialised programs or new and current affairs programs. I assured Mr Hill that the vast majority of Territorians in remote areas prefer to watch one-off national sporting events. I pointed out to him that the same issues arise every year in relation to the Grand Prix, the VFL, the Melbourne Cup and one-day cricket. The same arguments, telexes and letters ensue, with the result that there is a last minute decision by the ABC to show the first 3 events live to remote areas. The issue of one-day cricket has not yet been resolved to the satisfaction of Territory cricket fans.

Finally, I stress that it is my wish to alleviate the unnecessary middle stages of the debate and this can be achieved by the ABC making an early commitment to the broadcasting of the VFL Grand Final, the Grand Prix, the Melbourne Cup and one-day cricket finals. Other major sporting events might well occur and discussion could follow at the appropriate time. The whole issue of sports broadcasts to remote areas could be reviewed when a central zone commercial television service becomes operational across the Northern Territory. The government is hoping that the new management style of Mr Hill will enable the ABC to be more flexible and sympathetic to the needs of Territory sporting fans and that, later in 1987, we will see a departure from the ad hoc decision-making that has been noticeable in respect of this issue in the past. I will be meeting with Mr Hill on his visit to the Northern Territory next week and will take these matters up firmly with him with a view to trying to obtain some commitment to Territorians.

Broadcast of Question Time

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Will the Chief Minister give the people of Alice Springs an assurance that there will be continued broadcasting of Legislative Assembly question time through the FM radio station there?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this really is a matter for you. I am pleased that the Leader of the Opposition has raised it. I am quite proud to advise that I took the initiative that there would be an opportunity for Legislative Assembly question time to be broadcast in Alice Springs. The objective was that the FM station would seek sponsorship in Alice Springs to continue to broadcast. It had not achieved that at the beginning of this year and I extended assistance to the FM radio station until the end of this financial year. It is the earnest desire of this government that the people of Alice Springs continue to have the opportunity to hear question time.

We find it advantageous to have question time broadcast as widely as possible so that people can hear directly the answers made by ministers and do not get half-baked stories. We are quite pleased that those broadcasts are occurring. I would certainly hope the broadcasts continue but I must say it is our desire that 8 CCC FM obtains sponsorships in Alice Springs, as it does for other broadcasts.

Mr Smith: Where do you put the sponsorship ads?

Mr HATTON: The best place to put a sponsorship ad would be during any question asked by the Leader of the Opposition, because they are so illogical and inconsequential that no one would miss them.

Mr Speaker, that is a matter that can be dealt with quite satisfactorily and I would certainly hope that sponsors can be obtained. I can assure honourable members that we will be seeking the continuation of those broadcasts in Alice Springs. It is an initiative that my government has promoted and will attempt to continue to promote.

Sadadeen Secondary College Lockers

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is he aware that the Sadadeen Secondary College is still without the long-promised lockers? Will he undertake to find out where those lockers are and when the students will get them? Has the minister spoken to the Treasurer who promised in the last sittings to lick the barrel and find a few dollars for lockers for Year 11 students at the Sadadeen Secondary College?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am quite surprised and even shocked that the lockers have yet to arrive at Sadadeen Secondary College. At the last sittings, I informed the honourable member that the lockers were on their way and that I had been advised that they would be installed in the very near future. Obviously, I will make inquiries to see where the lockers are.

In regard to the second part of the honourable member's question, unfortunately I have not been able to catch the Treasurer in a receptive mode. He has had a number of quite intricate financial matters pressing upon him and I considered it would have been inappropriate for me to make that specific request of him at this time. However, I assure the honourable member that I consider the provision of lockers for the students a matter of some seriousness and I will be endeavouring to follow up the matter to his satisfaction and to the satisfaction of students and parents.

Alleged Use of Commonwealth Car by Treasurer

Mr REED to TREASURER

I ask if he will indicate whether there is any truth in the story touted in the media recently that he requested the use of a Commonwealth car to take him from Canberra to Sydney after the recent Premiers Conference?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. Honourable members may have watched the ABC television news program last evening and seen the Leader of the Opposition in full flight expounding on my virtues, such as arrogance etc. I have said many times in this Assembly that people who would follow the Leader of the Opposition would do so out of curiosity, simply to see where they would end up. If they do not make a decision soon, they will realise exactly where they will end up: in the political wilderness forever, under the leadership of the Leader of the Opposition.

He missed some very vital points in his story and the ABC television network did not bother to give me the chance of replying or adding anything to the story. It had a story and it did not intend to mess it up with any facts. Unlike its colleagues in the radio section of the ABC, who did check with my office, the television people did not bother to check. There are 2 very crucial points that the Leader of the Opposition did not mention, and one was that there was a strike by refuellers on the evening of 25 May. Like so many of their union brethren across the country, they realised the opportunity presented by having all the Premiers in Canberra. They decided not to refuel the planes.

In addition, there was a firemen's strike predicted for the next day. This was brought to my attention by a Commonwealth driver who was driving myself and the Under Treasurer back to our hotel. He suggested that, if we wanted to travel to Sydney in order to return to Darwin - as indeed we did; we did not want to be sitting in Canberra twiddling our thumbs all day - he would obtain clearance to drive us there if we so wished. I said that we would check with the airline companies on the status of the strike and we would get back to him. We rang Australian Airlines and Ansett. They assured us that there had been trouble during the day but they were expecting all flights to be running as normal the next day. The media people may like to check with Col Krohn of 8DN Talkback who was with me and could verify that we made those telephone calls and that the matter was of real concern to us at the time.

When airline companies confirmed that the aircraft would be flying the next day, the Commonwealth driver was informed and that was the end of the story. Those are a couple of little facts and details that the Leader of the Opposition did not bother to mention because he would not know. He expounds on my arrogance from time to time and yet he stands in front of television cameras and gives Northern Territorians yet another example of his complete ignorance. He does not bother to get the facts. The sole comment on the Premiers Conference from this apologist for the federal Labor government was the allegation that I demanded a Commonwealth car. He said nothing about the cuts and the financial situation that we are in. In 1983, we were told that the Labor Party in the Territory could talk to the Labor Party in Canberra and that is why we should all vote Labor.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister has gone far beyond the question that was asked of him. It was a very simple question which he has answered fully.

Mr SPEAKER: I ask the minister to keep his reply as brief and as relevant as possible.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I think that I have made my point. In doing so, I have expounded on the ignorance of the Leader of the Opposition and his wish to stand in front of television cameras whenever he can and fabricate lies and misinformation towards ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will withdraw those remarks.

Mr COULTER: I withdraw those remarks, Mr Speaker.

The Leader of the Opposition has stood in front of television cameras from time to time and fabricated stories and, in fact, made suggestions that have been proven to be untrue. Mr Speaker, I was able to leave Canberra by aircraft the following day and that was the end of the story.

Alice Springs Traffic Lights

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Have recent proposals to put more traffic lights in Alice Springs been based on any studies of present and projected traffic flows in Alice Springs?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, to the best of my knowledge, they have. I believe that the question should be properly directed to the Minister for Transport and Works, who initiated the inquiry to which the Department of Lands and Housing contributed.

Very detailed studies are undertaken regarding traffic flows. I think that it has been found in practice that traffic flows are better without the control of lights until they reach a certain level of density. At that level, the statistics show that accident rates start to increase. There are particular problems relating to the time that vehicles take to navigate intersections. These studies are carried out in great detail. A company that springs to mind as having undertaken such studies in the past is Pak-Poy Lange Pty Ltd.

The purpose of studies concerning traffic lights at intersections is to determine whether such installations are actually needed. They are very expensive facilities for government or local councils - hence the need for intensive studies investigating road designs and the limitations of changing road and intersection designs. The cheapest and most effective option regarding the control of traffic is ultimately adopted.

I can assure the honourable member that it would be ridiculous to suggest that lights are fitted at the whim of particular individuals. I can assure him that that is not the case. From my previous experience as Minister for Transport and Works, I can remember the detailed investigation and consultancies which were undertaken regarding the establishment of traffic lights.

Permit Plan Covering Exploitation of Native Fauna

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Have officers of the Conservation Commission formulated a long-awaited plan - it has been about 7 years in the making, I believe - concerning a sensible permit program for the catching, keeping, breeding and sale of protected and other native fauna of the Northern Territory, and has that plan been presented to him?

ANSWER

To the best of my knowledge, officers of the Conservation Commission are working on a submission to me. The government's responsibility in the area of protection of flora and fauna has been raised in several pieces of correspondence in recent times. I am not too sure of the status of any further report to government, as such, but I would be happy to take up the issue forthwith. If the member for Koolpinyah could be a little more specific about her concerns, I would find it much easier to address the matter.

Protection for Police Officers from Hepatitis B

Mr COLLINS to CHIEF MINISTER

He may be aware that police force strike action was threatened in South Australia last week over the handling of prisoners suffering from hepatitis B, and that that situation was eventually resolved when fairly expensive injections were given to the police officers involved. Are Territory police officers, who deal very frequently with members of the public and prisoners who suffer with hepatitis B, being given injections to prevent their catching that disease?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I must say this is the first time an issue of this nature has been raised with me. I am aware of the hepatitis B issue. I am advised that hepatitis B vaccines are available but this is not an issue that has been brought to my attention directly as minister with responsibility for the police. I will check with the Minister for Health and Community Services and will advise in due course.

Cole Report on Channel Island Power Station

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

When does he intend to table the report into the Channel Island Power Station and its operations, the so-called Cole Report?

ANSWER

I intend to table the report during the course of these sittings. The report is presently before me and I have made copies available to a number of people, including all persons named in it. I have given those people the opportunity to answer criticisms or questions raised in the report. I think it is only fair for me to receive their comments before the tabling of the report. Equipment manufacturers have also received copies of the report. Those copies are now being examined very closely by the people concerned and, as soon as I have them back, I will table the report. I can assure honourable members that I have received various comments from the people I have mentioned and that I will table the report during the course of these sittings.

Frances Bay Mooring Facility

Mr PALMER to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Could the Attorney-General, in his capacity as Acting Minister for Transport and Works, advise the House on the outlook for the future use of the Frances Bay mooring facility?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is certainly a most timely and relevant question. I am very pleased to advise the House that the number of bookings that have been received for the use of the facility has totally vindicated the government's decision to construct it.

Mr Smith: You should finish it and then sell it.

Mr MANZIE: I hear a little bit of a murmur from the Leader of the Opposition. He cannot stand to see a successful development taking place in the Territory, especially when his party president stood up on television and said what a disaster it all was and what a waste of money. The opposition has no inkling of what is required to manage the Territory, let alone to accelerate the economy to create employment.

Mr Speaker, everyone saw what happened when there was a danger of Cyclone Kay coming across to Darwin. The basin was full. Obviously, the whole idea of accelerating the construction of the basin was to provide the protection that it did provide when it was needed. It is also important to know that bookings for use of the basin are currently running at 109%. In other words, we are turning boats away. We have more people who want to book berths than we have berths available. We did not build it big enough. We have 93 applications for 85 berths. Of those, 75 are fishing vessels, 10 are commercial and the remainder are private yachts. Even more importantly, 41 of the 85 berths - nearly half - have been booked on an annual ongoing basis. I think it also should be borne in mind that the basin was constructed primarily with the fishing industry in mind.

Mr Smith: You should sell it.

Mr MANZIE: I am glad to see that the Leader of the Opposition is starting to get the concept of privatisation. He seems to have embraced it with all sorts of enthusiasm, but he must learn to temper his enthusiasm with a little bit of common sense. It is good to see that he has realised some of the benefits that can be obtained if we privatise certain functions of government. We have a duty to guide the Leader of the Opposition in the manner of carrying out privatisation so it is of benefit to all Territorians and contributes to our aim of creating employment for our young people.

The government knows that the mooring basin is an important step in making Darwin the centre of the north Australian fishing industry and, given the success of the Frances Bay mooring basin to date, it is definitely clear that we are moving in the right direction to achieve that goal.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Protection for Police Officers from Hepatitis B

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, may I take this opportunity to provide a response to the member for Sadadeen's question concerning hepatitis B vaccinations for the police force. I am advised that hepatitis B vaccination shots are available to all members of the Northern Territory Public Service, including the police, on request and at no cost to those people. My advice is that it costs our government $126 per shot for those vaccinations, but they are available on request to members of the public service who may find themselves in an exposed situation. Of course, that does include the police force.

Trade with Indonesia

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Following the recent participation by Nortrade in the Indobuild trade exhibition in Jakarta, could he advise the Assembly of the success or otherwise of our delegation and any prospects identified for developing future trading relationships with Indonesia?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Northern Territory government, through its trade and marketing division Nortrade, participated in an exhibition called Indobuild 87. Our participation in Indobuild, which was held in Jakarta from 12 to 16 May, was the first major trade exhibition undertaken in Indonesia by the Northern Territory. 10 companies were represented and early results are already in evidence.

I am sure the companies which participated in such a significant event would not mind me naming them. They were: Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd, Peter Morgan Refrigeration of Alice Springs, Woods Bagot Architects, V & R Carusi, Darwin Plant Wholesalers, Diamond & Watts, Island Constructions, Perkins Shipping, Bunnings, and Northbrick Industries. As a result of the trip to Indobuild, 2 companies - Hungerford Refrigeration, the first manufacturing company in the Trade Development Zone, and Peter Morgan Refrigeration of Alice Springs - are negotiating agency arrangements right now with excellent sale prospects.

The Northern Territory delegation was very well received by the Indonesians and it is possible that reciprocal visits to the Northern Territory will be made by some of the business contacts made. The Indonesian State Minister for Public Housing, Dr Cosmas Batubara, visited the Northern Territory's stand during the exhibition and later had private talks with the delegate leader.

During the visit to Jakarta, the Trade and Marketing Division carried out a preliminary market survey to identify other trading opportunities. Indonesia's rapidly developing mining industry offers companies involved in the industry, especially those with a base in the Northern Territory, an opportunity for the supply and maintenance of mining equipment, parts, trucks and the like. Other opportunities have been identified in the supply of low-cost housing; foodstuffs including groceries, vegetables, meat and fish; and communications technology and equipment. Honourable members will find it interesting that sliced bread is currently being flown from Melbourne to Jakarta. One would think that, if Darwin could not get in on such an act, there would have to be something wrong. I do not know how big the market is for sliced bread in Jakarta, particularly Melbourne sliced bread, but perhaps we could break in and get a piece of the action.

It is timely that the Northern Territory delegation visited Indonesia, as the Indonesian government is implementing some fundamental changes to its economy in order to reduce reliance on oil and gas as its principal revenue earners. Development programs which are being given high priority include agriculture and irrigation, mining and energy, communications, tourism and education. Recent changes by the Indonesian government include the 25 October reduction of tariffs on 150 items and the abolition of import monopolies for 165 products. Non-tariff barriers to imports were eliminated on more than 100 items and quota restrictions were removed on 140 categories of textiles and steel products. Other reforms included a devaluation of the currency in September last year. The Department of Industries and Development is now developing strategies with Northern Territory companies to follow up on the information gathered during the mission to Indonesia. One could only describe it as a success and a sign of things to come in the future.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

I ask the minister this question in his capacity as minister responsible for the Territory Insurance Office. It is in 4 parts. Is the minister aware that notice has been served under section 364 of the Queensland Companies Act on Hungerford Refrigeration by Soane Sheet Metal Pty Ltd, for the discharge of a debt awarded against Hungerford by a district court on 26 November 1986? Secondly, is the minister further aware that, if this matter is not resolved promptly, Soane Sheet Metal Pty Ltd has instructed its solicitors to begin action to wind up Hungerford Refrigeration? Thirdly, what guarantees can the minister give, in the case of such an action, that the investment made by the Territory government in Hungerford Refrigeration is secure and will not be lost? Finally, will he give an assurance that the Northern Territory government will not provide more funds to bail out Hungerford Refrigeration?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is easy to see how one can develop a negative mentality. The Leader of the Opposition used the term 'to bail out'. To bail Hungerford out of what? It is very easy for a person to talk himself into a position of doom and gloom, as the Leader of the Opposition obviously does in the bathroom each morning as he is shaving and wondering whether to cut his throat or not. The issue of bailing Hungerford out simply does not exist, as I have said in this Assembly on many occasions. However, I will undertake to give the Leader of the Opposition detailed information during the course of these sittings in answer to his question.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Could he confirm that a firm called Hall Chadwick, a group of accountants in Queensland, has also lodged a notice under section 364 of the Queensland Companies Act to wind up Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I ask that that question be placed on notice.

Commonwealth Employment Program

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

What is the effect on the Northern Territory of the recent federal government announcement to discontinue the Commonwealth Employment Program?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question is an interesting one. The Commonwealth Employment Program has been operating in the Territory for 3 or 4 years, as in other parts of Australia, and has been of great benefit to the whole of the Northern Territory. On 13 May, the federal Treasurer made a number of announcements in his mini-budget. One of these, the closure of the CEP program, will have a dramatic effect on the Northern Territory. That program has had more effect in the Northern Territory than many of the programs that the federal government has put in place.

The CEP program is to be abolished from 30 June 1987 but it will continue to fund all projects that have been approved to that date. It is anticipated that a number of CEP projects will continue into the 1987-88 financial year. The maximum duration of any project is 52 weeks and therefore it is obvious that anything that is approved before June 1987 will continue until June-July 1988. Of course, in that time, there will have to be a winding down. Currently, there are 7 Commonwealth employees employed in the CEP program in the Northern Territory and the joint secretariat also includes 2 Territory employees. The federal government is currently entering into discussions with the Northern Territory in relation to the winding down of those positions over that period and the level of funding that will be required to continue the program into 1988.

There would be little dissent from anybody in this Assembly with the view that the CEP program has had great benefits for the Northern Territory, particularly in Aboriginal communities but also in communities like Darwin, Alice Springs and Katherine, where it has been used to employ people for varying terms to provide footpaths and other facilities. In a number of Aboriginal communities, it has kept a large number of people employed. It is rather disappointing to the Northern Territory to find that the program will be abolished. Its winding-down will involve the abolition of a number of positions that the federal government currently provides. Obviously, by the end of 1988, the CEP program will have ceased. I am hopeful that we can find other means of keeping people employed in remote communities. However, at this time, there is not a great deal of light at the end of the tunnel as far as a program to replace this one is concerned.

Resignation of Mr Roger Watters

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I refer to an item in 'Busranger' in last Sunday's Sunday Territorian headed 'Roger Resigns'. It relates to Roger Watters, the uranium adviser, and the honourable minister. Is the story true?

ANSWER

'Busranger', you say? I vaguely remember an item on the back page of the Sunday Territorian referring to Roger Watters' decision to leave the Northern Territory. Mr Watters has not advised me of any disagreement with myself. The last time I spoke to him was at the Department of Mines and Energy stand at Fred's Pass Show. I believe that Mr Watters' wife entered into employment in Queensland some time ago. Indeed, Mr Watters gave me his business card at Fred's Pass Show some 2 or 3 weeks before the item appeared in the press. I remember that the card had a logo depicting 2 crocodiles. He gave me notice that he intended to move back to Cairns. In fact, he recited a little bit of poetry about the beauty of the hills around Cairns and told me he wanted to return home. As far as I am concerned, Mr Watters has made a decision about his career and his commercial future. He now intends to open up a consultancy business in Queensland and I guess that he may wish to live with his wife as well. Those are all options that Mr Watters has carefully considered in deciding to relocate himself to Queensland.

DDT Levels in Northern Territory Meat

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Bearing in mind the high levels of DDT recently discovered in Australian meat exported to the United States, would the minister advise whether DDT has been found in Northern Territory meat?

ANSWER

Unfortunately, intolerable residues of DDT were recently detected in meat exported from Queensland, Victoria and Western Australia to United States markets. Although I understand that the amount of contamination was very small, this matter is extremely serious to the Australian industry. The levels detected varied from 6.7 parts per million to 103 parts per million. The allowable limit in both the United States and Australia is 5 parts per million. This discovery has the potential to place in jeopardy Australia's entire meat trade to the United States. Sales of Australian meat to the United States are already suffering and, if significant residues are found in future consignments of Australian meat, US officials are likely to totally ban further imports.

DDT is not legally banned from sale or use in the Northern Territory. It is listed in schedules 5 and 6 of the Poisons and Dangerous Drugs Act as a substance which may be sold and used under prescribed conditions. When this matter came to its attention, the department checked around the Territory. It found one retail outlet that had a small amount of DDT in stock and that has now been taken out of circulation and is being held by the Department of Industries and Development. The Department of Health and Community Services is looking at the possibility of rescheduling DDT under the Poisons and Dangerous Drugs Act to effectively ban its use in the Northern Territory.

DDT was once used to control external parasites of plants and animals including cattle ticks, lice and buffalo flies. I am advised that investigations by the Department of Industries and Development have indicated that DDT has not been used on Northern Territory livestock for many years. These investigations have indicated that DDT has not been used to any significant degree, if at all, in the Northern Territory commercial plant industry.

To remove any doubt that DDT is not to be used, I intend that it be banned under section 41A of the Northern Territory Stock Diseases Act. This action has the support of the cattle industry. I will be attending a meeting of the Australian Agricultural Council in Canberra tomorrow where this matter will be discussed, in particular the reviewing of existing legislation, methods of tracing livestock to the property of origin and the programs for advising industry on the proper use of agricultural chemicals.

To answer the honourable member's question specifically, no residues have been detected in any Northern Territory meat.

Electricity Installations in Rural Communities

Mr EDE to TREASURER

When is the installation of electricity meters in rural communities expected to be completed? When will charging commence and what advice will he be giving to his department for procedures to handle billing, collection, disconnections, reconnections and so on? Can he assure residents in rural communities that they will be charged the same rates as Territorians in urban centres?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in December 1984, as agent for the Local Government Division and the NT Treasury, NTEC assumed responsibility for the provision of electricity supplies on Aboriginal communities. As honourable members would be aware, before that time, consumers in these communities received electricity supplies free of charge.

I have given detailed accounts in this Assembly in relation to the cost of supplying electricity to Aboriginal communities. Honourable members will remember my suggestion that the cost of fuel alone is $6.5m. This is just one of the costs of supplying electricity, free of charge, to Aboriginal communities throughout the Northern Territory. The user-pays principle was very much in vogue when the government made its 1984 decision. The ramifications of that principle have been brought home to us even more strongly as a result of the recent Premiers Conference and the May economic statement of the federal Treasurer, Mr Keating.

In 1984, in applying the user-pays principle, this government set up a mechanism whereby it would take back, as a gesture of good faith and goodwill, $1m of the cost of providing electricity services to Aboriginal communities. That $1m goes toward the cost of fuel only and does not relate to any other costs involved in servicing the communities involved. I believe the member for Fannie Bay was the minister responsible for NTEC at the time the program to meter Aboriginal communities began, and that program has now almost reached completion. It cost about $1m to establish metering facilities right throughout the Territory. For the first time, the Northern Territory government has a means of accurately measuring the amount of electricity that is consumed by various communities throughout the Northern Territory. That has given us an indication of what is needed to develop correct utilisation of electricity in Aboriginal communities.

We have now to look at the costs and the various facilities that burn up considerable amounts of electricity. That includes facilities such as stores, hospitals, police stations and schools. Those decisions are before me now as the minister responsible and we are negotiating agreements on how to charge for electricity utilisation within Aboriginal communities throughout the Territory. Those decisions have not been put to Cabinet at this stage.

I can assure the member for Stuart that the government is looking at raising revenue that has been forgone in the past because there was a free-electricity mentality in Aboriginal communities. I can assure him that that has now come to an end. We will no longer supply free electricity to those communities throughout the Territory. The cost of providing an electricity service will be met by the people utilising it. I will bring the manner of billing and collection to the attention of this Assembly after the it has been determined by Cabinet.

Electricity Installations in Rural Communities

Mr EDE to TREASURER

As I asked in my original question, can he give any assurance to residents that they will be charged at a rate no higher than is charged to Territorians in urban centres?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unlike the member for Stuart's federal colleagues, I do not have any intention of making those charges retrospective for the years when we supplied free electricity to those communities. He can rest assured of that, even though his federal counterparts charged the Territory recently for the return of money by means of what they called a 'negative special grant'. The federal government took $14.4m from us.

I have no intention of trying to recoup those costs. The cost of providing electricity to those areas is the matter under consideration. It includes the cost of installing and maintaining generators and other infrastructure costs involved in the provision of electricity. A whole range of items has not yet been fully clarified in cost terms. The cost of getting diesel into those communities and the fluctuations in diesel prices are among the issues that are being identified at the moment and they will be taken into consideration when levels of rates are determined.

High-temperature Incinerator

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is he aware of revitalised interest by the Commonwealth, New South Wales and Victorian governments in the construction and operation of a national high-temperature incinerator in either New South Wales or Victoria, and does the Northern Territory government still harbour ambitions for such a project in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is a timely question. Indeed, the federal government has renewed its interest. Of course, it was very supportive of the study the Northern Territory was carrying out for the establishment of such an incinerator. In fact, the Minister for Conservation contacted the federal minister. The federal government is aware that it has a problem. There is some 10 000 t of waste that needs to be disposed of. Recently, the progressive Labor governments of Victoria and New South Wales entered into an agreement with the federal government to become involved in research for the development of such a facility. They are currently trying to identify a suitable area of land down there - and one wonders exactly where that will be - for the development of such a facility. This problem is not going to go away. We cannot bury our heads in the sand. We are producing these chemicals at the rate of almost 1000 t a year.

Another progressive Labor state, Western Australia, announced recently in the latest edition of May 1987 ...

Mr Ede: They are all progressive.

Mr COULTER: I use the word 'progressive' to delineate the difference between the Labor Party in the Northern Territory and the Labor Party throughout the rest of Australia. That is the only reason that I used the word 'progressive'.

Mr Ede: I thought you compared them with yourselves.

Mr COULTER: The Western Australian government has identified an area some 460 km east of Perth. It is a ghost town called Koolyanobbing, and it was an old BHP ...

Mr Ede: If it wasn't, it soon will be.

Mr COULTER: It was probably the Labor Party headquarters in earlier days.

In fact it was a BHP smelting area. The member for Barkly would be interested in this. He was one of the early proponents for the development of such a facility which would put to good use mining infrastructure which was no longer being used. The BHP smelter at Koolyanobbing was set up to service the nearby iron ore mine which eventually closed down. Except for 2 caretakers, everybody left.

The Western Australian government intends to develop an incinerator at the Koolyanobbing smelter site. I think that is a good use of facilities that are available, and it is a pity that the Northern Territory proposal got so bogged down in political issues. There was a real need at stake, but people simply became hysterical and emotional about the subject and canned the project before it really got off the ground. However, it goes to show what can happen and what needs to happen, and that is the important thing.

We cannot just put our heads in the sand and leave this waste lying about. We have to do something with it, and it is interesting to see the southern states and the Western Australian government getting involved with the federal government on this particular proposal. I hope there is a lesson in it for us. We in the Northern Territory should not lose opportunities because of people who cannot see the forest for the trees.

Health and Community Services in Nhulunbuy

Mr LEO to MINISTER for HEALTH

I ask the minister if he can assure the Assembly that there will be no reduction in health or community services in Nhulunbuy. If he cannot provide that assurance, can he at least inform the Assembly of the extent of cuts proposed by his department to services in the electorate of Nhulunbuy? The matter is causing considerable concern in my community.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is very interesting to note that the member for Nhulunbuy has once again woken up. We call him Rip Van Winkle. I wonder if he has asked his federal mates the same question. Nhulunbuy is part of the Northern Territory and the Northern Territory has just had its budget slashed, even to the extent of having to pay back previous grants, yet the member for Nhulunbuy has the audacity to ask me whether I am going to consider cuts in the services of my department in the Nhulunbuy area. Suffice it to say that this Northern Territory government has the people of the Northern Territory at heart, and only the people of the Northern Territory at heart. The CLP is the only party that considers the needs of the people of the Northern Territory in a sensible and rational way, no matter what the Canberra headquarters of the Territory ALP opposition tries to do to us. We have to address very serious financial implications over the next few weeks and come down with a budget that will work for the next 12 months in the Northern Territory, in the best interests of all Northern Territorians.

I now have responsibility for a department that employs something like a third of the Northern Territory Public Service and a budget that represents a significant percentage of the total Northern Territory budget. Of course I will be looking in every nook and cranny of my responsibilities to ensure that the burden is shared throughout the Northern Territory, even by the people of Nhulunbuy. I hope that the member for Nhulunbuy has a supplementary question to the one he has just asked me, and that he directs that to the federal Treasurer.

Implementation of Australian Traineeship Scheme

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

A number of employees in the Alice Springs area and, no doubt, the Top End, have expressed concern about the implementation of the Australian Traineeship Scheme. Will the minister advise on current developments in the implementation of this scheme in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Australian Traineeship Scheme is, of course, an opportunity for young Territorians and all Australian young people to receive formal off-the-job and on-the-job training. These things are naturally very important to us in the Northern Territory. This is a growing area of Australia without many facilities for training and providing skilled labour for the work force. The Australian Traineeship Scheme has made an important contribution in that area. As elsewhere in Australia, the initial commencement of the traineeship scheme in the Territory was impeded by difficulties in gaining agreement from the unions on such issues as rates of pay for trainees and whether or not the number of trainees would be in addition to the establishment work force of an organisation in which trainees were to be employed. The problem with the issue of compulsory union membership of trainees applied mainly in relation to the public service. It was ridiculous to put those sorts of obstacles in the way of employing trainees, but I am pleased to advise that, by and large, those problems have been overcome and the unions have relaxed their demands.

The most recent developments have been the commencement of another traineeship in the hospitality industry within the Beaufort Hotel in Darwin, and a group traineeship scheme coordinated by the Master Builders Association for some 14 trainees in the building industry. The building industry is one where traineeships have a great deal of relevance and I suspect that will be a very successful scheme. It is partially funded by the Northern Territory government, and is being conducted in a similar manner to previous group apprenticeship schemes run by the Master Builders Association. I commend the association for its initiatives. It has done an excellent job in getting trainees into the building trades which are of great importance to the Territory.

Synroc Process

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is the honourable minister aware that synroc, an Australian product invented by Professor Ringwood, has been sold off to a company called Nuclear Waste Management and is in danger of being taken overseas because of the attitude of the Australian federal government?

ANSWER

I am not aware of the information that the member for Sadadeen has advised us of this morning. I am extremely interested ...

Mr Collins: And concerned, I hope.

Mr COULTER: ... and concerned about such a problem. I had the opportunity, when I was in France last November, of looking at a similar process that was being used there. However, I understand that it is inferior to the synroc process. I know that the French were very interested and the rest of the world envied the synroc process. It has been proven to be a very safe way of storing radio-active material. I would be grateful if the member for Sadadeen could provide me with any further details that suggest that we are now selling off the process overseas as a result of the attitude of the federal government. The federal government does not do very much at all when it comes to mining of uranium. When you do not recognise that you have a uranium industry on your back doorstep, why worry about a process that could make you billions of dollars a year for the storage of radio-active material? I guess the federal government considers it to be an asset that it no longer requires.

Lameroo Lodge

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

The future of Lameroo Lodge, which is situated between Mitchell Street and the Esplanade, has been under discussion by the government for some time. Has the government made a decision in relation to the future of Lameroo Lodge and, if so, when will that information be made available to the public?

ANSWER

The government has not made a decision but I am able to advise honourable members that a decision is imminent. After calling for tenders and considering the various submissions made to the government, the applicants have been reduced to 2. Subject to further negotiations, which are a matter of current correspondence between myself, the department and the applicants, I would expect to make a decision within the next month on the future operation of Lameroo Lodge. I would be quite happy to advise honourable members as soon as I make that decision.

Mr LEO to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

This follows on from the question I asked earlier. I ask the minister to be more specific this time, in his most eloquent manner. Could he provide details of which services he proposes to cut - the Community Health Service, the dental service, the hospital service, the Aboriginal Health Worker Service? Which services are to be cut within the Department of Health and Community Services? It is a most distressing matter for my electorate.

ANSWER

After this morning's 2 questions, I would imagine that the most distressing thing for the people of Nhulunbuy is the representation they are receiving. The other honourable members of this Assembly do not need educating but, obviously, the member for Nhulunbuy does. There is a process which we will have to go through to decide how we can properly and responsibly handle the situation placed before this government by the opposition's Canberra bosses. We are going to do that in a very reasonable and responsible way. I am sure that we will have to make cuts in various service areas within my departmental responsibilities. Those matters will be discussed in detail with my colleagues in Cabinet and we will bring down a responsible budget.

Burgundy Royale Accounts Outstanding

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Are the debts for electricity, payroll tax, water and sewerage held against the Beaufort Hotel or Burgundy Royale and will the news released this morning, that the Burgundy Royale group has been placed in liquidation, have any effect on the repayment of those debts to the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Officers of the Northern Territory Electricity Commission met with the receiver last evening and will be speaking with him again this morning regarding those particular issues. This morning, I have again been in contact with the bankers, Westpac, to further advance our position with regard to the facility. The Northern Territory government faces a number of issues at this stage, including matters relating to the Burgundy Royale investment on the Esplanade. May I have the first part of the question again?

Mr Smith: Who has the debt, Burgundy Royale or the Beaufort Hotel?

Mr COULTER: The debt is in the name of Burgundy Royale. I have been advised that it may be the federal government which will precipitate the actual closure of the facility. It is owed almost $1m in group tax and has taken action to have the money paid out in full. In fact, Westpac moved in response to the fact that the federal government intended to take that action. As yet, I am not sure if the federal government will be taking any further action to have the group tax paid in full.

Obviously, this is a very sensitive issue which has to be worked in full consultation with the people appointed to carry out discussions on behalf of the banking organisation. I will be continuing discussions over the next week or so. Let us hope that, in the interests of the Northern Territory, particularly the tourist industry, this issue can be resolved as quickly as possible. I understand that there are a number of people who are still waiting in the wings to purchase the facility. Let us hope that we can get it up and running again in the near future. It is a shame that this has happened with the largest-ever private investment project in the Northern Territory. The $60m invested in the facility rates even higher than the Vestey's Meatworks back in the early days. It is a sorry day indeed when we see the position that Burgundy Royale finds itself in and let us hope that the facility will be up and running again in the near future.

I can assure the Leader of the Opposition that officers of the Northern Territory Electricity Commission were carrying out discussions with the receiver until about 6.30 last night, and they will be talking to him again this morning.

DISTINGUISHED VISITOR

Mr Rod Oliver

Mr SPEAKER: I draw the attention of honourable members to the presence in the Speaker's gallery of Mr Rod Oliver, a former member of the Legislative Assembly in the then electorate of Alice Springs. On behalf of all honourable members, I extend a warm welcome to Mr Oliver.

Members: Hear, hear!

Identification of Crocodiles

Mr REED to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Can the Conservation Commission make some aids available to assist in the identification of crocodiles?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I suspect that the member has his tongue in his cheek. Recent events have led me to make sure that I am never without an identikit, which I have with me somewhere, to help me tell the difference between the 2 crocodile species found in Australia, particularly in the Northern Territory.

I might take this opportunity to congratulate the cartoonist at the NT News who captured the moment in a very clear picture. It is going to take some time to live it down. I am happy to blame the incident on the member for Katherine. He is a man who has had 14 years of experience dealing with and identifying crocodile species in the Territory. Another tongue-in-cheek gesture was made in my weekly briefing paper from officers of the Conservation Commission. One of the opening paragraphs in this week's briefing was the usual report on sighting and capture of various nuisance crocodiles in the greater Darwin area. The commission took time out to enclose the crocodile identikit with a little notation saying it was to assist those who have difficulty in telling the difference between a salt-water and a fresh-water crocodile.

The incident on the Katherine River certainly surprised me. While checking out a major development in the Katherine River area, the member for Katherine and I came upon a very large fresh-water crocodile. At the time, we suspected it of being a salt-water crocodile. We had to decide whether to report the incident and we realised that, in saying we suspected that there was a large salt-water crocodile in the Katherine region, we would start a series of events that we could not stop. We had to decide whether it was responsible to do that or to let it go and do nothing. When we reported it to Conservation Commission officers in the Katherine region, about 12 people were aware of the incident. Of course, the officers headed out that night to check the area.

Katherine is a small town where everybody talks to everybody. I knew that 12 people already knew of the report and I did not want the people of Katherine suddenly to become aware by word of mouth or rumour that Conservation Commission officers were patrolling the Katherine River looking for a salt-water crocodile. I made the issue public in the knowledge that I could possibly have a large amount of egg on my face at some future date. As I remarked earlier, the cartoon in the NT News said it all! I have subsequently made it known to the member for Katherine that he owes me a few favours.

Statements of Mr Peter Paroulakis

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

What action has the minister taken in relation to the statement made by the Country Liberal Party candidate for the House of Representatives, Mr Peter Paroulakis, to the effect that he supports the call of the National Farmers' Federation boss, Mr Ian McLachlan, for the introduction of tertiary fees of $5000 per annum?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this question is again typical of the member for Stuart. He has demonstrated to this Assembly time and time again his propensity for picking up rumours ...

Mr Ede: I am concerned for students in the Territory!

Mr MANZIE: ... misquotes and incorrect statements and issuing them in this Assembly as facts. On many occasions, I have detailed in this House the problems caused in outlying communities by the actions of the member for Stuart. He likes spreading dishonest statements or sometimes straight-out lies.

Mr Ede: Paroulakis did not deny it.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Peter Paroulakis, the CLP candidate who will be the Territory member of the House of Representatives very soon, did not make any such statement.

The member for Stuart has shown, time and time again, in instances such as this ...

Mr Ede: He said he backed Ian McLachlan.

Mr MANZIE: ... in his statements last year about Yirara and Kormilda colleges, and in the telegrams which I often receive from him that he not only lacks knowledge but in fact takes actions which create problems. We had the instance of the cyanide spill near Tennant Creek and another occasion where $1m was spent following his allegations that the gas pipeline was going to blow up in Alice Springs.

Mr Ede: You had to dig it up and replace a lot of it!

Mr MANZIE: We all know the story about Chicken Licken, and there he is, Mr Speaker. The sky is going to fall in! I think we should get it straight here and now. Mr Peter Paroulakis did not make the statement which the member for Stuart is attributing to him. I think we should all realise that ...

Mr Ede: Why didn't he deny it? That is what was quoted in the paper.

Mr MANZIE: ... every time the member for Stuart opens his mouth and says anything regarding any matter, it is not factual. It is made up. He dreams things up in the middle of the night. People should be aware of that and treat anything he says accordingly, as I do and as many other members on this side of the Assembly do.

Hepatitis B

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

I realise that hepatitis B is a threat to people such as dentists working the field, but what threat is the disease to people such as prison officers and police, and are any programs in place to educate or inform officers of the public service, as well as the public generally, about how hepatitis B is transmitted?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question, which in some ways follows on from an adjournment debate speech given by the member for Sadadeen yesterday evening. I was keen to put before the Assembly a little more detail than was offered by the member for Sadadeen so that it becomes quite clear that the Northern Territory government is well aware of the problems with hepatitis B and, as I have said many times with regard to the handling of AIDS in the Northern Territory, is in fact leading the way in Australia in terms of the responsible approach we are adopting.

First, hepatitis B is transmitted by means similar to AIDS. It certainly is transmitted by sexual contact, be it heterosexual or homosexual. It can be contracted or transmitted by way of transfer of infected blood to a person who has an open wound or by some other method of transferring infected blood into another person's system. The disease is commonly transmitted from mother to baby around about the time of birth. That seems to be a very significant period of transmission.

The disease has been particularly widespread in the Aboriginal communities, as was pointed out by the member for Sadadeen yesterday. In fact, some 80% of Northern Territory Aboriginals have shown evidence of previous - I stress 'previous' - infection, as against 5% of non-Aboriginals. There is a point to take in that statistic, and I again stress the word 'previous'. It is obvious that some people are building up an immunity to this particular virus and that is giving us some comfort, although we have a long way to go.

Carriers can spread the disease and the carrier rate among Northern Territory Aboriginals is something like 10% in the Top End, but a rather startling 25% in some communities, particularly in central Australia. Obviously we have programs in place to try to combat the spread of this particular disease and, unlike the AIDS situation, we are very fortunate in having a vaccine available. As the Chief Minister pointed out in response to a question from the member for Sadadeen the other day, the vaccination costs $126 per course. It is given to people who are in the highest risk groups and to Aboriginal infants in particular. As I pointed out, there is a perceived spread of the virus from mother to baby at or around the time of birth. We have been addressing that fact for some 12 months.

Public servants such as health staff, police and prison officers may have the vaccine administered if they so request, and the cost of those vaccinations is borne by the Northern Territory government. It should be also pointed out that all persons admitted to Territory prisons are tested for AIDS and hepatitis B. We are aware of prisoners who have those viruses when they enter our prison system and the Territory is leading Australia in that respect.

I wish that people did not see this as presenting a monumental threat to the population of the Northern Territory. It is a concern. It is not as big a concern as the AIDS virus but, nonetheless, we have responsible programs in place and we are addressing the problem as best we can. I would say to the member for Sadadeen and other honourable members of this Assembly that, if they wish for information on any matters that fall within my area of responsibility, particularly in the area of AIDS and other transmissible diseases, I will be only too pleased to arrange a full and comprehensive briefings on the subject. I have said all along that, as minister, I will not stand back from the responsibility which the government has of making sure that every person who resides in the Northern Territory is fully aware of the problems associated with the AIDS virus and hepatitis B.

Forfeiture of Vehicle Under Liquor Act

Mr BELL to TREASURER

My question is directed to the minister in his capacity as minister responsible for the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission. I refer him to my comments during previous sittings about a bus from Santa Teresa which was forfeited and later ordered to be auctioned by the chairman of the commission. That order was overturned subsequently by the Treasurer himself, leading to a situation where people are unsure what the government's policy is. What is the government's policy in this regard and will it return to the courts the power to decide the forfeiture or otherwise of vehicles so seized?

ANSWER

We will not be returning the power to the courts. The matter of forfeiture of vehicles has occupied a great deal of time in this Assembly. The commission has sought views and ideas, particularly from Aboriginal people, about this issue. In respect of the Santa Teresa vehicle, I overturned the decision because of the extenuating circumstances, the impact on the community and the number of representations that were made to me. I can assure the member for MacDonnell that, as a result of that action, I intend to adhere strenuously in future to rules as laid down. We will not be returning such vehicles in future under any circumstances because of the concern that is being created as a result of this particular incident.

Forfeiture of Vehicle Under Liquor Act

Mr BELL to TREASURER

Will he inform the House of exactly what extenuating circumstances caused him to overturn his chairman's decision in this case?

ANSWER

I do not have the exact details in my head. I am sure he is well aware of the hardship created in the community by the irresponsible attitude ...

Mr Bell: Wherever there is hardship, then?

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member sought the information. The least he can do is listen to the answer in silence.

Mr COULTER: The honourable member will remember the incident of the cans being thrown out the window as the police car was approaching the bus. The driver was eventually apprehended by the police. I am sure the member does not need me to go into the details of how the vehicle was seized by the police in that particular incident. I have been to Santa Teresa Mission on many occasions and I have heard the concerns, particularly of the women, about the problem of grog-running and the number of vehicles being used to bring alcohol into the area. We took a decision in this particular case based on the track record of the vehicle's driver and his history in this area. That decision was taken and it will be adhered to.

Yulara and Alice Springs Sheratons

Mr FIRMIN to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, during past Assembly debates the Leader of the Opposition has proposed a simple formula for solving the Territory's financial difficulties brought on by the loss of $104m in funds from the Commonwealth: to sell the Yulara and Alice Springs Sheratons. Can the Treasurer tell me whether that is actually a viable proposition?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is a simple formula to get us out of trouble. Unfortunately, it is also the brainchild of a simpleton. Without disclosing the full details of the commercial agreements, I can answer the honourable member's question very quickly. The answer is that it is not a viable proposition.

The Northern Territory government under the then Chief Minister, Paul Everingham, undertook a great commercial risk based on the sound information and forecasts that had been obtained, to develop tourism infrastructure in the Northern Territory. That decision has enabled the Northern Territory to capitalise on the tourist boom that has been generated over the last 5 years. The Northern Territory government has taken a considerable amount of criticism for developing our contingent assets such as the Sheratons at Yulara and Alice Springs. Having taken that risk and absorbed the criticism that has been made over the years, we are not in a position simply to sell and get out. If the Northern Territory government altered the agreements it has entered into with respect to those 2 developments; it would suffer a considerable loss. We are not prepared to do it. It is for us to decide, as it is for anybody who makes a commercial decision. There is a time frame governing when support for those facilities can be withdrawn and they can be sold.

Honourable members will be aware that we put $10m into the Alice Springs Sheraton last year and that the financial models showed that there would be a time when the operation would be sufficiently well-developed to allow us to recoup that money. We will not be selling the hotels at this stage. We will only do so when their full potential is recognised. That is the short answer to the member for Ludmilla's question. There is a 30% growth in tourism predicted for this year, and the financial models indicate that it will only be a short period before the Northern Territory government's position in relation to those facilities is vindicated.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he confirm that, on top of the $750 000 loaned to Hungerford Refrigeration by TIO, the Trade Development Zone Authority advanced Hungerford $150 000 in March this year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure that the amount of $750 000 made available to Hungerford by TIO was a loan. No doubt the Treasurer will clarify that for the Leader of the Opposition in due course. Indeed, I believe it was clarified at the previous sittings. As the minister responsible for arrangements between the Trade Development Zone Authority and Hungerford

Refrigeration in order to consummate the deal to bring Hungerford's total operations to the Northern Territory, I advise that my position is the same as my predecessor's: the government considers it quite inappropriate to detail the various incentives or components of incentives which are negotiated ...

Mr Smith: That is great.

Mr PERRON: ... by the Trade Development Zone Authority. Mr Speaker, if the Leader of the Opposition wants an answer perhaps he might ...

Mr Smith: I am not getting an answer. That is the problem.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Rural Electricity Reticulation Scheme

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to TREASURER

I am asking this question of the Treasurer in his role as minister responsible for NTEC. In view of several anomalies that have arisen in its implementation of the scheme, can the minister advise whether NTEC has plans to vary the provisions of what is called the $5000 electricity reticulation scheme in the rural area? If so, have the interested people been consulted and when can we expect to have these changes presented to us?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question of alteration to the distribution system extension policy, or DSEP, has been before me now for some time. A number of matters are under consideration. The system was introduced in January 1985 to provide the mechanism for negotiating financial contributions for new systems and consumer extensions throughout the Northern Territory. The introduction of the DSEP followed the rural distribution funding scheme, or RDFS, introduced in July 1984. I think the member for Barkly was the minister responsible for NTEC at that particular time. The RDFS is due for completion in July 1987, at which time 580 lots will have been serviced at a cost of $2.125m. At this point, 173 consumers have paid contributions or have entered repayment schemes. NTEC will ultimately recover the total cost of the RDFS. The distribution system extension policy encompasses 3 broad areas: major consumers, minor consumers and subdivisions.

Mr Speaker, I bring this information to your attention because the policy has worked to date and there has been tremendous development as a result of it. 53 major consumers have been serviced at a cost of $1.193m. DSEP recoveries have amounted to $725 000 which is 61% of the program. In addition, 13 private subdivisions have been connected to the system at a cost of $192 500, with DSEP recoveries amounting to $190 000 or 99% of the cost of the program. 171 minor consumer lots have been serviced at a cost of $527 000 or 70%. At this point, 73 consumers have paid contributions or have entered repayment schemes. However, certain problems have emerged as the scheme has developed over the years.

One problem over which the honourable member no doubt receives considerable representation is the subdivision of lots that have been provided with electricity. That is probably one of the biggest bones of contention in the system at the moment. The system has been in force now for a number of years and there has been considerable development in the rural area as a result of the policy. However, there is now a need to review the DSEP policy.

Changes have been proposed to assist in a more equitable recovery of costs from consumers and to promote connections of new consumers. I will be making an announcement on that particular policy before the end of this financial year.

Darwin Bus Service Dispute

Mr SETTER To ATTORNEY-GENERAL

My question is directed to the Acting Minister for Transport and Works. It refers to the present dispute with drivers in the Darwin Bus Service. I note that it has been reported that the action is in response to disciplinary action taken against drivers who have been stealing bus fares. What action has the minister taken to rectify the situation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the present industrial action by drivers in the Darwin Bus Service is certainly only one of a long list of similar activities in recent months. There have now been 7 stopwork meetings this year, one of which was extended to a 24-hour strike. Two of these meetings were sanctioned by the Department of Transport and Works to discuss the introduction of the split roster system. I think that all members will agree that that still leaves a record of industrial action which certainly cannot be condoned.

I find it very curious that this recent industrial action has taken place at a time when it will certainly cause the maximum possible disruption to the Bougainvillea Festival. It would not be difficult to describe such action as a blatant attempt at blackmail. Certainly, anyone who was in Darwin at the weekend could not have failed to notice the problems which were caused by the disruption to the bus service.

The union claims to be upset about disciplinary action taken against drivers who have allegedly been caught with their hands in the till. Those drivers fall into 2 categories: those whose monetary returns at the end of the shift fell short of the amount indicated by ticket sales, and those who allegedly have not been giving tickets to passengers and have pocketed the fare themselves. I believe the alleged number of drivers in both categories is very small. The drivers who are allegedly short in their returns have refused to pay back the difference. I also have been led to understand that one of the drivers who has been apprehended by inspectors for failing to issue tickets has actually been reported twice before for the same offence. We are now given to understand that the Transport Workers' Union has taken industrial action because its executive members object to disciplinary action being taken against its members. I can assure the Transport Workers' Union that I find the situation most objectionable to say the least. I certainly will not allow the Darwin public to be held to ransom in such a cynical fashion.

I advise honourable members that this matter has not been left to the Department of Transport and Works. I have instructed that the police be brought into the matter to investigate the alleged theft and alleged fraudulent practice. I believe that the police are the appropriate people to carry out such an investigation. Any allegations of theft are serious indeed and they must be investigated by the most competent people available. If it is found that offences have occurred, appropriate action has to be taken.

I would like to advise the Assembly that, as well as the allegations that have been made in relation to the alleged pocketing of money or failure to issue tickets, I have also asked that the police be involved in an investigation of the use of forged bus passes by Darwin school students. I would also like to advise that arrangements have been made to provide off-peak services through private contractors. Honourable members would be aware that the union has banned the operation of overtime runs.

I want to point out also that this is not a case of victimisation of certain individuals. It is worth while pointing out that it has been estimated that some of the irregularities that are alleged to be taking place may be costing the taxpayers between $80 000 and $100 000 a year. It is also worth pointing out that since transport inspectors began a campaign of spot inspections and checks, the number of tickets sold has increased markedly.

Mr Speaker, I find it very hard to see how the TWU can justify the stance it is taking. The role the union has played in this dispute should be brought to the attention of this Assembly and to the notice of the public. It has been reported to me that, at last week's stop-work meeting, a TWU official actually addressed the drivers and told them: 'You belong to the most powerful union in Australia because you are responsible for the transportation of school children. That means you can get anything you want'. That is what he told them. Mr Speaker, let me put it on notice that the Northern Territory government will not tolerate any action that would place our services to school children in jeopardy. The government received a commitment from the union that services to school children would not be threatened if there was any dispute.

Mr Leo: This is depressing, Daryl. It is hearsay.

Mr MANZIE: I hear the member for Nhulunbuy making some comments over there. We know that he is an ex-member of the Transport Workers' Union and ...

Mr Leo: I am still an official of the Transport Workers' Union.

Mr MANZIE: I think that even he will have to look seriously at an instance where, when there is to be an investigation of reports of dishonesty, a union decides that its members are above reproach and therefore should not be investigated. I think even he would find that situation intolerable.

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! There is far too much chatter across the Chamber. The honourable minister will be heard in silence.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, as I was saying, I would certainly like to hear whether the member for Nhulunbuy condones the union's behaviour. I do not think he would do so when he looked at the facts.

I do not think we should miss the most important point. A number of bus drivers working for the Darwin Bus Service do an excellent job and are people beyond reproach. These people are now being cast in the same mould as a number of allegedly dishonest persons and, until such time as this matter can be cleared up, all bus drivers are under a cloud. I think the union's actions are despicable and I would ask all Darwin bus drivers to think very carefully about what this irresponsible union is doing and to consider whether they should even be members of it. They could possibly transfer their allegiances to the ACOA or some other union or even form their own association. They certainly have been ill-served by the Transport Workers' Union which, during the last couple of years, has carried out a number of actions against the Northern Territory community, deliberately antagonised and tried to ruin our tourist trade, and is now threatening the transportation of school children.

We know that the bus service costs the community money and we know that it runs at a loss, but we realise that it provides a service. That is why we provide top-up money to allow it to operate. We cannot tolerate the Transport Workers' Union using the bus service in an attempt to destroy services to the Territory community. During the last 12 months, the government has spent vast amounts in the development of terminals in the Darwin city centre at Casuarina. This has been done to enable our bus service to operate even more effectively and efficiently. However, people should remember that we now have an operational integration between private contractors and the government bus service. We have found that this works quite well. If we have to move the whole operation of the bus service into the private sector to get an operational bus service, that is what we will do.

If the Transport Workers' Union continues its disruptive practices, we will take action to ensure that the Darwin community has an operational bus service. That is the job we have to do, and we will not hesitate to do it. I therefore ask the drivers to consider leaving the Transport Workers' Union and either forming their own union or joining another union because, if they sat down for 30 seconds, they would realise that the Transport Workers' Union is looking to destroy their jobs and their future in the Territory. It is seeking to destroy the operation of the tourist industry in the Territory and to prevent school children from going to our schools. That is a despicable action and I would like to hear what the member for Nhulunbuy, an ex-Transport Workers' Union member, has to say about this matter.

Mr Leo: I am still a member!

Hungerford Refrigeration Warehouse

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

A recent newspaper advertisement placed by the Trade Development Zone Authority called for tenders for the construction at the zone of a 1000 m² warehouse for Hungerford Refrigeration. Who is paying for the construction of this warehouse, the Trade Development Zone Authority or Hungerford Refrigeration?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as a result of the efforts of the Trade Development Zone and others in encouraging Hungerford Refrigeration to bring its complete operation from Brisbane to the Northern Territory and, in time, employ some 40 or 50 Territorians rather than Queenslanders, the program of the Trade Development Zone Authority for the construction of warehouses and factories for occupants was thrown out of kilter. At present, the Hungerford Refrigeration operation is in a factory destined for another user. That action was taken in order to meet a timetable for bringing Hungerford to the Territory as early as possible. However, it meant that the construction of permanent factory space for the Hungerford operation would have to be considered. That led to the advertisement that the Leader of the Opposition is referring to.

The Trade Development Zone Authority and the government, through Treasury officers, have been holding talks of late to develop the most effective means of coping with the expansion of the trade zone by way of additional factory space, taking into consideration that the zone authority's success indicates a need for several more factories each year for some years to come. The ultimate aim of the government and the authority is, where possible, to encourage occupiers in the zone to construct their own buildings or to have other third parties construct factories in the zone and rent them to businesses in the zone. I do not have before me at the moment exact details of arrangements that are being undertaken to finance the factory for which expressions of interest have been called. However, I will obtain this information and provide it to the Leader of the Opposition during these sittings.

Dairy Industry Levy

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Following meetings he attended in Canberra last week, is he able to provide any information on the Commonwealth government's dairy industry levy and how this levy affects the 2 Northern Territory dairy producers?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it was somewhat enlightening for me to go to the meeting of Ministers for Primary Production held in Canberra last Friday. Amongst other things, we discussed the matter of the DDT recently found in Australian meat shipments to the US and what should be done about that, and the subject of inequities which have arisen as a result of the levies by the federal government on the Australian dairy industry. I say 'enlightening' because it appears that what we have here is a simple case of taxation under another name inasmuch as every consumer of milk in Australia is required to pay a levy of 1.5¢ and 2¢ per litre in order to fund a scheme which provides assistance to farmers who are manufacturing dairy products. This is milk which is set aside in order to make cheese and butter and other dairy products for export as well as for the domestic market.

It seems that the whole dilemma has come about because Australia has a massive over-capacity in milk production, principally in Victoria. Because some governments have not been able to come to grips with the problems of reducing that massive over-production, all milk consumers in Australia have been required to pay more for their milk in order to fund it. It is an insane system because it is almost irrelevant whether we have local dairies or not. Any person who drinks milk in the Northern Territory pays a levy, primarily so that Victorian milk producers are able to stay in business. The total levy amounts to about $91m per year.

The levy system is based on an uneasy truce, principally between New South Wales and Victorian dairy producers, under which each group agrees not to enter the other's markets. It has been demonstrated that Victorian farmers can produce milk for several cents a litre cheaper than New South Wales dairy farmers. Thus, New South Wales is vulnerable to milk from Victoria. The problem with this uneasy truce is that, under the Australian constitution, no government can prevent sales of goods from another state. The matter came to a head recently when a Victorian company reached an agreement with a chain of New South Wales supermarkets to provide milk at about 5¢ per litre less than that available from the New South Wales sources of supply. This is what caused the bunfight which led to the ministerial meeting to discuss the issue.

At the meeting, I argued that the whole scheme was preposterous as far as all milk consumers in Australia are concerned. I said that, in my opinion, the politics of interstate milk trading seems to have totally overlooked the consumers. No one in the room appeared to be interested in consumers' views and that was very disappointing to me, particularly because I would have thought that at least 2 states would have had more concern in that direction. I argued that it was outrageous for the Northern Territory's 2 fledgling, struggling dairy producers to be expected to bear the burden of the 2¢ per litre levy. Northern Territorian consumers are now paying something like 95¢ per litre for a carton of milk. It is something like half that price in southern states. Why should we have to pay this 2¢ per litre so that it can flow into the pockets of dairy farmers in Victoria?

I also pointed out that the federal Department of Primary Industry had taken the trouble to send an officer from South Australia to the Northern Territory to collect production records from our 2 farmers. When he went on to the farms, that officer had the company of a Commonwealth policeman. The ministerial council thought that was all a bit of a joke. I think the federal minister was somewhat embarrassed at the actions of his department in spending quite a sum of taxpayers' dollars in order to collect $1300 of outstanding levy payments from one farmer. Indeed, I understand the levies have not been paid to date. I argued that, under any rational consideration of this national scheme, Territory dairy producers should certainly be exempt from such a levy. The federal minister indicated that, whilst he was sympathetic to the plight of Territory dairy farmers, he really could not do much about it at present. He was only going to be a minister for a couple more days as the federal government moved into the election phase. His powers as a minister would be restricted to a mere caretaker capacity until the election, as is normal at such times.

Generally the Northern Territory's plight was set aside. Given that the Territory has only 2 dairy farmers, I guess we did not rate a great deal of consideration as far as the meeting's time was concerned. However, I did put the Territory's position and it was listened to. I do not think we gained very much ground at all but the subject has been rescheduled for a meeting next August of the Australian Agricultural Council. It will be further discussed because the peace which has been achieved between New South Wales and Victoria is certainly a very uneasy one. Both those Labor states have gone to enormous lengths to try to keep the peace with their industry, particularly during an election campaign. The last thing they want now is a bunfight. That is the situation. It is sad for Territory producers, but it is indicative of the sort of treatment we get from the federal government on so many fronts. As far as it is concerned, we are irrelevant and insignificant.

Swedish Geological Company

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is the minister aware that a wholly owned subsidiary of the Swedish government, the Swedish Geological Company, has become incensed by the unauthorised usage of its name and logo by the Northern Territory Open College and the assertion contained in college documents that a joint venture exists between the company and the college? Is he also aware that the company has now advised that it intends taking legal action against the Northern Territory government over the matter and has suspended all negotiations over its entry into the Trade Development Zone, following what it sees as a gross breach of faith on the part of the Northern Territory government?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I like the way the member for Stuart phrased that question. It is all fact. It is all true. It would probably be more appropriate if he asked what was the basis for all the allegations and carry-on.

Mr Bell: It is like your answer on the Darwin Bus Service, isn't it?

Mr MANZIE: The member for MacDonnell does not want to listen to anything. He just likes to throw in comments. People who hear him on the radio must get a great idea of the intelligent contribution he makes to this Assembly. I will endeavour to answer the question, regardless of attempts by the member for MacDonnell to create a disturbance and prevent me from doing so.

Mr Speaker, I am informed that representatives of this company made contact with Aboriginals from the Borroloola community in February this year and discussed an initiative regarding a training program. There was further contact between that group from Borroloola and a company called Abcon, an Aboriginal construction company in Katherine. That led to a proposal for a 15-week training program to be conducted in Sweden.

At this stage, there was no involvement with the Northern Territory Open College, the Department of Education or the government. Dr Flint, who was the head of TAFE in the Department of Education, was contacted by phone in April and offered 6 scholarships for Aboriginals to be trained in geological survey methods in Sweden. The inference given was that these were scholarships that the company was offering at its expense. Apparently, it is common practice for some companies to do this. The Open College's role at that stage was to assist in the selection of participants and in drawing up a joint venture proposal to go to the federal Department of Employment and Industrial Relations.

Mr Ede: Who said it was to go to it?

Mr MANZIE: The member for Stuart now likes to throw his two bob in. If he would like to be quiet, I will explain it to him slowly.

This particular proposal was drawn up in conjunction with the Swedish company. At all times, the development of the submission was discussed as a joint concept. The submission was proof read and the original draft was returned with some suggestions for minor alterations. These were undertaken. Furthermore, a telex was received from Sweden supporting the open college's assistance on the submission seeking funds from the Department of Employment and Industrial Relations. Not only that, the representative of this particular company appeared on ABC television holding the submission with the twin logos printed on it, saying what a great effort it was and how we were all going to do well.

Nevertheless, we have the member for Stuart accusing us of all sorts of disastrous things. I will give an example of how professionally this particular company operates in the Territory. The first I knew about the matter was a couple of days ago when I was walking down the street. A gentleman tapped me on the shoulder and said: 'Excuse me, I am Mr X and I represent company Y'. I had not heard of this company at that stage. He explained what he was doing and said that he was looking for support for a training program for Aboriginal people. It sounded to me like a reasonably good idea, and I asked him if he had written to us. He explained that he had had consultation with the Department of Education. I asked to be made aware of these proposals and was then informed that the actual bottom line was that the Northern Territory government make a grant of $84 000 to provide assistance for 5 Aboriginal people to go to Sweden to do a training course in geological survey. I thought that this was an expensive form of training and that the same amount of money or less in our local education system could provide training for more people. However, I kept my thoughts to myself and asked the company to send the information.

Not long afterwards, my secretary approached me and said that she had received a most abusive phone call from the gentleman involved. He had phoned and wanted to see me immediately and, because I was not in the office, roundly abused my secretary and accused her of trying to prevent him getting access to me. I contacted him by phone and explained in no uncertain terms that I would not tolerate my staff being spoken to in such a way. If he was so keen about his proposal, I wanted to see the written details of it in an envelope. The details were facsimiled through to my office. That was the first and last I heard of the matter before I started to receive telexes about legal action and so on.

All I can say is that the approach by the Swedish company's representative in the Territory has been most unprofessional. It has been incorrect. One minute he was assisting, providing, correcting and supporting an application to the Department of Employment and Industrial Relations and the next minute he was threatening this government with legal action. I certainly believe the company's representative is the wrong man for the job. Some of the proposals that have been put forward are obviously good. However, I certainly would not be involved in any dealings with a person of the calibre of this gentleman. He clearly does not know how to operate in the sphere of relations with government.

Mr Ede: Would you say that outside the Assembly?

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I really get sick of this. The member for Stuart asked me the other day whether I knew anything about this matter, and I said I would be very happy to ...

Mr Ede: You have destroyed his professional reputation.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The minister will resume his chair. The member for Stuart will cease interjecting. To make 1 interjection is possibly permissible, to make 2 is skating on thin ice, but if he makes another one I will name him.

Mr MANZIE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. As I said, the member asked me if I knew anything about this particular matter and I explained to him that I would be very pleased to give him a comprehensive briefing. Obviously, it then occurred to him that the facts might spoil a good story and we now have another Chicken Licken scenario: the sky is falling down and we all have to duck.

The Department of Education has acted with the utmost integrity and at all times has treated this as a serious matter which may have benefits for the Territory. I find it very hard to understand why this particular company representative has a problem with regard to what has happened. Perhaps he has been given an ultimatum by his company and has been told that he has to get results to keep his job. The circumstances are very strange but I am satisfied that all matters have been handled competently and properly. If the particular gentleman wishes to take legal action, that is obviously his right.

Because of those threats, I do not intend to make any further comments regarding the matter.

Alice Springs Structure Plan

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Could he explain the recent announcement on the Alice Springs Structure Plan?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, although the actual decision has been reported, a few points need clarification. When it endorsed the Undoolya option, Cabinet took various matters into consideration and I will briefly deal with 3 of them. They will need further comment and, possibly, support from all honourable members, including those opposite.

One of the matters considered was the removal of the seismic array which is currently located in the eastern area of Alice Springs and used for defence purposes by both the American and Australian governments. Cabinet has taken the view that residents of the Northern Territory should not be liable in any way for the $3m cost of removing the seismic array. I intend to take up the issue today by writing to the Commonwealth minister, as well as to Her Worship the Mayor of Alice Springs to seek her support in this course of action. Undoolya would ultimately have been developed, regardless of whether it was now or 20 years hence. Our information indicates that the seismic array is already being interfered with by surrounding developments and passing traffic. The government was of the view, prior to making this decision, that we would assist with its removal. I am advising honourable members and the people of Alice Springs that that is not the case at the moment. In the view of this government, the $3m cost of the removal of the seismic array should be and will be borne by the Commonwealth or American governments.

The second matter considered relates to future negotiations involving MacMahon Construction Pty Ltd which has made a very innovative submission to the government. It involves the building of a recreation lake, the provision of stage 1 of Undoolya consisting of 1250 lots, as well as a rural subdivision and certain commercial land elements adjacent to the recreation lake. The total up-front cost, in today's dollars, for the development of a recreation lake at the Emily Creek site as set out in the MacMahon proposal is approximately $9.7m. It would be no secret that the Northern Territory is going through some rather serious reviews of its economic position. I would think that even the people of Alice Springs would recognise that, although the government is ultimately desirous of seeing a recreation lake built in Alice Springs, it would certainly be unwise at this time to commit that amount of money for that purpose. However, because of all of the elements in the proposition from MacMahon Construction, it is possible to look at various alternatives. Although that company does not have a monopoly over future development at Undoolya, there will be further negotiations. It took the initiative and presented an excellent proposal which the government will consider very seriously.

I am quite pleased that the decision on the future development of Alice Springs has been made. During the recent election campaign, the government gave an undertaking that the decision would be made within a certain time frame. That time frame has been met. In the interests of the future development of the town and taking all of the issues into consideration, the best decision has been made.

The third point that I wish to clarify relates to the development in the Emily Hills area. A proposition was put forward to the government some years ago and it has been under very serious consideration. There are a number of possibilities for the future use of the land, including tourist development and, certainly, rural subdivision. As a government, we are not prepared at this time to act as judge and jury concerning the use of that land. We have referred it to the newly-structured Joint Planning Group as a priority matter to be considered as a matter of urgency. I suspect that the developers involved with that particular land will probably make a further submission to the Planning Authority.

Those are the 3 points that I thought needed further clarification. I look forward to seeing the first blocks in Undoolya being turned off at approximately the end of 1989-90, depending on demand. I hope that we will not be faced with another shortage of land in Alice Springs if the town keeps on growing.

Spirit of the Northern Territory

Mr LEO to Minister for TOURISM

Is the Northern Territory government sponsoring a vessel named the 'Spirit of the Northern Territory' in an ocean race and, if so, what is the size of the sponsorship and will the Northern Territory government sponsor other boat owners for the same amount of money should they be interested in participating in ocean racing?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is an issue which cuts across several departments, and I have been involved with it in at least 2 of them. To clarify the situation, the ocean-going yacht has been the subject of considerable publicity and several press reports over recent months. As to the involvement of the Northern Territory government, the total grant for the yacht to compete in the round-Australia race is $80 000. That commitment is 2 years old and, as I said, has been subject to much publicity. The grant has come from 3 areas: the Departments of Education and Tourism, and the former Department of Youth, Sport, Recreation and Ethnic Affairs have each contributed one third. In addition, the government has assisted with the purchase of a spinnaker that will be flown on the yacht. This, I think, will be tested for the first time in this year's Ambon race. Ultimately, the yacht will be housed at the Darwin Sailing Club where it will be used for training purposes.

I think that it is an excellent move by the government to provide this funding and to help the Darwin Sailing Club. The cost of the sailing vessel is very significant and has received the backing and sponsorship of many local businesses in the Darwin area. The total cost escapes me at the moment, but it is significant. Certainly it is over $200 000. I would think that Territorians could be rightly proud that, when that around-Australia race takes place, there will be a yacht competing from the Northern Territory, named and sailed by Territorians.

Mr Speaker, I might advise the member for Nhulunbuy that I am sure the Nhulunbuy Sailing Club will participate in the race, because there are several stages around Australia and yachtsmen from the Territory will have the opportunity to compete. One of the important elements that I think is relevant is the fact that the yacht will be used in the Darwin area to train young sailors. I think it is a wise decision to assist the Darwin Sailing Club to be able to participate. It is evidence that all sporting bodies in the Territory are encouraged by the government to develop. Such development has a cost attached. No member on this side of the Assembly would be prepared to see our young people suffer because of the high costs of participating in sport and the development of sporting facilities in the Northern Territory. Certainly, there seems to be a tendency for members opposite to laugh at the continual disadvantage faced by Territorians in such participation. This is another example of the cost involved for Territorians to be able to compete on the same basis as their fellow Australians. The Northern Territory government stands proud of the fact that it was able to assist in this small way.

Future Funding of the Northern Territory

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

At the recent Premiers Conference was any comment made regarding future funding arrangements for the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

I can advise the member for Jingili that there were some statements made by the Commonwealth in respect of the future funding of the Northern Territory. All Territorians are becoming increasingly and painfully aware of the continuous, carping criticism of the Northern Territory government and attacks on the Northern Territory people by members opposite. They have spent the last 7 years carping about and criticising the amount of funding that has come to the Northern Territory and saying that we were being overfunded to blazes. They have been pushing that line for years, but particularly over the last 3 years. As we all know, they gained the ear of at least one minister in Canberra, Senator Walsh, the Minister for Finance, who took their call up with glee and has been raiding the Territory purse now for 3 years.

Members opposite, including the current Leader of the Opposition, the former member for the Northern Territory, Mr John Reeves, and a Senator for the Northern Territory, Senator Ted Robertson, all spent years squawking about how much money had been paid to the Northern Territory by the Commonwealth and how over-generous the Commonwealth government had been. Their carry-on has finally come home to roost on Territory people because their mates in Canberra have viciously raided the Territory purse for 3 years in a row. This year, they have raided it more viciously than ever.

They have taken $104m away from what we should have received, excluding the legislatively guaranteed 2% real growth in funding. Members opposite can thank themselves for that because they promoted this cause for some short-term political gain in 1983, 1984 and 1985. If they go back and read their comments, their press releases and their carping criticism of every attempt by the Territory to develop over that period, they can blame only themselves for what is happening now.

Our government is working very hard to manage this situation. In the election campaign this year, we put much before the people in terms of our plans to handle this environment. We will handle it and we will keep the Territory growing, despite these savage cuts and these raids by the socialists in Canberra at the behest of the opposition in the Northern Territory. Later this week, we will deal with the details of how we are going to handle it. I ask honourable members to remember that tourists are still coming to the Northern Territory, mines are still opening, the Trade Development Zone is still developing, manufacturing and horticultural industries are growing and other sections of the economy generally are continuing to grow. It is equally true that, according to ABS statistics, the Northern Territory work force grew by 4100 in the first 4 months of this year. It is true that we are in a recovery phase and we will be able to develop with private enterprise money. This is a pro-enterprise government which is gearing the economy so that it can grow without ultimate reliance on government dollars. That is what we have put to the people and that is what we will deliver to the people. That is how we will keep the Territory going, despite the attacks from the Opposition.

Last year, when I was raising another important issue for Territorians - the issue of statehood - the Leader of the Opposition and others said: 'We do not know what the financial implications of statehood are. How much is it going to cost us? Can we afford statehood?' Nervousness about these questions has been bubbling through the economy.

Just before the Premiers Conference, between 7.30 and 8 am, the Commonwealth delivers what is called an 'offer document'. I have a copy of the offer document given to me at the last Premiers Conference and I will quote from the illuminating section which deals with what is cutely termed a 'negative special grant'. It says:

This partial recoupment is on the understanding that general revenue funding for the Northern Territory will be fully adjusted onto a state-like basis from 1 July 1988.

That is unequivocal. The prelude to that statement spells out the discriminatory and unprecedented raids which the Commonwealth has made on our budget. It says:

The Commonwealth also proposes to recover, by way of a negative special grant in 1987-88, $14.4m of the total $27.6m assessed by the Commonwealth Grants Commission as over-funding of the Northern Territory in 1983-84 and 1984-85. The Commonwealth has decided, however, to recoup, in 1987-88, the over-funding only in respect of 1983-84, partly because it would be unreasonable to recoup in one year over-funding in respect of 2 years, and partly because this will be in addition to the general reductions in payments to the Northern Territory.

I can advise honourable members that we at least obtained a commitment from the federal Treasurer and the Prime Minister that they would not take the other $13.2m from future funding of the Northern Territory. The fact is that they should not have touched the $14.4m. It is a clear and unequivocal breach of the Memorandum of Understanding and an unprecedented action in Australia to provide money to states and then to take it back in subsequent years. It is an unbelievable step.

There are 2 points I want to make. Firstly, honourable members opposite should wear the principal responsibility for the attitudes in Canberra that have led to the dramatic cuts in Territory funding and the clear breaches of the Memorandum of Understanding. Secondly, I ask members opposite to accept, from this day forward at least, that, from next financial year, we will be funded on a totally state-like basis and that there is therefore no financial argument against the move towards statehood.

Reference to Public Accounts Committee

Mr POOLE to CHIEF MINISTER

Would the Chief Minister explain to honourable members what the new reference is for the Public Accounts Committee?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I remind honourable members of debates that occurred last evening in respect of identifying areas for cutting the cost of government services. I am pleased to advise that, last week, I issued a reference to the Public Accounts Committee. I thank the members of the Public Accounts Committee, in particular its chairman, the member for Karama, for their positive approach and the assistance they have offered in relation to the very difficult task of trying to remove inefficiencies and identify administrative costs that can be alleviated. A principal role of the Public Accounts Committee is to identify areas where expenditure by government can be as effective as possible.

As a consequence, I have widened the ability of the Public Accounts Committee to investigate the efficiency of public expenditure by government departments. I signed a reference which directed the Public Accounts Committee to investigate and report on levels, patterns and efficiency of expenditure in all government departments, statutory corporations and instrumentalities. I particularly asked that the attention of the committee be directed to salaries, administrative expenses, capital items, repairs and maintenance and property management.

The intention of this is not in any way to be seen as a sort of witch-hunt in the public service nor is it working on the assumption that there are problems in all areas of government. A public service of 15 000 may be small by government standards but it is still a large organisation in the perception of the community. In any large organisation, practices inevitably develop, consciously or otherwise, which can be more effectively or inefficiently carried out. In view of the very savage cuts made to our funds by the Commonwealth government, it is essential that we use every available avenue to reduce our expenditure and maximise the effective use of the government dollar. In that respect, I am quite grateful for some of the suggestions that arose in the debate last night. I look forward to the active cooperation of the Public Accounts Committee in what inevitably will be an onerous task but one which, carried out effectively, will serve the interests of the Northern Territory by enabling us to use government dollars in the best interests of the community and to ensure they are applied as directly as possible towards the tasks and objectives that we set. I look forward to the support of the Public Accounts Committee in that endeavour.

Alice Springs Police Communications Centre

Mr TIPILOURA to CHIEF MINISTER

Will the minister give the House an assurance that Alice Springs will have a reliable 24-hour police communications centre manned by at least 2 people?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am very conscious of the difficulties faced by the police in Alice Springs. They have to deliver a range of services and these have peaks and troughs. For example, time spent in court can severely affect other aspects of day-to-day work. We are addressing the problems of police workload in Alice Springs and in other towns like Katherine. The member for Katherine could readily provide information about the impact of a fast-growing community on the demand for police services. That was one of the major reasons for the government announcement during the election campaign that we will be increasing the size of the police force by 53 over the next 2 years. That decision represents a rational approach to increasing the size of the police force. It will be done in a way that will result in extra police being available to work on the streets in direct contact with the community rather than in administrative and backroom areas. The 53 extra positions will cover the number of police force members who are training as cadets or undergoing in-service training for promotion. They will make a very effective input into the direct provision of police services.

I am sure the honourable member will find that this recruitment will improve police capacity to provide services like the complete communications program in Alice Springs. The problem will not be solved quickly but we are addressing it through the recruitment program in accordance with the plans we put in place during the election campaign.

Lake Amadeus Land Claim

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Can the minister advise what is happening with the Lake Amadeus land claim?

ANSWER

I thank the honourable member for his question because I think it is important that I advise the House of what I consider to be some rather disturbing news. Although it is only on the basis of verbal advice received from Central Land Council personnel on 9 June, we have been informed that the traditional owners have rejected the final draft of settlement that was being negotiated. We thought an agreement was imminent and we have no information as to why these lengthy discussions have been brought to a rather abrupt conclusion. It was the view of this government that, after prolonged discussions entered into by the Chief Minister in his former capacity as Minister for Conservation, the Aboriginal people were more than happy with the views expressed by the Northern Territory government and the settlement conditions offered. This latest decision therefore comes as a surprise.

It is interesting to note that certain elements of the claim involving the establishment of the Kings Canyon National Park and Messrs Conway and Lander at Kings Creek Station have now been going on for several years. One must wonder why the traditional owners turned their backs abruptly, without any forewarning, and advised the commissioner that the negotiated settlement that was about to be agreed upon - and all our advice up until 2 days ago was that it was almost agreed upon ...

Mr Bell: Don't you accuse the land councils and traditional owners of bad faith.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell will maintain silence. The honourable minister will be heard in silence.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, I advise honourable members and the people of the Territory that the government is seeking to continue negotiations for the settlement of the Lake Amadeus claim to the benefit of all people involved. I say that for the member for MacDonnell's edification. I cannot understand why the Luritja people are now deciding to resort to the inquisitorial and adversary machinations of the Aboriginal Land Commission. The member for MacDonnell may not be aware of all the finer points involved in the negotiations or of the various parties affected, but I would be surprised if this was the case. I am also rather surprised that he seeks to comment in this Assembly. That would go against the efforts of the Northern Territory government in relation to the traditional owners, the Central Land Council, Mr Conway and Mr Lander in reaching an equitable conclusion to this outstanding claim.

I would take this opportunity to appeal to the traditional owners to at least give some reason as to why they have stepped away from these lengthy negotiations and gone back to the machinations of the land commission. I do not think it is to anybody's benefit and it would have been an instance where relationships between the Aboriginal people and the Northern Territory government could have been greatly improved. The sad thing about all of this is that Mr Conway and Mr Lander, who are involved in the Kings Creek Station, are once again at a loose end with no future, certainly no future of ...

Mr Bell: And your mates put them there!

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, the honourable member for MacDonnell simply does not know what he is talking about but it is interesting to hear his views, however biased they may be.

The point to be made, and I will make it quite clearly in this particular instance, is that the government's efforts to resolve the land claim satisfactorily through negotiations with the traditional owners have been hindered all along by one simple obstacle: the provision of the Land Rights Act that precludes the Northern Territory government from negotiating directly with traditional owners. We have always had to negotiate through the Central Land Council, and one would say that our past efforts have been frustrated to the greatest possible degree. I look forward to the day when the Northern Territory government can sit down and negotiate directly with traditional owners and the best way to achieve that is through the abolition of the land councils in the Northern Territory, established under the federal Land Rights Act.

ANSWER TO QUESTIONS Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr COULTER (Treasurer): Mr Speaker, I rise to answer some questions concerning Hungerford Refrigeration which were asked of me by the Leader of the Opposition during the course of these sittings. The text containing the answers was written yesterday. This particular episode is changing from day to day as the opposition increases its knowledge about the operation. I will read the answers exactly as they were written yesterday so that all honourable members will know just how things are changing.

First, the Leader of the Opposition recently asked whether the $750 000 debt included the stated $125 000 investment. The truth is, as I advised him in the Assembly last month, that the loan from the TIO secured by a floating charge over the company's assets is for $627 500. In fact, the document which he produced from the National Companies and Securities Office contained a mistake which has been admitted to by the people who tendered that particular document. He may say it is not a mistake and that I am covering up or offer some other scenario, but the simple fact is this is an example of the problem with creating or negotiating commercial agreements in this particular forum. Things change and people do make mistakes. Indeed, there was a mistake. As I told him last month, it was in fact $627 500.

Mr Smith: A pretty significant mistake.

Mr COULTER: Maybe it was, but the problem with negotiating commercial deals in this Assembly is that sometimes things go wrong.

Mr Smith: It is a formal document that you have lodged to the National Securities Commission.

Mr COULTER: It is a mistake. The same as you are a mistake.

Mr Smith: It is a pretty important mistake.

Mr COULTER: The Leader of the Opposition's checks with the Queensland Companies Office showed that the 1984 return is still the last one lodged and there is still no record of the TIO now being major shareholders in the company. The Leader of the Opposition has already been advised that the company returns for 1985-86 have been lodged. In fact, they were lodged on 29 April 1987 and the other required documentation was lodged in May 1987. If whoever is supplying him with information in his role as debt collector for Soane Sheet Metal cannot find out whether returns were lodged, the Leader of the Opposition has a problem.

It is interesting that there is a private business in Darwin which has been trying since 26 February to get the Leader of the Opposition to pay a bill which he ran up during the election campaign. He is never available on the phone to discuss the matter with the gentleman involved, and I am sure the he knows whom I am talking about. It appalls me that he uses the 'I cannot come to the phone' tactic with a local businessman in connection with a sum of $1080 whilst complaining about Hungerford. That is the sort of double standard we have become used to in this Assembly. No doubt the gentleman might get his $1080 this afternoon. Let's hope so.

Mr Smith: Has Mr Soane got his money yet?

Mr COULTER: I would also like to point out that the Leader of the Opposition is a more powerful man than I could have imagined. He even has the editor of the NT News saying, in last night's editorial, that the TIO is using taxpayers' money, not policy-holders' money. If the TIO collapses, which is the worst-case scenario that the Opposition Leader paints for everybody, this doom and gloom will reign supreme. He has the editor believing it. If the TIO collapses, with its $100m assets, the government will have to prop it up. That just goes to show that, if you peddle gloom and doom all the time, a little of it rubs off.

In question time on June 4 of this sittings, the Leader of the Opposition asked: 'Is the minister aware that notice has been served under section 364 of the Queensland Companies Act on Hungerford Refrigeration by Soane Sheet Metal Pty Ltd for the discharge of a debt awarded against Hungerford by a District Court on 26 November 1986?' Events have progressed somewhat since the answer to that question was written, but I will be reading directly from its text as I proceed.

The Leader of the Opposition is obviously continuing his campaign against Hungerford. I told honourable members when he asked his first question about the company that he was intent on doing whatever he could to damage its business prospects in the Northern Territory itself. The question he raises relates to an award against the company. The amount of the award was being paid according to an agreed schedule. Due to the relocation of the company from Brisbane to Darwin, the May payment was late. That has now been rectified. This appears to be the sole reason for the notice being served.

The Leader of the Opposition's second question was: 'Secondly, is the minister further aware that, if this matter is not resolved promptly, Soane Sheet Metal Pty Ltd has instructed its solicitors to begin action to wind up Hungerford Refrigeration?' By the nature of the question, it would appear that the Leader of the Opposition has been in contact with Soane Sheet Metal or its legal representatives. I will say something about that in a moment; we know he is acting as a debt collector for them now.

It is also clear that he knows very little about the significance of section 364 notices. I suggest that one may be served on the Northern Territory branch of the Labor Party if he does not pay his $1080 debt pretty soon. In the business world, they are cast around like confetti. They are used as little more than letters of demand. They are the sort of thing the Leader of the Opposition has no doubt received once or twice or will receive in the future. Through his lack of knowledge, he has been led into believing that this particular notice is far more significant than it really is. He seems to think that Hungerford is about to go into liquidation. He received a letter about that yesterday and he stood up in the adjournment debate and spoke about it. I am sorry to disappoint him, but Hungerford is alive and well and is not facing liquidation.

His third question was: 'What guarantees can the minister give, in the case of such an action, that the investment made by the Territory government in Hungerford Refrigeration is secure and will not be lost?' The answer is simple. In view of the fact that Hungerford is not facing liquidation, the question is irrelevant. In his fourth question, he asked: 'Will the minister give an assurance that the Northern Territory government will not provide more funds to bail out Hungerford Refrigeration?' The Leader of the Opposition has great difficulty in understanding that it is the TIO which has invested in Hungerford and it has done so as a commercial decision. The TIO was established in 1979 without any injection of funds at all from the Northern Territory government. The government holds no shares in the TIO. It started off with nothing and today it is a $100m organisation. However, the level of TIO's investment in Hungerford is a matter for its commercial judgment and I am sure that the TIO board will not allow itself to be influenced by the prejudicial comments of the Leader of the Opposition.

The Leader of the Opposition asked also whether I could confirm that 'a firm called Hall Chadwick, a group of accountants in Queensland, has also lodged a notice under section 364 of the Queensland Companies Act to wind up Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd'. The answer relates to a dispute between Hungerford and this company for work performed. Hall Chadwick served a notice under section 364 and Hungerford obtained a Supreme Court injunction against Hall Chadwick proceeding under the notice. Hungerford won the case and costs were awarded against Hall Chadwick. The matter is still in the hands of the solicitors for both parties. Hungerford in fact won the case.

I believe that the Leader of the Opposition has launched a vendetta against Hungerford Refrigeration. I have information that he made interstate calls in order to pump creditors and others for any adverse information he could find. Only 2 weeks ago, he rang the former managing director of Hungerford and asked numerous questions clearly designed to gather whatever adverse information he could find. The former managing director told the Opposition Leader that he had no adverse comment to make and that he considered the company had done remarkably well in the short period of its existence. The Leader of the Opposition did not tell us that. He might like to stand up now and tell us that the company's sales had grown from nil to over $2m in the space of a little over 2 years. He also indicated that this rapid growth had placed strains on the company's finances, which presented serious problems for it. This did not mean, however, that the company was inherently weak and he advised Mr Smith that its commercial prospects were, in fact, very good.

The Leader of the Opposition is also known to have phoned a businessman in Darwin about the company, again clearly seeking adverse comment. The conversation was promptly reported back to Hungerford Refrigeration. I believe that it is demeaning for the Leader of the Opposition to be caught red-handed trying to dig for dirt. It lowers the status of his office when he and his staff are found to be acting like sleazy investigators, but perhaps he is enjoying his new role as an investigative politician.

Of more concern is information that has emerged in the last day or 2 concerning the opposition's phone calls. There are implications of possible misuse of parliamentary privilege. It has come to my attention that on Wednesday 3 June, when the Opposition Leader asked his question about the section 364 notice served on Hungerford, the company itself had not received the notice. In view of the contacts that the Leader of the Opposition has made with creditors of Hungerford, this raises the question of who informed him so promptly that the notice had been issued. In particular, it raises the question of whether the Leader of the Opposition or his staff were informed by a Brisbane solicitor, Mrs Justine Wlodarczyk, who is handling the collection of this debt on behalf of the creditor or by Mr Soane of Soane Sheet Metal. If that is so, and in view of the fact that he has mentioned the company by name in this Assembly, the Leader of the Opposition may be furthering the interests of this particular creditor by using the Legislative Assembly as a form of debt collection agency. There is even the possibility the whole thing has been a set-up. Alternatively, the Leader of the Opposition has fallen victim to the tactics of an aggressive interstate debt collection agent to assist her in exerting pressure on the debtor.

What a wonderful thing it must be for creditors to find that the Leader of the Opposition is willing to take up their case and provide a free debt collection service for them through this Assembly. Creditors of the Territory's thousands of companies will flock to him for his generous assistance. Or maybe he only acts for Queensland creditors.

I also advise this Assembly that senior partners of Hall Chadwick, the other company named by the Leader of the Opposition, are expressing concern that, through no wish of their own, he is embroiling them in what is essentially a political matter. They acknowledge that there is a dispute with Hungerford involving claim and counter-claim, but this will be resolved through the normal commercial channels available in such circumstances. They do not desire to have their business affairs made the subject of questions in this Assembly.

The fact is that, by innuendo and half truths, the Leader of the Opposition is threatening to undo much of the good work being done to restructure Hungerford and re-establish its lines of credit. Because of this and because of his questionable contacts with creditors, I do not intend to answer further questions dealing with the commercial affairs of this company. I put the opposition on notice of that last month but it has kept at me. Mark my words, Mr Speaker, I do not intend to answer further questions dealing with the commercial affairs of the company.

Hungerford Refrigeration has shown the kind of enterprise and 'get up and go' which is so badly needed in Australia under the oppressive policies of the present federal Labor government. It can be readily understood, therefore, why such companies are a target of attack for the Leader of the Opposition. Certainly, their very success strains their finances sometimes. But it is such companies that help to produce growth and employment. It is a great pity that the Leader of the Opposition has chosen to criticise this company even before it has completely established its operations in the Northern Territory. It would have been far better to have judged it on performance over the next couple of years.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr PERRON (Industries and Development) (by leave): Mr Speaker, I would like to answer a question asked of me on Tuesday by the Leader of the Opposition as part of his campaign of denigration of the Hungerford Refrigeration group. He asked me who is paying for the construction of a warehouse at the Trade Development Zone for which advertisements recently appeared in the press. I can advise him that, if he had read the advertisement, clearly he would have seen that it was headed: 'Design, Construct and Finance a 1000 m² factory for Hungerford Refrigeration Pty Ltd'. I advise him that the developer is paying for the warehouse. It is being built for Hungerford Refrigeration.

Staffing of Hospitals

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for HEALTH

Will the minister undertake to investigate the imbalance in hospital staff numbers in social welfare and paediatric services between the Alice Springs and Royal Darwin Hospitals, with a view to redressing that imbalance?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would have to take the member for Sadadeen at his word that there is such an imbalance. Let me inform him and all other honourable members that, unfortunately, because of the actions of the federal government in slashing the budget of the Northern Territory to the degree that it has, I have to address a great number of things in health and various other services throughout the Northern Territory. Whilst he has not presented any petitions to this House relating to these matters, I am sure we could gather a great number of petitions to this Northern Territory government from people who are living in absolute fear of how their services might be cut.

I hope that people listened to what Mr Howard had to say to the people of the Northern Territory and Australia last night, because there is only one bright light on the horizon for the Northern Territory and that is to get the Australian Labor Party out of Canberra and the Northern Territory. However, getting them out of the Northern Territory would not really make all that much difference because their influence is nil. They are only interested in the guttersnipe tactics that we have been hearing about this morning.

Mr Bell: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I would imagine that 'guttersnipe' would register as being unparliamentary.

Mr SPEAKER: I ask the honourable minister to withdraw that remark relating to the opposition.

Mr DALE: I withdraw the remark unreservedly, Mr Speaker.

The task we have in front of us, particularly in my portfolio of Health and Community Services, gives me no joy whatsoever. On a personal basis, I have to make some decisions within those areas of responsibility. As I say, that gives me no joy whatsoever because every single one of them impacts on some person in the Northern Territory. However, I will certainly have a look at what the member for Sadadeen has put to me today in the total review of services offered by the Department of Health and Community Services.

Job Creation in Business and Industry

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

During the recent election campaign, the Chief Minister said that the Country Liberal Party would create 1000 jobs for business and industry in the next year in the Northern Territory. What progress has been made on those plans?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am quite happy to advise the member for Casuarina that we set in train a series of plans designed to see the growth of the Northern Territory through to the year 2000. In those plans, we set ourselves an objective of 1000 new jobs each year for the Northern Territory. In preparing those plans, we were conscious of the inevitable need to be able to meet those objectives with less money available than we have had in the past. We did not quite realise the extent of the cut that we would incur this year as a consequence of the discriminatory attacks on our finances from Canberra. I say that quite deliberately because I do not and I never have objected to the fact that the federal government intended to cut finances to the Northern Territory. What I do object to violently is the fact that the Northern Territory community is being asked, yet again, to pay a proportionately much higher share of those cuts than other Australians. If the burden of recovery is to be borne by the community, it is essential that that burden be spread evenly around Australia. We would accept our share if the burden was fairly distributed.

However, given that there would be some restraint on our finances, we had to set our plans on the premise that we would not be able to build the community through pumping large amounts of government money directly into job-creation programs. We needed to set an environment that would encourage investment by the private sector and in the genuine wealth-creating sector of the community. Whilst I know that the member for MacDonnell believes that school teachers are part of the productive sector of the community, and they certainly play a productive role, I would not define them in this context as being part of the immediate wealth generation of the community. They are a secondary and essential infrastructural support system for wealth generation.

Mr Speaker, without being diverted on that particular point, there are already early signs that this program is working. Whilst the Australian Bureau of Statistics figures for May are not yet available - actually they are due out today - I can advise the Assembly that already there is a sound indication that my government will easily be able to meet its target of creating 1000 new jobs this year. In December last year, 67 400 people were in full or part-time employment in the Northern Territory. In April this year, the Australian Bureau of Statistics reported that employment had risen to 71 400. That represents an increase of some 4000 people in employment in the Northern Territory. Significantly, this has come about at the same time as the bulk of 1986 school-leavers entered the job market.

I do not intend to raise any particular comments about the opposition in this debate because I think it is important that the community receives a very clear message. Members will agree that there are obvious dangers in relying on short-term statistics, and I accept that, but even members opposite would have to agree that an increase of 4000 in employment, in the first 4 months of this year, is an achievement of some merit. For their benefit, I shall look to the longer-term figures for employment growth.

Using ABS figures again, we have seen almost a 20% increase in the number of people with jobs between December 1982 and December 1986: the number has risen from 56 400 to 67 400. At the same time, the number of people unemployed in December has remained fairly steady at between 4000 and 5000. The NT continues to have one of the lowest unemployment rates in Australia. If we look at the preliminary statistics for April 1987, they show the NT with an unemployment rate of 6.9% which compares very favourably with the Australian figure of 8.4%. It should also be noted by honourable members that the NT has the highest work force participation rate in the whole of Australia: 73.3%. That is 17.5% higher than the Australian figure of 62.3%.

If one combines the high participation rate - and, for the benefit of honourable members, the participation rate represents the proportion of people within the 15 to 65 age group that are actually participating and regard themselves as being in the work force - with the lower unemployment rate in the NT, and then proceed to calculate the actual number of jobs as a percentage of the civilian population, it can be said that for every 100 people aged 15 years and over, 68.2 are employed in the NT compared with 57 in the rest of Australia. This equals 19.6% higher employment rates in the Northern Territory.

That is quite a clear indication that we are back on track. May I say that plans that we have put in place are progressing and job creation is occurring. There was a hiccup in our population and employment growth in 1986. I must advise honourable members that the analysis of employment figures shows that, in the March and June quarters of 1986, net interstate migration was negative. In other words, more people were leaving the Northern Territory and going interstate than were coming into the Northern Territory. That was offset significantly by natural growth as more people were born in the Northern Territory and people came from overseas. In the last 2 quarters of last year and the first quarter of this year, net interstate migration has again become positive and the population growth is continuing. Early figures show, as at December 1986, a total population growth of 2.4%. The indications are that the population turnaround is increasing together with employment growth.

One of the most significant elements of the renewed activity is the work that has been put in to encourage building and construction in the non-residential building area. Honourable members can see the results of those efforts in Darwin with the new building that is being erected at the bottom of Bennett Street, the Harbour View Building. There is a new hotel under construction now on the Esplanade and Peel Street and construction has commenced at the new private hospital adjacent to the Royal Darwin Hospital at Tiwi. Other developments are coming into the Trade Development Zone. All of these developments are bringing employment back into the building and construction industry and starting to turn around the decline experienced during the first half of last year as a consequence of the close-down of many major construction jobs at a time when there was nothing else coming through the system.

It has taken us time to get new projects up and going. The work force is now returning and, over the next 6 to 12 months, we will see a resurgence of activity. It may not reach the boom levels of previous years but we will certainly see a return to a healthy economic situation for much of the business community in the Winnellie and Berrimah areas and the CBD as workers come back into town for construction purposes. Business cash flows will increase and provide some relief over the next 6 months.

Maintaining our economy on a construction basis cannot be seen as a long-term aim. That is why there is so much emphasis now on the marketing and promotion of tourism development, along with the activities of the Minister for Industries and Development in building up our manufacturing, fishing and related industry base in Darwin. These developments will provide a further underpinning to our economy, to pick up and continue the growth created by the initial impetus the economy has received through our considerable efforts over the last 12 months to turn the situation around.

I am very confident that the restructuring of the economy on a sounder basis is progressing and that we will meet our targets. The Northern Territory will continue to grow in a positive direction. We will be able to do that by the freeing up of private enterprise resources, without the necessity of pumping in vast amounts of government money which, quite frankly, we do not have available to us now.

Finniss River Land Claim

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Can he advise what is happening with respect to the Finniss River land claim?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unlike members opposite, I become rather nervous at times of federal elections because they are usually give-away times and another piece of Territory is gone. Recently, I received advice from the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs that he intends to grant the land in areas 1 and 2 of the Finniss River land claim to a single land trust. I have already enlightened honourable members on the fact that the Northern Territory government has gone to great lengths in recent times to negotiate various packages with Aboriginal traditional owners. In this particular instance, and bearing in mind that once again it is a federal election, I find the timing of this decision curiously coincidental.

For the benefit of honourable members, Mr Justice Toohey made his recommendations on 22 May 1981 - 6 years ago. For the last 6 years, the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs has been grappling with the question of detriment. It is strangely coincidental that, on the eve of an election, the minister proposes to hand over only 57 km² out of a total area of 275 km² recommended by Justice Toohey. The federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs has not reached a decision on detriment relating to the other 3 areas of the claim, although we are advised that officers in his department are actively working on the matter at the moment.

It is election time. The Labor Party has an airy-fairy, left-wing, trendy, 'let's give the Territory away' candidate. His alias is Warren Snowdon, Central Land Council employee and ALP candidate for the House of Representatives. He has some very clear and concise views on Aboriginal land rights in the Territory. Let us hope that the people of the Territory are listening because here is the big chance for honourable members opposite.

I have sat in a room on 3 separate occasions with the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Clyde Holding, and we have negotiated various packages involving certain amendments to the federal Northern Territory Land Rights Act, the only one in its existence in Australia. I want to know from the honourable members opposite if they support their House of Representatives candidate. Which of them over there has the guts to stand up and back him on this particular issue?

Four of the issues we have been trying to negotiate in the terms of the Northern Territory Land Rights Act - and members opposite raised this, not me - have involved claims to public purpose land ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The honourable minister was asked a quite specific question about the progress of the Finnis River land claim. I thought he answered it admirably, but he has not touched on that specific question during the last 2 or 3 minutes of his current address.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order, but I would ask the minister to restrict his reply to the question.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, I will be as brief as possible in concluding my remarks.

It is important to note that the Northern Territory government has gone all the way down the line to agree to all the elements put forward by the federal government and the land councils, particularly in relation to excisions, yet the federal government still holds the gun at our head and refuses to pass amendments in the federal parliament. These are amendments it has guaranteed us, on 3 separate occasions, that it would pass.

Going back to the Finnis River claim, it is apparent that Mr Holding's grandstanding is likely to backfire. I will simply say that I am sure that, like me, honourable members of this Assembly have received various representations from the 3 Aboriginal groups involved in the claim, concerning their internal disputes over Wagait and their disputes with the Northern Land Council. It borders on being sickening that, after 6 years of waiting and grappling with the facts and problems associated with this particular land claim, on the eve of a federal election, the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs suddenly decides that he can only grant certain areas which he knows full well will bring about maximum political advantage for him and a minimum for everybody else involved. As I said, I fully expect the decision to backfire on him in a mammoth way.

Alleged Liquor Purchases on Departmental Order Numbers

Mr SMITH TO CHIEF MINISTER

What action is he taking to examine allegations made in a letter to the editor of the NT News that large amounts of alcohol have been ordered on public service department order numbers? The specific order numbers given were: CM0337 for a sum of $2500, CM0524 for a sum of $4000 and CM0192 for a sum of $2000.

ANSWER

I am aware of the allegations to which the honourable member refers. Off the top of my head, I cannot confirm the details of the specific order numbers that he is quoting now. I will work on the presumption that they are the order numbers that were quoted in the newspaper. As CM order numbers relate to the Department of the Chief Minister, they were Department of the Chief Minister's order numbers and, as such, I did have the matter investigated.

Mr Speaker, those orders were for alcohol. Honourable members may like to know that those orders were filled for the Administrator's residence, and that is where the alcohol went. All items ordered against those order numbers went to the Administrator's residence, and that is not to suggest in any way that that was improper. I make that very clear because the fact is that the Administrator performs a very important role. As well as being the titular head of state in the Northern Territory, he also has a very significant protocol role. As recently as Monday of this week, a significant function was held at Government House which, of course, was the annual cocktail party celebrating the Queen's birthday. His Honour happens to be the Queen's representative in the Northern Territory. I know the Leader of the Opposition and the Deputy Leader of the Opposition were there, and I am sure they enjoyed themselves, as did other people.

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I would again remind honourable members that the question session of the Assembly is broadcast live by 2 radio stations and, in courtesy to people who are listening, I ask all members to cease their interjections.

Mr HATTON: Thank you, Mr Speaker. The point I am making is that the Administrator has a significant and important protocol role and I know the Leader of the Opposition would not deny the propriety of that function, the way in which it is carried out and the importance in the overall function of government of the Administrator's role as the titular head of state. Some part of those beverages were probably enjoyed by the Leader of the Opposition, and the Deputy Leader of the Opposition and other people. I make that point, and I hope that answers the Leader of the Opposition's question.

Mr Speaker, there is a danger of all sorts of wild assumptions coming from these campaigns of half-baked allegations that often appear, without any basis in fact, in the newspapers.

Food Stalls

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

There has been considerable comment regarding the operation of food stalls in open areas in places such as Smith Street Mall. These comments have related particularly to policing of health regulations. Is he aware of the concerns of people regarding hygiene in these situations and what inspections are carried out to make sure health requirements are adhered to in these circumstances?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am aware of the circumstances of the various food outlets in the Mall and other places, such as the Parap market and Rapid Creek markets on a Sunday. Quite frankly, I believe that they are a colourful innovation to the Darwin way of life and are playing a major role as tourist attractions and that many local people enjoy the services that these people provide. They operate under permit from the Darwin City Council and, in fact, are inspected regularly by the health inspectors of the Department of Health and Community Services, usually on a 2-weekly basis.

The people who operate the stalls have been given advice by members of my department on ways in which they should, first of all, handle the food, cook the food and, of course, distribute the food to the customers. Given the advice that these people have been given, the conditions under which they operate and the continual inspections that they are subject to, it is very unlikely that anybody who eats the food provided by these people will suffer any ill effects.

Lake Amadeus Land Claim

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I preface my question by referring him to his previous answer to a question concerning what he referred to as the Lake Amadeus land claim. I will further preface my question by reminding him of a little of the history of this subject concerning events which took place in advance of the fairly short time frame within which he appears to be operating.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will ask his question.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, with due respect, I am prefacing a question. I believe I have done so shortly. I believe it is important information for the honourable minister ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will obey the instructions of the Chair and ask his question.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, with due respect, I prefaced my question. I used the appropriate form of words. I believed I was doing so as briefly as possible.

Mr SPEAKER: The honourable member has no right whatsoever to preface questions. He must simply ask the question.

Mr BELL: Why did the Country Liberal Party government alienate part of the Lake Amadeus land claim in 1981? Is he aware that, as a result of the problems created by previous Country Liberal Party governments, that is exactly the problem that he is purporting to solve?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the government takes various actions in the interests of all Territorians and reserves the right to do so.

Work Skill Australia Program

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Mr Speaker, will he advise this Assembly of the Northern Territory's involvement in the Work Skill Australia Program?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as I am sure you would be aware, the Work Skill Australia Program is a good news story and it involves contestants from the Northern Territory. The program was launched in 1982 with the goal of establishing a national system of Work Skill competitions in an effort to provide an incentive for young people to attain high skill levels. That is something that is lacking in some education systems and the Work Skill Australia Program was set up to combat it. The competition is based on regional competitions held every 2 years. These are followed by national finals with finalists competing in the International Skill Olympics. In Adelaide later this month, 10 young Territorians, including 5 from Darwin and 5 from Alice Springs, from a wide cross-section of trades, including cabinet-making, hairdressing and cooking, will compete against winners from 30 Australian regions. Finalists from the competition will meet in Sydney in February 1988 to compete in the 29th International Skill Olympics.

I am sure that all members of the Assembly will join with me in wishing every success to the 10 young competitors from the Territory. I will be meeting with the 5 Darwin contestants shortly and I believe the Deputy Chief Minister will be meeting with the Alice Springs contestants before they leave for Adelaide. We wish them well.

Composition of Planning Appeals Committee

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

In view of the fact that the composition of the Appeals Committee set up under the Planning Act is less than fair to local interests when it hears appeals from decisions of the different planning authorities, and considering that a proposed change is supported by the Local Government Association as an initiative of the Litchfield Shire, can the minister tell me if he would consider amending the Planning Act so that 1 of the 3 members of the Appeals Committee is a local person nominated by the relevant local government authority?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members would be aware that ministers of the government are always more than willing to consider any matter. I have not as yet been briefed on nor received any proposition from the Department of Lands or the Chairman of the Planning Authority to change the composition of the Appeals Committee.

I am aware of moves by local government authorities to ensure that there is at least some form of local representation on appeals committees. However, I can equally see much advantage in having a non-local person on an appeals committee, provided the person is properly qualified to deal with the issues at hand, albeit that most of them are architectural or engineering ones. It could be argued that a local person would bring in an element of bias that would not otherwise exist. However, I am happy to advise the member for Koolpinyah that I will take up the issue and ensure that I am properly briefed. If there is a recommendation on its way to me, I will endeavour to deal with it in the shortest possible time so that I can advise the member for Koolpinyah of my decision.

Fringe Benefits Tax

Mr HARRIS to CHIEF MINISTER

Yesterday, the Leader of the Opposition inferred that John Howard would not be removing the fringe benefit tax. Is the Chief Minister aware of the comments to which I refer and, if so, is he able to confirm the accuracy of the Leader of the Opposition's remarks?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, during last night's debate, the Leader of the Opposition took great pains to imply that the impending Howard-Sinclair government would retain the fringe benefits tax. I can advise that I have made the effort to double-check the facts because the implication was so contrary to everything that I know about of the policies of the Liberal and National Parties. I can advise the honourable member quite emphatically that the fringe benefits tax legislation will be abolished under a coalition government after 11 July. It will be abolished along with the capital gains tax, the assets test on pensioners and the cessation of other negative gearing, as part of overall policies to improve the investment climate to create some wealth and some real jobs instead of the short-term, make-work jobs that have flowed from this country's biggest-spending government ever.

I just want to clarify one point about fringe benefits tax. Fringe benefits tax means that, where a non-cash benefit such as housing rental, a vehicle or air fare is provided to an employee, the employer is required to pay tax over and above the expense of providing the benefit itself. Prior to this legislation being enacted, going right back to before 1920, the Taxation Act provided that those non-cash benefits were assessable income for employees and were taxable. The fact is that successive governments had never been prepared to take on the task of trying to collect that tax from employees. I have memories of the 1970s when the Fraser government sought to collect those taxes and was blocked by the coalminers over housing provisions. Obviously, Mr Howard has learned his lesson from that. Equally, he has recognised the total inequity of making the employer pay tax on what is often a legally enforceable condition of employment. It is absolutely inequitable to charge the employer a tax on that.

Yesterday, on the Ray Martin program, Mr Howard said that there were some justifiable cases such as housing in remote communities or cars which are essential for employment which will not be subject to tax paid by the employee. However, he said that abuse of the system would not be tolerated. He used the example of an employee with a Potts Point house, a holiday house or a luxury Rolls Royce as an employee benefit and said that that person would have to pay tax on those things. I do not object to the employee receiving those benefits and paying income tax on them. I know the Leader of the Opposition would not object either because I remember a debate in this House last year when he made the point that these are benefits and should be taxed.

Mr Howard, unlike Mr Keating in his raid on the Northern Territory, does not intend to tax the provision of essential services to people working in remote communities. He is focusing on frills and rip-offs in the system and he has said that he will tax the employee for those. This option has always been available to governments and it is about time somebody took it up. The Labor government did not need to apply its nonsensical, inequitable and unjust fringe benefits tax which has done so much to destroy business confidence and investment, particularly in the remote areas of Australia. I look forward to a new government that will not be big-taxing and big-spending.

Mr Smith: Do you support the taxing of air fares?

Mr HATTON: The Leader of the Opposition is interjecting. I will tell him a few things.

Mr Keating continually takes the opportunity to talk about the Fraser government being a big spender. Let me say that the Fraser government's expenditure growth averaged 2.1% per year.

Mr Smith: Is John Howard going to tax air fares?

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, that compares with 3.9% per year under this current Hawke-Keating government. If the Labor government's expenditure growth in the last 4 years had equated to the average of the Fraser years, total government expenditure over the period would have been $20 000m less and the budget would have been in surplus for the last 2 financial years.

The Keating government is, without doubt, Australia's biggest taxing government of all time. Listen to this list of little taxes it has sneaked in: July 1983, lump sum superannuation tax; August 1983, automatic biannual indexation of traditional excises of beer, cigarettes and petroleum; February 1984, the introduction of a 1% medicare levy; July 1984, resource rent tax and a new excise on oil production; August 1984, 10% wine tax; July 1985, abolition of concessional expenditure rebates, abolition of negative gearing and removal of medicare levy limits; September 1985, disallowance of entertainment expenditure and capital gains tax introduced; July 1986, fringe benefits tax, bureaucratic substantiation provisions introduced; August 1986, new sales tax, 20% wine tax and large increase in excise on petrol; December 1986, increase in medicare levy to 1.25%; July 1987, increase in corporate tax rate from 46% to 49% and foreign tax credit system introduced. That is why this country is being strangled to death. This high-taxing, high-spending government totally refuses to recognise the necessity of cutting back on its own nonsensical expenditure programs and taking its foot off the throat of business and allowing it to get on with investment.

Darwin Rifle Club

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Can he confirm that the 1988 Queen's Shoot and the Australian Titles will be able to be conducted on the Winnellie Rifle Range or is it intended to complete the new range in time for these events?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am able to assure members of the Assembly and the shooting fraternity at large that the Darwin Rifle Club Range will not be expected to relocate until December 1988. Of course, that is well after the scheduled time for the Queen's Shoot.

Compulsory Transferees to NTPS

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

What is the position, in relation to the cuts to public service conditions announced yesterday, of compulsory transferees from the Commonwealth to the Northern Territory Public Service?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, we have looked fairly closely at that question. I can inform the Leader of the Opposition and all honourable members that compulsory transferees who are not covered by awards will be picked up in the overall proposals. People who are covered by awards will have to be treated differently in so far as we would have to go to the Arbitration Commission to seek a variation to awards which cover them.

Frances Bay Mooring Facility

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In March, the Labor candidate for Casuarina stated that the Frances Bay Mooring Facility was a disgrace and a white elephant. Can the minister give this Assembly a report regarding its current status?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members will be aware of the statements made by members of the Labor Party in the past about how the sheltered berth in Darwin would be a financial disaster. I am pleased to advise that, at present, all 85 berths in the facility are booked. If any berths are vacant, it is not because they have not been booked; it is either because the vessels have not arrived or are still unloading prior to going to their berths.

The reason why the facility is full now, in mid-year, is because this is the first year in which the northern prawn fishery has been closed for the second time in a season. This is a result of low catches over recent years. Many experts believe that over-fishing has occurred and both industry and government have agreed that, for the time being, there will be 2 closures of the northern prawn fishery each year. This means that, in addition to the sheltered mooring facility being occupied during the closed season from December to April each year, which is the period when we all expect it to be very much occupied, it will also be occupied from about 22 June to 30 July.

This will obviously provide a boost to some Darwin businesses which may have been experiencing difficulties recently. I am pleased to say that a group of Darwin businesses has had the initiative, together with the Port Authority, to offer a range of services to vessel owners whilst they are in port. It is a testing period for the Darwin service industry which has the opportunity to show vessel owners that it is prepared to respond quickly to their needs while they are in port. We hope it all goes well.

The mid-year prawn season closure has been a boost to our original plans because the original projections stated that we would probably get just over 30 vessels in the facility during the first closed season. As honourable members were advised during the last sittings, the period from December to April was fully booked, as it will be next year, and the same now applies in this mid-year period. My good wishes go to the Darwin business fraternity which is offering services to vessel owners as a demonstration that the Northern Territory has the capacity to keep vessels from travelling south each year for refitting and servicing. I am sure that local businesses will welcome this opportunity with open arms.

Air Fare Proposals

Mr LEO to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Will NTEC and DIT employees be subject to the government proposals concerning air fares and conditions of service? Will nurses lose their annual air fare entitlement under the proposed air fare deal?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will be making a detailed statement later in the day answering all of those questions. People with specific existing provisions will retain those provisions. The only difference with air fares is that they will be paid in cash each fortnight.

Education Standards

Mr REED to MINISTER for EDUCATION

What impact will the recently-announced cost cutting measures, which are expected to generate savings of $6.5m, have on the standard of education in the Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question is very relevant at this time. It is important that people be aware of exactly what the impact will be. Most people in the Territory are aware that the Territory's finances suffered an appalling cut at the recent Premiers Conference, where $101m was removed.

Mr Bell: That is not true.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, it is interesting that we have members of the opposition saying that it is not true. They have a mental fixation which deludes them into believing that, if they say something long enough, the problem will go away or people will believe it did not happen. All Territorians are aware of the fact that we now have to operate with $101m less than we require. It is very unfortunate that this savage cut will affect all Territorians in all aspects of our daily lives and employment.

To overcome the economic problems caused by these cuts, we would have to raise our taxes and charges by 43% to 45%. By comparison, to cover the cost of its cuts, New South Wales would have to raise its charges by 7%. As a responsible government, we cannot raise taxes and charges by those amounts. There is only one other option, and that is to cut services. We are talking about a very large amount of money. If, for example, we closed down the Department of Law, we would make a saving of $15m. We would still have to find savings of $85m. That gives an idea of the scope of the impact of the cuts.

As was laid down in the Treasurer's economic statement, the Department of Education will be required to operate with $6.5m less. A great deal of work has gone into determining how those cuts could be made with minimal effects. Nobody could say that there will be no effects; that would be stupid. Obviously, we have to look at ways and means of trying to ensure the cuts will not affect the quality of education to Territory children.

I would like to talk first about staff-student ratios. For many years, student-staff ratios in the Territory have been well in front of those in the rest of the country, especially at secondary level.

Mr Bell: Prove it.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I find that the interruptions from the member for MacDonnell ...

Mr Bell: Table a document. You have an army of people to do it for you. I don't believe you.

Mr MANZIE: Whether the member for MacDonnell believes me or not is not the point. He has been elected to represent people and he does not like to face facts. He likes to close his eyes to the problems ...

Mr Bell: You have not presented any facts.

Mr MANZIE: ... caused by his federal colleagues. The 2 areas in Australia which are closest to the Territory in staff-student ratios make an interesting comparison, but I will first point out what has happened here. Originally we had ...

Mr Bell: This should be a statement, Daryl.

Mr MANZIE: ... a ratio of 1 student to 16 staff ...

Mr Bell: Let us all have a bite of the cherry.

Mr MANZIE: ... at the junior high school level and 1 student to 13 staff at the senior secondary level. That does not include auxiliary staff. We have changed the basis of measuring the staff-student ratio so that it includes auxiliary staff and promotion positions. It is now 1 to 15.8 for junior high schools and 1 to 12.8 at the senior secondary level. Using the same baseline, the states with ratios closest to ours are ACT and Tasmania. Their ratios are 1 to 13 and 1 to 16 respectively. So we are still slightly in front.

I do not deny that the change in the ratio will cause a greater workload for teachers. It is obvious that class sizes will have to increase slightly, but I also have no hesitation in stating that I believe Territory teachers are as capable as their interstate colleagues. I also believe Territory students are as capable as their interstate colleagues. Nobody would deny that the federal government cuts will make us all roll up our sleeves and work a little bit harder. We cannot make any exceptions. Our teachers are as capable as their interstate colleagues and, as such, can provide the same high standards that are supplied in the rest of the country.

That ratio will affect 50 positions in terms of staffing. I would like to assure people, as I have assured the Teachers' Federation - although it has refused to inform its members - that nobody will be sacked. It may take some time to reach the optimum level because, obviously, if a science or maths teacher leaves, a science or maths teacher has to be recruited. The information given to people has been absolutely ridiculous. Yesterday, the President of the Teachers Federation told people that 50 teachers would be sacked with another 100 to go afterwards. There is no basis for that statement except his desire to cause unrest.

Mr Bell: You have said it.

Mr MANZIE. I will say here and now that I have never said that. The member for MacDonnell is again displaying his ignorance. The sort of things that he has been saying around the Territory have obviously been ...

Mr Bell: Read a copy of the advertisement which you put in every newspaper around the place.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr MANZIE: Obviously, the member for MacDonnell has not taken the time to read the advertisement in detail. Maybe he cannot read. Possibly he has a mental block and has trouble understanding, but I think it is very important that the correct information is provided to people.

Mr Bell: I know of a school that is going to suffer a 20% cut.

Mr MANZIE: Another instance of the sort of misinformation being put out is the case where students at a school in Darwin were told that their school's staff would be cut by 19. That has no basis in fact, but it has caused a tremendous problem in people's homes. I think it is very important that everybody understands that the teacher-student ratio will still be marginally better than anywhere else in Australia. I do not deny that teachers will have to work a little harder, but I am sure that everybody will agree that they are at least as capable as their colleagues in some of the better-serviced states.

We will need to make a cutback in the area of over-entitlement staff. According to the staffing formula, some schools are over-staffed and we have to make sure ...

Mr Bell: This is outrageous. It has been going for 10 minutes, Daryl. This should have been a statement.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell will cease interjecting and that is the last warning I will give.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I would like to be very brief with this answer, but I think the matter is very important. I really believe that people like the member for MacDonnell should listen to the facts so that they are in a position to ...

Mr Bell: You are being provocative ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I name the honourable member for MacDonnell.

Mr HANRAHAN (Leader of Government Business): Mr Speaker, I move that the services of the member for MacDonnell be suspended from this Assembly.

The Assembly divided:

Ayes 14	Noes 9
Mr Coulter	Mr Bell
Mr Dale	Mr Collins
Mr Dondas	Mr Ede
Mr Firmin	Mr Lanhupuy
Mr Hanrahan	Mr Leo
Mr Harris	Mrs Padgham-Purich
Mr Hatton	Mr Smith
Mr McCarthy	Mr Tipiloura
Mr Manzie	Mr Tuxworth
Mr Palmer
Mr Perron
Mr Poole
Mr Reed
Mr Setter

Mr SPEAKER: As a result of the division, there being 14 ayes and 9 noes, the question is resolved in the affirmative. The member for MacDonnell is suspended from the services of the Assembly for 24 hours.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, it is rather disappointing that this has occurred ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister is being unnecessarily provocative. He has a specific question to answer. He has taken 15 minutes to answer already. He could at least ensure that the remainder of his answer is relevant.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order, but the honourable minister will confine his remarks to the question.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I am trying to provide some factual information for members and my reason for saying that I was disappointed was that I am aware that the member for MacDonnell has addressed some public meetings and his facts have not been correct. I hope he reads Hansard so that his public addresses will be closer to the facts.

Mr Speaker, disappointingly, we will have to bring over-entitlement staff back to the levels specified in the school staffing formula. As I said, some schools have been staffed in excess of their requirements but we now have to come back to the baseline. There will be cutbacks in some programs relating to the teaching of English as a second language. Most of us will recall that the federal Labor government reduced its funding in that area last year and all states were affected very badly. In the Territory, we managed to divert some of our very scarce financial resources to keep the program going. However, following the most recent cuts to our funding, we are no longer able to maintain our funding of the program which we believe is a very important one. Funding reductions will mean an increase in the size of some withdrawal classes. We will not be cutting them out, but the teachers involved will have to carry a slightly heavier workload than before.

Special education is quite a large area and annual expenditure is normally around $3m. That will be cut by 5% which will mean extra effort for the people involved. Again, I would like to ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I draw your attention to order of the day No 3, the economic statement presented by the Treasurer on the last sitting day. That economic statement is quite clearly a matter of debate before this Assembly. Its contents include specific mention of cuts of $6.5m to education. Mr Speaker, I put it to you that the appropriate place for the minister's remarks is in the context of that economic statement, as provided for in standing orders.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, we will continue to give as much support as possible in the area of special education. There has been a tremendous amount of misinformation put about. I believe this is because of people's genuine fear that there will be a great decline in the quality of education. That will not occur.

There will have to be some cuts in services provided by literature production centres for bilingual schools. As all members know, we have the largest number of bilingual schools in the country, far more than any other state. Considerable resources are put into these schools which perform an important role. No one here would suggest that they should be phased out. I think the opposite is the order of the day. However, we must rationalise the way we are expending money there. For example, when we have several centres producing literature in the same language, we will reduce those to 1 centre. Some language groups have up to 3 separate production centres in 3 separate areas and we will have to move those back to 1 area.

Mr Ede: That is one of the few areas of Aboriginal employment that is really needed and he wants to cut it out.

Mr MANZIE: The member for Stuart's comment has some truth in it. It is an area of Aboriginal employment and we are going to keep the majority of the literacy workers in local communities on our payroll. I must reiterate that it is not something this government is proud about having to do, but the bottom line is that the federal government has taken a tremendous amount of money away from the Northern Territory. As I said, that is going to affect everybody in the Territory.

I must stress again that the cuts to education do not mean that we are dropping below standards elsewhere in the country. We will still be slightly in front. I do not resile from the fact that it means that people are going to be working harder than before, but we must accept that we are all being affected by what the federal Labor government does. I think it is important that the community realises that money does not grow on trees. The way we have been treated means that we have to transfer those costs.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Standing order 112(1) quite clearly says that questions cannot be debated. The minister was asked a question which, in my view, he has comprehensively answered. It concerned the effects of the $6.5m cuts in education. He has gone beyond that and he is now debating the matter in answer to a question, where we cannot respond to it.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order but I would suggest that the honourable minister keeps his remarks as brief as possible.

Mr MANZIE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I am keeping my remarks quite brief because it is a very complex subject and it is very important. It relates to people throughout the Territory.

We have also looked at Aboriginal attendance at pre-schools. At present, children using pre-schools in outlying areas are able attend for the full day whereas, in the urban areas, attendance at pre-schools has been for half-day sessions. We are requiring pre-schools in Aboriginal communities to allow attendance for half-days only which is the same as for urban pre-schools.

I will mention pre-schools fees very briefly. At present, attendance at pre-schools is not compulsory. We build the pre-schools and staff them and we are asking parents to contribute $3 per attending child. We do not like doing that but I think honourable members will remember that the federal government cut out funding to pre-schools 2 years ago and that we picked it up. However, we cannot continue to carry on funding services to an extent which is greater than that in the states. We have been cut very heavily.

In summary, while there are imposts, they will not affect the quality of education. Both students and teachers will probably have to put in slightly more effort but, and it is very important that people are aware of this, education is one of this government's highest priorities. It is the young people of the Territory who will take over and keep the Territory going in the years to come. It is a very important aspect of government and we are making sure that the quality of education will not decrease. However, we must remember that the Hawke-Keating mini-budget cuts have really affected the Northern Territory and that every area of the Territory has to shoulder some responsibility.

Bed Tax

Mr EDE to MINISTER for TOURISM

I refer to the tourist industry's reaction to the proposed bed tax and the losses that will be incurred in trying to maintain good faith with those who have booked or prepaid their holidays. Is he aware of any industry plans to retaliate by charging travelling government officers the full commercial rate and would he confirm that, if that occurred, the government would lose most of the savings that it could realistically expect to gain through the imposition of the tax?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, for the honourable member's benefit, I will answer the question on behalf of the Treasurer who has carriage of the legislation in this Assembly. It is normal practice in question time for questions concerning legislation to be answered by the minister responsible for that legislation.

The Stamp Duty Amendment Bill is on the Notice Paper under order of the day No 1. Subject to anything alarming happening in this Assembly, it will come forth at about 11.20 am or 11.30 am today. It will be debated following the second-reading speech. All of the issues addressed by the member for Stuart will be dealt with. I have had some discussion with the industry, but I will address all the pertinent facts ...

Interjection from the public gallery.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I will tolerate no disturbances whatsoever in the public gallery. If there is a repeat of that performance, I will have no hesitation in clearing the entire gallery.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, it is my intention to further address all relevant facts relating to the industry's concerns in the second-reading debate of the bill today.

Territory Allowance

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

What is the justification for public servants receiving amounts of Territory allowance that exceeds those in the private sector?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for his question. It is a question that many people in the private sector have been asking for a long time. I do not know if honourable members are aware of the different basis of calculating Territory allowance throughout the Territory. In fact, there is quite a significant difference.

In the private sector, people north of the 20th parallel receive $866 and people south of the 20th parallel receive $350 as a Territory or district allowance. In the public sector, people with dependants receive $2237 per annum as an allowance and people without dependants receive $1277. For many years, the private sector has had a problem in attracting people to the Territory when people in the public sector were receiving a much greater allowance. It meant that people would drift away from the private sector into the public sector.

Obviously, people will take an allowance if it is offered. In 1982, the Arbitration Commission decided that the Territory allowance was no longer justified in the public sector. It froze it at the then current figure and that is what has been paid ever since. It was stated quite clearly that the allowance was no longer justified. That is my belief and it is the belief of this government.

Land and Fire Services Tax

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to TREASURER

Can the Treasurer give me details of the proposed land tax and fire services tax? Despite making extensive inquiries, I cannot find out a single solitary detail.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is indeed heartening that the member for Koolpinyah cannot find any details of that particular proposal at this stage. As I said in my economic statement, it was a matter that was under consideration and we did not intend to move on it at this stage. They are additional revenue-raising measures for implementation in the event of other measures not being successful.

The member for Jingili returned from Brisbane recently. He brought back a copy of the Brisbane Sun with a front page headline indicating that there would be an increase of 50% in the fire service levy in Queensland, taking it from $42 per year to $72 per year. Fire service levies are implemented right throughout Australia. Indeed, the member for Koolpinyah recently attended a meeting I held with the combined rural volunteer fire brigades where there was discussion about the possibility of levying local landholders to cover the cost of running rural volunteer fire brigades. It is not a new tax in Australia. Indeed, it was the original means of funding fire stations. Honourable members may recall that some buildings used to have signs indicating the name of the company which insured them.

There is nothing new in a fire services levy. The government is giving consideration to its implementation. At this stage, our budget negotiations are continuing and we have no intention of implementing levies at the moment.

Kakadu National Park

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

In the past, the minister has advocated multiple uses for Kakadu National Park and has been rebuffed by ANPWS. Have there been any developments that might cause him to believe that there might be a change of heart on the part of ANPWS in the future?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Ludmilla for his question. There have indeed been some rather startling happenings but, unfortunately, they are geographically based. They occur only in states where a Labor government is in power. I refer honourable members to that magnificent Labor state of South Australia where, in contrast to the Northern Territory, uranium can be mined.

Honourable members will be aware that I have advocated multiple land use for national parks in the Territory, such as Kakadu, for a long time. Indeed, I have made representations to various federal ministers and I recently had the opportunity to address the UNESCO World Heritage Committee where I suggested that it should consider multiple land use rather than just closing up parks in the Northern Territory.

Negotiations in South Australia on a station owned by the Kidman family show where we have gone wrong. The South Australians have recognised the shortcomings of Derek Ovington. They have gone to the Deputy Director of ANPWS, whose name is Mr Nicholas Newland. I will read from page 3 of the Adelaide Advertiser of 22 June in order to show what Labor states can get way with in contrast to the more conservative side of politics. The federal government is willing to bend the rules for South Australia but not for the Northern Territory. The Adelaide Advertiser article is headed: 'Unique Reserve Plan for the Cooper Basin Region'. Remember, the Labor Party in the Northern Territory does not even have a mining policy so I would expect opposition members to be just a little bit quiet during my answer. They have demonstrated in this Assembly, time and time again, that they have nothing to contribute in terms of providing meaningful full-time employment to Territorians.

Under the heading, 'Unique Reserve Plan for the Cooper Basin Region' the article says: 'In what was a first in Australia in conservation, the reserve will cater for multiple-use interests: tourism, conservation and the mining of natural resources'. It goes on to say that the reserve will be protected under the Australian National Parks and Wildlife Act. Here in the Northern Territory, with the same Sydney-based ANPWS and the same act, we are not allowed to get out there and realise the potential of Kakadu. There is no problem in the Cooper Basin area of South Australia. We read that the 'region's reserve concept is a uniquely South Australian solution to achieving a balance between interests of conservation, tourism and the use of natural resources'. Here in the Territory, we are told that that cannot happen and that we cannot have that balance of different interests.

Of course, the difference is that South Australia has control over its own land and has its own act. Here in the Territory, we have the Leader of the Opposition's federal colleagues looking after us. The party which he represents here in the Northern Territory is in control of our national parks. It does not control parks in South Australia where his other colleague, Hon John Bannon, is in charge. There, uranium can be mined and there can be multiple land use in national parks. The Prime Minister of Australia, the Leader of the Opposition's colleague, controls national parks and mining in the Territory. How long can Australians put up with that type of justice being meted out by the federal government? It is a complete nonsense. The mine at Jabiru has now produced $1200m of wealth from an area of 4 km², and that is just scratching the surface.

Opportunities are available to us if the federal government would get its foot off our neck. We could go ahead and be the richest 150 000 people in Australia today. Instead, we see the nonsensical policies of the federal Labor government as it prepares for the election on 11 July. Mr Speaker, it is time we got rid of this disparity between what can be done in one part of Australia and what can be done in another.

Payment of Committee Members

Mr COLLINS to CHIEF MINISTER

In these times of severe economic restraint, why is the Chief Minister promoting to the Remuneration Tribunal that members of this Assembly should receive extra payment for their duties on parliamentary committees?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have referred the position of Chairman of the Public Accounts Committee to the Remuneration Tribunal for consideration. It is up to the tribunal itself to determine whether or not there is any justification for an allowance. It seems quite appropriate to me, given that people like the Opposition Whip and Deputy Leader of the Opposition receive special allowances, that the position of Chairman of one of the most time-consuming committees of this House should be considered by the Remuneration Tribunal.

Territory Abattoirs

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Could the minister provide advice on the current operating status of Northern Territory abattoirs?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am sure honourable members will be pleased to know that 9 abattoirs are currently operating in the Northern Territory. The big abattoir at Mt Isa is not in operation this year and that is somewhat unusual. That abattoir traditionally has processed a very large number of Northern Territory cattle. At present, we have 5 abattoirs licensed for export meat: Mudginberri, Point Stuart, Meneling, Katherine and Achilles. The Achilles abattoir in Tennant Creek is a horse meat abattoir. The total throughput for the export abattoirs is a little over 800 head per day.

Honourable members will be aware that the Katherine abattoir opened up this year for the first time in 3 years. That has been very good news for Katherine because it has provided more economic activity in the vicinity of the town than was there a little while ago. There were some initial problems with the plant and equipment, as can be expected from a meatworks which has not operated for 2 years. Management seems to have overcome those problems and I am advised that the slaughter rate is approximately 200 head per day. It is aiming for a kill of 300 head per day during the course of the season. There are an additional 4 abattoirs in the Territory processing for the domestic market: Angliss abattoirs in Darwin which is running at very low capacity, Marshall's at Tennant Creek, Victoria Valley and Nelson Springs. Another 4 abattoirs are not expected to open this season: Urapunga, Curtin Springs, Alice Springs and Amoongana.

With these export and domestic abattoirs opening, there is an opportunity for the cattleman in the Northern Territory to obtain the best possible price as a result of the competition among buyers. It is a little sad that Mt Isa has had to close because that would have provided a little more competition. We trust that the pastoral industry will get maximum benefit out of this processing during the course of 1987.

Beaufort Hotel Debts

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

What agreement, if any, has been entered into with the liquidator of the Beaufort Hotel for the repayment of debts owing to the Territory for electricity, water and sewerage, and payroll tax? Is the electricity payment a first-order payment or is it to be made after a number of other creditors with higher priority have been paid?

ANSWER

As I have advised honourable members before, the Northern Territory government is in a very good position in terms of having its money returned in full. There is a section in the Northern Territory Electricity Commission Act which stipulates that we decide who will become a customer. I have made it quite clear to the bankers and the liquidator that it is the intention of the government that, unless we are paid in full, we will not be reconnecting ...

Mr Smith: You will not be able to do that.

Mr COULTER: Have you ever heard a more negative attitude than that of the member for Millner? We are well aware of what the Labor policy has been on this. The Leader of the Opposition said on many occasions that he would have put money into it to keep it open.

Mr Smith: I also would have taken more security.

Mr COULTER: That is the position of the Labor Party, unless it has changed and unless the Deputy Leader of the Opposition is making a takeover bid as spokesman on this particular issue. That is what it wanted to do.

In conjunction with the other creditors, the banks decided to sell it to another operator. There are many potential operators who are now vying for the Beaufort Hotel and the complete centre. I believe that it will be sold in a very short time and be back in operation. The negativism from the benches opposite never fails to amaze me. I will have to tolerate that. We have spoken about that on many occasions. I would have thought that, as a result of the censure motion, the Leader of the Opposition would have woken up by now. Apparently he has learnt nothing, and that is to be expected.

The point is that there is a section in the act which can be used in this situation. I have told the liquidator that he should make that known to any potential buyer of the Beaufort. Indeed, I mentioned that to many of the people who have approached me regarding the purchase of the facility. We will be paid.

Beaufort Hotel Debts

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, my supplementary question requires a simple yes or no answer. Has the government or officers of the government been able to enter into an arrangement with the liquidator for the repayment of those debts?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, we have had discussions. The liquidator and the major creditor are aware of the Northern Territory government's position.

Mr Ede: What is the ranking?

Mr COULTER: When you have the power not to reconnect until the bill is paid, what does it matter what the ranking is? We are in a very good position to recover the debt and we will recover the debt.

Government Negotiations with Trades and Labor Council

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Would he tell the Assembly why the negotiations with the Trades and Labor Council broke down?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to answer the question because I think it is important that the reasons for the breakdown in negotiations with the TLC are made clear. There is a whole range of things being said in terms of our not really caring about making any agreements with the TLC. That was not the case.

I called for a meeting with the TLC well over 2 weeks ago and put to it a range of options that the Territory government was considering as a means of picking up $21.5m from public service conditions. That amount of money was considered to be fair and reasonable considering that, in toto, we were trying to pick up $92m out of costs to the Territory government in this financial year. That $92m has been taken from a whole range of areas. The private sector is suffering because we have had to make cuts in the capital works program and housing. That will mean the loss of jobs in the private sector, Mr Speaker. I am not saying that to frighten people. People are aware of it. The fact is that we had to find the money. The money had been ripped off us and we had to get that money back.

The night before last, I met with the TLC. The meeting lasted for 6½ hours and I put up with 6½ hours of personal abuse. I put up with that because I was determined to get an agreement out of the TLC. But I do not have to stand for that, and I knew that I was going back there last night to face the same thing again. The meeting opened with personal abuse, and I would not care to repeat the things that those people said. I would not be prepared to repeat them. They knew that we had to reach a decision on 24 June because, if decisions were delayed until September, October or November, we would have to pick up a damn sight more than $21.5m.

Mr Speaker, there is no way that the TLC representatives were prepared to discuss any of the government options with me. They were determined to speak about every one of their options and we spent 6½ hours being diverted back to those options. They made no attempt to speak about ours and, if we tried to bring them in, there was just a continuing overriding discussion. The TLC representatives had no intention of reaching an agreement which included any of our options. It had to include only theirs. They had the government's options and they were not prepared to put them to their members. The options which the government announced last night were given to the TLC the night before last. They did not mention them at their meeting yesterday, which they say 5000 people attended. They did not put them to those people.

Mr Speaker, I have tried everything to get an agreement out of the TLC that picked up $21.5m worth of conditions. They say that are going to give up conditions. But what do they give up? They want to give up some of their own work practices - work practices which are costing us dollars because they have become entrenched and cannot be aborted by means of this government's budget. The government has an absolute and total resolve to pick up $21.5m in this area. I did not think this 2 weeks ago, as my Cabinet colleagues and party members could tell you. I believed then that we could resolve this issue by negotiation because I had some faith then in the ability of the TLC to come to such a settlement. However, its representatives' approach to the negotiations was to talk about their options but forget about ours. That was not satisfactory to me. It was not satisfactory to my government colleagues and it was not satisfactory to the people of the Northern Territory. The choice is between cuts to conditions or cuts to jobs. I have settled for conditions that will keep people in jobs in this Territory.

STATEMENT
Call at Question Time

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, during the recess, some criticism was made of the giving of the call at question time. For the information of honourable members, I advise that I give the call on the following basis. The call is alternated between the government and the opposition sides of the Chamber. At the start of question time, if the Leader of the Opposition rises first, I will give the call to him. If, however, a government backbencher is the first to rise, I will give the call to him. The Leader of the Opposition will receive the call for the opposition side whenever he rises except that, after he has had 3 calls, I will then call either of the independent members or the National Party member if they seek the call. I should also point out that, if the Leader of the Opposition does not rise, the Deputy Leader of the Opposition has precedence over other opposition members. I lay on the table statistics of questions asked since the commencement of the Fifth Assembly.

Mining (Validation of Tenements) Bill

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Has the Mining (Validation of Tenements) Bill, which was rushed through the Assembly at the last sittings of the Legislative Assembly under urgency, been assented to by the Administrator and, if not, why not?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will provide that information to the honourable member in the course of these sittings.

Vietnam Veterans

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

What is being done to ensure that Territory Vietnam veterans are able to participate in the welcome-home parade and associated celebrations to be held in Sydney next month?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am very happy to provide an answer for the honourable member. The subject of the Vietnam veterans' welcome-home parade was first brought to my attention by yourself some 6 months ago. As a result of your representations, Mr Speaker, I wrote immediately to the Minister for Defence, Mr Kim Beazley, seeking his assistance in providing RAAF transportation to allow Vietnam veterans in the Northern Territory to participate in the celebrations in Sydney. Subsequently, I met with representatives of the Vietnam Veterans' Association and pledged my full support to their endeavours to be able to participate with their comrades from around Australia in that parade.

I am sure honourable members will be aware of the round of fund-raising activities undertaken by the association with the assistance of many notable members of the Territory community including His Honour the Administrator, His Worship the Lord Mayor and that doyen of fundraising, Auntie Billie Pitcheneder. Unfortunately, offers of assistance from the federal Department of Defence were very slow in coming and I sent considerable correspondence to the domestic airlines, to Qantas and to Ministers Beazley, Morris and, finally, Senator Evans when he assumed his new portfolio responsibilities for Transport and Communications.

At first, the Department of Defence offered only limited seating on a Hercules C130 aircraft for some 40 disabled and disadvantaged veterans. Further representations from myself and from the Vietnam Veterans' Association then ensued and I was delighted to receive advice recently that the Commonwealth has finally recognised its responsibility to make some gesture of appreciation to the Territory's veterans, and will provide 186 seats to Territory veterans on Hercules C130 and Boeing 707 aircraft operated by the defence forces. I understand this will allow all Vietnam veterans in the Northern Territory who wish to attend the march in Sydney to do so.

Mr Speaker, throughout this exercise, my office has maintained a close liaison with the Vietnam Veterans' Association, and this is continuing to ensure that no last-minute hitches arise. I am extremely pleased that those veterans who wish to attend this reunion will have the opportunity on the 25th anniversary of Australia's first involvement in Vietnam of meeting with their old mates from those traumatic days. I think it is a matter of vital importance for Australia, irrespective of the controversy surrounding the Vietnam war, and it is not a matter of debate in respect of that. Each of those veterans went to war on behalf of Australia and the Australian people. The treatment those veterans received on their return is nothing short of a national scandal. Whilst it may be small compensation for those people, it is about time Australia recognised the commitment, dedication and suffering of those people on behalf of this nation.

Shire of Litchfield (Transitional Rating) Act

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Is he aware of a serious flaw in the Shire of Litchfield (Transitional Rating) Act to the effect that there is to be a legal challenge to this act which, I have been told, will be successful, and what does he intend to do about it, considering how important this legislation is to people in the rural area, including some in his electorate?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure if the member for Koolpinyah is asking me for an opinion or an answer. I understand that a situation has arisen in the rural area at Churchers Estate and that the people involved in that subdivision have taken some course of legal action. It is not proper for me to comment on the issue at this stage as it is a matter that will be before the courts in the very near future.

Aboriginal Deaths in Custody

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

What was the outcome of the Australian Police Ministers' Council meeting held recently in Melbourne to consider Aboriginal deaths in custody and how many Aborigines have died in police custody in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in respect of the second part of that question, I would like to confine my answers to a more recent period than the last 100 years of the Northern Territory's history. Of course, the salient period, in terms of the national debate is since 1980.

The Australian Police Ministers' Council met in Melbourne on 10 September 1987 and the meeting was attended also by Correctional Services Ministers. I was represented at that meeting by the Minister for Health and Community Services who also attended in his own capacity as minister responsible for correctional services. The object of the meeting was to consider a draft code of practice and procedures for Aboriginal detainees. It quickly transpired that the various jurisdictions already had procedures in place and the following summary of practices and procedures was produced.

(1) Where diversionary procedures or facilities are available, Aboriginals should not be detained or remanded in custody for intoxication or other minor offences unless the offender is violent or the offence is likely to continue. In cases of detention, bail or surety, procedures should be instituted as soon as possible.

(2) A member of the Aboriginal legal service or an Aboriginal liaison officer should, where feasible, have access to an Aboriginal detained or arrested. Should it be necessary to detain an Aboriginal person, every effort should be made to advise relatives, friends or the Aboriginal legal service.

(3) An Aboriginal detained or arrested who exhibits signs of mental or physical distress should receive a medical examination within 1 hour of being taken into custody by either the prison medical officer, a qualified medical practitioner, a registered nurse or, if any of the foregoing are unavailable, another suitably qualified person.

(4) Where possible, Aboriginals should be placed in a multi-prisoner cell, preferably with another Aboriginal or Aboriginals, unless there is an identified threat from placing them together.

(5) Observation of a person demonstrating mental and or physical distress, including those suffering from the effects of alcohol or drugs, should be made with sufficient frequency to ensure the well-being of persons involved.

(6) Such detainees should be placed in observation cells, where possible and appropriate, and have neckties, belts, shoelaces and other similar articles removed.

The general orders promulgated under the Police Administration Act provide for the proper supervision and treatment of all persons in custody, irrespective of race. In addition, a set of guidelines relating to the welfare of Aboriginal people under interrogation, known as the Anunga Rules, are incorporated in the general orders. The Northern Territory police procedures more than comply with the APMC Summary of Practice and Procedures.

Aboriginal people comprise some 22% of the Territory's population. Of persons taken into protective custody, some 86% are Aboriginal and Aboriginal people are similarly over-represented in the prison system. Great social disruption exists in Aboriginal communities and excessive alcohol consumption is an obvious and major symptom. Cross-cultural training of police officers and enhanced roles of police aides are ways in which the Territory is attempting to deal with these problems. The Aboriginal Community Justice Program and the Groote Eylandt Task Force are examples of projects which attempt to get to the bases of social problems. The Northern Territory has decriminalised public drunkenness and has mounted diversionary programs such as community service orders and the juvenile wilderness camps. No one pretends that no problems exist in the Northern Territory. There is much to be done to alleviate social disadvantages affecting Aboriginal communities and what is required is programs that address fundamental problems. We are well down the road with such programs.

Rather than extend this answer for a lengthy period, I advise that I am quite prepared to provide members with details of the number of detentions and the number of deaths in police custody or prisons since 1980. I can advise that the numbers are extremely small. It would be educational for all members of this Assembly to look at the statistics which show the exceptional rarity of incidents, and also to understand the procedures which are adopted following any such deaths through the processes of coronial inquiries which thoroughly examine all the circumstances. I might say that there has never been any suggestion in the Northern Territory of anything other than misadventure or suicide in respect of any of the deaths in custody which have occurred here and there is no reason for the Northern Territory to do anything other than participate fully in this inquiry. We have nothing to hide. In fact, we have a very good and proud record in this area.

Block H Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Will he table the Valuer-General's valuation of Block H at Finnis River?

ANSWER:

No.

Offshore Oil Exploration

Mr REED to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he provide information on the number, size and the previous level of exploration activity of the offshore petroleum exploration areas that were announced recently?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can certainly advise the member for Katherine on the developments that have been occurring offshore in recent months. The answer is that a second major drilling rig, the Sedco 708, which is to operate in the Jabiru Challis fields about 650 km west of Darwin, has taken up a position beside the Jabiru Venture. In fact, the Jabiru 6 well, which it will drill, is within 1 km of the Jabiru Venture, the BHP Petroleum's tanker, which is producing 30 000 barrels of oil a day at the moment.

It is interesting to realise that the last shipment of Jabiru oil went to Texas, the great oil-producing state in the United States of America. The Jabiru field is supplying Australian crude to Texas and that is a significant development. The oil from the Jabiru and Challis fields is much in demand around the world.

The Jabiru Venture is currently producing 30 000 barrels a day and it is expected that the Challis well, which is expected to be brought into production this financial year, will produce an additional 24 000 barrels a day, bringing our total for this year to the vicinity of 60 000 barrels of oil a day. BHP Petroleum now employs 100 people in Darwin, and the support service industries employ 3 times that number. BHP Petroleum's operating costs are about $440 000 a day and, this financial year, BHP will spend approximately 50% of its total exploration budget in the Timor Sea. The BHP company has now appointed a senior executive, Mr Bob Boyson, to head the Timor Sea project. His sole responsibility will be the development of that field which is now regarded as one of the most highly prospective hydrocarbon areas in Australia today.

The drilling of the Jabiru 5 and 6 wells is expected to add another 30 000 barrels per day. That will bring the value of the Northern Territory's production of oil and gas, which 2 years ago was $25m, to about $254m. The money spent on exploration and production in 1986 reached a record of $102m which trebled the amount spent in the previous year.

In December, the federal government will release another 4 blocks from the Bonaparte Gulf through to the Arafura Sea, including the areas surrounding Melville Island. If we strike a considerable oilfield in that area or even if we can repeat the success that is now occurring with the Jabiru and Challis fields, that would make the Territory a major oil and gas producing area in Australia today. In a recent seminar, the head of the giant Santos Ltd, oil and gas producers from South Australia, said that the total life of the Northern Territory's gas supply production on current usage would be 460 years compared with 20 years for South Australian production. That gives some idea of what the Northern Territory is capable of achieving with its known gas supplies.

Seismic work is being carried out there. Honourable members may be aware of the Lombardo, the seismic ship that has been serviced out of Darwin. Some 11 000 km of seismic survey has been carried out by various ships in that area. The Magnificent Crete is the most up-to-date seismic vessel in Australia today. It has the latest Texas instruments on board. We believe that the activity will increase in the next 12 months and it is hoped that Darwin in particular will become a major servicing area for this fantastic industry.

Block H Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I have a supplementary question. Has a valuation of Block H at Finnis River been carried out by the Valuer-General?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, might I remind the member for MacDonnell that this has been debated previously, and a full explanation was given to this House by the member for Casuarina during the last sittings. What the member for MacDonnell is failing to do is be more specific as to the information he requires. If he is taking the issue 1 step further, I would like to know whether he has the gumption to step outside this House and say what he said last time when he virtually accused - he did not virtually accuse, but he did suggest - that the member for Casuarina was complicit in graft with his dealings as the former Minister for Lands with this particular transaction.

I am not prepared to give the member for MacDonnell any more time over the issue simply because he has made an outrageous accusation in this House, without any substantiation. I am well aware of all the pertinent details concerning Finnis River Block H. They are certainly above board and I am quite prepared to tell honourable members that the block was sold subsequently, in February this year, and there has been no expenditure of government or taxpayer's money.

'Towards the 90s'

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

The government is looking at changing its direction in respect of certain aspects of education. Following the release of the document 'Towards the 90s', which is now seen as a discussion document, will he be making a statement on that particular document to enable full debate to take place in this Assembly?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as the member for Port Darwin pointed out, a discussion document was released in June this year setting out scenarios for future directions for education in the Northern Territory. In the foreword to that statement, it is indicated that it comprises a series of discussion papers, that the matters in it will be canvassed and that nothing will occur until 1989.

Members interjecting.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I think that the comments from members of the opposition are indicative of their general lack of interest in knowing anything. They tend to push a line which has no relevance to the facts and, when the facts are produced, they take no notice of them. Their ignorance is one of the reasons why only 6 of them are on the other side of the House.

As I was saying, this particular document has generated a great deal of interest in the community. I have visited many schools. One of the main problems I have encountered concerning this matter is to get people to read the document instead of relying on a precis of the document put out by the Teachers Federation which bears no resemblance to the document itself. However, I am getting advice from the Education Advisory Council and a second document will be produced as a result of all of the comments about and contributions on the initial discussion document. The second document will go into a great deal of detail. It will contain all the pros and cons and will take us much closer to where we are going than did this initial discussion document.

Mr Speaker, in order to clear up many of the misconceptions and the false information and to educate the members opposite as to what the philosophies behind the document are, I will make a statement on this matter in the Assembly next week.

Water for Soapy Bore Community

Is he aware of the situation at the Soapy Bore Community on Utopia Station? In the 1985-86 financial year, sufficient funds to upgrade the water supply were provided to the Department of Transport and Works. Due to a change in the then Department of Community Development's policy of removing responsibility from the Department of Transport and Works and engaging outside consultants, the funds were dissipated to the extent that the simple windmill, tank and water reticulation required still has not been completed and, even now, the new school in the area does not have any water.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the full details. I thought that we had discussed the issue of Soapy Bore in the Assembly. In 1986-87, there was an accelerated water-drilling program. We entered into an arrangement with the federal government to place many more facilities, more water and considerably more effort into drilling in that particular area in the member for Stuart's electorate as well as a number of other rural areas. The problem was, of course, that the federal government withdrew a large part of the money for that accelerated water-drilling program, as I remember it, being then the Minister for Community Development and responsible. I had many discussions with the then Minister for Aboriginal Affairs, Mr Holding, on this particular issue. We had it taken from us. It was the typical federal government gift; it was given to us with one hand and taken from us with the other.

However, I will obtain the details on that for the honourable member and I will provide him with a briefing on the history of what has happened at Soapy Bore and the efforts that have been made. I do not have a briefing on the community with me at present, but I will endeavour to obtain that information for the member for Stuart and provide it to him.

Private Telecommunications Network

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

As minister responsible for communications, what is the current situation with regard to Telecom's offer made earlier this year to provide a private telecommunications network to the Northern Territory government?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members may recall that, in September 1986, the government invited expressions of interest for the supply, installation, commissioning and maintenance of a private network to service all government facilities in the Territory with basic voice and data services. A steering committee was established in December 1986 to consider the most interesting proposals received, including a number of options from Telecom Australia. During the early months of 1987, the steering committee met with Telecom representatives and other parties to discuss their various proposals. In general, the Telecom offers lacked the clarity and detail presented by other parties. Nevertheless, on the face of it, Telecom appeared to have the lowest price, although it was recognised by the government that the detail of its proposal needed clarification to ascertain its full extent.

That was the situation when, in March of this year, the Chief Minister announced his decision to enter into detailed negotiations with Telecom. It was the government's intention to enter into a contract subject to its being satisfied that savings on its telecommunications expenditure could be maximised. The Territory government was assisted during those negotiations by an international telecommunications expert, Dr Alex Hill, who was the chief official responsible for setting up the Alaskan government's private network

10 years ago. Dr Hill provided expert technical advice and his probing questions revealed that Telecom's original proposal did not include a number of aspects required by the government as stated in its invitation documentation and, as a result, Telecom's price went up substantially. In addition, its offer no longer embraced the level of savings expected by the government. Consequently, the government suspended negotiations with Telecom pending resolution of a number of issues outstanding.

At about the same time, however, the previous federal Minister for Communications foreshadowed a number of regulatory changes which are now being mooted within the wider debate on privatisation and deregulation, including Telecom. In May this year, the federal Treasurer delivered his mini-budget which put increasing pressure on all governments to reduce expenditure. More particularly, it required Telecom to pay certain customs duties and sales taxes for the first time. Subsequently, Telecom announced price increases of up to 30% for some products and services.

All of these factors have significant implications for the Territory government's telecommunications plans. As a result, the government decided to review its plans and commissioned the Sydney telecommunications consultants, Amos, Aked, Swift Pty Ltd, to prepare a 5-year to 10-year strategy plan. As part of the consultants' brief, the Telecom offer was again analysed. The consultants have recommended to the government that the Telecom offer be rejected because it would cost the government considerably more to accept the offer than to take the services at standard prices. In financial terms, the Telecom offer is now unattractive, due in part to Telecom's increased tariffs and charges, but also because Telecom's offer was based on the level of telephone usage which the consultants estimate to be up to 10 times greater than the government's requirements.

I advise honourable members that the government will not be proceeding with the Telecom offer. Instead, the government is currently considering a number of key measures which will achieve recurrent savings in the order of $1m per year on the current telephone expenditure, beginning in 1988-89. The strategy plan will go to Cabinet for endorsement in the near future and will improve government management and control over its current telecommunications resources as well as greatly improving the delivery of services to the public through more efficient administration. I propose to inform the Assembly of progress of this important project during the course of the next sittings.

Video on Alice Springs Recreation Lake

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Why did he veto my request to view the Snowy Mountains Authority video on the proposed Alice Springs Telegraph Station lake even though the video has been shown to the public on several occasions over the last few years?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the full details of why I actually vetoed the honourable member's right to view the video. However, there must have been a very good reason why I did that. I will discuss it with the honourable member during the course of these sittings.

Bagot Road Pedestrian Traffic Study

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has the study into pedestrian traffic across Bagot Road near Nightcliff Hotel been completed and, if so, what action does the government intend to undertake to resolve the problems in that area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this matter has been raised by a number of people including the member for Nightcliff. The large number of motor vehicle accidents involving pedestrians occurring on that section of Bagot Road has been of concern to the government. Since 1984, there have been 3 fatalities and 26 people have been injured whilst crossing Bagot Road. 24 of those accidents occurred at night. Surveys have been undertaken since 1986 to try to identify the specific factors involved in those accidents. In 1986, it was decided that we should upgrade the lighting in that area in an endeavour to improve pedestrian safety. However, accidents have continued to occur. Recently, the Road Safety Council, in association with the Department of Transport and Works and others, has undertaken some studies to try to identify any trends in pedestrian activity. Unfortunately, people choose to cross that particular section of road in a multitude of manners and at a multitude of locations.

Mention has been made of sobriety. It is extremely concerning that 13 of the 29 victims of fatal accidents had blood-alcohol readings of between 0.156% and 0.291%, an extremely high level, while the remainder varied up to 0.0339%. One really has to stretch one's imagination to understand how people can walk at all in that state. Of the 29 drivers involved in those accidents, only one indicated a blood-alcohol level over the legal limit. The alcohol-related nature of these accidents and the element of unpredictability that entails does not allow for an easy technical solution to the problem. It is obviously more a social problem than one of traffic management.

A number of options have been looked at in terms of improved safety in that area. They include the possibility of an overpass, which would be of great benefit to the pensioners who live in flats in Coconut Grove and wish to cross to the shopping centre or to catch the bus on Bagot Road. Unfortunately, I believe that a pedestrian overpass would not be of any realistic benefit to the patrons of the Nightcliff Hotel who comprise the majority of people involved in accidents in that area. Other measures under consideration include controlled traffic lights, and pedestrian crossings with appropriate barrier fencing and signs warning motorists of the danger, particularly at night. Something that might be considered is hotel management ensuring that patrons are not allowed to become excessively drunk. Many of the patrons of the hotel cross the road to obtain take-away food and perhaps there could be a service which delivers food to the hotel.

The most dangerous period is immediately after the hotel's closing time. The great majority of people involved in accidents reside in the Bagot area, and maybe there is potential for a pick-up bus or something like that. That need could be even greater now that further housing is being provided in Kulaluk, which will result in people crossing Dick Ward Drive as well. The lighting in Dick Ward Drive is up to the appropriate standards but it may need to be upgraded. I would be interested to talk to members of the Aboriginal community and to local pensioners to see how we might be able to look after people crossing those roads.

The study has not been finalised but we are looking at some preliminary measures, possibly signage. I do not want to pre-empt the Treasurer's comments but I understand there is some provision in the budget for measures to alleviate this very serious problem.

Kings Canyon Development

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TOURISM

What is the current status of the proposed Kings Canyon development?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, whilst in Melbourne recently, I had the opportunity to speak to one of the main proponents of the proposed Kings Canyon Wilderness Resort and I am pleased to advise the Assembly that it is proceeding. We are looking for an opening date next year, and legal arrangements for the leasing and title of the land are all in hand. Government departments are cooperating. Certain roads and water supplies, which are an important element of the resort development, need to be in place at an early stage. I intend to go into more detail about these matters in later discussions concerning the budget.

For the member for MacDonnell's benefit, I might also mention that, last week, I travelled to remote locations in the south of the Territory to look at various developments including the Molly Clark project on the old Andado Station, New Crown, the Dalhousie Hot Springs in South Australia, Victory Downs, Curtin Springs, Kulgera and Eridunda. It is important to note that the increase in traffic through that remote part of the Northern Territory during the last 6 months has been nothing short of staggering, and it is encouraging to note that the pastoral operators are developing facilities to meet that demand. That augurs well for the future of the Kings Canyon resort, because we are all well aware of the increased traffic whereby, in 1 month, we had a 250% increase in the visitation at the Yulara Resort over the same month in the previous year. To say that facilities were stretched a little would be an understatement. It is very important not only that Kings Canyon comes on-stream as soon as possible but that the people who offer services in the remote parts of the Territory are encouraged to do so. I think that will go hand-in-hand with the Kings Canyon resort, and I assure the House that I am doing everything I possibly can to ensure that it comes on-stream at the earliest possible date.

Groote Eylandt Task Force Coordinator

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

What progress has been made on Groote Eylandt following the appointment of the Task Force Coordinator?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I was very pleased when the Task Force Coordinator gave me a report yesterday. While I cannot go into a great deal of detail, obviously he is doing a magnificent job with the various communities and the people on Groote Eylandt in trying to put in place various projects, particularly in respect of petrol sniffing, and developing submissions that he will be making to other ministers. For example, he hopes for a combination of resources in the educational area with recreational facilities on Groote Eylandt to try to provide some way for the young people there to address their energies towards activities other than wrongdoing and petrol sniffing.

Without going into too much detail, I am very pleased indeed to offer the honourable member a briefing on the discussions I had yesterday. However, suffice it to say that I am thrilled with the progress that the gentleman is making over there, and the attitude of the various communities over there is to be applauded. I think it will be an extremely successful task force.

Dairy Levy

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

After his recent discussions with Fitzgeralds and Rowlands, the 2 important dairy owners in the Top End, what does he intend to do to protect their interests with regard to recent contentious developments between the states of Victoria and New South Wales over the proposed dairy levy which, if implemented, will grossly disadvantage Rowlands and Fitzgeralds?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not so sure that the statement the honourable member concluded with is correct.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: It will disadvantage them!

Mr PERRON: It may disadvantage them but whether it will disadvantage them further than they are disadvantaged already is another question.

I have indicated to honourable members before the Northern Territory government's attitude towards the milk levy which has been imposed under what is called 'the Kerin Plan' around Australia which, in effect, requires all consumers of milk in Australia to pay a subsidy which goes towards assisting manufacturing-grade milk to compete on international markets. The bottom line is that milk consumers are being required to support a massive over-capacity in the Australian dairy industry, particularly in Victoria. As honourable members who have watched the situation of late will be aware, a temporary truce has been reached in the war that has developed between milk marketers in Victoria and a particular supermarket chain in New South Wales. That will only last a matter of weeks. The truce was arrived at by the supermarket chain in New South Wales agreeing not to pursue legal action against milk suppliers in Victoria for breach of contract.

The milk levy relies on a gentlemen's agreement between states that they will not delve into each others areas as far as marketing milk is concerned, otherwise the milk levy could collapse. Recently, the New South Wales government has served on the federal minister, under federal legislation, a notice which requires the federal government to take a vote among all states as to whether the milk levy system should remain or not. On 2 October, the Australian Agricultural Council - that is, the Ministers for Primary Production from throughout Australia - will meet in Canberra to vote on the suspension of the levy. To date, the Northern Territory government has made its views strongly known at 2 previous meetings which I attended. It was made clear that we do not support the levy at all and that we believe it is an unfair imposition on Australian milk consumers. By and large, the states certainly do not support that line and see themselves facing some very severe political problems, particularly in New South Wales, Queensland and Western Australia, which states see a significant portion of their dairy industry being run out of business if the dairy levy system collapses. Most of the milk consumed in Australia will be produced in Victoria where, quite clearly, it can be produced more cheaply than elsewhere. I do not know the full reason for that.

The Territory government has obtained an agreement from the federal minister that the Australian Government Solicitor will not persist with his threats of prosecution of the 2 Northern Territory dairies for non-payment of the levy in the Northern Territory until such time as this whole matter has evolved a little further. However, I point out to honourable members, as I have done to both the dairies in the Northern Territory, that the milk levy that has been imposed upon them is a legal requirement which I can do nothing about. The fact that they have not paid it means that they have a legal debt outstanding to the Australian government. The dairies are aware of that situation in persisting in their individual decisions not to pay the levy.

On 2 October, when this matter is brought to a head in Canberra, we will see what the next stage of the saga will be. I have advised both Northern Territory dairies that, if the milk levy system collapses completely in Australia, there is a possibility of milk flowing to the Northern Territory from interstate in increasing quantities in an attempt to erode their markets. Both of those dairies are prepared to accept the challenge of interstate competition. I do not think there will be any concerted effort by interstate suppliers to market in the Northern Territory because the market here is very small. However, interstate people who are struggling to stay in business will be seeking to market milk outside their borders. It could be an interesting time.

Bradshaw Terrace Bus Stop

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Mr Speaker, my question relates to the council's decision to remove the bus stops in Bradshaw Terrace. I have a petition but, unfortunately, it does not conform with the requirement of standing orders. It has been signed by 1258 people whose signatures were collected within 16 hours of an operating day at Casuarina. Is the Minister for Transport able to provide this House with information regarding the recent discussions he has had with the Darwin City Council regarding its decision to close the Bradshaw Terrace operation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Casuarina for his interest in road safety and for bringing this matter to my attention recently, particularly the council's proposal to do away with bus stops in Bradshaw Terrace. This has been a problem for some 2 years. It does not relate simply to the bus stops but also to the volume of traffic in Linton Street outside the Casuarina Shopping Centre where there is a wide median strip but no pedestrian crossing and where a large number of people travel between the banks, the post office and the Casuarina Shopping Centre itself.

That particular section of road is heavily used, not only by pedestrians but by motor vehicles, and it is also on a bus route. At the request of the shopping centre and bus passengers, the department approached the council about putting in bus stops to allow shoppers direct access into and out of the shopping centre.

There is significant danger on that section of road and, whilst one might be able to argue that bus stops create added dangers, I have yet to be convinced that any dramatic change will come about through the removal of the bus stops. My concern is that, without consultation and proper inquiry, the council sought to resolve the problem by off-handedly removing the bus stops, a measure which has caused great concern to shoppers, particularly the elderly and those who are not capable of carrying their parcels long distances. That concern is reflected in the petition which attracted so many signatures in a very short time.

For some time, the Department of Transport and Works has been negotiating with the council concerning a proper and appropriate study. Early this year, departmental officers put to the Casuarina centre management and the council a proposal for a proper study to identify options for solutions to the problem. Many potential solutions have been put forward by officers of the department and the general public. These include malls, closing the exits from the shopping centre, additional lanes for buses and so on. The council decided recently that the tops would be removed on 1 October. The department has again advised the council of its desire to have a proper study carried out and that will now proceed, funded by the department and centre management, regardless of council's earlier indication that it would not participate. Meanwhile, all possible options will be the subject of a preliminary report to be completed this coming Friday. That will go to the council in an endeavour to have the council rescind its earlier decision to remove the stops.

It is just not good enough for the council to turn its back on the significant inherent problem that exists on that section of road. Originally, the council intended to put in a pedestrian crossing but has now reneged. I believe that, in the interim, a pedestrian crossing should be installed. Bus drivers will be reminded about the appropriate spots for stopping and I hope that a sensible solution will eventuate.

Effect of Increased Telecom Charges

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

What impact on the Northern Territory will Telecom's increased charges have and will there be any change in the Rural and Remote Areas Program timetable for completion of the Digital Radio Concentrator Service which is so important for outback Territorians?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, despite commentators indicating that the federal budget last night may have contained some reasonable news for Australians, the May economic statement this year, which it is all too easy to forget about, certainly did not contain good news for Australians, particularly Territorians. The economic statement delivered in May imposed on Telecom duties and sales taxes amounting to some $380m which, formerly, Telecom did not have to pay. As a result, Telecom has announced a range of measures, including increased charges for telephone calls and rentals, which will certainly affect Territorians' calls and rentals. As of 1 September, charges for local calls increased by 2¢ to 20¢ and for trunk calls by 11.1% for distances of less than 165 km, and by 5.2% for distances greater than 165 km. Charges for telephone rentals increased on 1 July by $27 per annum or 13% for business services, and by $18 per annum or 15% for non-business services. These increases have been granted on an interim basis subject to examination by the Prices Surveillance Authority which will report its findings to the government by 30 September.

The Prices Surveillance Authority held public hearings in Sydney on 14 to 17 July this year. At present, Telecom plans to increase charges for installation of rural telephone services, and this relates directly to the honourable member's question and to outback Territorians. The cost of installation of rural telephones will rise from $1390 to $6240 and new telephone connections everywhere will have very long installation lead times.

In addition, Telecom has announced severe cuts to its expenditure and has targeted the Rural and Remote Areas Program for special attention. The extension of basic telephone services to rural and remote areas will be deferred indefinitely. Honourable members may recall that there was a target date - I think it was 1990 - when Telecom undertook to have telephones available to all Australians. That target date has now been removed and there is no replacement target date. These areas are not subject to decisions by the Prices Surveillance Authority. However, the Territory government emphasised the impact of these measures on remote area residents in its written submission to the authority's inquiry into Telecom's increased charges a month or so ago. In principle, the Territory government supports the general strategy to move towards a set of economically-efficient charges where prices follow costs but it is unrealistic to eliminate cross-subsidisation for rural and remote areas within the Australian telecommunications system. In fact, the Telecommunications Act of 1975 specifically directs Telecom to give particular attention to the special needs of people who reside or carry on business outside the cities. Since 1975, successive governments have endorsed cross-subsidisation to remote areas in Australia. It is contradictory to its legislative duty for Telecom to increase the economic burden on rural and remote area residents on the basis of requiring the revenue to cross-subsidise the very same users that they are penalising.

The Territory government has proposed 2 solutions to longstanding problems of remote area communications in the Northern Territory. First, where Telecom is required, for reasons of government policy, to depart from its user-pays pricing philosophy, these requirements should be made explicit and public by identifying perhaps 3 types of pricing zones: a contributing zone, a neutral zone and the subsidised zone. Secondly, the time is now long overdue for both Telecom and AUSSAT to cooperate to provide basic telephone services to remote areas as soon as possible. Telecom ought to set aside its absolute refusal to consider dealing with anyone in the telecommunications business other than itself.

I have written to the new Minister for Transport and Communications, Senator Gareth Evans, seeking his views on these issues and imploring him to take some interest in the policies and attitudes of Telecom because, despite its being a large and supposedly-independent statutory authority, it is still responsible to the Australian people through the Australian government. I hope that Gareth Evans will take rather more interest in the activities of this authority.

Increase in Water Charges

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is the NT News correct in saying that the 20% increase in water charges announced by him yesterday will be backdated to 1 July 1987?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Northern Territory News has been consistently wrong of late. Its 'Shock Horror Budget' headline was wrong and so was its report that increased water charges would be backdated to 1 July 1987. The NT News was also wrong about housing rents going up by $900 and about the removal of what it called the '3-dunny system' - the tax on extra pedestals. We are reviewing that matter but, at this stage, only the domestic pedestal tax has been removed. With its recent high degree of consistency, the NT News has it wrong again.

Review of Government Regulations

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

What steps is the government taking to meet its undertaking to reduce the amount of red tape affecting companies and individuals?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members will be aware that my government has devoted concentrated attention towards alleviating the problems, common throughout Australia, of excessive regulation and unnecessary administrative procedures which have the effect of slowing down and frustrating enterprise in the community. This is not an issue for the Northern Territory alone. In general, the Northern Territory's regulatory and administrative procedures are considerably more streamlined than those of the rest of Australia. Nonetheless, quite obviously there are significant areas where we can make substantial improvement in the way in which we go about the process of conducting government and the effect that government can have on the day-to-day lives of people.

For many years, there has been an outcry about red tape and regulations, and far too often people talk about the subject but do little or nothing about it. My government has set a clear policy of directing attention towards the concept of self-regulation rather than regulation. That means that we adopt the basic viewpoint that the average citizen is quite prepared to, and will, abide by the rules and regulations and the laws of the land. Only a very small minority seeks to break the law or circumvent the rules and regulations. However, traditionally, governments have adopted the attitude of devoting their entire structure to trying to stop those people who try to circumvent the laws. The effect is that the 90% or 95% of people who just want to get on with their lives are continually frustrated and angered and their lives are interfered with. That occurs because governments adopt an attitude of catch the crook, first, foremost and last, and end up putting so many rules, regulations and checks and balances into the system that it takes forever to work through even some very simple procedures.

My government believes that, if the rules are clear, people will generally abide by them. However, penalties need to apply where a minority breaks the rules and these penalties should constitute a real economic disincentive for rule-breaking. This will be a more effective strategy than devoting all our energies to setting up checks and balances to prevent the possibility of a person breaking the rules. That is the fundamental issue when one talks about self-regulation.

This government is taking action, not just talking. In February this year, we established a government committee comprising the Secretaries of the Departments of the Chief Minister, Industries and Development, Law and Treasury to initiate action to review comprehensively regulatory activities and administrative procedures in the Northern Territory, particularly those that affect business. Cabinet has recently approved a plan proposed by that Regulatory Review Committee, and this will identify priority targets for regulatory reform, implement a systematic review of all regulations and all administrative procedures throughout government and introduce a revised procedure for any new regulations.

The first phase is to identify priority targets for reform, and that is now under way. A series of advertisements has been running in all Northern Territory newspapers since mid-August, inviting the public and interested organisations to put forward submissions on those regulatory activities and administrative procedures which are perceived as unnecessary or in need of reform. The closing date for submissions is 31 October. Unfortunately, so far the public response has been disappointing to say the least with only 2 written submissions having been received. I might say, however, that my office is now receiving correspondence raising individual issues which people describe as 'bureaucracy gone mad' on undue administrative and regulative procedures, and I am referring these to the review committee. There is a follow-up mechanism back through myself and Cabinet to ensure there is continuous action on this issue.

I urge everybody in the community, including individuals, businesses and organisations, to take this process seriously and, rather than merely complaining through press releases or newspaper articles or over a beer in the hotel, to document their concerns about red tape and bureaucracy. Now is their opportunity to bring those matters forward so they can be dealt with in a consistent and responsible manner. At this stage, it is too early to draw any conclusions, but it may be that those interested are taking their time and there may be a number of well-thought-out and carefully-considered submissions in the pipeline. I certainly hope so, Mr Speaker.

Concurrent with this public consultation phase, the Department of Industries and Development is liaising with industry and commerce to obtain input. Government departments and authorities have been asked to identify areas considered in need of priority attention, and to report to the Regulatory Review Committee this week on progress already achieved in reviewing regulations and administrative procedures. While identification of priority targets will lead to the reform of major impediments, clearly it will make little impression on the larger, less controversial body of regulations and administrative procedures which may well benefit from some revision or streamlining. Therefore, departments and authorities have been instructed to review systematically all regulations and administrative procedures for which they are responsible, within a specific time frame. By 30 June 1988, all regulations introduced on or prior to 31 December 1982 are to have been reviewed. By 30 June 1989, all relevant administrative procedures and regulations introduced on or prior to 31 December 1987 are to have been reviewed. Thus, a review of each and every existing NT government regulation and all relevant administrative procedures will have been achieved in a little under 2 years.

In the course of its deliberations and in devising a program of action, Cabinet considered enforcing the review by means of an automatic regulation revocation program put into effect by some set legislation. It was felt that, at this time, such a course of action would be an overkill. However, should the review not proceed as efficiently and effectively as the government expects, a mandatory review by means of an automatic regulation revocation program may well be implemented. It is, of course, far easier to prevent unnecessary regulations than to change them subsequently. Therefore, steps have been taken to strengthen the process within government with the assessment of new or significantly amended regulations.

Since mid-August, all draft regulations have been required to be submitted to the Regulatory Review Committee and to be brought to the attention of those directly affected, with the opportunity for comment prior to the matter proceeding to Cabinet. In addition, from 31 December this year, the non-inclusion of a sunset clause in new regulatory proposals will have to be justified. The basic intention is that there will be a sunset clause in every regulation unless a clear and definitive case can be put forward as to why a sunset clause should not be included.

The procedures I have outlined give a very clear indication of the determination of this government to address the serious issues raised by community debate on the issue of red tape and unnecessary regulation and to put teeth into our policy of deregulation. As far as is reasonably possible, we want to get the government off peoples' backs so they can get on with their lives.

Increase in Water Charges

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

As he has denied categorically that the 20% increase in water charges will be backdated to 1 July, from which date will these increased charges apply?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, what the Leader of the Opposition is getting at, and it is quite foreign to him, is that the Hatton government is against retrospective legislation, charges and costs, unlike the Labor Party which has demonstrated on many occasions that it is quite within the realms of morality to backdate bills etc. I remind honourable members of the special negative grant which we received - the $14m that was taken from us. That was money given to us in good faith and spent in good faith, but later the Commonwealth government came along - his Canberra-based colleagues - and said: 'Whoops, sorry, we are going to take that back'. That is not the policy of this government. I can inform honourable members that, as I understand it, a special meeting of the Executive Council has been set for this Thursday at which regulations will be changed to allow the increased charges in water and sewerage rates.

Increase in Water Charges

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Will he provide this Assembly with the date from which the increased water and sewerage charges will be applied?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition would be aware that I cannot predict what the Administrator of the Northern Territory will do. That matter will be discussed by the Executive Council tomorrow afternoon. However, I would hope that all current bills will be based on the same rates as they have been in the past, and that all new water bills due and payable will reflect the new charges. However, I am not prepared to predict what His Honour will do tomorrow at the Executive Council meeting.

Mr Smith: That means backdated, doesn't it?

Mr COULTER: It does not mean backdated.

Mr Speaker, it is very difficult for me to discuss issues with the Leader of the Opposition because he simply does not understand or he will not listen. He knows the rules and he knows what has to happen. He knows the procedures. Perhaps he has not had the opportunity to discuss protocol and possibly Mr Clerk may be able to run some sort of course for him to give him some idea of how government operates in the Northern Territory. I do not think it would make much difference, and Mr Clerk probably has too much common sense to embark on a campaign which would be so futile.

Food Retailed at Outdoor Markets

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Reports in the press have suggested an inadequate standard of control over the preparation and sale of food at outdoor markets in the Darwin area. Has he received complaints at his office regarding this issue, and what standards do apply?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this has been a topical subject of recent times and I thank the honourable member for his question. The food stalls at flea markets have been perceived by some traders as a health hazard, and I stress the word 'traders'. Nearly all the letters about all the markets are from people who own, have an interest in, or are connected with, permanent food premises in the Darwin Mall. We have had no complaints from any other areas. It appears that these people are endeavouring to twist what is a commercial grievance into a perceived health hazard.

Health standards are set for the stalls. These are enforced through regular health inspections, and I stress that. Additionally, each stallholder is required to undertake instruction on food handling and to reach a satisfactory standard prior to the issue of any permits whatsoever. Food shops come under a far more stringent set of regulations because of their permanent nature and because they function continually and use the same facilities day in and day out. However, food stalls open for 4 hours only, and are assembled immediately prior to their period of operation on each occasion. Generally, the perceived health hazards complained about have little or no foundation.

The Health Surveyors have the resources to continue to carry out our present standards of health maintenance which include a regular health inspection of all markets on a bi-weekly or tri-weekly basis. There is supervision and enforcement of the minimum health standards laid down by my office. Each stallholder is now required to undergo a period of instruction in food handling, food hygiene and the standards required before being issued with a permit. There is no evidence that the temporary food stalls are causing or are likely to cause an outbreak of intestinal disease. We have had only 1 complaint of suspected food poisoning from any of the markets and that was at Rapid Creek. Bacteriological analysis of the food, which was soup, by the Northern Territory water laboratories showed a negative result.

To date, the Health Surveyors have maintained the required standard. As this supervision entails extensive after-hours duty, the overlooking of additional food stalls cannot be undertaken within present staffing levels. Health standards at the sunset markets at Mindil Beach are difficult to maintain because of the market's rapid growth. There are now 70 food stalls at this venue. Rapid Creek and Parap both average around 35 stalls and the Darwin Mall only 8 to 10. Because of the small number of stalls in the mall, we have now reduced our inspections to tri-weekly. Of course, the power to issue permits for food stalls lies with the Chief Medical Officer.

The main complaint about these food stalls comes from the restauranteurs in the inner city area. Their complaint is that we are taking business away from them by allowing these food stalls to operate. The permits to operate, in the first instance, are given by the Darwin City Council. The health target that these people are homing in on is, I suggest, a red herring used to cloak the underlying complaint that they have. However, taking their complaint on board, I do not believe there is any foundation for it whatsoever. At a licensed restaurant, people would wine and dine over a period of a few hours and the bill would be in the vicinity of $30 to $40 per head. With the markets, mum, dad and the kids go down to Mindil Beach and spend an extremely pleasant night out with some 3000 or even up to 5000 other people, including tourists, and the total cost for their food may not even approach $20. I fully support these flea markets. I believe they are a great attraction in the City of Darwin. The mere fact that so many thousands of people attend them on a weekly basis underlines their popularity.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Water for Soapy Bore Community

Mr COULTER (Treasurer)(by leave): Mr Speaker, yesterday the member for Stuart asked a question in relation to Soapy Bore. Honourable members will be aware that the member for Stuart castigated the government and said that we had spent money on hiring consultants and that there was no activity in the area whatsoever ...

Mr Ede: Read Hansard.

Mr COULTER: You read Hansard. If I had my copy here, I would read it to confirm exactly what you did say.

Mr Speaker, I said that I would answer his question in the course of these sittings. I will take the opportunity now to answer the very serious accusations made by the member for Stuart yesterday in an attempt to identify to the people of the Northern Territory that, not only does he not know anything about running electoral campaigns, he does not know too much about his own electorate either.

Mr Smith: The bloke next door to you does not know too much about running electoral campaigns either!

Mr COULTER: There is an interjection, Mr Speaker, about the campaign. Poor old Maggie Hickey ran an operation out of her garage, funded it by a couple of cake stalls and came within 19 votes of beating the member for Barkly. When she got the full might of the ALP behind her ...

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Standing orders make it clear that answers should be relevant to the questions. The relevance of election campaigns to the predicament of the people at Soapy Bore escapes me. I suggest that you ask the minister to confine his reply to the question.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, if honourable members opposite wish to interject, surely they should give the courtesy of listening to the relevant answer. The words of the Treasurer were very interesting because he was outlining a situation in the Barkly electorate that is very embarrassing to the ALP members opposite. If they interject, they should expect an answer.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr COULTER: As I was saying, poor old Maggie Hickey, with 2 bob to her name, mounted a campaign and came within 19 votes of her beating the member for Barkly. What happens? In comes the might of the ALP. No less a man than the Deputy Leader himself gets right behind this woman. The ALP throws in all its big guns, its staff and a huge electoral campaign is mounted.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Apart from the extraordinarily aggressive tones of the Treasurer, I believe that standing orders dictate that an answer must be relevant to the question. The Deputy Leader of the Opposition asked for specific information about 4 problems in his electorate that pertain directly to one of the fundamentals of life there. If the Treasurer wishes to debate anything beyond that, he is most welcome to at the appropriate time. Mr Speaker, I would ask you to rule that answers must be relevant to the questions and that the Barkly by-election is not relevant to the question of water supplies at Soapy Bore. I draw your attention to standing order 113: 'An answer shall be relevant to the question'. Question time is brief enough as it is without it being wasted on diatribes such as the one we are hearing from the Treasurer.

Mr TUXWORTH: A point of order, Mr Speaker!

Mr SPEAKER: Is the member for Barkly speaking to the point of order raised by the member for MacDonnell?

Mr TUXWORTH: Yes, Mr Speaker. Soapy Bore used to be in the Barkly electorate.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. In the first instance, the minister was responding to interjections. Whilst there is no point of order, I would suggest that the minister restrict his comments to the question.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I appreciate the ALP's embarrassment over this issue and I will not continue the matter any further because the member for Stuart is in more trouble than the early settlers as a result of his efforts on that particular issue. The people at Soapy Bore are in considerable trouble as well, because they have the member for Stuart as their representative and he does not know what is going on. He castigated the government, suggesting that we had spent the money allocated on consultants and had done no work whatsoever in the area.

I interjected several times about Soapy Bore. I asked why it was called Soapy Bore? The member for Stuart did not elaborate on that; he did not talk about it much at all. The member for Barkly would know very well what Soapy Bore was, how it was developed and how the community came to live there. It goes back to 1962, when it was a very low-yield bore on a cattle station with a flow of 0.2 litres per second. People decided to settle there because it was a water source. It was a very poor water source but it was water just the same. This is a common problem in the member for Stuart's electorate. I have spoken on many occasions about the outstation movement and water. Traditionally, Aboriginal people lived where there were sources of water. They know where the water is and where you can live. Some of the areas that ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The minister will resume his seat. The cross-Chamber chatter between the Minister for Health and Community Services and the member for MacDonnell will cease instantly.

Mr COULTER: As I said, it was a very low-yield bore in 1962, but people decided to live around it. During the 1986-87 financial year, the pumping equipment to the bore was upgraded so that the flow increased from 0.2 to 0.5 litres per second. This was a temporary measure pending the provision of a new bore. Funds were provided to drill 2 additional bores in 1986-87, and these were completed in January 1987. Honourable members can read Hansard and reflect on what the member for Stuart said yesterday in this Assembly. Both new bores have a much higher yield than the old bore, having outputs of 3 litres per second and 2 litres per second respectively. In fact, a big effort has been put into finding water in a very difficult area. Perhaps that could not have been done in 1962 because the technology was not available to us then.

The member for Barkly also spoke about Utopia and a number of other places within his electorate where, he said, consultants had done very little work. He actually suggested that all the money had gone to consultants with no money being used for actual works. Hansard will record that he said exactly that.

Mr Speaker, I can tell you that, on Utopia Station, we placed a 120 kL ground-level storage tank with flat switches and upgraded reticulation. The contract was completed on 26 February 1987 at a cost of $97 447. At Utopia outstation, Kurunga Bore, a 49 kL ground-level storage tank was placed. The member for Stuart may have to help me with some of these place names. It is nice to know that he can say the names but it would be even better if he visited the communities and had a look what we have done. There was a 49 kL ground-level storage tank, which included the new pipe work and, at Soakage Bore, a 49 kL ground-level storage tank, including new pipe work. At Soapy Bore, we have increased the pumping capacity of the windmill. The contract for these 3 outstations was awarded and the practical completion date was 2 April 1987, at a cost of $58,400.

At Ngwanalanama, we upgraded the windmill. The work was completed on 5 November 1986. The contractors were Lewis and Partners. The final cost was $8337.30. At Mosquito Bore, a new 22.5 kL tank on a 6-metre stand and some pipe work were completed on 9 March 1987. The contractor was paid $15 000. There were 6 new bores, stand pipes and pipe work connected to rising mains for emergency standby use and future equipping. The work was completed on 9 March 1987, and the contractor was paid $7681. At Mingintirrina, we equipped the bore and constructed a 22.5 kL tank on a 6-metre stand connected to the new clinic and with some other reticulation. The work was completed on 4 August 1987. A total of $34 355 was spent. I would like to see the member for Stuart writing these figures down and recognising the cost ...

Mr Ede: I am waiting for you to tell me about water at Soapy Bore school.

Mr COULTER: ... that all this adds up to in an electorate where, he claims, this government has denied the basic facility of water and the maintenance of proper water levels. Let him add it up and let him remember that is in a very difficult area.

Funding of $25 000 was allocated to Mulga Bore drilling. The work has not been carried out because of the extremely high level of nitrates present in the groundwater in this area. We have argued before with the member for Stuart about potable water and water that would be available for other uses. I had a very interesting discussion with him once about how we might be able to use water which is unfit for human consumption but which could be used for other purposes, including gardening and that type of thing. I have not seen that idea progressed any further. I would like to sit down and talk to the member for Stuart if he is really fair dinkum about supplying facilities in his electorate. I would like to discuss ways in which we may be able to do that because it is an extremely difficult area.

This government has not forgotten the people of his electorate. We spent thousands of dollars there in the 1986-87 period during which he claims that we have neglected it. It is consistent with the diatribe which this side of the House is becoming used to hearing from the member for Stuart. It is totally inaccurate, false and misleading and a discredit to the engineers who try so extremely hard to find that resource, which is so very rare in the middle of the desert, commonly known as water.

Drive-in Block Rezoning

Mr TUXWORTH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

My question relates to the zoning of a block on Peko Road known as the Drive-in Block. Some time ago, he advised townspeople that he would not be acting to rezone the block yet, within 6 weeks, the block has been reviewed again by the Town Planning Board. Could he please advise me and my constituents what circumstances have changed that he saw as necessitating the review of the zoning on that block?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the honourable member for Barkly is quite correct. When the original submission came to me from the Planning Authority, I rejected the instrument. Subsequently, a further application has been made for rezoning that block. I believe that has been considered by the Planning Authority and, at this particular stage, I have received no further advice either recommending or rejecting the latest application for re-zoning. However, when I receive it, I will consider all the details to see if any new evidence or information has been presented, and I will be more than happy to speak with the member for Barkly when I am making a decision on the matter.

Defence Facilities

Mr REED to CHIEF MINISTER

What is the current situation regarding the build-up of defence facilities and personnel in the Top End?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am more than happy to inform members of recent developments in defence matters affecting the Northern Territory. It has been a matter of considerable debate in the Assembly and in the community for the past 12 months. It is of such significance to the Northern Territory that it is important that we seek to keep the community as informed as possible about this.

Honourable members may recall that, in June last year, I made a detailed statement in this Assembly on defence, following the release of the Review of Australian Defence Capabilities, more commonly known as the Dibb Report. In that statement, I welcomed the priority given by the Dibb Report to northern defence and pledged the Northern Territory government's cooperation with the Commonwealth in the implementation of the report's recommendations.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Everybody in this Assembly is interested in the matter of defence. My point of order is that the Chief Minister has not been asked a question. He has been asked to provide information on the state of defence preparedness and developments in the Northern Territory. On that point alone, I would think the matter should be ruled out of order. I would ask the Chief Minister to consider making a statement on this important issue rather than taking up our valuable question time.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The member for Katherine was seeking information and asking a question. I would ask the Chief Minister to keep his reply as brief as possible.

Mr HATTON: I will keep it as brief as reasonably possible, Mr Speaker.

In March this year, the Commonwealth government released a White Paper on defence containing a comprehensive statement of the Commonwealth's defence policy. The centrepiece of that policy is the concept of self-reliance which, in essence, is that Australia must have the military capability to prevent an enemy from attacking us successfully through our sea and air approaches, gaining a foothold in our territory or extracting political concessions from us through the use of military force.

The defence of northern Australia and the northern approaches to Australia is an integral and, indeed, a vital part of that policy. Tangible expressions of the new emphasis on defence policy were given by the announcement of the Defence Minister, Mr Kim Beazley, in March this year that the Second Cavalry Regiment, presently based at Holsworthy in New South Wales, is to be relocated to Darwin by 1992. At the same time, Mr Beazley announced that the Australian Defence Force was to initiate studies of the possible relocation of further army units to the Top End to brigade level strength. I might indicate, Mr Speaker, that that is not a decision that has been taken despite some press comments to the contrary. It is a matter that will be considered after the location of the Second Cavalry Regiment in Darwin.

Relocation of the Second Cavalry Regiment will involve an increase of 367 army personnel in Darwin. Taking into account the relocation of spouses and children of the married personnel, the anticipated overall increase is around 1000 people. The army plans to integrate married quarters in small groups throughout the existing residential areas in Darwin to the maximum extent possible.

Following the release of the White Paper and the announcement concerning the Second Cavalry Regiment, I wrote to Mr Beazley earlier this year welcoming the recognition given in the White Paper to the fundamental importance of northern defence and reaffirming the Northern Territory government's continued cooperation with the Commonwealth in the progressive development of further defence facilities in the Northern Territory. I also proposed the formation of a joint consultative committee, comprised of senior Commonwealth and Northern Territory government officials, to ensure that the planned relocation of the Second Cavalry Regiment proceeds smoothly, and to support the studies to be undertaken on the possible relocation of additional army units.

A similar consultative mechanism has proven highly effective in the development of the RAAF base at Tindal. Indeed, this mechanism has served as a model for similar developments elsewhere in Australia, particularly in north Queensland. During a recent briefing of senior government officials in Darwin, Vice-Admiral Knox, the Vice-Chief of the Defence Forces, and other senior Department of Defence officials were most complimentary about the Tindal arrangements. It came as no surprise that Mr Beazley readily agreed with the proposal to set up the consultative group in Darwin.

I am pleased to report to the Assembly that the committee, chaired by a senior official of the Department of Defence, held its inaugural meeting in Darwin on 15 July. Although the relocation of the Second Cavalry Regiment is still some years away, the regiment is already preparing for its new role. Honourable members may be aware that the regiment recently conducted an exercise, code named 'Dusty Trooper', in the Top End. The exercise was aimed at familiarising the regiment with one of its new areas of operation and to test operating techniques with Norforce and the regiment. I was pleased to be able to visit the regiment last month at Timber Creek and to be briefed by the regiment's Commanding Officer, Lieutenant Colonel Prickett, and by the Commander of the 7th Military District, Colonel Ian Bryant. This was but one of what I expect to be a long line of military exercises in the Top end. Not only will these serve to make this part of the country more secure, they will have a spin-off effect for local businesses as the army seeks to make major local purchases of consumable items, in particular food and fuels and repairs to military vehicles.

In response to an invitation by the Prime Minister to me earlier this year, senior members of the Department of Defence and the defence force gave a briefing in Darwin on 4 September on the Commonwealth's defence policy. The briefing was attended by myself, Cabinet colleagues, Northern Territory representatives in the federal parliament, departmental heads and other Northern Territory government officials. The Leader of the Opposition was invited, but he was unable to attend because he was involved in some activities in the southern parts of the Northern Territory at that particular time.

Mr Bell: He does not have as fast an aeroplane as you.

Mr HATTON: He does, you know.

Mr Speaker, I am pleased with the way the present program for the build-up of defence facilities in the Territory is proceeding. There is a highly cooperative spirit between this government and the Department of Defence and the defence force personnel. My department will continue to monitor and coordinate development of defence matters as they affect the Northern Territory. The further development of defence facilities in the Territory will greatly enhance Australia's defence capabilities and will also make a valuable contribution to the Northern Territory economy through increases in population and opportunities for local businesses to provide defence-related commercial services.

The Northern Territory government will continue to support these developments which are to the benefit of all Territorians and Australians generally. As I said earlier, the move of the Second Cavalry Regiment to Darwin will mean a direct increase in population of about 1000 in the Darwin-Palmerston area. These people will require 175 married quarters as well as a base and all associated facilities. Construction will start in 1990 and, over a period of a few years, many millions of dollars will be injected into the Top End's economy. I understand that about $70m will be spent on construction work alone. The development of Tindal airforce base is proceeding on target and a further $60m will be spent there this year. The building and construction industry has benefited and will continue to benefit directly, and so too will the various service industries if they are able to adjust quickly enough to the force's requirements. I know from my discussions with the defence forces and the Department of Defence that the Department of Defence policy is now to encourage the development of a capability in the private sector to provide much of the logistic support once undertaken in-house. To ensure that full advantage is taken of existing opportunities, the Department of Industries and Development is working on identifying openings for Territory businesses. It will then promote those opportunities to the Territory business community.

These are exciting developments and my government is determined to maximise the potential benefits to the Territory. We have established excellent working relationships with Commonwealth defence authorities and look forward to welcoming the many hundreds of servicemen and their families who will shortly be moving to Katherine and Darwin. I look forward to working with the defence forces and the Department of Defence in relation to the increased levels of military exercises in the Northern Territory. At present, 2 exercises are proposed. The first is Kangaroo 89 which could bring as many as 10 000 service personnel to Darwin for several months. I might add that the new emphasis in respect of military reserve units and the allocation of areas of responsibility in the north, including the Northern Territory, will mean increasing exercises here by army reserve units. These also offer increasing opportunities for the community, particularly the business community, to gain significant economic spin-offs. This government will continue to work cooperatively to maximise benefits for the Northern Territory people.

Block H at Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer him to my comments on Block H at Finnis River in yesterday's adjournment debate. Can I or any other Northern Territory resident obtain a loan of $275 000 at 13.5% from the Northern Territory Land Corporation? We would love to be able to.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Northern Territory Land Corporation is not a body under the influence, control or direction of any minister, nor is it an instrument of the Crown. Perhaps members opposite would care to refer to some of the judgments in the High Court which validate that position. I would simply suggest that the member for MacDonnell could have his question answered by writing to the directors of the Northern Territory Land Corporation.

Block H at Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Did the government receive an offer in November 1986 from any Darwin property entrepreneurs for the purchase of Block H at Finnis River for $650 000?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, to lay the matter to rest, I will once again make several important points clear. The Northern Territory Land Corporation is not an authority or an instrumentality of the Crown. Further, the corporation is not subject to the control and direction of a minister of the Crown.

Mr Bell: Just answer the question, mate.

Mr HANRAHAN: With a little patience from the member for MacDonnell, I will deal with his question. The corporation has been kind enough to provide me with some of the details of real estate transactions with respect to the Finnis River block. The mortgage registered in favour of the Northern Territory Land Corporation over NT portion 3191 relates to the recent sale of this land to Input Pty Ltd.

Mr Bell: Recent? You said ...

Mr HANRAHAN: There are reasons, if you will just listen. The honourable member has asked why the Northern Territory Land Corporation has given a mortgage. I understand that this mortgage relates to vendor finance and not a loan for funds, as insinuated by the member. I assume that the member, as shadow spokesman for lands and housing, would be aware that vendor finance is a normal commercial practice. The fact of the matter is that the Northern Territory Land Corporation accepted an offer from Input Pty Ltd.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I refer once again to standing order 113 which says that an answer must be relevant to the question. I did not ask the Minister for Lands and Housing about mortgage arrangements on Block H. I asked him whether the government had received an offer from Darwin entrepreneurs.

Mr Coulter: And he said no.

Mr BELL: The Treasurer tells me he said no. I would like the Minister for Lands to confirm that such an offer was not received. My point of order is that the Minister for Lands and Housing's answer must be relevant to the question I asked, not the question he hoped I would ask.

Mr SPEAKER: The minister is free to reply in any way he sees fit, provided that the information he is supplying is linked to the question. There is no point of order.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell must be as thick as 2 bricks. He asked me if I would recall ...

Mr SPEAKER: The minister will withdraw that remark.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, I withdraw the comment unreservedly. Unless there is something wrong with my ears, the member for MacDonnell asked, as a supplementary question, whether the government accepted an offer of $650 000 from a land developer in Darwin. At the time when he made his point of order, I was saying that the Northern Territory Land Corporation accepted an offer. That was when he called a point of order. Obviously, he is not listening.

The Northern Territory Land Corporation accepted an offer from Input Pty Ltd to purchase the property for $575 000 on 19 February 1987. A contract of sale was then prepared and exchanged, and settlement occurred in due course on 9 September 1987.

Mr Bell: 6 months later!

Mr HANRAHAN: This is interesting, Mr Speaker. Members opposite are laughing, presumably because they think an offer made in February was settled on 9 September because of some ridiculous secret deals. I will tell them the reasons why. Negotiations are still continuing over the possibility of accommodating the Vietnamese fishermen who live at the mouth of the Finniss River, and an Aboriginal excision. The reasons are quite extensive, and we are still dealing with them.

The contract of sale set the purchase price at $575 000, with $300 000 to be paid at settlement and the balance to be paid within 2 years following settlement at an interest rate of 13.5% per annum. To protect the Northern Territory Land Corporation's interest, a mortgage has been registered over the land. In answer to the member's second question, the corporation has advised me that it does not hold any other mortgages at present.

In answer to the third question asked by the honourable member, I stress again that the corporation is not an authority or instrumentality of the Crown. The function of the corporation is to acquire, hold and dispose of real property. Should the corporation choose to provide vendor finance in the sale of one of its properties, that is a matter for the corporation. I think I have answered effectively the questions raised by the member for MacDonnell this morning and during last night's adjournment debate.

Funding for Advanced Education in NT

Mr HARRIS to TREASURER

On reading last night's budget, it would appear that the federal government has allocated no money for advanced education in the Northern Territory. Is this true and are there any other areas where, to put it kindly, it would appear that an oversight has occurred?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, we have only had overnight to look at the figures that have been provided to us.

Mr Ede: I tried to ring your office about this last night, but you weren't there.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member for Stuart has equal opportunity to ask questions as other members.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, we have only had overnight to have a look at the figures. At first glance, there was some shock and horror in the Treasury offices last night where I was, for some time, going over the budget with Treasury officials. Indeed, myself and the Chief Minister were there till quite late last evening. We had the opportunity to look at the budget figures with officers of the department in the Treasury building. The first shock that came to us was that there was no funding at all for the colleges of advanced education and that we were down by some $8m. We thought that it must have been a mistake. We checked the figures allocated to all the states and everything tallied, and it looked as though we were down $8m. At first, we wondered if the federal government would be so vindictive as to recognise that that is the amount we require to run the University College and so took $8m from us. When a federal government adopts the strategy of offering negative special grants, that sort of thought crosses the mind when you are the Treasurer of the Northern Territory and dealing with the Commonwealth government. However, we were advised earlier this morning that, in fact, it is a mistake. The Northern Territory government will receive the $8m allocation for the funding of the CAE.

Mr Speaker, I will take a few moments to give honourable members an update. At first glance, the reaction that we have been able to put together regards the remaining sections and appropriations in the budget. I will be brief, but I think it is important to give a synopsis of what it implies for Territorians.

First, it is pleasing to note that the Commonwealth has come very close to balancing its own budget for the first time in many years. No doubt, this will see an increase in consumer and investor confidence. The early signs were apparent last night, with an increase in the value of the Australian dollar and an announcement that at least 1 bank will drop its housing interest rates to 14.5%. It was interesting to see that, when the dollar reached 73.1¢ against the American dollar, the first to sell was the Reserve Bank. Possibly that was done in an attempt to keep the dollar down to ensure that we can sell contracts and commodities overseas because, if the dollar rises further, the troubled sheep, wool, meat and coal industries will be in further trouble as a result of trying to obtain markets with a much higher dollar value. I mention that because one of the major areas from which we believe that the Commonwealth government has been able to fund its deficit is by taking some $2600m in profit from the Reserve Bank.

If the value of the Australian dollar is held at its current level by monetary policy, the general perception of the balanced budget will lead to a general reduction in interest rates, and this will lead to enhanced development prospects. However, there has been general concern that the unexpected windfall has been received largely through increases in taxation revenues. I think the figure for PAYE is $2680m in salary creep, which has put people into higher taxation brackets. Of course, the other windfall was in the unexpected areas of fringe benefits tax and capital gains tax which netted an extra $1000m. It has destroyed the motor car industry and a few other industries, but the federal government did very well out of it.

Some other figures are interesting. Whilst we took a 10.1% drop through cuts contained in the economic statement that the Commonwealth Treasurer put out, and the states received 7.5% from a quick glance at last night's budget papers, the federal government took a dive of some 2.4%. Thus, there is a contradiction in terms there. The increased revenues from the capital gains tax and from the salary creep into various taxation brackets, plus the profits from the Reserve Bank, have helped the federal Treasurer to balance his budget. The revenue from asset sales has removed from the Commonwealth the requirement to apply discipline to its own expenditure. An examination of the Commonwealth's total outlays show an increase of 5.7%. If asset sales were treated as revenue, that would be normal practice rather than treating this sale of assets as negative expenditures as imaginatively portrayed by the Commonwealth budget.

It is clear, however, that the brunt of the expenditure cuts have been borne by the states and the Northern Territory. Assistance to other governments has risen by 3% only, while Commonwealth expenditure, excluding these payments, has risen by 6.3%, which is double the increase experienced by the states and the Territory. The Territory has been disproportionately affected relative to the states. As I said, we took 10% in cuts and the rest of the states took 7.5%.

It was said this morning on one of the radio stations that the Territory's cuts were only $25m. That is very misleading indeed. It does not include the semi-government borrowing allocation which has fallen by over $20m. The total cut to the Territory is about $40m in money terms. We have had criticism from the member for Stuart who is economically colour blind; he would not know black from red. The fact is that, in real terms, in terms of what we could have done this year with last year's money, we have taken a dive of $100m. No matter how often the honourable member stands up, nobody will believe him any longer because he does not know what he is talking about.

Had payments to the Northern Territory been maintained in real terms, we would have received an increase of $80m whereas we suffered a loss of $40m which produces an overall loss in real terms of $100m, as I said in the budget speech yesterday. We all know what the honourable member has told us about Channel Island Power Station and he did not know what he was talking about there either.

Settlement with Air North

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Was it part of the settlement with Air North in the recent aero-medical contract dispute, which resulted in Air North withdrawing its legal challenge, that the Northern Territory government pick up the legal expenses of Air North in the various court actions over the issue? If so, what was the cost of those legal expenses and was a similar arrangement made with Skywest?

ANSWER

There was a settlement arrangement with Skywest as part of the overall settlement of the matter. That has been publicly reported but I do not have the details with me at the moment. In respect of Air North, propositions have been made to the government. The matter was being considered by the minister, but I am not aware of any decision having been made to make a settlement for legal expenses so far as Air North is concerned.

Consumer Affairs Report

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

During the election campaign, the minister referred to a report which he had received dealing with the range of consumer affairs' policy and legislation. What progress has been made to implement the recommendations of that report?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, a submission is presently before me, as minister responsible for consumer affairs, outlining a program for the implementation of the recommendations of the consumer affairs working group. I will be seeking Cabinet endorsement for implementation of the proposed program in due course.

A working group to review consumer affairs' policy and legislation was formed in early 1986. Members will recall that I was chairman of that review committee before I became a minister, after which time the member for Ludmilla took over. The working group has already given me a report. It is proposed that all existing consumer protection legislation be repealed and replaced by a new consolidated act to be known as the Northern Territory Commercial and Consumer Act. Consolidation of existing and proposed consumer measures, to a very large extent, should achieve consistency in definition, administration and enforcement. This would be in line with the spirit of the working group's recommendations. Implementation of the recommendations is dependent on Cabinet endorsement and the Cabinet's Legislative Priority Committee granting the proposals the necessary priority with Parliamentary Counsel.

The review has been very thorough and has been commented on by people in the consumer affairs area interstate. I believe that we can come up with legislation that will lead the field in the proper administration of consumer affairs throughout Australia. I look forward to the completion of this very difficult task and, in due course, to putting a proposition to Cabinet, which I hope my colleagues will endorse.

Moneys Owed by Burgundy Royale

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Has an arrangement yet been entered into with the liquidator for the Territory to recover outstanding payroll tax, electricity and water charges incurred by Burgundy Royale as operators of the Beaufort complex? Secondly, since the appointment of the liquidator, has the Northern Territory government been paid for the services it has supplied to the Beaufort Centre since that date? Thirdly, what is the full extent of the centre's current indebtedness to the Northern Territory government?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will give the Leader of the Opposition the exact details of the figures during the course of these sittings. I made some inquiries before the sittings, thinking that somebody might mention the issue. I have information coming from the liquidator including the performance of the hotel under the control of the liquidator in terms of accommodation nights etc. Also, we have received a legal opinion now from the Department of Law in respect of outstanding debts. I do not have the exact figures but I am quite happy to provide them to the Leader of the Opposition. As I have said in the past, the Northern Territory government's position is well protected in this case and the recent legal opinion from the Department of Law secures the government's position even more than I have stated in this House in the past.

Mr HANRAHAN (Leader of Government): Mr Speaker, I apologise to honourable members for this oversight but any questions for the Minister of Education and Attorney-General should be directed to the Minister for Industries and Development today.

Health Services at Ngukurr

Mr REED to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Concerns have been expressed by people of Ngukurr community regarding the future of health services there. Can he confirm that community health sisters will remain at Ngukurr, and that acceptable accommodation arrangements will be made for them?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, some people at Ngukurr were led wildly astray in the June to July period prior to my announcement of the $5m cutbacks in the Health and Community Services budget. I received a deputation from the community health nurses at that centre whilst I was in Katherine trying to explain to the people with the honourable member for Katherine that there was a scaremongering campaign occurring in that region. We told them that they ought to wait until the cutbacks had been put in place when it would be clear that it was not the policy of the Northern Territory government to withdraw from Aboriginal communities. To the contrary, I have been saying since I became the minister responsible for local government, in particular the community government area, that it was the policy of this Northern Territory government, for the first time in the history of the management of Aboriginal affairs, to put it in its proper perspective and give the management of Aboriginal affairs back to the Aboriginal people with, if you like, a guiding hand from the Northern Territory government. I spoke about giving them back their self-esteem by way of self-management.

In this particular area of community health, the Northern Territory government has a policy that it will Aboriginalise the community health services in the Aboriginal communities when the communities ask for that Aboriginalisation. By 'Aboriginalisation' ...

Mr Ede: That is not what Fleming said.

Mr DALE: Pardon?

Mr Ede: That is not what Fleming said.

Mr DALE: By 'Aboriginalisation', I do not mean necessarily that we have to wait until such time as we have Aboriginal people who are trained to the level of triple certificate sisters. Aboriginalisation can mean that Aboriginal people might subcontract, from their own community, a person to run that community health centre. I mention that in response to some of the comments made by the member for Arafura in the adjournment debate last night. It is just one small example that demonstrates that this Northern Territory government has a policy of letting Aboriginal people run their own affairs.

Mr Speaker, I will not be withdrawing the nurses from Ngukurr. We have had some difficulties in relation to accommodation for nursing sisters there. In January 1985, the Ngukurr Council asked for a health service following the withdrawal of the service provided by the Anglican Church Missionary Society. Arrangements were made to rent a house from the church for staff accommodation. This arrangement was always considered to be temporary and we were fully aware of that. The church had advised that it would require the house back early in 1988. It may now require the house by November of this year. Construction of a house would cost in the vicinity of $100 000.

I have had a number of options put to me. I have had some officers talk to the church in an attempt to retain the use of the existing accommodation for a further period. I have officers investigating any surplus houses that other departments might have in that area. Once again, given the policy of the Northern Territory government, I will be asking the council there for cooperation in the provision of whatever accommodation might be out there.

Action is proceeding as a matter of urgency. In contrast to the philosophy and policies of the federal government, it is not the intention of the Northern Territory government to withdraw health services from Aboriginal communities. I will indicate in my budget speech in the next few days that the exact opposite is the policy of the Northern Territory government.

Vietnam Veterans

Mr COLLINS to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, now that the problem of transporting the Vietnam veterans to Sydney for the welcome home parade has been solved, will the government accede to the request of some of those veterans to be provided with Territory sporting ties and flags etc so that they can go with a Territory identity and promote the Territory in the process?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise the House that any support and assistance, particularly with Northern Territory paraphernalia, regalia, identification etc, will be made available. Our government fully supports the endeavours of the Vietnam Veterans' Association in this particular process. Should the veterans need ties, flags or other such facilities, they will certainly be made available through my government and I would welcome any approach concerning anything that they specifically require.

Police Numbers in Alice Springs

Mr POOLE to CHIEF MINISTER

Some months ago in this Assembly, I presented a petition on behalf of citizens of Alice Springs. What action has been taken to address the request by the Alice Springs community for increased numbers of police and the reintroduction of foot patrols?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the honourable member presented a petition to this Assembly on 3 June this year. Obviously, the ability to carry out foot patrols is related directly to the availability of staff in a community at any particular time. I should advise the Assembly that, although the gazetted police strength in Alice Springs is 101, the actual strength is in fact 113, due to the addition of 12 constables in June of this year. This lift in numbers is directly attributable to the graduation of recruits. One must accept that that excess will be absorbed or dissipated through the normal processes of transfers, training and attrition etc. Of the 113, I should advise that 100 are involved in operational duties providing a service to between 24 000 and 25 000 citizens: a very high police per head of population ratio.

In April this year, plainclothes foot patrols were introduced in the central business district of Alice Springs following complaints of vandalism and other unlawful behaviour. In addition, at police request, special lighting was installed at Anzac Oval, a late night meeting place for young people. These initiatives have resulted in a reduction in unlawful behaviour in the inner city and it has been possible to reduce plainclothes patrols and compensate with traditional uniformed foot patrols. Whilst it is not possible to eliminate completely behavioural offences such as thefts and assaults, and that is true in any community, the current strategies and staffing levels are considered both adequate and appropriate for the special requirements of the Alice Springs area.

In the longer term, the increase in the police establishment to cover training commitments will create greater staffing stability and, importantly, greater staffing availability on the ground in the provision of policing generally in the Northern Territory. Our police force stands ready to respond promptly to any specific situations that emerge, as my answer indicates we have done this year, and we will continue to do so in the future should such situations develop.

Units at Gardens Hill

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Can he confirm that the Housing Commission has paid or is about to pay $1m for a block of units at Gardens Hill, is it true that the units do not meet the criteria set down by the Housing Commission, and was the Housing Commission instructed by him to purchase those units?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, an offer to purchase the units at Gardens Hill was made. The settlement has taken place. The purchase price was $1.1m. I am not sure of the exact date of settlement. The transaction fits in with the policy of the Housing Commission within the spot-purchase program announced by the Chief Minister. For the benefit of the member for MacDonnell, if he would like to listen, I might add that it is a well-known fact that the government has a sizeable investment in the Marrakai Apartments and, because of the value of those units at this particular time, it is appropriate for the government to seek to realise that asset over the coming months and further add to the revenue in the government coffers.

I have no problems with the purchase of the Gardens Hill units and, if the honourable member for MacDonnell, as the opposition spokesman for Lands, would like a full briefing on the issue, I would be more than happy to give it to him.

Overdue Commercial Electricity Accounts

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Are there any large commercial consumers, other than the Beaufort Centre, who have had electricity charges waived or who are substantially behind in their payments?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, large commercial consumers? I wonder if the member could be more specific. To my knowledge, there is only one consumer who has entered into a scheme of arrangements with the Power and Water Authority whereby he could pay off his electricity account.

Darwin Bus Service

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Since the integration of the Darwin Bus Service with the school bus service earlier this year, has the anticipated saving of $700 000 for the 1986-87 financial year been achieved?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not in a position to advise on the exact amount of savings. I am certainly in a position to advise the House that the integration of bus services in Darwin has been a success story.

Since the school bus runs were amalgamated with the Darwin Bus Service routes, the utilisation of the bus system has increased by approximately 50%. That has occurred after a fairly extensive settling-in period. In the initial stages, we were determined that the needs of schoolchildren would be met entirely and that resulted in some over-servicing. As the system settled down, considerable finetuning was required and this process is ongoing. We found that some routes did not warrant the frequency of schedules provided initially and we carried out some rationalisation to optimise the service.

The department is continuing to work towards a more efficient service and we have recently rationalised further services with Matilda Tours. Contract routes 1, 2 and 3 have been rationalised with Darwin Bus Service routes 6 and 12 and that exercise resulted in a $47 000 per annum saving. From figures that I have been given this morning, I understand that about $200 000 has been saved through rationalisation during the last 6 months.

The Darwin Bus Service has certainly come a long way since the first bus was run in 1950. I understand that the member for Fannie Bay was one of the first passengers. He may remember the 1939 Morris and the semitrailers on the route to Nightcliff, which was then a distant suburb. The service now carries about 2 million passengers per annum who take advantages of 70 000 services annually. The figures now include a great proportion of schoolchildren.

Some concerns have recently been raised in relation to the behaviour of high school students on some of the bus runs. Naturally, the complaints were attended to promptly by the department and I understand that appropriate action was taken both with the students and with their respective schools, and that things have settled back down again. I mention that quite deliberately because the Darwin Bus Service does have a hotline available for passengers or clients who have any matters of concern. People should use that service. It is interesting to note that, in recent times, the level of complaints has dropped dramatically. That is a credit not only to the officers who have arranged the rationalisation of the services but, more importantly, to the bus drivers themselves.

When the saga of the removal of the Bradshaw Terrace bus stop started, I had calls from a large number of pensioners. Aside from their expressions of concern in that matter, they went out of their way to acknowledge the excellent and very civil service provided by our bus drivers. We are very fortunate in having many long-time bus drivers and it is to be acknowledged that they provide an excellent level of service. During the last year, they have accepted some changes in their operating methods, particularly in relation to the split-shift system, and the way they have done this is a credit to them and the result is that the service is now running more effectively and efficiently. The member for Casuarina can be assured that that has also led to some significant savings.

Mr Speaker, I would like to mention a couple of things concerning the bus service and its efficiency. Recently, we have opened 2 interchanges, 1 at Casuarina and 1 in Harry Chan Avenue. Both are very modern, very attractive and, more importantly, very efficient buildings. They were constructed at a total cost of nearly $2m.

Mr Bell: Of Commonwealth money.

Mr FINCH: I am more than happy to acknowledge that, and I thank the member for MacDonnell.

Mr Bell: You would not have acknowledged it if I had not interjected.

Mr FINCH: In fact, Mr Speaker, during the opening ceremony at Casuarina, I made specific reference to the ABRD funding of that project.

Mr Bell: And the participation of Peter Morris?

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, I acknowledged the participation of the Hon Peter Morris in that regard, although one could not say the same in relation to other areas of his previous portfolio.

Mr Speaker, that $2m has provided a very efficient facility for interchange within the bus system. Private buses travel throughout the suburbs to those main terminals to exchange passengers to the main city runs and the express services. People should acknowledge the good service that the Darwin Bus Service is providing. It is all very well for us to knock the buses and the bus drivers, but the service that is being provided is of a very high standard and it is becoming more and more efficient. I am sure that provides pleasure to the Treasurer because he has been able to take advantage of the savings made by the Darwin Bus Service in his appropriations this year.

Mr Speaker, whilst I do not have a specific answer for the member for Casuarina, I will provide one for him later. Things are looking good but we have not stopped there. Electronic bus ticketing will be introduced soon and that will also help to improve efficiency. We have recently introduced a computer-based maintenance record system which is helping us to ensure that our buses are well maintained and that a valuable government asset is safeguarded.

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, it has come to my attention that a number of members have been holding private conversations during recent sittings and have not turned their microphones off by holding the cough button during these conversations. Members are reminded that the microphones are live and, apart from any need for the conversations possibly to remain confidential, the discussions can be disruptive to the public broadcast of question time and to the taping of debates for Hansard purposes.

Delegation to Greek Islands

Mr TUXWORTH to CHIEF MINISTER

Could the Chief Minister confirm whether he is leading a delegation to the Greek islands in the next month or so? I believe it is to occur in October. Could the Chief Minister advise who is to make up the delegation and confirm whether he will be travelling on to London and The Hague and what the cost of the tour will be?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can confirm for the honourable member that I will be travelling overseas next month. It is certainly not a matter of any secrecy and I would not like anyone to assume that it was. In fact, I will be visiting Singapore for discussions with the Trade Commission, Trade Development Zone and Tourist Commission representatives there on the South-east Asian business development programs. That will be taking place over a 1-day period. I will be visiting both Kalymnos and Cyprus for 2 days each as a consequence of invitations from the Mayor of Kalymnos when he was here. Honourable members will be aware that Kalymnos is our sister city and there have been a number of ongoing communications. A proportion of citizens of the Northern Territory, from both Kalymnos and Cyprus, represent a significant element of our local population. It is appropriate that I take the opportunity to visit both those places, particularly having received a number of invitations and a formal invitation from the Mayor of Kalymnos in March of this year.

The timing was delayed for such a visit to ensure that the necessary actions of government in its restructuring, the budget preparations and the major work that needed to occur this year, could be accommodated before any such visit took place. Obviously, to take such a trip in isolation could be conceived, by those of a mean-minded nature, to be unnecessary. I do not accept that particular view. As I have said, the Greek communities of the Northern Territory, particularly those from Kalymnos and Cyprus, represent a significant proportion of our population and they themselves have made a number of representations to me to take an opportunity to visit there.

Nonetheless, I have combined that visit with necessary trips to Europe. For some time, I have wished to acquaint myself further with the nuclear reprocessing industry, a matter of particular importance to the Northern Territory. That matter has received some recent publicity through announcements by Minister Kerin. Therefore, it is appropriate that, as the leader of government, I familiarise myself with that most important industry, as did my predecessors, who took the opportunity to specifically brief themselves so as to ensure that, as a government, we are as well-briefed as possible on all the ramifications of such an industry.

In addition, in London, I will be taking the opportunity to meet with a number of British investors who have invested in the Northern Territory and who, in recent times, have expressed an interest in further investment here. There are 2 particular companies. I do not propose to name them, for no other reason than that I do not want to generate unnecessary debate. I can assure honourable members that investments are in the Territory now and more are coming. I wish to promote and accelerate that investment in the Northern Territory in important industry development programs, and I wish to hold further discussions on our tourism developments, which are quite exciting in the British area. I intend also to hold discussions with the Trade Commissioner's Office in London to update myself about opportunities that may exist for investment in the Northern Territory from that area, and general business development in that area. A full report will be provided on that trip, as is my practice, following any visits I make overseas. In fact, this question has been put only a few hours ahead of a press release announcing details of this trip.

I am sorry, Mr Speaker, I was asked for specific details of how much the trip is proposed to cost and who is going. My apologies to the honourable member for not providing those answers. I do not have the specific details of the cost, but I am quite prepared to make them available to the honourable member. Obviously, I do not have the figures here and now and the details on the trip itself are still being finalised. I will be accompanied by my wife on that trip and I will be taking with me the Secretary of the Department of the Chief Minister, the Head of Protocol and my press secretary. I understand that Mr Paroulakis, who is the Honorary Greek Consul of the Northern Territory and his wife, are travelling to Greece also at that time and they will accompany us, but they are travelling at their own expense.

Vandalism in Black Jungle

Mr TIPILOURA to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

What steps have been taken to stop vandalism in Black Jungle?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I welcome this question because, only last week, the extent of vandalism in Black Jungle was brought to my attention. I can assure the member for Arafura that the Conservation Commission is totally disgusted at what has happened there and the government appeals to members of the community to cast a watchful eye over the general area. Failing regular patrols by the police or a permanent presence by Conservation Commission staff, vandalism is very difficult to control. We cannot have someone on the spot every single hour of the day. I think it is a sign that part of our society has gone wrong when such assets are subjected to vandalism and destruction. We all know the benefits that such places bring, not only to the Darwin community but to visitors.

The Conservation Commission has certainly been in touch with the police, who have stepped up their patrols. Once again, I mention to honourable members and the people of Darwin that in recent incidents Conservation Commission officers have come to bodily harm whilst carrying out their duties. These duties are far-ranging and include constant vigilance to stop the poaching of fish and protected game and wildlife. It is appropriate that I place on record my thanks for the way Conservation Commission staff carry out their duties because I think they generally go unnoticed and unrecognised. They certainly do a good job and I think the facilities throughout the Territory stand as a permanent record of that.

With its limited resources, the Conservation Commission will acknowledge the value of Holmes Jungle by increasing its presence there somewhat, but I can only remind the public that such instances of vandalism do the Territory and its tourist industry no good at all. I repeat my appeal to the general public not to hesitate to contact officers of the law or the Conservation Commission if they come across instances of vandalism or see it occurring. We would welcome any information from the general public and it is interesting to note that most apprehensions of vandals come about through information received from the general public.

Activities of AIDS Task Force

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

There has been widespread concern in the community about the activities at the Darwin Show of certain persons associated with the AIDS Task Force. It is alleged that they handed out condoms to young children, particularly young girls. Is he taking any action to curtail the more abhorrent actions of some of the people associated with the AIDS Task Force?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I think the member's terminology in relation to 'abhorrent actions' by members of the AIDS Task Force is going a little bit too far. It was reported to me that some people at the show were handing out condoms to people who were perhaps under the age where they would be sexually active. I have not really been able to assess exactly what damage may have been done to those particular children. I can remember back to my childhood, albeit I am very grateful that most young people in Australia do not have the childhood that I had. I certainly do not agree with the handing of condoms to young people under an age where they may be sexually active. However, I will make one point. If condoms were handed out to young people, even if this occurred in thousands of cases, and that action led to the protection from AIDS of a young boy or girl who would otherwise have been exposed to risk in sexual activity that day without the use of a condom, my view is that significant damage has certainly not occurred.

Mr Speaker, the number of AIDS cases and antibody-positive persons in the Northern Territory at present is 33. I am alarmed to say that this shows an increase on the 23 that I announced at the last sittings of this Assembly.

Thankfully, only 2 cases in category A have been recorded, with 1 death. In category B, 7 cases have been reported with 24 in category C. Only 1 category C case has involved an Aboriginal person and that person was subsequently moved interstate. AIDS authorities have made statistical estimates of the number of antibody-positive persons in each state and the Territory. These are based on projections from the total number of AIDS cases in Australia and estimate the number of antibody-positive persons in the Northern Territory at 500. However, most staff working in relation to AIDS in the Northern Territory, including the community-based groups, believe that that number would be closer to 100. My department, the Cabinet and my colleagues in this government have steadfastly taken the attitude that we will do everything within our power to combat this killer disease in the Northern Territory community.

I do not hesitate to boast that we have been a leader in the field once again, particularly in protecting Aboriginal communities from this virus. For quite some time, as I have reported to this House previously, we have had in place a community-based group that goes out to the communities and teaches the people in those communities how they can avoid this killer. In my department's budget this year, once again we have increased the funds that will be spent specifically in carrying the message to the Aboriginal communities. Once again, I refute some of the comments that the member for Arafura made last night.

Mr Speaker, I understand that there will be some unpleasant spin-offs from the attitude of the Northern Territory government in trying to combat this dreaded killer. I do not apologise for that because I do not intend to resile from our position. We will get the message of the seriousness of this particular virus across to every human being who lives in the Northern Territory. They will know the best possible way to avoid AIDS before we are finished. Some people say that our attitude may lead some young children astray or lead them into a sexually-active life that otherwise they may not have taken up. I am afraid that, in this particular case, the bigots of the world simply will have to sit back and bite their bottom lips. As I said, we intend to combat this virus in a very meaningful way. We are leaders in the field and, as far as target groups are concerned, my targets are young people from the age at which they become sexually active or may become sexually active right through to 25 years of age. Whether they are white, black, brindle or purple, I believe they form the risk groups in the community in the Northern Territory and we intend to get the message to them. In particular, we are upgrading our services and the education program to the Aboriginal communities.

Stocks of Waste Oil in Darwin Region

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

What has the government done about the problem of accumulating stocks of waste oil in the Darwin region?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for the question. As most members would be aware, prior to the closure of the Stokes Hill Power Station, most of the waste oil in the Darwin region was burned there. When Stokes Hill Power Station closed its tanks to this waste in February this year, a serious problem began to develop with accumulating stocks of waste oil. Stokes Hill Power Station had burned it at the rate of about 10 t per week. I am pleased to advise the Assembly that, as a result of government assistance in investigating potential new customers for waste oil, the proprietor of the new lime production plant at Mataranka has negotiated successfully the purchase of the company, Waste Oil Disposals. This company has resumed collection of oil from service stations, workshops and marine facilities around Darwin, and has been using this fuel in the lime production facility at Mataranka. I understand that about 30 t of that fuel has been processed in the last few weeks and is currently in use.

Once again, the Work Health Authority played a fairly active role in finding new customers for the waste oil. It is seen as a hazardous material, and we were in fairly dire straits over these accumulating stocks. Waste oil cannot be dumped easily and there are not many users of it in the Northern Territory. Thankfully, that user has been found, and the problem seems to have been overcome.

Private Wards at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Which group has been allocated the private wards in the Royal Darwin Hospital, when are they expected to start and for what period of time has the arrangement been made?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the privatisation of the 2 wards at the Royal Darwin Hospital will be given to Health and Life Care, the company that is to construct the private hospital in the grounds of the Royal Darwin Hospital. The contract will continue until such time as the private hospital opens. This move is one that has been looked at by Ministers for Health throughout Australia because they have often wished to attack the problem of the enormous waiting lists that they have in public hospitals down south. In New South Wales, they have waiting lists of some 60 000 people. In Victoria, they have waiting lists of some 30 000 people whilst their private hospitals, in some cases, have an occupancy rate of something like 50% to 60%. They would love to be able to combine the private hospital facilities with the public hospital facilities as we are endeavouring to do at the Royal Darwin Hospital. We have not finalised the arrangements completely as yet, but I am very happy with the way those negotiations are progressing. We are receiving full cooperation from the nursing fraternity in the Northern Territory because it can see that, overall, the delivery of health services in the Northern Territory can only be enhanced by the privatisation, in the first instance, of 2 wards at the Royal Darwin Hospital and then with the construction of the wonderful private hospital in the same grounds.

The private hospital facility will upgrade not only the skills that we will have available to us in the Northern Territory but also the equipment. The inherent saving in those increases in standards will be in our PAT scheme as well. Where previously we had to ship people out of the Northern Territory to obtain treatment, particularly some surgery cases, we will have the facilities available in the Northern Territory. It is another example of how the quality of life in the Northern Territory is ever increasing under this government.

Darwin Airport

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has he contacted Senator Gareth Evans with regard to the future development of the Darwin Airport since he became Minister for Transport? If so, what details can he give us?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I had the opportunity of meeting informally with Senator Gareth Evans and Peter Duncan at ATAC recently in Coolangatta. I was most pleasantly encouraged by the attitude of both ministers with regard to the Darwin Airport project. I have no wish to dwell on the previous minister but, certainly, an obvious communication barrier built up over a period. For that, I make no apology nor do I ever intend to.

The question is where we go from here. The Territory government has maintained a consistent view that the north side development for the airport is the only realistic option, both from the point of view of facilities and from an economic point of view. That view is shared universally throughout all of the federal and Territory government departments and it seems that, with these 2 new ministers, particularly Gareth Evans who is the minister responsible for airports, we now have the opportunity perhaps to obtain a realistic and satisfactory solution.

I have corresponded further with Senator Evans regarding the Territory's position and indicated to him that, as I understand it, both sides of this House see that the project is very necessary and that we should be proceeding by the best possible means. I would assume that the best possible means is to find private funding towards the construction of the terminal building itself. I have sought a further formal meeting with the federal minister and I am hoping that that might be available soon after these sittings.

Whilst we are talking about communication with the federal government, I should indicate that the Minister for Land Transport and Infrastructure Support, Peter Duncan, has indicated his desire to accept an invitation to visit the Northern Territory and acquaint himself with our communications matters here. He will bring himself up to date on the railway proposal and examine airports at Darwin, Alice Springs, Katherine and Tennant Creek. Hopefully, that will provide him with first-hand knowledge of these things in the Territory.

It is worth noting that the federal budget allocated $300 000 for the Darwin Airport this year. I am not despondent about that. Whilst we do not have any details to date, if that will provide for the redesigning of the aprons and the taxiways for the terminal project, I will be delighted. I am yet to find out the exact details of that appropriation. The total budget figure for civil works was $6m. I hope I will have the details in the next 2 weeks.

Roadside Inn Review

Mr EDE to MINISTER for TOURISM

I refer to a statement he made some time ago that he was conducting an inquiry into roadside inns and the public demand for various types of facilities on the major arterial routes in the Territory. Has that inquiry been completed and, if so, can he provide details to the House?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Roadside Inn Review required some further work. When I received the portfolio of tourism, I restructured the advisory councils and the Tourist Commission to incorporate more industry people on committees which advise me directly. The Roadside Inn Review Report went back to the Tourist Advisory Council which subsequently deliberated and made many recommendations.

It is important to note that part of the review was very specific about some of the problems and some of the operators involved up and down the Stuart Highway. In the first instance, I thought it only fair that we should endeavour to inspect the facilities again and to impress upon the owners and operators of these facilities the importance of tourism to the Territory's economy. That has been done. The report has been added to and is due to go before Cabinet within the next 30 days. After it has gone before Cabinet, it will be made a public document and I will be more than happy to circulate it far and wide.

It is very interesting to note that, since the activities of the Roadside Inn Review Committee became known to the operators, there has been a remarkable improvement in some of the facilities up and down the Stuart Highway - though not all, I might add. I have certainly made no bones about the fact that a few operators in the tourist industry can make it bad for everybody and it is a situation that this government, as I have stated quite clearly before, is not prepared to tolerate. We are prepared to move to ensure that people generally are not ripped off or given very poor service because the industry is about service and it is about friendly people. Those are the issues, in part, that the Roadside Inn Review Report addresses and, as I have said, it will be made a public document the moment it has been before Cabinet. I think it will prove very beneficial to the industry as a whole.

Crocodile Meat for Restaurant Trade

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In recent times, there has been some criticism of the lack of availability of crocodile meat to the restaurant trade. When is crocodile meat likely to be freely available to this trade?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, plans are well advanced for the production and marketing of meat derived from crocodiles which are bred and reared in captivity in the Northern Territory at our 3 authorised farms. Under the management program for freshwater and saltwater crocodiles, the 3 licensed farmers are eligible to obtain permits to slaughter specific batches of animals within prescribed dates. The permits allow the reptiles to be slaughtered for their skins and their flesh. In fact, what we are witnessing at this time is the coming of age of a new industry. Whilst that industry has existed for a little while, it is only now that the farms have been in a position to exercise their rights to harvest the animals and slaughter them. There will be a function later this afternoon to launch crocodile meat in the Northern Territory. I understand it is called a croctail party and some honourable members may have been fortunate in making the invitation list. I am not sure who drew it up. It will be held this afternoon.

Hopefully, the crocodile farms will be able to ensure that there is no shortage of crocodile meat available through restaurants in the Northern Territory. I am pleased to say that the owners of at least the principal farm in the Northern Territory have indicated to me that their preference is to see the local market supplied prior to even considering any export of crocodile meat. We all hope that access to crocodile meat will provide an additional attraction for people visiting the Northern Territory but, if we sell it all overseas first up, we will find that it is not available here.

To answer the honourable member's question specifically, the time has arrived when the shortage of supply will evaporate.

Administration of Mines Safety Control Act

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

My question has become something of a sessional question. Is the Mines Safety Control Act still administered by the Department of Mines and Energy and, if so, when is it proposed to transfer administrative control for that act to the Work Health Authority?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the honourable member is quite correct in saying that this is becoming a sessional question. I think he has asked it during every Legislative Assembly sittings this year.

Mr Leo: It is very important.

Mr HATTON: Yes, it is important.

Mr Speaker, one of the reasons why the staff have not been transferred is because there are quite serious technical difficulties in inter-relationship between the Work Health Authority and the Department of Mines and Energy which we are working hard to resolve. I say that in the sense that there are competing arguments being put of which the honourable member is undoubtedly fully aware. Probably that is the reason for his persistent questions on this.

Mr Speaker, allow me to say this. The mining industry has some particular and uniquely different circumstances to other sections of industry generally. I will outline a particular example that has been referred to me concerning underground mining. Mining inspectors are very difficult to obtain. The technical and engineering structure and design and work practice underground are integrally important in ensuring that there is a safe working environment. It would be quite impractical, particularly in underground mining, to have one group of inspectors going through the establishment discussing inspection functions and another group of inspectors carrying out safety inspection work.

We have been examining the proposal of mines inspectors carrying out the safety inspections as agents on behalf of the Work Health Authority, and reporting to it in respect of safety matters. That would involve an integration of functions instead of 2 separate inspectors going into the same mine at different times. It would relieve the potential for differing and competing demands being made on the miners which every member in this House would agree is totally undesirable.

If I can use a well-worn phrase, there have been some other unintended consequences with the Work Health Authority that need to be addressed. They are issues such as those associated with the Dangerous Goods Act. The Work

Health Authority, which is established principally to look at the issues of work health, is finding itself becoming involved in a number of other matters. We heard an answer from the Minister for Labour and Administrative Services concerning disposal of waste oil. Clearly, that is not an intended function of the Work Health Authority.

Those are not easy questions to answer and that is why there has been no final determination. It is essential for the proper development of the mining industry that we maintain the concept of a one-stop shop which has served that industry exceptionally well. The member for Nhulunbuy would be well aware of the exceptionally high safety standards that have been maintained in Nhulunbuy by Nabalco Pty Ltd which has been working on a self-regulatory approach since 1980. The honourable member was very actively involved in the development of those programs as a union delegate. We do not want to detract from that.

Equally, it is important that the functions of the Work Health Authority in the processes of accident prevention, proper compensation and rehabilitation are equally and properly addressed through the appropriate body. It is not the intention of this government to detract from the role of the Work Health Authority in its fundamental core function. Equally importantly, the government intends that the mining industry will maintain the efficiencies and effectiveness of a one-stop shop. The sorting out of those administrative arrangements and the interdepartmental battles will be resolved and I will inform the honourable member within the next week.

Access to Royal North Australian Show Society Stables

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Given the announced extension of Tiger Brennan Drive to Hook Road in my electorate, will he assure me that the road access to the stables at the rear of the Royal North Australian Show Society will be retained?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to advise that provision will be made for access to the stables and the Rifle Club. A track just south of the Rifle Club will become obsolete but access will be provided from Hook Road.

As was mentioned by the Treasurer, stage 4 of the Tiger Brennan Drive project will be undertaken this year. This will take Tiger Brennan Drive from Bowen Street through to Hook Road. Work has commenced on some of the preliminary earthworks on the section from Reichardt Road. It is anticipated that the works will be completed to enable traffic to travel down Hook Road and on to the connector road before the end of this financial year. That section of the Tiger Brennan Drive project involves a number of large cuts through some hills. The materials from the earthworks will be stockpiled for future use on access roads to the CBD area.

The project commenced some 15 years ago. The original sections involved roadworks through some fairly extensive mud plains and required embankments up to 5 m high. A particular method of construction was required there to allow proper consolidation of the fill material over a period of time. In completing the remaining sections over the last 5 years, other new techniques had to be used. Members will be interested to know that work at the swamp near Woolner Road used a base of felled mangroves covered with a geo-textile. The overall depth of fill was 3 m to 4 m above 2.5 m to 3 m of mangrove mud. The project has been a technical success and is part of the ongoing development which will eventually provide vehicular access to and from Palmerston. Planning on this project has enabled us to progress to the stage where there will be access from Hook Road to the city.

It is intended that, by 1990, Tiger Brennan Drive will extend through to Amy Johnson Drive and, by the mid-1990s, there will be a need to proceed with the project right through to Palmerston. That will be a boon for residents of Palmerston and the rural area, particularly those people who work in the city and have to commute daily. They will be able to use a high-quality road to gain easy access to workplaces in the city.

Block H Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

In relation to the Finnis River imbroglio, will he table, or show to me on a confidential basis, the contract that was exchanged with Mr Leo Venturin in February this year?

ANSWER:

Mr Speaker, such a request at short notice deserves some serious deliberations on the basis that I am not too sure whether I can respect the member's ability to maintain confidentiality. I am quite happy to enter into a discussion with him in relation to confidentiality with respect to the sale of Block H to Input Pty Ltd by the Northern Territory Land Corporation.

Block H Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

When did he personally sight that contract for the first time?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell should know that I was not Minister for Lands during the negotiations on and sale of this particular block. I have seen no reason to see the details of the contract or even to view it.

Persons Lost in Remote Areas

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

What action is the Northern Territory government taking to upgrade procedures for the recovery of persons lost in remote areas in order to avoid tragedies such as the one which occurred in Western Australia earlier this year?

ANSWER

Honourable members will be aware of the tragic events that occurred last Christmas and led to the death of 2 young stockmen in Western Australia. That search extended beyond the Western Australian border into the Northern Territory. Following the discovery of the bodies of those 2 young men, the Northern Territory Police Force and Emergency Service held discussions with the Northern Territory Cattlemen's Association with the objective of improving search and emergency service procedures in such events in the remote areas of the Northern Territory where, all too often, there is extreme risk to life because of climate and remoteness. Those discussions have resulted in the formulation of a plan to enhance our capability to recover persons lost in remote areas.

The plan has 4 main elements. First, police general orders already contain detailed instructions on search and rescue procedures. These instructions will be amended to include reference to assistance available from pastoralists. Secondly, for distribution through the Cattlemen's Association, the Northern Territory Emergency Service is producing a laminated card that provides initial guidance to pastoralists and their employees in search-and-rescue situations. Thirdly, the Northern Territory Emergency Service will compile a register listing all resources such as airstrips, fuel, etc available for search-and-rescue purposes on pastoral properties. Fourthly, a police search-and-rescue specialist will be made available to address trainee jackaroos at the Katherine Rural College. We have been assured of the continuing cooperation of the association's members and, wherever possible, will involve them in the planning and conduct of future search operations.

Mr Speaker, this event demonstrated quite clearly the need to develop more procedures and to encourage the pastoralists in many of these areas to search more comprehensively areas where people may be lost. I might say that even these procedures might not have been successful in the tragic events that occurred last Christmas because of the extent to which those 2 young men travelled. Nonetheless, by the use of the resources and local knowledge of pastoralists throughout search areas, these measures will enhance significantly the effectiveness of searchers and, I might say, will reduce the risk of the tragic loss of life. I commend the Cattlemen's Association for its desire to participate in the search for lost people, and I am sure that it will enhance our abilities. However, I must say that that does not diminish the need for all people travelling in the remote parts of the Northern Territory to ensure they take steps to ensure that other people know where they are and where they are going. There should be reporting points so that searches can be initiated as soon as possible.

Tobacco Products Legislation

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

What has happened to the review of legislation relating to supply and sale of tobacco and tobacco products to minors?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there has been a total review of the consumer affairs legislation. I last had knowledge of the matter to which the honourable member refers when I was chairing a statute committee. Quite frankly, I am not quite sure what stage that review has reached. I will make inquiries and respond to the honourable member during the course of these sittings.

Cullen Bay Marina

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

The recent environmental impact statement prepared for the Cullen Bay marina proposal has come under some criticism from someone reportedly representing the Northern Territory Environment Centre. Does the environmental impact statement comply with the requirements of the act?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, like the honourable member, I was somewhat surprised to hear the comments made the other morning by a person representing the Environment Centre regarding the Cullen Bay project. During the radio interview, she effectively made 3 points: the need for the project was never established, the ultimate cost to the public was not known, and the EIS failed to meet published Conservation Commission guidelines. I failed to see what a couple of those points had to do with the Environment Centre.

The comment that the need for the project was never established was a rather remarkable statement because the need for a marina in Darwin is very well established. In fact, the present proposal is the fifth put forward for a marina that I am aware of. I think the first proposal was made as far back as 1979. Currently, there are 200-plus privately-owned keel yachts in the Darwin sailing community which have to be either lifted on to dry land or relocated to one of the limited number of safe inner harbour moorings each wet season. I think 200-plus private keel yachts is more than enough to justify private enterprise looking at the development of a marina. Apart from that, from what I have seen of it, a substantial number of residential blocks will be incorporated into the overall development.

It is interesting to note that the advice from the developers is that options, and I stress that they are options, have already been placed over every residential block incorporated in the project. Therefore, I think I have fairly well substantiated the fact that there is a need for the project, and I totally refute the statement by the Environment Centre that the need for the project was never established.

With regard to the second point, that the ultimate cost to the public was not known, all those issues have been addressed in the EIS, and the environmental assessment process identified a number of potential contingent liabilities against which the Northern Territory should be protected. It is the normal course of events that the government looks very closely at the matters of ongoing costs that will ultimately affect the public purse. Covenants on these matters, including such things as the unforeseen need to re-dredge the basin or to replenish sand, for example, on the new beach, have all been recommended for inclusion in any possible lease that may be developed.

The Minister for Transport and Works said quite clearly on radio this morning that the government had considered the option of ultimately building the ferry terminal. I think the original proposal was that it be located at the Parliament Park. It would be a logical step that any such development of a ferry terminal should be considered in association with the marina development if it were suitable and cost beneficial to the government. The costs of upgrading the services to the boundary have been identified by the government. They are minor. It is important to note, I think, that any of the subdivisional headworks that are required within the bounds of the development project will certainly not be undertaken at the expense of the government. They are at the expense of the developer.

As I have mentioned, a few other things, such as the upkeep of and responsibility for the new beach that would possibly be created with this development, are matters that are addressed in the development lease and the government is ensuring that its position is protected. I can assure representatives of the Environment Centre that we have been very responsible in identifying the ongoing costs to the government, and I think that it should not look past the fact that extra revenue will be raised through the establishment of a large development such as this which incorporates such a large number of residential buildings.

With regard to point 3, that the EIS failed to meet published Conservation Commission guidelines, the intention of the environmental assessment legislation is to ensure that matters with potentially significant environmental impact are fully examined to allow them to be taken into account during the decision-making process. This has been done in connection with this project to the government's satisfaction. In conclusion, I might add that the Commonwealth assessment authorities agree with the assessment of the Conservation Commission over this proposal. The Commonwealth is involved because of the proximity of the Larrakeyah Defence Reserve. The Commonwealth government has agreed with the Northern Territory Conservation Commission that there is no major constraint, on environmental grounds, to the project proceeding.

Any statement that suggests that the government has acted improperly or that the requirements of an EIS have not been carried out to the fullest possible extent is outlandish. It is based on no facts at all and personally I would like to commend all the persons from the Conservation Commission to the developers and to every other government authority involved in the preparation of that EIS because, from what I saw of it as it was processed through the public service, it was handled efficiently and professionally. I believe that, ultimately, the development will come to fruition and it will be an outstanding success. It will be a great addition and contribute to a better lifestyle for the residents of Darwin.

Reassessment of Road Design to Reduce Death Toll

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

In view of the increased death toll on our roads, and considering that an increase in alcohol consumption is not to blame for these accidents, will he undertake to examine all aspects of road construction, road sign placement, road alignment, materials used in road construction and in the erection of signs and any other relevant matter to reduce the road toll?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am astounded that the member for Koolpinyah should suggest that alcohol is not related to road deaths. It is a well-established fact

Mrs Padgham-Purich: Not the last 2 deaths in the rural area.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, I did not catch the interjection from the member for Koolpinyah but, quite simply, she suggested that alcohol was not an influencing factor in road accidents. It is quite well established that it is. It is not the only factor, of course, and this government has addressed itself to all factors contributing towards our road accident statistics, including some of the aspects that the honourable member has raised. She would well know that expenditure on roads has been a very high priority with this government.

At self-government, we inherited a road system that was under-capacity and unsafe. Whilst we have come a long way since then, I am not suggesting for a minute that we should stop now. Despite tight monetary constraints, we are still allocating adequate funds for the extension of our road system and, more particularly, adequate road maintenance. We are currently reviewing signs and I am pleased to announce that I will shortly be taking to Cabinet a policy paper on the construction and erection of signs along the highway. We need not only to take into account the matter of commercial benefit to people who wish to put up signs - and it is important that businesses are identified - but also to ensure that such signs do not constitute a safety hazard. There are standards which relate to the construction of signs and the policy paper refers to these as well as to the location of signs in relation to bends, intersections, other signs and distance from the road itself.

The government is paying a great deal of attention to road safety. We are not only concerned about the safety of Territorians but also of tourists. The number of visitors using the Stuart Highway is increasing dramatically, particularly the number towing caravans. This increase is a result of the promotion of tourism in the Northern Territory generally. Mr Speaker, the south road from Adelaide to Alice Springs has been surfaced for its entire length, a project that you and a number of committees in the Alice Springs area strongly advocated in the early days. To your great credit, these efforts convinced federal and South Australian governments that it was worth while to construct a high-standard road which is now being used by a phenomenal number of tourists with caravans. Many of these people are not used to travelling long distances or towing vehicles which are not particularly stable.

Towing a caravan is something that needs to be taken very seriously and the Tourist Commission, together with the Department of Transport and Works, has been compiling pamphlets to assist tourists to become aware of hazards and safety factors. Information is being distributed through interstate tourist bureaus and automobile associations. It concerns dangers on Territory roads, including the unique local problem of road trains. Some sections of the highway, particularly between Alice Springs and Tennant Creek, still require widening to bring them up to national standard. We are also considering constructing information bays at each of the borders to advise caravaners about practical ways of avoiding accidents when they are travelling in the Northern Territory.

During the debate on amendments to the Traffic Act, I mentioned regulations which cover separation of caravans which is another extremely important matter. Caravaners like to make new friends in the course of their travels. That is important; it makes their travels all the more meaningful. However, it is very important that such people appreciate the importance of allowing a reasonable distance between their vehicles on the open highway. Caravans should be separated by a minimum of 200 m and that requirement has been incorporated into the act.

Mr Bell: You cannot put that in a third different way, can you, Fred?

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, for the benefit of the member for MacDonnell, it may very well be necessary to put it in a fourth way, but I will keep on trying to reinforce for honourable members of this House, and for the general public, the importance of road safety. I very much thank the member for Koolpinyah - misdirected though she is in her comments about alcohol - for her question.

To return to the original point made about alcohol in the question, it is very important that people are aware that, when the Traffic Act comes into place, there will be minimum penalties associated with alcohol-related offences. It is important for people to know that there will be no way that they will be able to go to the magistrate and offer a sob story that they did not really mean to drive with a blood-alcohol level in excess of the limit. They will be subjected to a predictable minimum penalty, and that is extremely important. We will be saying more in the media about that later. Justification for that is in the statistics. A clear correlation has been observed between alcohol consumption and the ability of drivers to drive carefully and avoid accidents. This government is justified in maintaining its 0.08% level, and intends to do so. The government intends to make sure that the travelling public is aware of those requirements.

Water and Sewerage Charges

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

When will the new water and sewerage charges announced in last week's Territory budget be implemented, and will consumers be faced with retrospective charges?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am in a position now to answer that question in more detail than I was able to give when it was asked by the Leader of the Opposition last week. The regulations have now been changed to accommodate the charges. The increases and charges are applicable from 1 October 1987. For water, there will be the introduction of a flat rate of 30¢ per kilolitre for all urban consumers in the Northern Territory. Prior to 1 October 1987, the charge was 25¢ per kilolitre, up to 1000 kL, and 30¢ per kilolitre for amounts in excess of that.

From 1 October 1987, sewerage charges will be $215, irrespective of the number of toilets covered. The charge prior to that date was $200 per annum, so the charge from 1 July 1987 to 30 September 1987 will be at the rate of $200 per annum for up to 2 toilets which is $50 for that quarter, and an additional $75 per unit or $18.75 per quarter.

Mr Speaker, people in Housing Commission accommodation already pay for up to 500 kL of water, and sewerage charges are paid as part of their rent. Consequently, the impact on Housing Commission tenants will not be as great as was first indicated. I can advise honourable members, for the benefit of their constituents, that the Customer Advisory Service Centre, now established in the old NTEC offices on the ground floor in the Jape Plaza, is available to assist anybody who has any further inquiries about the charges. If people contact that office, the staff there will be pleased to supply them with additional information on their individual utilisation of these services.

With regard to Housing Commissions rents, the increases will apply from 26 October. I think that answers the question for the member for Jingili and it is consistent with the answer that I gave to the Leader of the Opposition that we would not get involved in retrospective charging for services.

Block H Finnis River

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer him to the contract signed in February this year and to his previous answer in which he said he sighted this particular contract. Is he able to tell the Assembly whether that contract was signed by his now-disgraced predecessor, the honourable member for Casuarina ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member for MacDonnell will withdraw that remark.

Mr BELL: I withdraw that remark, Mr Speaker.

Can the Minister for Lands and Housing please tell the Assembly whether that contract was signed by his predecessor, the member for Casuarina, or was it in fact signed by the Treasurer who had done the deal without the knowledge of his predecessor, the member for Casuarina?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have already stated to the member for MacDonnell that I have seen no reason to view the contract of sale or any of the relevant documentation relating to the sale of Block H, Finnis River.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The answer must be relevant to the question. I point out to the minister that I asked who had signed it, not whether the document itself was public information or not.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, in asking his question, the member for MacDonnell, specifically commented that the Minister for Lands and Housing had stated that he had sighted the document. Quite clearly, this morning, the minister has said that he has not sighted the document. That was a clear preface to the question.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, I think I said last week that the member for MacDonnell is as thick as 2 bricks.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will withdraw that remark.

Mr HANRAHAN: I withdraw it unreservedly, Mr Speaker, because we all know that there are thicker things around.

Mr Speaker, I do not know how often I have to say to the member for MacDonnell that I have seen no reason to have before me the relevant documents relating to the contract of sale or any of the mortgages. I have said the deal stands alone. I have said to the member for MacDonnell that I am aware of the sale price, the terms and the interest, and that is all that I am aware of. If the member for MacDonnell would like to enlighten me on specifics relating to the contract of sale, including who signed it, I will attempt to find the answer to his questions. If he wishes to accuse me of having stated previously that I have sighted this particular document - and I know that I have never said such a thing - I am quite happy to repeat the same answer if he keeps on asking the same question.

The honourable member for MacDonnell has proposed a matter of public importance for discussion immediately after question time and, no doubt, he will be raising a few more questions. Perhaps we should give him the opportunity to list everything that he wants to know so that, by 11 o'clock, I would be in a position to give him some answers.

Radioactive Waste Disposal Proposal

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

A few days ago, the federal Minister for Primary Industries and Energy mentioned that he is waiting on the Territory's advice about a facility for radioactive waste disposal? What is the Territory proposing?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to answer this question because it is proving to be a fairly interesting subject at the moment. In the NT News of 14 September, there was a headline, 'Centre Warns on Waste Transport'. The article read:

The Northern Territory Environment Centre warned today about the potential hazards of transporting nuclear waste long distances to a disposal facility in the Territory. A centre spokesman, Ms Catherin Paul, was reacting to a report that the federal government would look sympathetically at a submission for a nuclear waste disposal facility in the Territory.

In the article, Mr Kerin was quoted as saying that 'such a facility was an important national service', and he indicated that the federal government was keen to see a safe and satisfactory method of waste disposal introduced into Australia. As a consequence of that article, the member for MacDonnell decided to go where he normally goes when he wants to beat something up - to the media once again. In the NT News of 15 September, there was a headline 'Bell Will Fight Nuclear Waste Facility'. The article read:

The MacDonnell member, Mr Neil Bell, has warned he will fight any moves to have a nuclear waste disposal facility established in his electorate. 'My electorate has been targeted as a possible site and I cannot sit by', he said today. 'I am deeply concerned that, out of nowhere, the Territory and federal governments have decided a nuclear waste facility can be built in the Territory.

Mr Speaker, in the Centralian Advocate of 16 September, he was quoted as saying that the Territory should be made aware that it was federal Labor Party policy that an extension of the nuclear industry was unacceptable. I think we can read in there 'under any circumstances'. Mr Kerin was quoted as saying that the facility would store only low-level radioactive waste produced in Australia and that the facility would not include nuclear wastes from other countries.

We then had our representative in the House of Representatives, Mr Snowdon, make a farcical maiden speech in that forum. He followed that with a question to Mr Kerin using the term 'high-level nuclear waste disposal'. Perhaps he was trying to beat up the issue or trying to mislead the federal parliament. Given the public comments of Mr Kerin and the articles in the NT News, I have no idea where he got the idea that it would be a high-level nuclear waste disposal facility. He went on ABC radio the other day and talked about how we intended to import nuclear waste for disposal at this facility. He raved on about all types of nuclear reactors and completely and utterly misrepresented the situation. I accuse the member for MacDonnell of doing likewise in relation to his constituents.

Mr Speaker, let me enlighten the 2 representatives of the Labor Party who say that, under no circumstances, will they expand the nuclear industry in Australia. Let me tell these people what this is all about.

Mr Bell: What part of Wanguri do you want it in, Don? Come on, tell us.

Mr DALE: You have been educated once today. Sit down and let it happen again.

Mr Speaker, Australia has a long-standing problem in relation to the disposal of low-level radioactive wastes generated by medicine, research and industry which vitally affects his constituents. A Consultative Committee on Radionuclide Waste has discussed and examined this problem for 7 years. About 50 m³ of low-level, radioactive waste is generated annually in Australia. Storage is a constant problem and disposal is the only solution. No decision has yet been taken and Cabinet will soon consider whether a proposal should be developed.

There is a current inventory of about 1000 m³ of low-level wastes awaiting disposal. This is increasing by approximately 50 m³ per year - if you like, equivalent in size to 50 bags of party ice. The consultative committee has reported on detailed disposal methods and site suitability criteria and has given a list of areas in Australia warranting further investigation. A number of sites considered suitable by the committee are, in fact, in the Northern Territory. I make the point that it was that committee that identified the suitable sites in the Northern Territory. It was not, as indicated by the federal member, the Northern Territory government. The Commonwealth and all states agree that a national disposal facility is required. The need for a facility is not in dispute. Current storage arrangements pose a far greater threat to future generations of Australians than a properly-sited and established disposal facility would.

Let me put the scaremongering of the member for MacDonnell and the member for the Northern Territory in the House of Representatives at rest. We are talking about wastes that are generated through the use of things like X-ray equipment. We are not talking about nuclear reactors or Pine Gap or about any of those things over which the federal member seems to be hell-bent on misleading the federal government and the people of the Northern Territory. I hope that this has put the matter into perspective. I will be making a submission to Cabinet in due course so that Cabinet can consider whether or not we should make further inquiries into this subject. If the proposal is developed, a full range of consultation with interested individuals and organisations will occur.

Motor Accidents Compensation Scheme

Mr PALMER to TREASURER

In view of concerns expressed in the Journal of the Royal Automobile Club of Victoria by the local tourist industry, can he assure the Territory public that all visitors to the Territory are covered by the Motor Accidents Compensation Act Scheme?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is a good question because a considerable amount of unrest was generated by the article, not only for those tourists who were entering into the Territory but also for Territorians who were leaving the Territory to travel interstate. The Territory Insurance Office has written to the General Manager of the Royal Automobile Club of Victoria whose name, I think, is Mr Drinkwater. The letter from the Chairman of TIO refers to the August 1987 issue of Royal Auto, the Journal of the Royal Automobile Club of Victoria, and says:

Discussion with the author of the article indicates that it was prepared after only limited research and inadequate consultation with the Territory Insurance Office. The article claims that non-residents of the Northern Territory driving Territory-registered vehicles, either inside or outside the Northern Territory, have no third-party cover in respect of injuries for which they are found to be liable. This is incorrect. Section 6 of the Motor Accidents Compensation Act provides an indemnity in such circumstances. The abolition of common law rights, which is an inherent part of the Territory's no-fault accident compensation scheme, applies only to Territory residents. Non-residents have the same rights to sue at common law and have the same protection in respect of third parties as they would have under the traditional third-party compensation schemes existing elsewhere in Australia.

Having pointed out the errors in the article, the letter from the TIO Chairman asks for a correction in the next issue of the magazine. Letters have also been sent to all hire-car firms in the Territory enclosing a copy of the letter to the automobile club. I understand that there has been concern amongst proprietors of these firms in relation to the legal position of non-resident drivers visiting the Territory. We are waiting for the next issue of the Journal of the Royal Automobile Club of Victoria in the hope that it will contain the necessary correction so that people's minds can be put at rest in relation to insurance matters and motor travel in the Northern Territory.

Ministerial Travel Costs within the Northern Territory

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he confirm that, during the last financial year and excluding Cabinet travel, over 90% of his air travel within the Northern Territory was by charter plane and that the cost of that charter travel was $95 000? Secondly, can he confirm that the cost of charter travel in the Northern Territory undertaken by ministers and their staff during the last financial year was in excess of $225 000?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot confirm those figures off the top of my head but I will check them and respond to the Leader of the Opposition. I want to say quite clearly that my ministers and I take our responsibilities seriously. We recognise that we are a government for the whole of the Northern Territory and that it is therefore important for us to travel and speak with as many people as possible in as many parts of the Northern Territory as possible. That cannot be done by travelling by any means other than charter aircraft.

I have certainly spent a considerable amount of time in charter aircraft moving around the Northern Territory to carry out my responsibilities, as have my ministers. I do not apologise for that and, more importantly, I will encourage my ministers to move around the Northern Territory to carry out their ministerial responsibilities and to consult widely with Territorians. This is the only way we can reflect properly attitudes in all parts of the Territory and not, as some people would prefer, those of Darwin alone.

During the last 12 months, I have been amazed to see the Leader of the Opposition rushing to the media to criticise me whenever I go to places like Alice Springs, Tennant Creek or Borroloola. The moment I leave Darwin, he jumps up and criticises me for being out of my office and not getting on with the job of governing the Northern Territory. For goodness sake! Alice Springs, Yulara, Hermannsburg, Borroloola and a multitude of other places are in the Northern Territory. I can visit such places and I should do so, particularly in these days of modern communications when facsimile facilities and telephones link distant places. Government in the Northern Territory inevitably means travelling. You cannot understand the Territory without it. If the Leader of the Opposition travelled rather more and whinged rather less, the Territory would be a far better place.

Chief Ministerial Travel Costs

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Can the Chief Minister confirm that his total travel bill last financial year was $180 000? Secondly, can he confirm that the interstate travel bill for his personal staff was approximately $80 000 last financial year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, if the Leader of the Opposition has a string of questions about my travel costs, I am quite happy to get the details. I am not ashamed of them. Yes, I did a great deal of travelling last year and it all was for the benefit of the Northern Territory.

Commercial Television Outside Darwin

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

When will Territorians living outside Darwin receive commercial television services?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members will recall that, earlier this year, following the withdrawal of court action challenging the decision of the Licensing Tribunal, the central Australian group, Imparja, became the undisputed holder of the RCTS licence. That entails an obligation to use its best endeavours to commence broadcasts by January 1988 to Territorians outside the Darwin area who are not covered by commercial television. At about the time when the court action ceased, talks commenced between Imparja and at least 2 other parties with a view to the possibility of establishing a joint venture to run the licence. At that time, the Territory government supported the view that a joint venture between the 2 original applicants for the licence would be most appropriate, and that view was made known. We felt that such an arrangement would have led to the earliest possible commencement of commercial television services to Territorians. In particular, areas such as Alice Springs, Katherine and Tennant Creek could possibly have had commercial television perhaps even by now through the microwave link that is available.

A fair amount of correspondence has passed between myself and Imparja over the past several months but, despite that, it is difficult to obtain accurate up-to-date information on the progress Imparja is making towards putting its service to air. Earlier this year, following advice from the federal government in June that the Northern Territory government would be receiving substantially less funding from the Commonwealth in 1987-88 than it received in 1986-87, and our recognition of the serious plight in which that placed the Northern Territory government from the point of view of its own 1987-88 budget, Imparja was advised in writing that the Northern Territory government would have to reconsider its offer to purchase a package of television services for remote areas of the Territory. It was clear that the government could not commit its scarce resources as generously as it had previously intended, indeed as it had previously undertaken to do at the licensing hearings. Honourable members will be aware of those facts because they are on the public record. However, it was obvious that Imparja should be advised immediately that the federal government had made its decision, and the Treasurer, as acting minister, wrote on 15 June, advising Imparja of that.

In saying that, I am not saying that the government will not utilise the services of commercial television when it is available to areas of the Territory outside Darwin. Indeed, the Territory government looks forward to the commencement of that service so that it can use that medium to communicate as a government with Territorians on appropriate occasions. I am informed that Imparja has now decided not to enter any joint venture arrangements with any party, and that is certainly its prerogative, although I confess to being a little surprised that it did not take the opportunity to spread some of the costs of running a television service which, I am advised, are very substantial. That has caused Imparja some difficulty in calculating the costs to provide services to Territorians, particularly services which will be broadcast to those areas outside the range of the microwave link. That refers to Katherine, Tennant Creek and Alice Springs.

As I have said, it is difficult for me to keep up with the intentions and actions of Imparja. Certainly, it is not responsible to me. We do our best to keep up to date with Imparja. However, I am advised that Imparja intends to commence broadcasting in about mid-January 1988 which is certainly in accordance with its licence. Recently, I noticed advertisements in the local press seeking applicants to man the television station, and I hope that it receives many very good applications. Also, I hope that that date of mid-January does see the commencement of commercial television services to that half of the population in the Northern Territory which, until now, has had access only to ABC television. Perhaps, with the special dishes available these days, some people may pick up some other services from interstate. However, primarily, Territorians outside the Darwin area have been limited to ABC television and it is certainly time that they were able to receive a proper commercial television service as does most of the rest of Australia.

Finniss River Excision for White Eagle Aboriginal Corporation

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer to his answer to a question put by the member for MacDonnell on Wednesday 16 September. In that answer, he stated that negotiations were continuing for an excision in favour of Aboriginal people in the Finniss River area. What steps have been taken by his department since February of this year to provide for that excision for the White Eagle Aboriginal Corporation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, for the benefit of the member for Stuart, the member for MacDonnell has already asked that question. After my request relating to Block H Finniss River, the member for MacDonnell delivered to me 3 pages of questions. Answers to those questions are being formulated. One of those questions relates to the action taken for the provision of an excision on the Finniss River property for the White Eagle Aboriginal Corporation. I hope to have written answers provided to the member for MacDonnell prior to the debate on the matter of public importance this afternoon.

ANSWER TO QUESTION Chief Ministerial Travel Costs

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister)(by leave): Mr Speaker, I have had an opportunity to extract some of the details of my travel expenditure during the course of last year and I would like to outline them briefly. Information that I have available to me indicates that the total cost of my travel in the 1986-87 financial year was $148 487, of which $95 533 was for charter flights. That is combined intra-Territory, interstate and overseas travel.

Those figures include some 66 nights interstate or overseas on government business. I spent considerably more nights than that outside of Darwin but within the Northern Territory during the last 12 months. In no way do I apologise for that. I have nothing to be ashamed of in relation to any trip I have made and I am prepared to justify any trip. If the Leader of the Opposition wishes to continue this nonsensical line of questioning, I would appreciate his explaining to Northern Territory people the benefits the Northern Territory gained from his 20 nights' interstate travel and how much intra-Territory travel he has done. If there has been benefit to the Northern Territory, why has he undertaken no interstate travel since April, and what is he doing to brief himself on the realities of the Northern Territory?

Small Claims Court

Mr FIRMIN to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Are any moves under way to ease the burden on magistrates in relation to small claims hearings and has any consideration been given to lifting the monetary limits on the jurisdiction of the Small Claims Court?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in response to the first part of the question, a number of mechanisms are being considered. There is a proposal to redraft small claims application forms to make them more understandable both to applicants and defendants. It is suggested that this would result in clearer applications to the Small Claims Court which would enable disputes to be settled more effectively by parties involved, including the magistrates.

Another proposal that is being considered is the introduction of a process to enable a defendant to admit a claim when he receives an application. That would allow the matter to be settled more quickly. It has been suggested that a position of registrar be created in the local courts where small claims are heard and that that registrar be given the power to hold pre-trial conferences on small claim matters. Obviously, that mechanism would allow parties to settle matters out of court and reduce the number of disputes which would have to be heard by magistrates.

In answer to the second part of the question, it has been suggested that the Small Claims Act be amended to lift the limit to $5000 or even above. Obviously, there must be some reservations about adopting that suggestion. First of all, our statistics show that the majority of claims settled under the act tend to be for fairly small amounts and I do not think it has been established whether there is a demand for an increase or not. Consideration must be given to the point that such a move would make it worth while for litigants with greater financial resources to employ counsel to appear for them, while opposing parties in those matters might not have those resources. Therefore, we would be bringing matters into the lower courts that had been set aside to enable the average person to be able to settle them without going to a great deal of expense.

It may be appropriate to increase the limit to some degree. The economic fluctuations and exchange rates obviously have some relevance to the sort of limits that we should be looking at in our courts. Most other areas of jurisdiction have limits set around the $3000 to $5000 mark. Clearly, we are required to take cognisance of what is occurring in the rest of the country. However, no firm decision has been made on either of those matters, and I will be considering those issues most carefully before I move to implement any changes in those areas.

Chief Minister's Overseas Trip

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Last week he undertook to provide to this House details of the cost of his planned overseas trip. Is he in a position to give us that information today and, secondly, will any parts of that trip be undertaken by charter aircraft?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I apologise to the Leader of the Opposition. I will try to have that information made available during the course of today's question time. With respect to the overseas trip, I believe there may be a requirement to use a charter aircraft for travel from Athens to Kalymnos. I will confirm that when I see the details of the program. I will try to obtain that information before the end of question time today. People in the Department of the Chief Minister are in the process of making arrangements for the trip and, whilst the itinerary has been established, the making of telephone calls and the confirmation of bookings is a matter I normally leave to my staff. I will, however, advise the honourable member.

Future Operation of Lameroo Lodge

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Has an agreement been signed for the future operation of Lameroo Lodge and, if so, what is the name of the successful applicant?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the arrangement has been finalised. It took some time to sort out the details. As a result of our call for expressions of interest, 3 serious proposals were lodged and I am able to announce that Tchia Anthony Travel Accommodation Catering, known as TATAC, is the successful tenderer. It is important to note that the government has taken steps to ensure that covenants and guarantees for specific performance are placed on the successful tenderer so that work is done to upgrade the facility as soon as possible. There is a development covenant of about $910 000 and a performance guarantee of $150 000. The actual lease was signed by the Secretary of the Department of Lands and Housing on 11 September 1987.

Installation Costs of Rural Telephones

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In an answer in the Assembly last week, he stated that the cost of installation of a rural telephone will rise from $1390 to $6240. I am advised by Telecom that there will be an increase in cost for the installation of a rural telephone, but that it will be from $1390 to $1410 - in other words, a $20 increase. Where did he obtain the information concerning the cost increase that he outlined, and will he now concede that that information is wrong?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, just at this moment, I cannot lay my hands on the document I was quoting from. If the Leader of the Opposition refers to Hansard ...

Mr Smith: I did.

Mr PERRON: I said that it was intended by Telecom to make that particular increase, not that Telecom had made the increase. In fact, I think the matter may be going before the Prices Surveillance Authority. The Leader of the Opposition shakes his head.

Mr Smith: I think you had better check.

Mr PERRON: Does Telecom not have to go before the Prices Surveillance Authority?

Mr Smith: It is not going to increase the charge. It is pretty outrageous stuff, when you think about it, chucking around accusations like that.

Mr PERRON: Mr Speaker, if my publicity on this matter has altered Telecom's course, I would be very pleased to claim the credit for it. However, I will re-examine Hansard, and the document that I quoted from when I was answering the question last week, to establish clearly that the words I used were that Telecom was intending the increase, rather than that it had made the increase.

Petty Cash Expenditure by Chief Minister's Department

Mr REED to CHIEF MINISTER

Is he aware of the news item yesterday which stated that the Department of the Chief Minister had spent $200 000 on petty cash items in 1 month in the 1986-87 financial year, and was that news item accurate?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am aware of a news item alleging that the Department of the Chief Minister had spent $200 000 on petty cash items in 1 month in the 1986-87 financial year. I understand that was yet another of these allegations so flagrantly thrown around by the Leader of the Opposition in his vain attempts to demonstrate somehow that the Northern Territory government is not managing its money efficiently and effectively.

Mr Speaker, we did not spend $200 000 on petty cash items in 1 month. What I believe the Leader of the Opposition is referring to is the increase arranged in the departmental cheque account in June 1987. That payment was arranged in the department to facilitate prompt payment of end-of-year accounts for local traders and ministers. The Leader of the Opposition laughs. I would urge him not to joke about this because he is about to get egg right across his face.

Payments through the Accounting Service Centre ceased for 10 working days to enable normal end-of-year financial processing. Our government has a determination to ensure prompt payment of accounts and the department took steps to ensure that the facility was available to continue the prompt payment of accounts from the Department of the Chief Minister despite the end-of-year processing. Nevertheless, there was an even more fundamental reason at that time. I remind honourable members that, at that time, we were in the middle of a significant industrial dispute with the public service. There was a real threat that the public service unions would seek to use their membership in the cheque processing areas to cut off the payment of cheques and, equally, to cut off the payment of salaries to public servants. Officers of my department took precautionary measures to ensure that they could counteract any such industrial action by the trade unions and to ensure that departmental staff could be paid at the appropriate time. The reasons were: first, to make sure accounts could continue to be processed and, secondly, to counteract potential industrial action, which was a real threat at that time. I commend the department on having the foresight to take those precautionary steps.

Training of Apprentices

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

How does the number of apprentices receiving training at the Darwin Institute of Technology this year compare with the numbers during the past 2 years and what are the Territory-wide figures for apprentices during the same period?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the data that I have received from the Darwin Institute of Technology shows that 821 apprentices are receiving training at the Darwin Institute of Technology. As it happens, there were also 821 apprentices at the Darwin Institute of Technology last year, although this was an increase of nearly 30 over 1985 when there were 793. Throughout the Territory, 1116 apprentices are receiving training from either the Darwin Institute of Technology or the Alice Springs College of TAFE or are doing some of their training interstate. This compares with 1120 last year and 1061 the year before.

It is interesting to note that the number of apprentices going interstate for training has steadily declined from 108 in 1985 to 103 in 1986, down to 83 this year. At the same time, there has been a marked increase in the number of apprentices studying at the Alice Springs College of Technical and Further Education, formerly the Community College of Central Australia. Numbers there have risen from 160 in 1985 to 196 in 1986 and 212 this year. The decline in students going interstate for training is largely the result of increasing numbers of apprenticeship courses being offered in the Territory. Another reason, which also explains why enrolments at the DIT have remained static, is the downturn in the building industry. I am advised that the slight decrease in the overall number of apprentices is due to lower numbers of apprentices being taken on this year in the building industry and associated trades. This was not unexpected in the present economic climate, and it will certainly pick up again as the industry recovers from its slump. There has also been a drop in the number of apprentices commencing in the food and hospitality industry and this can be attributed, at least in part, to the effect of the fringe benefits tax on this previously-growing industry.

I believe that, overall, the Territory has done well to maintain its apprenticeship numbers in the face of an adverse economic climate. It is also due to the initiative of organisations such as the Master Builders Association which, in combination with the government, have developed unique schemes to allow apprentices to train in areas where there is fluctuation and where economic factors can affect intake numbers. Such innovative steps have enabled us to keep constant the number of young people who have opportunities to learn trades in the Territory.

Block H at Finnis River

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he assure the House and the Territory public that neither he nor any of his ministers or former ministers have, or have had, any direct or indirect financial interest in the purchase or sale of Block H at Finnis River Station?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, members of the Assembly are required to register publicly statements of their interests. For the benefit of the member opposite, who has been digging away at this matter for some time without a skerrick of evidence, I want to state very clearly that I have no financial interest in that particular block of land or any other block of land in the Northern Territory, Australia or the world other than my own home block. Everything that I have an interest in, either directly or indirectly, is stated in the records of the Northern Territory Legislative Assembly.

I have heard allegations, obviously spread by the opposition, particularly during the lead-up to the Northern Territory election, about certain ministers having an interest in that particular block. I have spoken with the ministers mentioned in the rumours and have been assured categorically that they have no interest whatsoever in the block. It is one of the most scurrilous pieces of muckraking and gutter raking that I have ever heard. It was used as part of an ongoing campaign by members of the opposition to dig around in the dirt, to find anything they could, to spread any rumours they liked in order to try and discredit this government. They have nothing to run with. There is nothing improper in the dealings with the Finnis River block. To my knowledge, none of my ministers - and I have been assured of this in response to inquiries I have made - has any interest in that block.

Document Relating to Member for Barkly

Mr COLLINS to CHIEF MINISTER

On the front page of the NT News of 9 December 1986, there was an article headed: "Here is the proof" - CM'. It stated in part: 'Queried strongly about his claim to irrefutable proof, Mr Hatton reached into his office desk drawer and produced an official document detailing Mr Tuxworth's disloyalty'. Was the official document mentioned in the article a statutory declaration sworn by one Jeffrey Kenneth Brenton of Lake Evella via Nhulunbuy and, if so, to how many members of the CLP parliamentary wing did he show the document before that date?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that has absolutely nothing to do with my ministerial responsibilities or the government. It is an internal party matter. I do not intend to debate the matter in this House.

Vehicle Encumbrance Legislation

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Vehicle encumbrance legislation has been under review since the middle of last year. An announcement was made during the election campaign in March that it would be completed before the end of the year. When is this matter of vital importance to vehicle purchasers likely to be completed?

ANSWER

The matter of motor vehicle encumbrances was raised during last year's Consumer Affairs Review undertaken by the then Minister for Community Development. The responsibility for implementing such a scheme has been handed to the Department of Transport and Works as being the appropriate body in that the Motor Vehicle Registry already has computer facilities and keeps records on all motor vehicles registered in the Territory.

In assessing the best way to handle the approximately 25 000 motor vehicles involved in registration encumbrances in the Territory, we had a couple of options. One was to look at schemes in place interstate. Some schemes have been in place for 2 or 3 years. The most suitable for our needs are those in Queensland and New South Wales. Negotiations are in progress with Queensland, in particular, to try to determine the cost of linking into its scheme. The final objective is to link into a national information network on motor vehicle encumbrances, but that is seen to be still some few years away.

The other option was to develop a stand-alone scheme for the Territory itself. The initial costs involved would be about $300 000 for the computer hardware and software programs, and about $100 000 per annum on recurring expenditure. Obviously, that was quite excessive if those costs were to be passed on to those wishing to utilise the system; that is, consumers, motor vehicle purchasers or potential purchasers, and the financiers who would want to have their interests safeguarded. On revision of that stand-alone system, it was found that it might be possible to cut those costs back to about $150 000 by utilising some second-hand computer ware etc. That is now seen to be a reasonably viable option. However, as I mentioned, we are also pursuing the potential of linking in with the Queensland system.

As for timing, I would hope that, some time during the early part of 1988, we will be able to implement a system within the Northern Territory that will be accessible to motor vehicle purchasers, who would wish to know, of course, whether the vehicle they had their eye on was under any encumbrance from a finance company, and to lenders of finance. Whilst it has been some 4 or 5 months since the announcement was made initially that we were entering into a scheme, things have progressed and I am very hopeful that we will have a most satisfactory system in place early next year.

Installation Costs of Rural Telephones

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

I refer to his answer of Wednesday 16 September 1987 where he said, in part, 'The cost of installation of rural telephones will rise from $1390 to $6240, and new telephone connections everywhere will have very long installation lead times'. In the light of that specific guarantee, which has now proved to be wrong, will he apologise here for misleading the Assembly?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will not apologise to the Assembly although, in answering a question earlier this morning, I undertook to seek some more information. May I say that, in all fairness to the House, perhaps the Leader of the Opposition should read the sentence preceding that which he has just quoted. I will read it for the enlightenment of honourable members: 'At present, Telecom plans to increase charges for installation of rural telephone services, and this relates directly to the honourable member's question and to outback Territorians'. Obviously, if Telecom plans had gone ahead, on the advice that I had, then the charges would have risen from $1390 to $6240.

Mr Smith: You need a new adviser.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The Leader of the Opposition will withdraw that remark.

Mr Smith: Mr Speaker, I withdraw it.

Mr PERRON: Mr Speaker, I have undertaken to seek further information and advise the House in due course. The Leader of the Opposition was being quite facetious in reading out that sentence and not the preceding one, which indicated what Telecom's plans were. I would hope that, in his dealings with Telecom, the Leader of the Opposition will put in an appeal on behalf of Territorians, particularly Territorians in remote areas, for Telecom to ease off its attacks on plans it had for the installation of telephones in remote areas for Australians. Telecom has to address certain cutbacks because of the Commonwealth government's imposition on it of some $380m-worth of charges from which it was formerly exempt. I hope that, in due course, the Leader of the Opposition can advise the Assembly not only that he has confirmed the accuracy of my statement with Telecom, but that he is using such influence as he may have with the federal government to influence this giant monopoly in Australia to play fairly with the lives of Territorians so that the services to Territorians are equivalent to the services provided to all other Australians.

Water Conservation Program

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What has been the effect of the public water conservation program which started a few weeks ago?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can advise the House that the water conservation program which the Power and Water Authority and the Water Directorate entered into some weeks ago has been successful in terms of a decrease in the utilisation of water. The consumption for the week ending 16 September was less than that in the equivalent period last year: 105 ML as compared with 120 ML last year. For those who prefer imperial measurements that is a drop from about 2.8 million gallons to 2.4 million gallons. There was a similar fall in consumption for the previous week as well.

The program has been very successful, and I thank the people who have become more conscious of the high cost of using water. For every litre we deliver, the government recoups about half the cost. It is a big cost to government and honourable members would be aware that, at the moment, the rural area is being investigated for potential sites for the development of larger dams to enable Darwin and the rural area to have a more constant supply of water as we approach the 1990s. Any savings that can be made by water conservation will help towards the high capital costs involved in constructing larger dams.

The Consumer Advisory Centre, which has been established in the old NTEC building in Cavenagh Street, has been inundated with suggestions and questions. Suppliers have brought to our attention a range of devices which assist in water conservation. I have also spoken to the Chief Minister and my ministerial colleagues because the most frequent complaint received by the Customer Advisory Centre is that government departments are using more water than necessary. We will be talking with various ministers about how they can become involved in conserving water. Once again, I thank all those people who have been involved in the program and ask them to keep up the good work.

Groote Eylandt Airport

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Are there any plans by the Northern Territory government or the federal government to extend or upgrade the Groote Eylandt airport?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, certainly I am not aware of any plans currently before the Northern Territory government or the federal Department of Transport in relation to the Groote Eylandt strip. Judging from my last visit, the strip is in a reasonable state and is long enough to handle most of our commuter aircraft up to F28 standard. I am not certain what the honourable member is referring to. Maybe he is referring to the terminal facilities which I found to be somewhat inadequate during my last visit. These facilities are possibly a responsibility of the mining company, and I will undertake to investigate the matter and, hopefully, have an answer for him tomorrow.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Tobacco Products Legislation

Mr DALE (Health and Community Services)(by leave): Mr Speaker, earlier in these sittings, the member for Sadadeen asked me a question pertaining to proposed legislation concerning the sale and supply of tobacco to children. The member for Sadadeen was Chairman of the Statute Review Committee last year and, in August or September of last year, he submitted a proposal, as chairman, that the government should review its legislation on this matter. The only relevant legislation which applies is the Children's Protection Act 1904 of South Australia which provides for a penalty of $10 in today's terms. Obviously, if we wish to address this particular problem, we would need much stronger legislation.

The committee went to a great deal of trouble to obtain public input on this issue which stirs the emotions of many people. As a result of those public considerations, the committee submitted proposals which would create a basic offence of selling or supplying tobacco products to a child with a maximum penalty of some $500. It would be an offence for a child to purchase from a vending machine, with a penalty of $50. Owners of machines would be subject to regulatory orders by the court if extensive use of vending machines by children was proved. Warning notices would be required at points of sale and on vending machines, and schools would be authorised to confiscate and destroy cigarettes in the possession of pupils.

Whilst the thrust of the proposals is obviously to be commended, they should be seen in the light of the government's desire to cut red tape and deregulate. It was unfortunate that the timing of the Statute Law Review Committee's recommendations coincided with the preselection process leading up to the last Northern Territory election because this meant that there was a period during which not a great deal of work was done on them. Since the elections, the Chief Minister has put in place various administrative arrangements to review all regulations attached to legislation and, of course, a Statute Law Review Committee will continue to review legislation. The sale of tobacco to children will take its place among the issues before those 2 bodies and I look forward to informing the Assembly about further developments on this matter.

Uniform Firearms Legislation

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

What is the government's position on uniform firearms legislation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is a topical matter of considerable interest in Australia, particularly after the tragic shootings which occurred when a person I can only describe as a crazed gunman went on the rampage in the VRD and Kimberley regions and, of course, the recent massacre in Melbourne. The Northern Territory Firearms Act was substantially revised in 1978, taking into account legislation in other states. Additionally, the legislation is compatible with the various points raised in an earlier resolution to the Australian Police Ministers' Council. In particular, machine-guns are prohibited in the Northern Territory and the legislation provides safeguards to prohibit the possession of semi-automatic weapons of military calibre with large-capacity magazines.

However, the government does not adopt a complacent attitude to these matters. Amending legislation will be brought before this House in relation to: the suspension of licences, permits and registration certificates and the immediate surrender or seizure of any firearms to which such suspended or revoked documents relate, as well as the documents themselves; the service of notices under the act; the making of appropriate offences provided for under the act; regulatory offences; and the provision of penalties for certain offences. In addition, the rights of appeal against decisions by the Police Commissioner to revoke licences are also being examined.

At its November meeting, the Australian Police Ministers' Council will consider the report of a working party which will examine national criteria for licensing shooters, creating a national firearms register, a uniform permit system, a uniform list of prohibited weapons and a practical test as a prerequisite for obtaining firearms.

The proposed legislation I have outlined is aimed at tightening up further the issue of firearms in the Northern Territory, particularly combined with the work that is occurring through the Australian Police Ministers' Council to address this very vexed problem. For example, one of our great difficulties in the Northern Territory at the moment is that, whilst our laws are quite stringent with respect to firearms, states such as Queensland have laws in this regard which can only be described as lax, and this provides an opportunity for people to transport legal and illegal weapons across the border into the Northern Territory. We understand that that occurred in the Kimberley murder case. That makes it essential that there be uniform gun laws throughout this country and that they be policed strictly.

Whilst the pro-gun lobby fights very hard for the right to hold and own weapons, there is an equal and compelling responsibility on governments and the community generally to ensure that guns are not in the hands of inappropriate people and that, where guns are allowed, they are properly controlled and their use restricted to minimise the risk of their being used to cause harm to persons or property.

Rationalisation of Planning Authorities

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Has he taken any action to rationalise the boundaries of jurisdiction of the Rural Planning Authority and, in so doing, change the boundaries of the Darwin Planning Authority and take into consideration a separate planning authority for the Cox Peninsula area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot answer the honourable member specifically. Could the member indicate whether she is talking about the Darwin Rural Region Strategy Plan that is currently under review?

Mrs Padgham-Purich: No, I am talking about the boundaries.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, a proposition has been circulated to government departments which addresses all the issues relating to the shire boundaries, the Darwin City Council boundaries, the future of Cox Peninsula and, of course, the Palmerston boundaries. In the near future, I expect to receive comments from government departments. I am more than happy for the member for Koolpinyah to peruse that document because, in the very near future, it will be made available for public comment. I certainly have no problems with the honourable member viewing it now.

Review of Adoption of Children Act

Mr FIRMIN TO MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

For quite some time now, I have been vitally interested, on behalf of my constituents, in the review of the Adoption of Children Act. When will this review to be completed and legislation placed before the Assembly?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the field of adoption of children has been subject to considerable scrutiny and assessment in recent years. The review of the Adoption of Children Act is proceeding in order to examine the need for amendments in the areas of inter-country adoption, step-parent adoptions and issues of contact between adoptees and their natural parents. Of course, that last issue is one that is proving to be of great interest to many people. It is a very emotional issue.

Research into the adoption legislation of other states has already begun. The report of the States and Territories Commonwealth Joint Committee on Inter-country Adoption has been received, and its recommendations are being examined. Public submissions have been sought from individuals and organisations to determine the area of community concern regarding adoption. In late 1986, I approved the following timetable for the review of the act: submissions from the public and from adoption agencies to be received by March 1987; discussion paper to be prepared and circulated to interested parties by April 1987; a Cabinet submission, seeking approval to prepare draft legislation by June 1987; draft legislation to go to Cabinet in October 1987; a draft bill to be in the Legislative Assembly between November 1987 and February 1988, to allow for public comment; and a revised bill to be introduced into the Assembly in April 1988.

While a delay in receiving some public submissions has caused some disruption to this timetable, a discussion paper has been developed and it will be available to the public in approximately 2 weeks. Copies will be sent to persons who have specifically expressed an interest. This paper sets out the issues involved, discusses alternatives, and puts forward proposed alternatives. It is envisaged that the revised bill I mentioned will now be introduced into the Assembly in June 1988.

Northern Territory Land Corporation

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

The Northern Territory Land Corporation has a trust account which appears in the quarterly financial statements along with all other trust accounts. For the 3 months ended 30 June 1987, the closing balance of that trust account is shown as $48 018. For the 3 months beginning 1 April, the opening balance is shown as zero. I do not expect the Treasurer to have the answer to my question, but I would appreciate him obtaining and supplying it. What happened to the $48 000 that was in the trust account at the end of one financial quarter, but was not there at the beginning of the next?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, if the information provided to me by the Leader of the Opposition is correct, I could suggest to him that that money was spent. I will endeavour to obtain further information for him during the course of these sittings, but the independence of the Northern Territory Land Corporation has been explained in the Assembly.

Northern Territory Land Corporation

I have a supplementary questions. Can I point out to the Treasurer who again has demonstrated an appalling ignorance about his own financial ...

Mr MANZIE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Leader of the Opposition is debating the matter and not asking a supplementary question. I think he is entirely out of order. He is supposed to be asking a question in an endeavour to elicit further information in relation to the answer to his question. Instead, he is giving a statement of his views on the matter.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, it is necessary in this context to go into a somewhat lengthy explanation so that the Treasurer will get the point of the question, which he obviously missed.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order, but the Leader of the Opposition should ask his question rather than debate the matter.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, my understanding is that the quarterly financial accounts are there so that, at the end of each quarter, there is an accurate record of transactions and the final balance. At the beginning of each quarter, there is an accurate record of the balance. Is the Treasurer suggesting that those financial accounts are inaccurate and that transactions may well take place which are not recorded in the quarterly statements?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will provide the Leader of the Opposition with that information during the course of these sittings.

Frances Bay Mooring Basin

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Mr Speaker, some 6 months ago the Australian Labor Party described the Frances Bay mooring basin as a white elephant. What benefits have accrued to the Darwin business community since the completion of the safe ship harbour?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will be as brief as the subject matter warrants. The subject matter is another good story of the Northern Territory, a good story that was bagged during the election campaign by one John Reeves, who was simply trying to put down the honourable member for Casuarina. The honourable member had no reason to be anything but proud of his efforts relating to the mooring basin. The mooring basin has been operating for almost 1 year.

Mr Collins: It's not big enough.

Mr FINCH: The member for Sadadeen is correct, and that only reflects the absolute success of that project.

The basin was constructed with a total of 85 berths. There are different ways that people can lease those berths. I understand that some 40 berths are permanently booked by fishing vessels. Companies are able to rotate boats in and out of their permanent facilities and have work done through the surrounding businesses. During the off-season, or off-seasons as they now are, the basin is absolutely chock-a-block with vessels of one kind or another, particularly fishing vessels for which the facility was originally designed.

The adjoining businesses include engineering, maintenance, ships' chandlers and other support services for the fishing industry. I am pleased to say that those businesses have experienced a tremendous increase in custom and the feedback is that they are providing an extremely efficient service to fishing boats during their brief stays in the basin. The fishermen have praised the performance of local businesses, and that is to the great credit of their operators. We have been able to attract fishing companies to establish their operations here in the Northern Territory, as opposed to returning to Broome, Fremantle or Cairns. Not only will business benefit from this, but families will reside here also, as opposed to drifting back interstate. That will provide valuable spin-offs to the whole community.

The basin was constructed for approximately $7m. Construction was carried out extremely efficiently, enabling boats to be berthed there prior to the last cyclone season, that being the principal purpose of the facility. When Cyclone Kay was approaching, the basin was fully occupied by fishing vessels and a number of small yachts that sought refuge. The Port Authority is operating the basin so as to recover operating costs only. The government is not seeking to pay for the capital investment through income from people utilising the facility. We see it as a community benefit and the operating costs, which I understand to be about $250 000 per annum, are offset by berth rentals to both permanent and casual users. Income to June is about $107 000 and we expect that the full-year income will be very close to the $250 000 expended. There have been minor hiccups. One reflected rather sadly on a contractor who, at one stage, attempted to hold us to ransom over some claims for additional funds, but that matter has now been settled and the basin is operating very efficiently.

That is not the end of the story. Some additional facilities will be required, and approximately 5 ha of land have been filled to the west of the basin entrance. That land is undergoing natural consolidation and we are looking at possible uses for it. Naturally, such uses will be related to the fishing industry. I foresee some additional support facilities being located there and, at present, we are considering short-term uses while the fill is consolidating. Definite long-term development will have to wait for a few years yet. The potential remains for us to provide a magnificent facility which will provide a great financial return to business and to the Territory generally.

Speed Limits on Territory Roads

Mr EDE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I refer to the horrendous death rates on our roads and the fact that we alone, throughout Australia, have no speed limits on our major highways or other roads outside built-up areas. Has he looked at any correlation between high speeds and unsealed roads in the Northern Territory, is there such a correlation between the 2, and has the government any intention of introducing a global speed limit on unsealed roads in the Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, road safety is an extremely serious matter. I am delighted that some honourable members have gone to the trouble of bringing forward matters of concern and I thank the member for his question. I condemn those who might treat road safety as trivial and the Leader of the Opposition seems to be putting himself into that category. We have a statutory limit of 110 km, which means simply that people who exceed that limit need to be able to illustrate that they are still driving with due care.

Whilst I do not have a finite breakdown of speed-related statistics, it is my perception that the majority of speed-related fatalities or serious accidents relate to people breaking the speed limits established in urban areas rather than those who are doing excessively high speeds out on the open road. The main contributing factor on the open road is fatigue, resulting in single vehicle accidents, and it appears that the actual speed component is not of great significance. In relation to travel on gravel roads, there may be some validity in the point the honourable member has made. I will undertake to have that aspect reviewed by the department and the Road Safety Council. The honourable member is quite correct. When travelling on gravel roads that are subject to seasonal deterioration, there is quite a dangerous situation, particularly with 4-wheel-drive vehicles which are inherently very unstable. I thank the honourable member for his question. I take it on board. Hopefully, I will be able to supply a comprehensive response at the next sittings.

ANSWER TO QUESTION Chief Minister's Overseas Trip

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister)(by leave): Mr Speaker, I refer to a question directed to me earlier by the Leader of the Opposition concerning my proposed overseas trip. The Leader of the Opposition sought information about the total cost of the trip, which I undertook to provide earlier in these sittings. He also asked whether charter flights would be used at any stage.

Mr Speaker, again I must apologise. The head of the Protocol Unit of the Department of the Chief Minister is the officer who has that information. I was advised this morning that he is absent from work today through illness, and I am unable to obtain that information. I trust I will have it available for tomorrow's sitting.

However, I can correct what I said about charter flights. I am advised that it is proposed that travel from Kalymnos to Cyprus be by charter, not from Athens to Kalymnos. Mr Speaker, I would expect to have more detail on that, if people consider that necessary, when I have had an opportunity to speak with Mr Farrell tomorrow morning.

Japan Australia Railway Study Group

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

When is the next meeting of the Japan Australia Railway Study Group to take place and could he give us a report on general progress made by the study group?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as I have outlined in the Assembly, because of the manner in which the railway was dealt with publicly earlier this year, I took the firm decision not to report progress to the Assembly until such time as there was a concrete position. I can report ...

Mr Ede: Will you tell us when the train arrives?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart takes great delight in making these inane statements on the unreasonable assumption that somehow he is being clever. All he is doing is demonstrating his absolute ignorance and incompetence. If the member for Stuart will quieten down for a moment or two, he might actually hear something. The member for Stuart should understand quite clearly that you cannot keep your ears and your mouth open at the same time and, unfortunately, his mouth is open all the time.

Mr Speaker, the Japan Australia Transport Study Group, which was formed as a consequence of my visit to Japan earlier this year, has met, I think, on 3 occasions in Japan, with representatives from the Northern Territory attending. Last month, the chairman of that study group, Dr Sugawara from Japan Railway Technical Services, visited the Northern Territory and, in company with the Minister for Transport and Works, surveyed the route of the proposed railway. He was briefed on a number of the technical aspects of the railway from this end and some of the development possibilities that could arise from that railway.

Since that time, I understand the Japanese participants in the study group have been meeting in Japan, and I have been advised of their continuing keen interest in the project. They have formed 3 subcommittees to consider the technical, financial and operational aspects of a rail service. It is proposed to hold a further meeting of the full study group in the Northern Territory towards the end of October. We will then be paring the group down to those participants who have a real rather than an academic interest as inevitably occurs during the early days of forming a consortium. I might add that there is increasing interest in this project from Australian businesses and we have been maintaining contact with a number of Australian organisations which are seeking to participate in different aspects of the railway project. Yesterday's Financial Review contained an article which clearly indicated the keenness of EIE and Kumagai Gumi in being involved with the development of this railway, and Dr Isuzaki featured strongly in that article.

No one has ever assumed that this project will be put together easily or that it can be done on the front pages of the newspapers. We are approaching the formation of a consortium in a solid and businesslike manner and I can advise honourable members that it is still my objective to commence construction of the railway in 1988.

Payment of Subcontractors

Mr REED to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

There have been reports in the media recently on difficulties experienced by subcontractors in gaining payment for work completed for some Department of Transport and Works contractors in Katherine. What action is his department taking in relation to this matter?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, quite correctly, a number of honourable members have asked me about the department's position in this matter and what action it has been able to take. I should acknowledge that the member for Koolpinyah raised the matter with me yesterday. I am in a position to inform honourable members concerning the construction company which is carrying out work for the department both in Katherine and on the Arnhem Highway. The company is Queensland-based and, at the time of acceptance of its tenders for those projects, it was able to demonstrate that it had the technical capacity to meet its commitments. As is common nowadays, the company utilised a number of subcontractors to carry out the greater proportion of the work.

Unfortunately, as is all too common these days, most of the subcontractors did not have formal contractual arrangements with the principal contractor. I would like to dwell on that matter briefly, because it has been a matter of concern to me for many years. Under most principal contracts, nominated subcontracts, relating to mechanical engineering services or plumbing services of a major or complex nature, are written specifically into the head contract. That provides protection for subcontractors under the nationally-accepted NPWC standard conditions of contract. Similar clauses exist in standard master-builder contracts and the national SAA standard contracts which are supported by the Institute of Engineers. In addition, wage-earners working for nominated subcontractors have protection also. If the subcontractor fails to pay them, they are able to take their concern to the principal contractor and have action taken to ensure that payment is made.

Mr Speaker, I have been concerned about this for some time. Not long after I was appointed Minister for Transport and Works, we introduced a clause which is unique in Australia, to give some additional protection to those other smaller, non-official subcontractors that the principal contractor wishes to use. We inserted a clause that ensured that the principal contractor had an acceptable written agreement with the subcontractor. In most cases, that is enough to ensure protection of both parties - the subcontractor and the principal contractor himself. There must be a written agreement relating to the service and the payment therefrom. To ensure that there was a formal subcontract in place, the new clause obliged the principal contractor to pay a proportional component of his progress payment to the subcontractor within 14 days of receipt of that amount. That seemed to be a fair and reasonable approach for all parties. These days, most contractors pay on a weekly basis so that they can attract a better rate.

That clause has been implemented since I have been in office. I was surprised to find that it attracted some adverse criticism from the Master Builders Association. I think that criticism resulted from a misconception of what it was all about. I understand it is now more acquiescent about that clause being there. As I said, it gives protection not only to the subcontractor, but to the principal contractor also.

The question related specifically to contract work in Katherine. The department has invited suppliers who have not been paid to list their grievance with the department. The department's position is that its officers have spoken with the principal contractor and assured him that, if he does not meet his financial commitments, that will be the last job he will receive from the department in the Northern Territory. At the moment, we have some progress payments and retention moneys which have been held by the department, and we are awaiting the outcome of some action being taken in the courts at the moment by some of the suppliers. I believe that the funds that are held will go substantially towards meeting those debts that have been incurred by the small subcontractors, but we will need to wait until all of these matters are determined. I understand that the contractor has disappeared from Katherine, but has established himself out on the Arnhem Highway to continue works out there.

Mr Speaker, I mention also that some wage earners have been disadvantaged in this matter and a great number of civil subcontractors. I believe also that the Gagadju people are involved in that job on the Arnhem Highway. The department is doing everything within its power to ensure that their interests are protected.

Strehlow Collection

Mr BELL to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

I refer him to the Strehlow Collection which contains tjuringa and miil-miil pa kutjupa kutjupa. What will the minister and the government do to make arrangements for the Strehlow Collection that recognise the religious associations that much of this collection has for many of my constituents?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, we will take sound advice. The difficulty is in determining where to obtain that sound advice. Who do we ask? Which traditional Aboriginal people have the right to speak for, advise on or even look at various aspects of the Strehlow Collection? Some 5 or 6 months ago, I approached the member for MacDonnell myself and asked if he would be prepared to work with me to develop the government's strategy on the Strehlow Collection. That offer still stands.

I am pleased to advise the member for MacDonnell that, now that all the negotiations concerning the Strehlow Collection, its ownership and title, including copyright, have been firmly established and legally bound by way of contract, we are seeking advice from relevant people who have been associated with the Aboriginal traditional owners for some time to develop a strategy for the proper handling of the collection, in particular those parts of it considered sacred or not available or requiring special treatment. We have had considerable difficulty in finding the right person in the Alice Springs area to deal with this. I can assure the member for MacDonnell that any advice that he has to offer to me on the direction that I should or should not take will be gladly received. I am sure that the member for MacDonnell is probably more aware than I am of the intricacies involved in the correct procedures actually finally establishing the Strehlow Collection.

We have purchased the collection. It was done amicably with Dr Kath Strehlow ...

Mr Bell: You know that is not true, Ray.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, that is a ridiculous and outrageous statement by the member for MacDonnell because he simply has no idea of the final negotiations involving legal counsel for the Northern Territory, the Director of the Conservation Commission, Mrs Strehlow's final legal representative and Mrs Strehlow herself over a 4-day period. It would be interesting for the member for MacDonnell to take particular note of the fact that the negotiations which were finalised did not involve any extra monetary demands from Dr Kath Strehlow, and did not involve any additional demands that could not be met, within reason, by the Northern Territory government within the terms of the original agreement. The point really at issue was the original diaries which were listed originally as being part of the collection.

I have made no secret of the fact that the Northern Territory government is in possession of microfiche of the original diaries. The agreement simply states that, for the term of Kath Strehlow's life, the original diaries relating to the Strehlow Collection will remain in her possession. Upon her death, they will transfer, with some other particular personal items, to the Strehlow Collection. Mr Speaker, to say that that agreement was not arrived at amicably is a statement made without any fact; something that the member for MacDonnell seems to do with a great deal of delight. Unfortunately, to his great and ever-increasing embarrassment, he never learns that he is suffering from foot-in-mouth disease. I appreciate the efforts made by Anthony Thomas and officers of the Department of Law. I have stated publicly my appreciation for the efforts of Dr Kath Strehlow in ensuring that this complete collection ultimately becomes an asset for the people of the Northern Territory.

To return to the matter I was addressing when the member for MacDonnell decided to put his size-10 boot fair down his throat, we have a 3-year program to establish a building in the Alice Springs region to house the Strehlow Collection permanently. Tied to that is the possibility of incorporating a museum for Alice Springs. How that comes about, and how it is ultimately developed is a matter for ongoing consultation and development of the normal procedures through the government process. We have stated our assurance publicly. We stated our intent publicly. I take great exception to the member for MacDonnell suggesting that we have acted improperly or in any way impinged on normal negotiations between Kath Strehlow and the Northern Territory government.

Despite his foot-in-mouth disease, I am still more than happy to say to the member for MacDonnell that, if he chooses to give me advice and would like to sit down with me and give me his ideas and thoughts on how the collection should be assembled, arranged, displayed and housed, I will be more than happy to do so.

Legal Advice on 1983 Election

Mr HARRIS to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Yesterday, the Leader of the Opposition raised the issue of the 1983 election and referred specifically to the election of the member for Ludmilla, Col Firmin, and the member for Wanguri, Don Dale. Has the government received any legal advice regarding the outcome of the 1983 election?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I appreciate the question because it allows me the opportunity to speak about something that has been cleared up for quite some time except, obviously, in the mind of the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr Smith: You should have made a public statement about it when you promised you would. That is the problem.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I think that that sort of comment from the Leader of the Opposition is very unfortunate because, if he had his ear to the ground or took the time to make any inquiries, to listen or to read newspapers, he would realise that the matter was addressed before the last election. Opinions were sought from Mr Bob Ellicott QC and Sir Maurice Byers QC, and it was found that the member for Ludmilla and the Minister for Health were legitimate members of the Legislative Assembly between 1983 and 1987.

Section 120 of the Electoral Act sets out the procedures to challenge an election on any grounds. The grounds in the suggested case were that the members were not eligible for nomination as members to contest an election. That challenge could have been made by any person and would have had to have been directed to the Election Tribunal within 21 days of the polls being declared. In the circumstances that we have talked about, no such challenge was mounted within 21 days so that particular avenue ceased to be available.

Section 135 of the Electoral Act provides that any matter can be referred to the tribunal by an Assembly member at any time during that particular Assembly. Again, that was not done and no challenge was mounted. Therefore, there was no question of the members not being legally elected.

There is another section in the act which provides that, if any person who has been elected to the Assembly is later found by the tribunal not to have been so elected, any actions in the Assembly or any procedures involving that person are valid. There are no problems about procedures in the Assembly in any case. As well, the role of the member for Wanguri as a minister was entirely valid because he was a legally-elected member.

In the case of the member for Barkly, challenges were mounted in terms of the eligibility of 1 of the candidates. That was referred to the tribunal within the proper process and the tribunal made a decision. That was a separate set of circumstances. Any inference made by the Leader of the Opposition or any members, either in this Assembly or outside of it, that neither the member for Ludmilla nor the member for Wanguri was a legally-elected member of the Assembly should not be uttered because it is not true. It would be worth while for all members to make themselves aware of the procedures laid down in the Electoral Act. As members duly elected to this Assembly, I think we have a duty to ensure that we are fully aware of all the provisions of that act.

Video on Alice Springs Recreation Lake

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

I direct my question to him in his capacity representing the Minister for Mines and Energy. Will he undertake to provide me with a copy of the Snowy Mountains Authority video on the Alice Springs recreation lake for further study?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, not being thoroughly briefed on this particular item, I cannot give the honourable member an unequivocal undertaking to do so. However, I will have the matter examined and advise him later today.

Northern Territory Public Service

Mr LEO to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Mr Speaker, I have given the minister prior notification of these questions. How many public servants left the Northern Territory Public Service in the 12 months to 1 September 1987? What has been the total cost of redundancy or any other payouts made to these persons? How many of these public servants have held the position of E4 and above, including that of Chief Executive Officer? What was the total cost of the payouts to these senior public servants?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as the member for Nhulunbuy stated, he gave notice of those questions and I am able to provide answers to them. In the 12 months to 1 September, 2852 people left the NTPS. Obviously, not everybody received a pay-out. Severance payments totalling $1.765m were made to 76 public servants, 18 of whom were at levels of E4 and above.

I believe I have answered all of the questions put to me and that there is no reason for further questions on this matter.

Planning Regulations

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Now that the government has established a Regulatory Review Committee, what action, if any, is being taken in relation to activities of planning authorities?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am certainly aware of some moves that would be of interest to the general public and developers involved in planning. Incidentally, since becoming Minister for Lands and Housing, I have become aware of how much emotion is generated by planning issues. On the one hand, there are the developers who do not want to be delayed by the bureaucratic process. Whilst the government does not wish to impose any unnecessary restrictions on developers, we have a responsibility and a duty to protect the quality of life of Territorians and a need to consider the views of the public, especially the views of local residents affected by any planning issues. I think that our planning system goes a long way towards respecting and addressing the aspirations of the various groups: the general public, the local residents, and the developers.

Ample evidence indicates that the various planning acts and controls have been under constant review. I have formed that view after researching the subject thoroughly. Since self-government, these reviews - particularly in relation to the Darwin Town Plan - have been quite substantial. I advise honourable members that the Darwin plan is presently undergoing a very comprehensive review. A draft document has been finalised and is presently being discussed with various private developers and people in the private sector who interact with developers, such as architects and structural engineers. It quite often occurs that, when a development does not fully comply with planning requirements, the developer highlights some minute detail and thoroughly castigates the bureaucratic process. However, anyone who looks at the planning process in the Northern Territory and compares it to those which apply elsewhere in Australia will quickly realise that we have a very efficient system.

The government is happy with the review of the Darwin Town Plan, the sole purpose of which is to further simplify the planning process. As I have already said, a draft document is available and is being forwarded. Discussions are being held with various people who are directly involved, particularly on the technical side of the planning process, to ensure that they have a relevant input. I believe that the document will become available to the general public early in 1988. If it is finalised early in 1988, I certainly intend to release it for quite extensive discussion by the general public. I am referring, in particular, to the Darwin plan and I make no secret about it. I will be seeking a very extensive input by the general public towards the draft document because, with all of the issues that are raised in the document, I intend that, ultimately, it will become a draft relevant to a total review of the various other town plans in existence throughout the Northern Territory. In closing, I urge all members of the public and any interested party to avail themselves of the draft document when it goes on public display early in 1988. Their comments and input will be gladly received.

Northern Territory Public Service

Mr LEO to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Mr Speaker, I thank him for the clarity and candour of his answer to the first 3 questions that I asked, but I would like to repeat question 4 because I may have missed the reply. What has been the total cost of payouts to these senior public servants - that is, public servants who have held the position of E4 and above, including Chief Executive Officers?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, 4 senior executives within that area received total payouts of $316 357.46. I do not intend to enter into individual situations because of the confidentiality of that matter.

Bus Stops in Bradshaw Terrace

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORK

On 15 September, I asked a question about the bus interchange in Bradshaw Terrace and he indicated to the House at that time that a preliminary report would go to the council on 18 September and that he would advise the House of the discussions that would take place with regard to his submitting that preliminary report to the Darwin City Council. Is he able to give the House an update on what the council is to do regarding the bus stop situation in Bradshaw Terrace?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I understand that the preliminary report was completed and forwarded to the Darwin City Council on Tuesday of this week. The report included consideration of some 6 or 7 options for different ways in which the council might consider tackling the problem of the bus stops on Bradshaw Terrace. Obviously, some of those options have greater merit than others. Now it is for the council - with the assistance of our departmental people and a consultant that we used during the preparation of the preliminary document, if the council so wishes - to come to a resolution about finite studies which would take another 10 weeks or so to work up into a full proposal. I hope that the council will now defer its decision to remove the bus stops on 1 October. I understand the council will meet to discuss that matter early next week. Once again, I have arranged for departmental officers or the consultants to attend and talk to council about the options that are available.

The interim suggestion that the department has put to the council is similar to those put previously, and that is for the installation of a pedestrian crossing and other minor associated works between the shopping centre and the post office. We have suggested that the council allow some 10 or 12 weeks for consideration of the traffic study and to complete the works as they should have been done in the first place, and that the Department of Transport and Works take some additional steps to ensure compliance by the bus drivers in observing the marked bus stop areas and so overcome concerns people have had in respect of that.

Program for Darwin Prison

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

As minister responsible for correctional services, has anything further been done regarding the introduction of a program into the Darwin Prison for the construction of simple Aboriginal-type housing similar to that produced in the Alice Springs Prison?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, we are always looking at improving employment situations for people who find themselves incarcerated in the various prisons throughout the Northern Territory. That particular project has not been introduced to Darwin Prison at this stage. It is enjoying some success in the southern region but, in the short term, it is not my intention to introduce it in the Top End, mainly because of lack of space. I will be considering that matter along with many other matters that we are addressing throughout the correctional services area. Legislation, which I will be introducing to the Assembly relating to home detention for prisoners, will help to alleviate the overcrowding at Darwin Prison. At that stage, we can take further interest in moving that particular industry to the Top End.

Australia Card

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

What effect does the startling revelation during yesterday's proceedings in the federal parliament regarding the ID legislation have on the Australia Card resolution passed in this House yesterday?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am entranced by the exquisite irony of the situation that faces the federal government.

Mr Bell: It was all the result of yesterday's statement!

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I would that it were so!

The Australia Card issue was used, in a highly-technical sense, as the trigger for the double dissolution of the federal parliament earlier this year. The Prime Minister used it deliberately to call an election at an advantageous time. He used it as a trigger purely because he thought the time was then right to call an election. As it turned out, he was quite correct. There was no emphasis in the election on the Australia Card issue; it was simply a technical, legal mechanism to go to the polls.

Mr Speaker, it is sweet irony indeed that the Prime Minister now finds that a legal technicality, albeit based on good, constitutional and conventional practice, is being used to render the introduction of the Australia Card highly unlikely. Those who conduct their politics by devious means should expect the same treatment to be given to them. Mr Hawke is hoist by his own petard. As I understand it, the embarrassment that Mr Hawke is facing stems from a failure of his bureaucratic advisers to appreciate the difference between proclamation and regulatory procedures. This is the constitutional loophole raised by the opposition in Canberra. It appears that, through oversight, many of the crucial aspects of the Australia Card legislation need regulations to put them into effect and either House of the federal parliament has the unilateral capacity to disallow such regulations. It is certain that the Senate, with its non-Labor majority, would move for such disallowance thereby rendering the act inoperable.

I do not know what the federal government will do but, if I were the Prime Minister, I would be grateful for the opportunity to ditch a highly-unpopular, highly-offensive and highly-intrusive piece of legislation. Expediency and pragmatism have been the Prime Minister's hallmark and it would come as no surprise to me if, on this issue, he conformed to type. The effect that this development will have on the ID resolution passed in this House yesterday is that it will thankfully be put to rest. However, as the resolution indicates, we will send it to the Prime Minister as expressing the legitimate concerns of Territorians and certainly the vast majority of members of this House.

Installation Costs of Rural Telephones

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

I refer to his answer yesterday in relation to Telecom charges for rural telephones. Does he accept today that Telecom is planning to increase its charges by only $20, and will he tell this House where he obtained the incorrect information that the increase would be in the order of $3000 to $4000?

Mr Ede: And apologise.

Mr SPEAKER: If the honourable member for Stuart continues to maintain a running commentary, I will have no alternative but to name him.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in response to the Leader of the Opposition's questions, I have some information which I have gathered over the past 24 hours. It is important that honourable members are aware of the system which Telecom is required to use in order to change some of its charges. The tariffs for the basic services, including telephone rentals, local call charges and STD rates, are notifiable to the Prices Surveillance Authority and are subject to veto by the federal Minister for Communications. The installation fee for remote area telephones is not notifiable and is not subject to approval by anyone except Telecom. It is a fee that is set by Telecom internally and at its own discretion. This arbitrary decision-making process leaves remote area users entirely at the mercy of what I might describe as Telecom's benevolent dictatorship.

Last Wednesday, I told honourable members that Telecom had plans to increase the installation fee from $1390 to $6240. This information was taken from a report of a speech presented by Telecom's Chairman on or about 18 May this year, shortly after the mini-budget, when Telecom was hit with imposts of some $380m for sales tax and customs duty. At that time, the chairman announced also that Telecom would be reviewing its high-cost services, including the remote area services, to move away from a pricing policy of cross-subsidy to a user-pays policy more in line with costs to Telecom. As all honourable members know, Telecom's tireless justification for its monopoly is its obligation to serve the needs of disadvantaged users, such as remote area Territorians, through a policy of cross-subsidisation. Under the threat of privatisation, Telecom continually holds a sword over its remote area programs. In fact, at the same press conference, Telecom's chairman announced that the Rural and Remote Area Program would no longer meet its 1990 target, and new telephone connections everywhere would have long installation lead times. A report from that press conference, issued by the Chairman of Telecom, which appeared in the communications section of The Australian of 18 May, said that the measures could have the effect of increasing the installation fee to $6240.

Mr Speaker, I apologise to the House for not qualifying the figure I used in answer to the question on 16 September inasmuch as that it was drawn from an article in the national press. To give some perspective to this, the installation fee for a new service in an urban area is $210. The Leader of the Opposition is correct when he says that the current fee for new remote area installations is $1410, but this could change subject to Telecom's economic and political whims. Who can say? The fee is determined by Telecom management and I gave up long ago trying to predict its decisions from one month to the next.

I will be writing to the Chairman of Telecom to seek his commitment that Telecom will not increase the installation fee in remote areas at a greater rate than in urban areas. At all times, the Territory government will continue its efforts to make Telecom accountable so that the gap between charges affecting our urban and remote area residents does not widen even further.

Potential Damage to Film Industry

Mr POOLE to CHIEF MINISTER

Is he aware of the potential damage to the infant film industry and the tourism industry in the Northern Territory that could result from recent demands by traditional owners of Kakadu and Uluru for excessive location fees from producers of the movies 'Crocodile Dundee II' and 'Evil Angels' and, if so, what is being done and what can be done to counteract this adverse influence?

Mr Bell: They will put you on the front bench one day. Kick them hard enough and you'll be right.

Mr SPEAKER: I offer the same warning to the member for MacDonnell, and any other honourable members who interject, as I gave to the member for Stuart a few minutes ago.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, before answering this question I would like to take the opportunity to respond to the sort of interjections that come regularly from people like the member for MacDonnell. It seems that any time anybody criticises any action of any group which is in any way associated with the Aboriginal community, he immediately faces the direct or obscure accusation of being anti-Aboriginal or racist.

Mr Bell: It is a smear campaign, Steve, an unsubstantiated smear campaign.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, let me say that my answer to the question will be directed specifically at what I regard as a gross misuse of a legislated monopoly situation to extort moneys from people. That is my view and I stick by it.

Mr Bell: If people wanted to make movies in your backyard, would you let them do it for nothing?

Mr HATTON: No, I would not. I would be prepared to charge a reasonable fee. If the member opposite would stop talking - and I refer him to the comments I made earlier to the member for Stuart - he could open his ears instead of his mouth. He might then learn something for a change.

Of course, I am well aware of the problem which has been recently highlighted in the media. With the success of the first 'Crocodile Dundee' movie, the Northern Territory has had the opportunity to build a new industry that will bring economic benefits to a wide variety of sectors of the Northern Territory economy. The Northern Territory has 2 major things going for it as far as film companies are concerned. First, it is a relatively cheap place in which to film - certainly much cheaper than the United States - and, secondly, its weather and extremely good light make it a very easy place in which to make films. One of the most expensive aspects of filming on location is the transportation of cameras, generators and lighting to sites. Obviously, the less of this equipment that has to be transported, the cheaper it is for film companies. The long hours of bright light in the Northern Territory, particularly in the dry season, mean that companies need much less lighting equipment than they would elsewhere. Originally, the film industry in the United States was established in New York. However, largely because of the light situation, it subsequently moved to Hollywood.

The Northern Territory is becoming a very sought-after location for the making of feature films and television series. We all know about 'Crocodile Dundee II' and 'Evil Angels' and most people will have heard of the series 'The Top Enders' that was filmed here recently for television. Members may not be aware, however, that there are a number of other films and television series in the planning stages. For example, a Japanese film crew is due in the Top End very soon. The big danger, of course, is that the charging of excessive location fees will cause the film companies to go elsewhere. Both Queensland and Western Australia are actively soliciting their business and are offering financial incentives for companies to film in their states. We have had not to offer such incentives, but we certainly do not need to add major disincentives to the cost of filming in the Territory.

I am advised that it costs only $1000 per day for companies to hire the entire Sydney Opera House, which has to pay for air-conditioning, electricity, cleaning and security staff to name but a few of its costs. Had a similar fee been required from the 'Crocodile Dundee II' producers, an amount of $30 000 would have been payable to the Kakadu traditional owners. That is not an unreasonable amount but, to demand $200 000 can only serve to drive potential users away from that location in the future and away from the Northern Territory.

It might interest honourable members to know that the 'Crocodile Dundee II' shoot, which I understand finished only yesterday, meant an injection of some $2m into the Territory. It provided employment for some 20 Territorians, including parts in the movie for 2 of the Aboriginal traditional owners of Kakadu and, ultimately, it will give another important boost to the Territory's tourist industry, a result which has been very evident with the success of the first 'Crocodile Dundee' movie.

I am advised producers of 'The Top Enders' spent something like $500 000 in the Territory. I am very concerned at the figures being reported regarding the demands of the Uluru traditional owners of the producers of 'Evil Angels'. If the rumoured figure of in excess of $1m is correct, in all likelihood the producers will take their business elsewhere, since it would be cheaper for them to build sets or use photographs of Ayers Rock than it would be to take a large film crew to Uluru. Demands for excessive fees are very shortsighted. The advantages of having such films made in the Northern Territory should be obvious to all. Not only do these film companies inject money into the economy in the short term but, if we can develop a regular turnover of producers, a fledgling Northern Territory film industry will develop providing year-round employment for such people as cameramen, sound recordists, lighting experts etc.

The increased tourist activity that has resulted from 'Crocodile Dundee' has benefited the Territory greatly. It has also benefited the Gagudju Association in that occupancy rates at Cooina have increased markedly this year and a contract has just been signed to construct a major new hotel in the shape of a crocodile, at Jabiru.

In an attempt to bring some sanity to the situation, the government is considering a proposal to produce an information package for distribution to film production companies. This package will outline potential film locations in the Northern Territory and will include details of such important requirements as: accommodation; logistical backup; availability of equipment; transport, including aircraft and helicopters; catering and details of likely costs, including any location costs that might be imposed by owners. We know that there are plenty of other areas in the Northern Territory, such as Litchfield Park, that would provide more than suitable locations and would not be subject to the outrageous charges being sought at Kakadu and Uluru.

Mr Bell: You do not know what those charges are.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell is on his last warning.

Mr HATTON: I appeal to traditional owners at both Uluru and Kakadu to consider very carefully the implications of their recent demands. Ultimately, they will be the big losers if a more realistic approach is not arrived at.

Mr Smith: You are an absolute disgrace.

Mr HATTON: Go away, Terry. You are the only disgrace in this House.

Mr SPEAKER: The Leader of the Opposition will withdraw that remark to the Chief Minister.

Mr SMITH: Which remark, Mr Speaker?

Mr SPEAKER: The word 'disgrace'.

Mr SMITH: I withdraw it, Mr Speaker.

Film Location Fees to Traditional Owners

Mr EDE to CHIEF MINISTER

Has he one skerrick of evidence that the traditional owners of Uluru have asked a location fee of $1m or any other amount, or whether they are simply attempting to recover costs or a fee for service, and is he aware that the director of 'Evil Angels' has repudiated the announcement and stated that no location fee has been asked for, and that the whole statement is simply a fabrication by the member for Araluen?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in my answer, I specifically said 'if' those suggestions were correct. I repeat that. I do not have any evidence. The matter has been debated in this House.

Mr Smith: Why are you spreading it around? You are being irresponsible.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is trying very hard to beat up a nonsensical argument.

Mr Smith: You are the one who is beating it up.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I regard the $200 000 payment at Kakadu as outrageous. I referred specifically to that and drew comparisons with other areas to demonstrate what I regard as the excessive level of that fee. I said in my answer 'if the suggestions are correct' and I went no further than that. I recognise, as I did in the answer that I gave, that I do not have any evidence and I was referring only to suggestions that had been mentioned. If that has been repudiated, I welcome that news without hesitation. I was making a very clear point about the benefits of this film industry and what can be occur if excessive fees are to be charged. I do not resile from my statement that I regard a fee of $200 000 to be excessive. Wherever parks are being used for the purposes of filming, any fees charged for the use of those parks should be returned to the appropriate park authority for use in the management of the park.

PART II

THE QUESTION PAPER

An index to questions appears at the end of Part II.

Numerical references are to Question Paper page numbers.

An asterisk preceding an entry in the index indicates that an answer has not yet been received.

25 June 1987

2. University College of the Northern Territory
Enrolments

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many full-time students are enrolled at the University College of the Northern Territory?
2. How many part-time students are enrolled?
3. How many students who completed Year 12 at Northern Territory schools are:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents at the University College?
4. How many:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents are in the Arts faculty?
5. How many:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents are in the Science faculty?

3. Aboriginal Employment

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

In view of the Northern Territory Government's stated commitment to improving Aboriginal employment and in the light of recent reports indicating a decline in Aboriginal employment levels, what are the numbers of unfilled positions in each of the following categories:

- (a) Police aides;
- (b) Trackers;
- (c) Health workers;

- (d) Assistant teachers in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities; and
- (e) Teacher aides in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities?

4. Motor Vehicle Accidents

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

How many persons have been:

- (a) killed; and
- (b) injured

in motor vehicle accidents in the Northern Territory so far this calendar year and who were travelling as passengers in the rear of utilities or motor trucks?

Impact of TAB Link with Victoria

Mr DONDAS to TREASURER

What impact has resulted from the TAB of the Northern Territory associating with its Victorian link for TAB as far as the float is concerned?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am in a position to advise honourable members of the impact of the Northern Territory TAB entering into the VICTAB system. In fact, I happened to be at the Alice Springs racecourse on Saturday and it was very interesting indeed to see the betting pool for the Caulfield Cup reach almost $2m. It was also interesting to note that the Northern Territory TAB trifecta on that particular race paid $1055 compared to the Victorian trifecta which paid $490. The Northern Territory TAB is linked to VICTAB for win and place pools but we do not have trifecta or quadrella betting links with VICTAB at present.

I know that the TAB has been the subject of considerable debate in this Assembly and was talked about at length before its introduction. We now have the Victorian TAB link. The pool started officially in the week ending 10 October. Originally, it was proposed that the link operate from the beginning of August this year but that target proved to be impracticable for technical reasons that were largely beyond our control. The link was established in late September and testing took place in the first week in October. The bugs were eliminated and communications were thoroughly tested. At last, TAB clients in the Territory were able to avail themselves of the stability offered by the giant Victorian win and place pools. I understand that the Victorian TAB now has race holdings in excess of $1200m. That signifies the enormous level of interest in punting in Australia, particularly in Victoria.

Mr Speaker, let me give you some figures to illustrate the impact of the link on the Northern Territory. In the week ending 26 September, when the link was not operating, TAB turnover increased by 10.2% on the corresponding week of the previous year. In the following week, while testing was happening, turnover increased by 36.9% on the previous year. In the week ending 10 October, the first week that the link operated officially, turnover increased by 54.5%. In the second week, the Victorian link operating turnover was up by 39.3%. To put it in dollar terms, since the link was introduced, win and place betting has increased by an average of $143 000 per week over the previous 13 weeks of this financial year. Punters in the Territory are obviously showing a greater willingness to use TAB since the win and place pools have been linked with Victoria, and that is good news for everybody. It means that the Territory generates extra revenue and greater benefits to the racing industry which should not be underestimated as an employer of Territorians and as a catalyst for the tourist industry.

Mining and Energy Seminar

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What level of Territory business support has been forthcoming for the government seminar, to be held in Darwin tomorrow, to keep suppliers informed about business opportunities arising from new mining and energy developments?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, some weeks ago, I gave a press interview on the huge potential available for local suppliers to become involved in the mining industry. At the same time, we announced the tremendous developments that were occurring in the Timor Sea, the most prospective hydrocarbon area of Australia today. We said that we would have an industry seminar and advise various local suppliers how they could get a slice of the action. I was told by industry representatives at the time that there should be a great deal of interest and that I could expect perhaps as many as 6 to 30 people to attend the seminar. I am pleased to say that when the department closed off registrations yesterday, a total of 230 people had registered to attend the mining seminar. Last evening, I had the pleasure of dining with Mr Knapp, from the Australian Mining Industry Council, who is here to represent Australia's major lobby group and representative body, and he is tremendously excited about the potential and the opportunities that exist in the Territory.

On another note, it is our intention to mount an industrial display next May. This will take place in the showgrounds and so far we have received 800 expressions of interest from people wishing to attend that particular seminar. Of course, most of those come from interstate and the only difficulty involved with such an exhibition seems to be the lack of accommodation that will be available to house 800 additional people within the Territory next year. I think that that illustrates the amount of interest being shown in the Northern Territory at present. During the debate on the Appropriation Bill, we spoke of the fact that things really look prosperous for us, particularly in the mining industry.

The Supply Seminar will take place at the Beaufort Hotel and I believe it will be an outstanding success. When I first issued the directions for it, I was sceptical about the number of people who might attend, but that has been totally vindicated by the 230 registrations lodged before we closed off registrations yesterday. The response is nothing short of magnificent and I believe that the major developers, and the projects to be discussed tomorrow, show that the Territory's future in the mining and energy fields is very bright indeed. Those developers include companies such as Ranger, Nabalco, Gemco, Sedco, Fourex, BHP Petroleum, Gulf Aquitaine and Magellan whose representatives will all be present at tomorrow's seminar. Other major contributors to the seminar include the Australian Mining Industry Council, the Australian Petroleum Exploration Association and the Commonwealth Heavy Engineering Board.

The seminar is all about telling Territory suppliers what is occurring now and what will occur in the next couple of years, and what will be needed by way of supplies for those developments. Superb opportunities are emerging for Territory business across the whole supply range. The interest shown has been enormous and I fail to see how it can be anything else than an outstanding success. In the same vein, I can report that next year's Mining Expo will outshine any other industrial display ever held in the Northern Territory. It will occupy an area the size of the Darwin Showgrounds and I believe that it will give us the opportunity that we have been looking for to obtain a greater share of the mining business available to us.

I congratulate all those people who have registered their intention to attend tomorrow's seminar and I wish them well, as I do the 800 people who have registered their intention to attend the Mining Expo to be held next May. I also congratulate the officers of the Department of Mines and Energy who have worked so hard to arrange the 2 events.

Commercial Television Outside Darwin

Mr BELL to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

I am quite sure that the member for Braitling, with his keen interest in television broadcasts of sporting events, will be interested in the answer to this question. Will the Northern Territory government act in the same manner as its counterpart in Western Australia to ensure that commercial television is available to all communities in the Northern Territory outside Darwin?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure of the full extent of the Western Australian government's involvement in the provision of television services to remote parts of Western Australia but I am sure that the Western Australian government is not facing the same financial difficulties as the Territory government at present. I am equally sure that, whatever the commitment of the Western Australian government to remote area television, expenditure on that service would be a minute percentage of its budget. This year, the Northern Territory faced a financial cut from the federal government of unprecedented proportions. This has caused this government to undertake some very agonising cost-cutting measures which have severely affected the government's priorities virtually across the board. Some honourable members will have further opportunity to contribute to that debate during the passage of the Appropriation Bill at these sittings of the Assembly

The honourable member is seeking some further indication from me as to whether or not the government will provide financial assistance to the licence holder of the Remote Area Commercial Television licence in the Northern Territory. I can advise him that I have met with representatives of Imparja in Darwin and, recently, I inspected its premises in Alice Springs and sought from the organisation a submission on what it proposes to do and when, and what services it is proposing to offer. To date, as minister responsible for communications in the Northern Territory, I have had no communication from it telling me when it proposes to go to air, what it proposes to put to air, how many hours it proposes to broadcast for etc. Those subjects have not been addressed at all. I have asked it to provide that information so that I may consider what government requirements could be met through such a service.

Land Acquisition in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

No doubt the minister will be aware of concern amongst landowners, land agents and potential land buyers and developers in the Undoolya Road area of Alice Springs and the roundabout to Sturt Terrace regarding a proposed land acquisition for a 4-lane highway. When will the government make a clear decision on acquisition so that uncertainty is removed and business can proceed in a normal fashion?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I certainly share the concern of the member for Sadadeen and the residents in Alice Springs who live along Undoolya Road. Recently, I was fully briefed on proposals to Cabinet from the Minister for Transport and Works. I can advise the member for Sadadeen that I have requested that the utmost urgency be placed on the submissions to be put before Cabinet and the presentation of the various options available so that the residents for whom the member for Sadadeen expresses concern can be given a direction that will enable them to examine the future viability of their properties. They will also be advised of the government's intention in respect of any acquisitions necessary as a result of the widening of the Undoolya Road to cater for the future development of the Undoolya option.

Road to the Olgas

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

In light of the comment that has been made by the tourist industry and by the federal government over the past few days, what steps have been taken to ensure the safety of travellers on the road to the Olgas?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am happy to advise that appropriate action has been pursued by both the Minister for Tourism and myself recently. At a time of the year when they would normally be pursuing every possible chance for business, it is sad to hear that tour operators are withdrawing their services from that Mt Olga section. That is quite understandable because the condition of the road is an absolute disgrace. The road has been graded and re-graded for decades to the point where, in places, it is approximately 1 m below the level of the natural environment.

Mr Bell: It has been for 15 years.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the Olgas road lies in the electorate of the member for MacDonnell. I would like him to relax for a moment and listen to some information that may very well be of importance to him and to his constituents as well as to the large number of tourists who are using the Yulara facilities. I mention his constituents because that road takes traffic out to the Docker River area. Four-wheel-drive vehicles are inherently unstable and the potential for a serious accident along that 30 km section of road from the Yulara turn-off to the Olgas is extremely high. The road becomes corrugated almost overnight. The re-grading occurring there seems to be almost useless.

Mr Bell: You know that is not true, Fred.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell ought to know better than to raise such ridiculous interjections. He is on the Uluru Katatjuta Board of Management and ought to know that the Department of Transport and Works has been trying for at least 7 years to obtain approval for a bitumen road, which would ensure the safety of his constituents and of travellers. We have had a full survey design and total appraisal of the project forwarded to the federal government for 3½ years.

The delay appears to be on the part of the ANPWS, Professor Ovington and the Uluru Katatjuta Board of Management, which ought to have a bit more motivation towards resolving this matter. It is not a laughing matter. The damage that occurs daily to vehicles amounts to thousands of dollars. However, my principal concern is the high risk to persons who use that road. These are constituents of the member for MacDonnell and, if he does not share my concern, I am most alarmed, to say the least. What we need is at least an acknowledgement that the project will proceed in the alignment suggested by the Department of Transport and Works. It is the most cost-efficient measure. In the long term, it will involve approximately $4m, and there are ways of staging the works. We have suggested to the Australian National Parks and Wildlife Service that the expenditure of $0.25m in the first year would provide some relief on the worst sections of road. To re-grade the road is only a very temporary bandaid measure at best.

Suggestions have been made that the road ought to be located from Ayers Rock and divert round to the south, adding some 10 km or 15 km which would involve expenditure of a further $2m or $3m above the estimate. There have been suggestions also that the road should divert to the north, right away from the park itself. The Department of Transport and Works took a very positive approach and completed the designs and the surveys at its cost and forwarded them to the federal Department of Housing and Construction, as it was then, for approval. It is rather disappointing that the ANPWS and the likes of the member for MacDonnell still sit on their hands exposing our tourists and our Territorians to severe risk.

Road to Cahills Crossing

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

There is at least one other road in the Northern Territory that exposes tourists to risk. In fact, recently an elderly couple lost a caravan on this particular road. I refer to the road between the Arnhem Highway and Cahills Crossing which I understand is the responsibility of the Northern Territory government. When will the Northern Territory government take appropriate steps to upgrade that road?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, once again, I am delighted by the question from the Leader of the Opposition. I would like to inform him and members of the House that that particular section of road is in Kakadu National Park. The Northern Territory government, through its Department of Transport and Works, has continually re-graded and provided some nominal upgrading works to that section of road over the last decade. For the information of the Leader of the Opposition, at the moment we have before the ANPWS a submission that, possibly on a cost-sharing basis, we upgrade that road and the road into Cooida, both of which are in Kakadu National Park.

The Northern Territory government, through the Department of Transport and Works, is more than happy to take more than its share of the responsibility for looking after our tourists and our constituents.

Mr Smith: Really, it is your responsibility.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, as far as responsibility is concerned, I will inform the Leader of the Opposition again that the responsibility for roads in Kakadu National Park rests with the ANPWS. It has absolutely nothing to do with the Northern Territory government although ...

Mr Smith: Why do you maintain the Kakadu Highway then?

Mr FINCH: If we did not maintain the Kakadu Highway, at great cost to the Northern Territory government, and upgrade the other roads into the park, quite clearly it would not happen. I am delighted to inform the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues that this government has taken more than its fair share of responsibility. I find it alarming that again he does not recognise and acknowledge just what the federal government's responsibility through the ANPWS is. However, I seek his cooperation in pursuing this cost-sharing arrangement so that it may be possible to obtain the approval of Professor Ovington. The Northern Territory government has absolutely nothing to be ashamed of concerning the roads in Kakadu National Park. We have done more than our fair share at the cost of the taxpayer and, if it were not for us, it would be absolutely chaotic out there.

Political Input to Statehood Education

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for EDUCATION

I noted the comments of the opposition spokesman on education on ABC radio this morning, when he suggested that various political groups should have input into the preparation of proposed curriculum material on statehood. What is the minister's position in relation to this proposal?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I was very concerned this morning to hear the comments from the opposition spokesman on education because again he showed his total lack of understanding of how the Department of Education works and the principles of curriculum development. Later in these sittings, I will be detailing the member for Stuart's total lack of understanding in regard to his shadow responsibilities. That is detrimental to the Northern Territory and I would ask the Leader of the Opposition to take note of the performance of his colleague and to view it with the same concern with which it is regarded by myself and probably a large number of other people in the Territory.

The member for Stuart has suggested that the development of curriculum material regarding statehood is something that should not be done by curriculum professionals but referred to various political groups for their comment and input. Any suggestion that politicians should be involved in curriculum development certainly will not be coming from this side of the House. Whilst the member for Stuart thinks that should happen, I do not think it is the position of his party. The Leader of the Opposition might tell us whether he supports his shadow spokesman on education in this matter.

Statehood for the Territory is a very exciting issue and is unique in Australia today. We are going through processes that the rest of the country went through 80 to 100 years ago. It is important that the constitutional development of the Territory be part of the education process of young Territorians. Hopefully, it will become part of the education process of all Australians. It is therefore important that curriculum materials be developed and continually reassessed by appropriate professionals. In this case, the materials will be developed by the SACE Curriculum Development Unit, which is the body which looks after social and cultural education. That group will be assisted through the secondment of a senior education officer, a high school teacher and 2 primary school teachers. The materials developed by this group will be presented to the SACE committee whose membership includes school principals, an ICPA representative, someone from the Darwin Institute of Technology and representatives from FEPII.

If there are any concerns about the booklet, the SACE committee can submit it to the full Board of Studies for further consideration. Most honourable members would be aware of the composition of that board although, obviously, the opposition spokesman on education, whose performance has been so abysmal, is not. For his benefit, I will outline the membership of the board. It consists of members of the Confederation of Industry, the Trades and Labor Council, the Council of Government Schools Organisation, the ICPA, the Teachers Federation, independent schools, the Catholic Education Office, the University College, DIT, educationalists from the department and school principals.

It is abundantly clear that the Northern Territory has an education system which excludes political interference in the preparation of curriculum materials. It should be clear, even to the member for Stuart, that the preparation of such material is in the hands of people who are best qualified to handle it. We should all show some trepidation at suggestions by the member for Stuart that these matters should be handled by politicians. I certainly hope that the Leader of the Opposition will censure the member for Stuart severely for his suggestion that that is what should occur.

I will make one more point before I sit down. On the radio this morning, the member for Stuart claimed that the cost of this project would be prohibitive, particularly since there had already been some severe cuts in the curriculum development area. He was incorrect on both counts. He was referring to an expenditure decrease of $233 000 this year as against last year. The reason for that decrease is that there were a number of people on paid leave last year and additional staff were employed to cover those paid positions. That is no longer the situation and there have been no staff cuts whatsoever in the curriculum area. The member for Stuart has been shooting from the hip again without making any inquiries or finding out the real reasons for the variation in expenditure. He makes these accusations willy-nilly and this is not good for education processes in the Territory, which are important to all Territorians.

The opposition should have an education spokesman who is conscientious and carries out proper research into expenditure and other matters. The member for Stuart would rather open his mouth and rave on. He will not listen to the facts. The Leader of the Opposition also thinks it is a joke. It is not. I am sure that the rest of the community does not think it is a joke.

Later in these sittings, in concluding the debate on my ministerial statement on education, I will detail the absolute ignorance of the member for Stuart in regard to education matters. That will take 20 to 30 pages. I believe that the Leader of the Opposition is genuinely concerned about education and I hope he will take note of my remarks and either find a new education spokesman or severely censure his deputy and urge him to do some homework so that his actions are commensurate with his responsibilities in respect of education. His performance has been absolutely abysmal and disgraceful.

Ambulance Services at Yulara

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

When will the Northern Territory government honour its election promise to the people of Yulara by providing adequate ambulance services?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have been saying publicly for some time that there has been considerable discussion at Yulara about the nature of health services to be provided there. There have been great differences of opinion about precisely what services should operate. During the past 2 weeks, the Secretary of the Department of Health and Community Services and the Regional Director of the department in Alice Springs have visited Yulara and held in-depth discussions with providers and users of health services at Yulara. We will be taking appropriate action in due course.

Operation of Mines Safety Control Act

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Which government body currently controls the operation of the Mines Safety Control Act, the Department of Mines and Energy or the Work Health Authority?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would be very disappointed if the member for Nhulunbuy did not ask this question in these sittings. In answer to an almost identical question during the last sittings, I outlined the proposed amendments. There have been no changes to administrative orders at this stage. However, these will occur in due course. As members will be aware, I returned to my office only yesterday. The matter has been further promoted during the last 24 hours and documentation is being prepared so that it can be processed by Executive Council.

Proposed Amendments to Police Administration Bill

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

My question follows on from recent media comment regarding the proposed amendments to the Police Administration Bill. Could the Chief Minister advise the Assembly why he has decided to delay the passage of those amendments?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members will be aware that, yesterday, I indicated the intention not to proceed with the legislation during the course of these sittings. This is because there has been considerable public debate about the legislation and I am grateful for the interest that has been generated. There were discussions last week between the police department and the members of the legal fraternity concerning the legislation. I understand those discussions were very positive and fruitful. Both the police and the legal fraternity have suggested that it would be appropriate that we not process this legislation through all stages at these sittings in order to give them time to consider specific aspects of it. Such consideration could lead to amendments being proposed during the committee stage of the legislation.

Mr Speaker, in conclusion, I repeat that the bill merely seeks to confirm, by specific legislation, procedures that have been practised by the police for some 20 to 25 years. In fact, this has resulted from recommendations and suggestions from judges. The case that initiated it was what is known as the Williams case.

Mr Smith: Rubbish!

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition continues to show his ignorance. He seems to think he knows more than the Department of Law, the police and Northern Territory and interstate judges. I would prefer to take their advice than the Leader of the Opposition's.

Mr Smith: You do not understand their advice; that is the problem.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, as I have said, it is intended to clarify this very difficult area of law and to make it specific. The judges have indicated that they believe it cannot be dealt with appropriately through the normal common law judicial decision process. It needs some definition to protect the interests of citizens, to clarify the rights of citizens and to provide an effective opportunity for the police to carry out necessary investigations.

Administrative Arrangements

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

This is a supplementary question to the member for Nhulunbuy's question. Is it a fact that none of the administrative arrangements entered into by his government on 19 March have been approved by the Executive Council and or the Administrator as is required and that, as a result, the Power and Water Authority, the Department of Industries and Development and other departments that were created or changed at that time have been operating illegally since 19 March?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will obtain specific details of the administrative arrangements that have been put in place. The administrative arrangements that have not been promulgated at this stage are those dealing with the actual establishment numbers of departments. The numbers and classifications within departments has been a most complex exercise. Every department has been working at addressing the new structures. The administrative arrangements establishing departments and the appointment of departmental heads were processed by administrative orders issued in March when the original ministries were established. However, I am very conscious and very concerned that the actual establishments themselves have not been finalised through the Executive Council. That exercise could have been done quickly but it had been done simply by taking all the people in the establishments that existed previously and putting them in place and then going back later. The process is part of an overall restructuring of government and necessary reduction in the size of the public service that flowed from budgetary considerations. They have all been addressed. I understand that the Minister for Labour and Administrative Services has now completed the work necessary for him to be able to present the detailed documentation to have the complete establishment structured.

Dam in Batchelor Area

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he assure me that the full necessity of dam building in the Batchelor area will be assessed before any compulsory acquisition of currently worked farm land from those people engaged in primary industry is considered, in view of the importance of horticultural production to the development of the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for her question on the vexed subject of building dams in the Northern Territory. The subject is one that takes up a considerable amount of time and engenders considerable debate. One has only to look at Alice Springs. The Mary Anne Dam in Tennant Creek was probably the dam in the Northern Territory that was built the fastest and involved the least debate. To my knowledge, the member for Fannie Bay has been talking now for some 4 or 5 years about the development of a lake rather than a dam within his own electorate. That has caused a considerable amount of debate, particularly within Cabinet. It has been suggested to him that he should buy a long-handled shovel or run a colour-in competition to raise money for such a facility.

All members would be aware that the building of water reservoirs in the Northern Territory is a very vexed question indeed. The member for Katherine has approached me recently about water in the Katherine region, and we will meet at lunchtime today about that. The member for Arafura may perhaps ask me a question this morning about Milikapiti which has run out of water due to sand intrusion in No 6 bore. That has necessitated the school being closed this morning. Officers from the Power and Water Authority have left for that region this morning.

The member for Stuart never seems to miss an opportunity to talk about water and water supply in the Northern Territory. I have spoken in this Assembly before about this and the member for Flynn has mentioned the impact of 6-year droughts on the Territory. Recently, some information has come to me from a person who has spent a considerable number of years in the Northern Territory studying weather patterns. He suggests that the Northern Territory is 37-year cyclic and that we are in the middle of a 6-year period during which we will experience very dry wet seasons and that this will bring about increased demand for water as people try to develop additional water resources. As a result, the water tables will decrease. Let us hope that he is wrong, but this is a man who has done considerable research on this subject and the evidence he presented to me was persuasive. I hope that, in 4 or 5 years time, the Leader of the Opposition is not laughing about this particular issue, particularly in the middle of the next election, because it is one of considerable concern to all Territorians.

The evidence that has been presented to me suggests that we could be in the middle of a 6-year dry period in the 37-year cycle. There will be cries from members on both sides of the Assembly for more and more water as it becomes very scarce and our catchment areas start drying up. On the evidence given to me, I believe that the Northern Territory is in for some particularly dry spells during this coming wet season. I do not want to start panic and have people moving in from the central desert areas as they did years ago. Places such as Yuendumu and Hermannsburg were established largely because of their year-round supply of water.

Mr Bell: That is not true.

Mr COULTER: It is true. I will provide that information to the honourable member who may not be aware of it. I will give him the details.

On the evidence that has been presented to me, we could be in for a dry spell. Batchelor is probably the most favoured site of the 6 dam sites that have been mentioned because of its close proximity to the Darwin River dam. The other area that probably presents itself as a second option is the Warrai proposal at Adelaide River. That site has the advantage that there are not too many people living there. In fact, most of the catchment area is part of Cann Creek Station which is owned by Billy Doyle and there is some mining interest in the valley.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: That is not what they say. They have written letters to me.

Mr COULTER: I could not understand why they would do that.

Mining interests in Warrai also have to be looked after. We are looking at ways in which we can promote that as a site, but it has a penalty. The penalty is that a pipeline would be required to bring the water to the Darwin River dam area and that would cost some $10m. I am also well aware of the development that has occurred in the Batchelor area. There has been grass seed production, buffalo domestication programs, large rambutan orchards and, as the member for Victoria River has brought to my attention on a number of occasions, $2.5m has been spent on Meneling Abattoir, which would be inundated by the Batchelor dam if the proposal went ahead. In fact, the member for Victoria River came out against that site in my absence recently.

Mr Speaker, I can assure the member for Koolpinyah that I am aware of the problems associated with the construction of all these dams, in particular the dam at Batchelor. I gave an undertaking at a meeting in Batchelor, which she attended, that I would have some answers by October. Unfortunately, that deadline could not be met and it now looks like being November before I will be able to provide preliminary estimates of developing such a facility in that region. I share the member for Koolpinyah's concern but the simple fact is that we are running out of water. Our population expansion and water requirements by horticulturists place additional demands on this scarce commodity. I also remind the member for Koolpinyah of the effects that a dry period may have on the bore fields in her electorate. It is a serious problem and I congratulate the officers in the Power and Water Authority who have dedicated a considerable amount of time to this particular issue and I hope that I will have satisfactory answers in the near future.

Airport Facilities

Mr REED to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

During the last sittings, he indicated that he would be meeting with the federal minister responsible for aviation matters. What was the outcome of those discussions, particularly as they relate to airport services in major Territory centres?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I met with both Senator Evans and Mr Peter Duncan, the federal ministers responsible for transport in its various forms. Both of those meetings went extremely well and I am pleased to report that, with support from all federal members and the opposition in this House, at last we see some sanity coming into the debates on Darwin and Alice Springs Airports.

In regard to Darwin Airport, we now have public acknowledgement that the north side option is the real option. I am delighted that Mr Peter Duncan, the federal Minister for Transport and Infrastructural Support, made that announcement while he was here. It has been clear to all Territorians for quite some time that that was the logical step to take. The intervention by a previous minister does not warrant any comment other than to say that it is sad that we have missed out on 2 or 3 years of tourism development as a result of inactivity.

These are different times and I am delighted to acknowledge that the response from both of those ministers has been extremely encouraging. I hope that they will be able to take to their Cabinet some immediate measures to resolve the Darwin Airport problem in the shortest possible time. It would be my hope that, given some cooperation either through direct federal funding or by permitting private enterprise participation at Darwin Airport, we would be able to move immediately and set in place a satisfactory facility within approximately 2 years. Such a facility would provide not only for Territorians and domestic travellers but, more importantly, it would allow international airlines access to Darwin and thence to the rest of the Territory to provide a broadening of our economic base and jobs for our kids.

In Alice Springs in recent months, we have seen an astronomical growth rate of about 30%, based on last year, which was some 20% or so above the year before. The growth rates have been placing the Alice Springs terminal under extreme pressure. The federal minister announced that the federal government was proceeding with a $1.1m extension to the existing terminal building. That will provide some short-term relief only. More importantly, the federal government is putting some $5m-odd into the taxiways and aprons. That is to be applauded. However, what we need to be conscious of and what we have basic agreement on is that the long-term plans may very well require some entrepreneurial or private investment to cater for the rapidly increasing tourist market through Alice Springs to Yulara etc.

As we travelled north over the 2½ day period, work had commenced the week before on extensions to and upgrading of the Tennant Creek airstrip to allow for F28s to land at Tennant Creek by Christmas. Off the cuff, I think 17 December is the recommencement date. Works are progressing very satisfactorily there. It was pleasing to have the federal minister see at first hand the state of that strip which had been allowed to deteriorate over quite a long period of time. It is important that Territorians, particularly residents of Tennant Creek, recognise that that was a jointly-funded project involving $1.1m from the federal government. It had intended to upgrade the strip to take commuter-size aircraft. Quite correctly, the Northern Territory government recognised that an F28 standard was far more appropriate both from a tourism point of view and for local usage. As a result, the Territory government provided $1m to ensure that the strip could be lengthened and strengthened to F28 standard.

In Katherine, of course, a great deal of work is occurring at Tindal RAAF Base. The Katherine terminal building is under severe attack not only from the local residents but from white ants. The building there will need to be replaced. That is on the design list and the federal government has undertaken to provide the Territory with copies of the preliminary drawings so that we can advise as to the appropriateness of the planned facilities from a Territory viewpoint. I understand that work may be programmed for the 1988 calendar year and that would be good to see.

In summary, in regard to aviation matters, I am extremely delighted and, on this occasion, more than happy to acknowledge the cooperation of the 2 federal ministers who showed quite a dramatic difference in attitude to the needs of remote areas and towards privatisation or getting on with the job using whatever entrepreneurial means are to hand. I acknowledge their participation.

Cullen Bay Marina

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

The developers of the proposed Cullen Bay marina have been looking to the Northern Territory government for an agreement regarding certain aspects of that proposed development. Has an agreement been reached between the Northern Territory government and Darwin Marina Estate and, if so, when will details of that agreement be available and, if not, when will the government be in a position to sign that agreement?

ANSWER

In a nutshell, Mr Speaker, an agreement has not been reached, but I will canvass some of the issues involved with the future development project. This government is certainly prepared to support this project. It has been the subject of previous publicity and I think that it goes without saying that, when the project is finally completed, and during its construction, not only will it provide many jobs in the Darwin area but it will greatly improve the lifestyle of people in the Top End.

Some of the issues that have been of concern and have been addressed in the appropriate manner by the government involve those areas relating to the environment, the release of some land at Emery Point by the Department of Defence, consideration of the Foreshore Protection Plan and the relevant zoning of the land. The Port Authority has been involved. Consideration has been given to the engineering viability of the project, objections by local residents, access and the compatibility with development proposals for the old Darwin Hospital site.

I can confirm that a draft development lease and conditions has been finalised and will come before Cabinet very shortly. I can advise the member for Port Darwin that, after consideration by Cabinet of the relevant terms and conditions of that development lease and further discussions with the developers, I would hope to be able to announce that the project will proceed in a manner that will enable the construction of the facility to occur at the earliest opportunity. The government makes no bones about the fact that it supports the project, provided that all the sensitive issues relating to the environment, foreshore planning, zoning etc are dealt with in the appropriate manner. The terms and conditions of the development lease should be finalised by Cabinet in the very near future.

Fees for TAFE Courses

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is it true that he intends to impose fees on students of TAFE courses in the Northern Territory and, if so, can he advise those students and the parents what the level of fees will be and to which courses they will be applied?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, once again the member for Stuart has demonstrated his knowledge of education matters. It would have been appropriate if he had prefaced his question with some comment regarding the cut of $23m to TAFE by the federal government. Because his Labor colleagues were involved, he did not really want to mention that and why there are such problems with TAFE. Even someone with no knowledge of education matters would realise that a cut of $23m will have an impact. Setting that aside, however, I will provide some information for the member opposite.

TAFE fees at the DIT and the Alice Springs College of TAFE are matters set by their councils. The council of the Alice Springs College of TAFE is considering the matter at the moment. The shadow spokesman for education should know - although he does not - that the DIT is totally independent. The legislation regarding its independent status was passed by this House. The college councils will consider whether charges will be levied and they will advise people appropriately regarding those charges.

The matter of charges must be seen in the context of the prevailing situation in Australia. Last year the federal government introduced an administrative charge for universities, an amount of $250 per student. That charge was applied in an effort to ensure that the public education dollar could be spread a little further. In the light of the $23m cut in the TAFE area, our Territory institutions are to be congratulated on continuing to provide an excellent service under adverse economic conditions. It certainly is a credit to the people involved, including members of the staff and the council. If college councils decide that there is a need for charges to be levied, I am sure that they will be made so that ...

Mr Ede interjecting.

Mr MANZIE: I find it pretty frustrating to hear the member opposite displaying his ignorance. I would like him to inform this House later during these sittings on what steps he has taken to ask his federal colleague to return the money that has been taken out of the TAFE area and what steps he has taken to ensure that his federal Labor colleagues provide the same level of assistance to tertiary education in the Territory as they provide to the rest of the country. It is a shameful situation. The member for Stuart makes snide comments while members of his party, who profess to be supporters of education and of underprivileged people, blatantly cut funds for the education of Territory students. The member opposite would be far more productive if he went to his federal colleagues and asked them to treat us equally with the rest of Australia instead of making snide remarks regarding education in the Territory.

Mr Speaker, I congratulate TAFE administrators for the work that they have undertaken to continue to provide quality education. If there are to be charges in that area, they will be decided by the institutions involved. I will back them all the way because they are operating under very adverse conditions brought about by the policies of the party of the member opposite.

Writ by Burgundy Royale

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Can he confirm that, on or about 7 October, Burgundy Royale Investments lodged a writ before the Federal Court of Australia seeking release from liens held over it by the Northern Territory government, Westpac and perhaps the Northern Territory Development Corporation on grounds which include promises made by the then Chief Minister and the then Deputy Chief Minister, now the member for Fannie Bay, when they were on a 1979 investment mission to Asia, that: (1) the Beaufort Hotel would be given a casino licence; (2) developers of the Beaufort were guaranteed that a further 5-star hotel would not be built in Darwin until the Beaufort was fully operational; (3) the new airport terminal would be constructed by the time the Beaufort opened; and (4) the railway line would be built by the time the Beaufort opened?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, obviously the Leader of the Opposition in his role as debt collector for those people aggrieved and various other causes he takes up from time to time has been very well briefed on this particular question judging by the contents thereof. It is true that there has been some legal action taken by Burgundy Royale Investments against the Northern Territory government and also against Westpac. That is a matter before the courts and I will not be entering into any prolonged discussion or debate on that particular issue other than to say that our legal advice is that the action against the Northern Territory government is not particularly sound. We believe that we will be able to defend the writ that has been taken out against us.

Review of Restricted Areas Legislation

Mr FIRMIN to TREASURER

When might the review of restricted areas legislation be available for consideration by government and is he in a position to comment today on any aspects or recommendations of this report?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the author of the report, Mr d'Abbs, has been involved in a number of reports in the Northern Territory. Honourable members will recall that he compiled the report on domestic violence. He has played an active role in looking at the social implications of various trends in the Northern Territory. I have before me a draft report from Mr d'Abbs in respect of the review he was commissioned to conduct into the effects of dry areas on Aboriginal communities. I have been assured that the final report will be presented to me by the end of October. I hope to be able to table it at the next Legislative Assembly sittings. I know honourable members have been anxious to get hold of the report but I am told that the delay has come about, in part, because of a need to re-analyse some of the data and to allow the incorporation of new data which has been obtained from the Aboriginal drug consumption survey being carried out by the Drug and Alcohol Bureau.

The first draft adjudges that the restricted area provisions are a qualified success. It finds that some areas of the legislation need addressing and it goes into detail on those. It is a matter of fact that the government was aware of this when it first commissioned the report last year. I do not intend to go into the detail of the recommendations in this House until my colleagues and I, particularly the Minister for Health and Community Services, have had a chance to examine them. Suffice it to say that, in addition to other matters, the report addresses the permit system and the enforcement of restricted area provisions of the act. These are matters of grave importance to Aboriginal communities and this government does not intend to take them lightly. Before any recommended amendments are approved, I intend to ensure that they are properly canvassed and that they reflect the expressed wishes of the community.

However, we will be looking into tidying up parts of the act relating to vehicle seizure and forfeiture and the responsibility of the courts in these matters. Honourable members will be aware that this matter has been canvassed in this Assembly on many occasions and I understand that it will be debated again tomorrow. Penalties for offences will also be considered and I will advise the House on further details after considering the final report.

In relation to amendments to legislation which will be discussed in the Assembly tomorrow, I can advise that the Liquor Commission is reviewing its procedures for issuing of licences and the social issues which relate to the consumption of alcohol. As part of an overall review to ensure that it meets the demands which are placed upon it, the commission will also be considering what expectations the community has in relation to its functions. I hope to table the report in the Assembly in November after it has been considered by Cabinet and the issues have been canvassed by government. I look forward to debate on the issues during the next Legislative Assembly sittings.

Writ By Burgundy Royale

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, this is a supplementary question on the matter of the Burgundy Royale writ. Can the Treasurer directly confirm that the writ issued by Burgundy Royale was based at least partly on the grounds that, in the 1979 trade mission to Asia, the following promises were made: that the Beaufort Hotel would be given a casino licence; that the developers of the Beaufort were guaranteed that a further 5-star hotel would not be built in Darwin until the Beaufort was fully operational; that a new airport terminal would be constructed by the time it opened; and that the railway line would be built by the time it opened?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is reading from a public document. I will sit down with him and read it out to him if he has some difficulty in understanding it. An interesting aspect of this may be that, if the Burgundy Royale can be successful, Mr Hawke might well find himself in court because he was the one who promised us the airport in the first place. We could be in good company.

We are only one of a number of defendants who have been named in this writ and we will be defending it most vigorously. I understand that they are in possession of some documents, but the only document which pertains to the Northern Territory government is the Tourist Marketing Survey which was carried out by the then minister, Mr Roger Steele, in 1979. I would suggest to honourable members that that was a conservative document in terms of the number of tourists who are now entering the Northern Territory. As I have said, the Northern Territory government will be defending this most vigorously.

Public Holidays

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

What is his decision on the celebration of any additional public holidays, both in 1987 and 1988?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for the question. I am advised that the Northern Territory has celebrated a public holiday known, in latter years, as the 'additional day' for a very considerable period. My department's research indicates that the public holiday was gazetted when it was under the administration of South Australia and that, on transfer to the Northern Territory, that public holiday continued to be gazetted. In more recent times, the holiday has been gazetted to fall between the appropriate days of Christmas Day and New Year's Day during the Christmas holiday period. I do not think there is any need to remind the Assembly that the celebrations planned for Australia's bicentennial in 1988 are very significant. As a part of those celebrations, the whole of Australia will celebrate the Australia Day public holiday on 26 January. In the spirit of the bicentennial, all states, with the exception of Queensland and New South Wales, have extended the period of celebrations by gazetting a public holiday on Monday 25 January. That is the Monday falling between the Australia Day public holiday and the preceding weekend. In those states, I am advised that the action taken involves a transfer of Boxing Day to 25 January.

Mr Speaker, in the Northern Territory, because of its portable nature, I have been able to move the additional public holiday from the traditional week following Christmas forward to Monday 25 January, thus enabling Territorians to enjoy the 4-day weekend within which to celebrate Australia's bicentenary. I hear objection from the member for Koolpinyah. In fact, the extra public holiday has been held in the Northern Territory for a long period. It was gazetted in 1984 for the 3 years up to 1987. In fact, this year, it is to be celebrated at the end of December. However, next year, I have brought it forward to 25 January. It will cost business in the Territory no more because it is a public holiday that has always been there. I am quite happy to look at the proposal to get rid of the additional public holiday but it is quite reasonable to hold that public holiday in January in 1988 in order to create a long weekend for the bicentenary. I do not believe that any employer in the Northern Territory will have an argument with that. It is a very significant occasion. There is a school holiday. Teachers may be a little fortunate in that they were due to go back on 25 January next year. I believe the occasion is significant enough to warrant the action that I have taken and I am quite happy to defend it.

Mineral Exploration Licences

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is the Department of Mines and Energy able to process applications for mineral exploration with reasonable expedition and could he indicate to the House the approximate length of time required to process an application?

Mr Ede: It is a disgrace.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is indicative of the amount of mining activity that is occurring at the moment. If that is a disgrace for the honourable member for Stuart, then I suggest he is the one with the problem, not the Department of Mines and Energy.

Mr Speaker, I thank the shadow spokesman on mines and energy for his question. Indeed, we have had a problem in the Department of Mines and Energy where we had a backlog of some 190 applications for mining activity of various types throughout the year. In the Department of Mines and Energy, we find it very difficult to maintain staff in boom periods. Geologists are being offered $100 000. A particularly good officer, Gary Higgins, has left the Department for Top End Resources recently. He will be sadly missed in the Department of Mines and Energy. Recently, we advertised some 20 positions that are vacant at the moment.

After budget discussions with the Chief Minister, an additional 5 staff were employed in the exploration titles area to overcome that particular backlog. I can advise the member for Nhulunbuy that we have started to overcome the backlog of the 190 applications. However, since June, we have had an increase of some 50% over last year in the number of titles being sought in the Northern Territory and the backlog has jammed up again. I may have enough courage to approach the Chief Minister, in the next couple of weeks, for another 5 people but I can assure the Assembly that we are trying to process those particular applications as fast as we possibly can at the moment, with the additional 5 staff that have been employed there.

The size of the backlog is dependent on the types of title and the complications involved. I ask all prospectors and exploration people to bear with us. I can give some outstanding examples of the expediency that has been displayed by the Department of Mines and Energy. The member for Barkly would be aware of White Devils which received approvals to go ahead with its open cut within 8 weeks. I believe the open cut has commenced with Roche Bros as the operators. They were particularly impressed with the expediency with which the Department of Mines and Energy handled that. I have many other stories of that nature.

However, there are some examples where there are competing interests, where expiration dates have been reached and, along with the mineral boom which is occurring in the Northern Territory, a rush of exploration licences can come in for a particular title and it is a matter of sorting out the best miners and the best program available for a particular area of land. There are many competing interests for these titles. Mr Speaker, can I remind honourable members that we are experiencing a boom period in mining and that involves some problems. I am thankful that, as Minister for Mines and Energy, those are the sorts of problems that I have. I do not like them, but it does show that exploration activity is required in the Northern Territory, and I believe that this is largely attributable to the 150% return about which I have spoken to the member for Nhulunbuy. Some concern was expressed about giving away money, especially by the ex-Treasurer, the Minister for Industries and Development, who has never been known to give away too much except homing pigeons and boomerangs. We were really concerned that we might lose by offering the 150% return on exploration activity against 35% of the mineral royalty rate, but it looks as if that is proving successful and that people are queuing up.

We apologise for the delays wherever they occur. We have increased the staff there by 5 to handle that and we are trying to proceed with the processing of applications as fast as we possibly can.

'Towards the 90s'

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Yesterday the member for Stuart implied that the discussion document 'Towards the 90s' had been thrown out the door. I believe the honourable member has a misunderstanding in relation to the status of that document.. I ask whether the discussion document 'Towards the 90s' has been thrown out the door.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am very glad that that matter has been raised by the member for Port Darwin because, yesterday, we had another example of the despicable attitude adopted by the member for Stuart towards his shadow responsibilities for education. We are talking about 'Towards the 90s' which was issued as a discussion document in June this year. The whole concept of the document was to engender discussion and to look at ways and means of increasing accountability, of rewarding good teachers who wish to stay in the classroom, of maximising value for every taxpayers' dollar that is spent on education, and to look at directions for the next decade. Some of those themes have actually been picked up by the federal Minister for Education in statements he has made so far regarding tertiary education, accountability and results. Actually, he has indicated that the rules have changed for tertiary education and that tertiary institutions will not be funded unless they produce the results.

'Towards the 90s' is in that vein and is a document that requires people in the Territory who have an interest in education to develop points of view on it, to become involved in discussion and to put forward ideas and suggestions which will be productive for all Territorians. As members in this House who listen would realise, I made a statement on education at the last sittings which gave a fair amount of detail as to where 'Towards the 90s' is and where it is heading. Obviously, the member for Stuart, who has shadow responsibility for education, has not taken any notice or even listened to what is occurring in respect of that document. He had the audacity yesterday to say that the document had been disposed of and was finished. I find that incredible. The shadow spokesman for education takes his responsibilities so seriously that he puts his head in the sand and says it has gone away. It has not gone away, Mr Speaker. I would recommend that the member for Stuart start taking a real interest in his responsibilities and do justice to them on behalf of a large number of people who support the Labor Party.

The Leader of the Opposition has a responsibility also to ensure that his shadow education spokesman does his job. I would like to offer a little bit of advice to the Leader of the Opposition and, whether he takes it or not is up to him. I think that he should consider making the member for MacDonnell shadow spokesman for education because at least the member for MacDonnell has an interest in the subject and produces some useful and workable alternatives. He shows a genuine interest and his contribution to debate is sometimes quite productive. The Leader of the Opposition has a responsibility to the community in regard to education. I ask him to examine some of the statements that have been made by the member for Stuart and see how flippantly he has treated the subject.

Mr Speaker, coming back to the document, we have had over 120 submissions amounting to 1000 pages. I am sure the member for Stuart has not contributed a page, but be that as it may. The matter is being examined by the Education Advisory Council. It has collated the material and it has been discussed. As I have said many times, the next step is a refined second discussion document which, hopefully, we can produce by the end of this year. At this stage, it looks as though it will be ready early next year.

Mr Speaker, I certainly hope we will receive a rather more mature response from the shadow spokesman on education on the second document. It is a matter that should be treated sensibly and properly and which will not disappear. The member for Stuart cannot put his head in the sand. He has a responsibility to this Assembly and to the community to ensure that his contribution to education debates is based on fact and not hearsay and scare tactics. I am dismayed at statements by the member for Stuart that this matter has been thrown out of the window. I can assure him that it has not. I can assure him that many people in the community have shown a great deal of interest in the document and have contributed accordingly. I would certainly encourage him to do likewise. It is still on the notice paper and it can be finalised during these sittings.

Cattle on Oolloo Station

Mr BELL to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Was a contract let to clear cattle from Oolloo Station with the contractor tendering $60 000, and has the contractor now cleared over 45 000 head from the property at a value well over $0.5m?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot confirm at present the matter that the member for MacDonnell has raised. However, I will seek information and provide it to him during the course of these sittings.

Uluru Board of Management

Mr POOLE to CHIEF MINISTER

Earlier this year, much public comment ensued about the Northern Territory government's reluctance to nominate an appointee to the Uluru Katatjuta Board of Management. Finally, however, the government announced that it would make a nomination. What has been the outcome of that nomination?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I appreciate the question because it does give me an opportunity to make a minor correction to a statement I made on this matter in the course of the debate yesterday with respect to the Jawoyn land claim. Firstly, we made 2 separate nominations in fact. In late 1986, the government nominated both the Minister for Conservation and the Minister for Tourism to be representatives on the Uluru Katatjuta Board of Management. They were nominated on that basis because they were the Northern Territory equivalents of the 2 federal government political nominations on that board. Subsequently, on 31 March this year, I wrote to the then federal Minister for Arts, Heritage and Environment, Hon Barry Cohen, nominating the Minister for Conservation and Tourism, Mr Hanrahan, as the Northern Territory government's representative to the board. The minister replied on 7 May this year advising me that he had written to the Chairman of the Central Land Council seeking his agreement to the appointment before proceeding with the process of appointment. That is the last we have heard on the matter, Mr Speaker.

The federal government and the Territory opposition were loud, particularly last year, in their criticism of our reluctance to make a nomination initially. Therefore, members will understand my cynicism when, some 6 months later, no further correspondence has been received from the federal government. The member for MacDonnell, a board member himself, was particularly strong in his comments urging the government to join the board of management. What has been done to allow our nominee to join the board? As far as I can ascertain, nothing at all. So much for the Labor Party rhetoric extolling the absolute necessity for a government appointment to the board.

Mr Speaker, I wrote to the Prime Minister yesterday, protesting at the lack of action on this matter by his ministerial colleagues and seeking his intervention to secure the appointment of Mr Hanrahan to that board of management. It is very easy to criticise this government and to play party politics with issues like participation on the Uluru Katatjuta Board of Management. As recently as the beginning of this year, the member for MacDonnell made a lot of noise about the matter. If he is making a stand on principle, he has a responsibility to follow it up and support the course of action he has advocated. I find it quite disturbing that he has made absolutely no comment in relation to this exercise. He is aware, because it was raised in the House this year and made public ...

Mr Bell: How long did you take to make the nomination?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell asks how long we took to make the nomination. Quite frankly, that is totally irrelevant. We took a specific and very public stand on the matter. Despite that, at the beginning of this year, the member for MacDonnell ...

Mr Bell: The trouble is you stood in about a dozen places.

Mr HATTON: The member for MacDonnell advocated that we should change our position and nominate a single representative to that board. The federal minister made exactly the same request of us. Now that we have complied, it is natural and logical that the member for MacDonnell should welcome our step and seek to encourage the placement of our representative on the board or else he could be accused of playing cheap political games and using rhetoric to play party politics rather than achieving the high moral ground he sought to take on this issue.

I can accept that there is a degree of inefficiency in the federal government and I can accept that there is a degree of inefficiency in the way members opposite carry out their various responsibilities, including their role as members on the Uluru board. This matter, however, goes well beyond simple administrative inefficiency. On a number of occasions, the member for MacDonnell pleaded with us to do as he asked. It is completely irrelevant for him to make excuses for his federal colleagues and other members of the board on the grounds that we took 6 or 12 months to make a nomination. I urge the member for MacDonnell, who is a member of that board which sits in his electorate, to be as good as his word early this year and to actively promote the involvement of the Northern Territory government nomination on that board.

Mr Speaker, we have nominated a representative to the board because of the vital importance of the Uluru Katatjuta National Park to the Northern Territory. It does not change our view that it is inappropriate for politicians to sit on the board. Since that is the only choice we have, we have decided to act in the interest of the Northern Territory but it is, without doubt, inappropriate that politicians should sit on the board. It is equally inappropriate that the federal government should create a situation where the Northern Territory government does not select the 2 nominees but, rather, there is 1 representative from each side of this House. The federal government did not offer the same opportunity to the federal opposition. Instead, it placed 2 ministers or their representatives on the board. Finally, I reiterate that the position of the Northern Territory government in relation to the management of the park has not changed in any way. We will never resile from our position that Uluru must eventually be a Northern Territory park managed by the Northern Territory Conservation Commission.

Sightings of Cane Toads on Tipperary Station

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

I address this question to the Chief Minister in his capacity as acting Minister for Conservation. Can he confirm that there have been recent sightings of cane toads on Tipperary Station? If that is true, can the acting minister tell this House what action has been taken on this particular matter?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have not been advised of that but I will seek the information as a matter of urgency. I would be quite disturbed if that were the case.

Mr Ede: We want his name.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am not going to rise to that bait. I am very very tempted to suggest it is sitting on the frontbench opposite, but I will not do that.

Pesticide Residues in the Northern Territory

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

What is the current situation in regard to pesticide residues in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise the House on the current state of play in this most important matter. Nationally, the Northern Territory maintains an excellent record in the current crisis of pesticide residues in meat for export. There have been no violations although in excess of 800 fat samples have been tested in the Territory, this sampling representing some 60 000 head of cattle and buffalo. However, the problem is a national one and it is imperative that we control the chemicals used in agriculture both to ensure that we retain our export markets for primary products and to safeguard the health of the population. In some ways, we are perhaps fortunate that we have not had longstanding agricultural or horticultural industries in the Northern Territory. The organochlorine chemicals, such as DDT, which are very persistent in the soil, have never been used extensively nor in any quantity. The same chemicals have not been used in livestock in the Territory for about 20 years.

The major legislation to control pesticides and agricultural chemicals in the Territory is administered by the Minister for Health and Community Services - the Poisons and Dangerous Goods Act 1983 as amended in 1985. This act controls the availability and use of pesticides and the licensing of pest control operators. Under this act, the senior chemist of my department has been appointed registrar and will be responsible for establishing and maintaining a register of pesticides. Discussions are being held with the relevant parties in relation to proposed Commonwealth legislation for clearance and registration and any other points that require further clarification. Amendments may then be needed to the Poisons and Dangerous Goods Act in the Territory to clarify some of the current functions of pesticides registration, for example, deregistration. Northern Territory retailers are being informed of registration and offences as it affects them - that is, the sale or use of unregistered pesticides will be illegal.

The other area where agricultural chemicals will be controlled is under the Stock Diseases Act. DDT has already been banned for use in livestock under the Stock Diseases Act. I have approved the preparation of regulations and action is now under way to ban the organochlorines and persistent organophosphates for use in livestock under that act. It will also be necessary to declare pesticide levels of significance a disease under the Stock Diseases Act in order that quarantine, restriction of movement of livestock and clearing of properties can occur. Dieldrin and other organochlorine chemicals used for termite control could be used to protect wooden stockyards and holding paddocks. This has been a major cause of pesticide residues in the states. It is not thought to be a major area of concern in the Territory since most stockyards are of a permanent steel construction or are steel portable yards. It is of more concern in the small farm areas surrounding Darwin and Katherine where more wooden yards and possibly more dieldrin have been used. Amendments to the act are being prepared to cover this area.

The Commonwealth government, among other things, is concerned in the clearance and registration of chemicals and drugs used for agricultural and veterinary purposes. On 14 August 1987, the Australian Agricultural Council agreed to establish a working party of senior state, territory and Commonwealth officials to report on how a single national clearance and registration scheme for these chemicals could be achieved. The uniform clearance, registration and labelling of chemicals is considered to be a first line of defence against market reaction to consequential residues in food products. The Northern Territory relies heavily on bodies such as the Technical Committee on Agricultural Chemicals to clear chemicals which may then be registered in the Territory under our legislation.

The Northern Territory is represented on a state and Commonwealth committee to implement the Australian Agricultural Council's integrated action plan on pesticide residues. With respect to the integrated action plan, the Commonwealth is planning a mechanism which will allow for clearance of properties, and my department is presently preparing proposals for clearance of the whole of the Northern Territory under that plan, with the possible exception of the small farm areas I mentioned earlier around Darwin and Katherine.

Policewoman for Groote Eylandt

Mr LANHUPUY to CHIEF MINISTER

Does this government intend placing a policewoman on Groote Eylandt and, if so, when will that happen?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the matter of locating a policewoman on Groote Eylandt has been raised on a number of occasions. One of the difficulties is actually getting applications for the location of a policewoman at that particular station. The matter has also been raised by the Women's Advisory Council which took the issue up with me as the minister to whom it reports, seeking to obtain some definite action.

There is a wide range of social problems on Groote Eylandt, including domestic violence and prostitution amongst young girls. Considerable concern has been expressed by the Groote Eylandt community. People believe that the presence of a policewoman would greatly assist in alleviating some of these problems. The matter has been taken up with the Commissioner of Police and he is seeking to take some action to locate a policewoman on Groote Eylandt as soon as possible. I reiterate that one of the difficulties lies with actually getting volunteers. Whilst it is possible to instruct a policewoman to relocate there, it would be preferable to obtain a volunteer for transfer to the island because, obviously, the person would far more readily fit into the community and become actively involved. From the point of view of morale, if we can arrange a voluntary transfer, then so much the better. The Commissioner of Police is seeking to place a policewoman there as soon as possible.

National Companies and Securities Scheme

Mr SETTER to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

I refer to an article published in the NT News of 22 September in which the Leader of the Opposition claimed that the Northern Territory's decision to oppose the federal Labor government's takeover of the National Companies and Securities Scheme showed a lack of will to tackle interstate corporate offenders. Is the Northern Territory's stand against the federal government's intention to unilaterally establish a centralised companies and securities scheme likely to encourage white-collar crime in the Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I hope that the Leader of the Opposition has advanced his knowledge on the matter further since he made that statement. The Territory, through having control of its own Corporate Affairs Office, is far better able to fight corporate crime than it would be through the centralised system that the federal government is intent on forcing on Australia. As Attorney-General of the Northern Territory, I can ensure that our Corporate Affairs Office has the resources it needs to fight corporate crime, and I assure honourable members that our office has a full complement of investigative staff. Those investigators work very closely with the Northern Territory Police Force. In fact, a member of the Fraud Squad is actually stationed at the Corporate Affairs Office. That certainly creates a very close and effective situation.

The system which operates at present enables very close monitoring of our local scene and encourages liaison both with local business people and interstate corporate offices. We have a situation where the federal government, through the federal Attorney-General, is proposing a change from our present scheme of Corporate Affairs Offices and the National Securities and Companies Scheme. The federal government is advocating that it take total control of the situation. As members know, we only moved into the scheme last year when we passed uniform legislation relating to companies. There was cross-vesting of companies so that companies could move from the register in one state and be fully covered in other states. All the legislation relating to companies and the operation of companies was uniform around the country.

Obviously, the Leader of the Opposition advocates following the suggestion made by the federal Attorney-General to have one national scheme. I can assure the honourable member that business in the Territory is totally opposed to that idea, right through from the Confederation of Industry and Commerce and the Small Business Association to all aspects of the industry in the Territory. Those of us who can remember the days of control from Canberra realise why. There is nothing more hopeless for advancement of any organisation than having control vested 3000 km to 4000 km away without any input or any ability to influence the people who hold the reins. It means that the views and opinions of that large concentration of population in the south-east corner of Australia overwhelms any views, suggestions or needs of other Australians elsewhere in the country.

Mr Speaker, I inform the Leader of the Opposition that Labor governments in Victoria, South Australia and Western Australia are totally opposed to a national scheme as well as conservative governments in Tasmania, Queensland and the Territory. In fact, the only state which supports the federal government is New South Wales. I do not know what is behind that. Probably there are some benefits for New South Wales. The fact that, apart from New South Wales, all states oppose the federal scheme, stock exchanges right throughout the country oppose it and major business organisations around the country oppose it does not seem to faze the federal Attorney-General nor, obviously, the Leader of the Opposition in the Territory.

I think that all Territorian businessmen and others are aware of the problems with having central control and of the inhibitions it creates. Much groundwork has been done to create potential for business over the next 10 to 20 years in the Northern Territory and any concept of controlling that from a central point for the benefit of Australians in the south-east corner of Australia will stifle business in the Northern Territory, as it will stifle business in Western Australia, South Australia and any other area that does not fit in with the New South Wales and Canberra syndrome. Certainly, that will not help Territorians in the growth of business and in the creation of jobs for our school leavers.

We have a law that is uniform throughout Australia and a system which allows input by all states. I refer to the ministerial council of which I am a member and which controls the scheme. Each state is treated equally so that the smaller populations are not overruled by the larger populations. It also means that changes cannot be made overnight. It has to be discussed with a quorum of all state ministers and it allows business to know that there will not be any overnight changes to legislative provisions. It allows for planning for the long term and stability in the organisation of companies and national securities.

Any suggestion that the present system encourages crime, which is what the Leader of the Opposition said in his comments in the NT News on 22 September, is rubbish. I ask the Leader of the Opposition to talk to local business people and find out why they oppose the concept of a national scheme, and to support the growth of business in the Territory and some local control and input in relation to the rules that control business and corporate affairs in the Territory.

Seat Belts for Taxi Drivers

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Will he undertake to consider a request from taxi drivers that the wearing of seat belts be made optional for them? Their concern is that personal safety is at considerable risk on occasion from certain passengers and that seat belts make them particularly vulnerable as they cannot defend themselves whilst strapped in?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the matter raised by the member for Sadadeen is very serious and it has been of concern to me for some time. We have not yet reached the absolutely shocking state that Sydney and Melbourne have reached with taxi drivers being physically assaulted and, in some cases, murdered while doing their job, particularly in the middle of the night. Taxi drivers interstate quite often are extremely reluctant to work night shifts or are very selective in the customers that they pick up. Here in the Territory, we are trying to promote the tourist industry and it is very important that the taxi and hire car industry plays its part.

The specific suggestion raised has certainly not come before me directly as yet but I take it on board for serious consideration and will also look at ways of assisting taxi drivers to find other appropriate means of ensuring their safety. In other places, they have emergency call systems using automatic buttons and so on. Some taxi drivers protect themselves with self-defence equipment such as monkey wrenches and so on. It is a serious matter, however, and I do not take it lightly. I undertake to investigate it.

Road safety statistics of serious accidents and fatalities indicate that one of the biggest killers on our roads is the failure to wear seat belts where they are installed. We certainly do not want the wearing of seat belts to place taxi drivers in some other form of danger. Driving in the close confines of urban areas could allow the matter to be seen in a different light and I will have the department and the Road Safety Council look at the suggestion seriously to see whether we can take it up to assist taxi drivers or find some other means of supporting them.

ANSWER TO QUESTION

Sighting of Cane Toads on Tipperary Station

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister)(by leave): Mr Speaker, I can confirm that 1 mature male cane toad has been sighted on Tipperary Station. It was identified yesterday and has subsequently been confirmed. A team of Conservation Commission rangers is on its way to the homestead area of Tipperary Station to determine whether other cane toads are present and, if so, to clear them from the area. Quite probably, it is an individual cane toad. It is suspected of having arrived in a shipment of palms from Queensland. I have addressed this Assembly on the subject of cane toads on a number of occasions.

Mr Bell: The member for Barkly could be responsible, with his associations with the Premier of Queensland.

Mr Tuxworth: You will notice that there are none in Barkly.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am sorry the member for Barkly made that comment. He should learn more about his electorate because the south-west area of the Barkly electorate is where we have the major threat of the entry of cane toads, particularly around Wologorang Station. In fact, they are moving around the Gulf of Carpentaria at the rate of some 27 km per annum and there is a major infestation in the western part of his electorate.

The cane toad represents one of the greatest biological and environmental threats facing the Northern Territory. A pair of mature cane toads can infest an entire waterhole and neighbouring streams in 1 breeding season. A female lays about 15 000 eggs at a time and lays several times during the course of a year. The cane toad has no natural predators in Australia. The glands behind its head secrete a poison which is venomous to any predator which attacks it. It is omnivorous, consuming plant life as well as small fauna such as lizards and small snakes. It breeds rapidly and can cause significant problems for the cattle industry by getting into water troughs and secreting its poison there. Cane toads present a major problem and we are on constant alert.

There have been a number of sightings of cane toads in Katherine and other locations in the Territory, including a couple in Darwin. I have vivid memories of 1985 when the Kulaluk area was searched for several days after a cane toad was discovered there. The Northern Territory Conservation Commission employs probably the leading expert on cane toads in this country and we are actively involved in national research, in combination with Queensland and the federal government, to discover a biological control for the cane toad. Frankly, that offers the only hope of counteracting the threat. A viral disease which has been identified around the Townsville area, known as the Townsville Disease, has dramatically reduced the cane toad population in that area. Our people are working actively on research into that disease. I have addressed this Assembly concerning that work on a number of occasions in my previous capacity as Minister for Conservation.

I cannot emphasise how important it is to maintain a continuous monitoring in respect of this particular pest. The Northern Territory is a natural habitat for the toad. If it becomes established in the wetland areas in the north, it will spread rapidly right across the Top End of the Territory with untold environmental damage to wildlife. Unfortunately, it is quite possible that it will arrive in vehicles or products from interstate. It tends to bury itself and it is believed some cane toads have arrived inside pot-plants from nurseries in Queensland. It is not possible to detect them without inspecting every pot-plant arriving in the Northern Territory, which would involve a massive cost. The hitchhiking habit of cane toads has been the subject of much mirth. They have a tendency to climb up underneath vehicles and secrete themselves so that they can be carried over considerable distances.

The cane toad is a major threat to the Territory and I can assure honourable members that the Conservation Commission is constantly monitoring and policing the matter as well as engaging in research on biological controls. I am sure that, as information becomes available, the minister will keep this Assembly informed.

Burgundy Royale Debts

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

As I understand it, the government has paid rent for office space at the Beaufort 5 years in advance. Does the liquidator consider this to be a debt held by the government against Burgundy Royale and, if so, where does it rank in the order of debts and, secondly and conversely, if no arrangement has been entered into with the liquidator for the recovery of the rent advanced, how does the government propose to avoid paying rent again when the property is sold?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will not be discussing the matter of Burgundy Royale in terms of its financial position or anything of that nature in this Assembly because the writ has now been listed. No financial considerations or part of the Burgundy Royale situation will be discussed by me during the course of these sittings.

Work Health Authority

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Recently, I heard a radio interview with a representative of the Federated Miscellaneous Workers Union who saw fit to denigrate and insult the operation of the Work Health Authority. This individual, Mr Peter Tullgren, has apparently described the Work Health Authority as a paper tiger and has gone so far on public radio as to cast aspersions on an insurance company because he says it owns a rehabilitation service. In view of the recent statement made by the minister on the Work Health Authority, will he advise on further action on this matter?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Ludmilla for that question. It is most unfortunate that we have experienced recently these outrageous outpourings from Mr Peter Tullgren about the Work Health Authority. I say 'unfortunate' because Mr Tullgren holds a privileged position in that he has been appointed to the Work Health Authority Ministerial Advisory Council. Mr Tullgren was nominated for a post on that council by the trade union movement, and he does the membership of the union movement a great disservice because, whilst he has not seen fit to attend either of the 2 meetings of that advisory council that have been held, he has chosen to enter into some sort of public anti-Work Health Authority campaign, using the media as a vehicle. If Mr Tullgren has a brief for the people he reports to, he should bring forward some constructive criticism for improvements to the Work Health Authority instead of denigrating through the media one of the best work health organisations in this country. He is in a better position to do that than most people because he is a member of the advisory council.

I was appalled at Mr Tullgren's outburst on Territory Extra on 30 September. Whilst I do not intend to take up the valuable time of this Assembly by discussing his criticisms in detail, I would like to make 2 brief points. Firstly, Mr Tullgren referred to the Work Health Authority as a paper tiger. The authority is held up nationally as a model for the administration of occupational health and safety; it promotes the obligation of our society to rehabilitate injured workers instead of simply paying them off and assigning them to the unemployment scrap heap. It is instrumental in bringing about significant reductions in the cost of workers' compensation, which all citizens of the Territory ultimately bear. Any paper tiger which can do those things has considerable value to the Northern Territory and is worthy of my support.

My second point concerns Mr Tullgren's claim on radio that an insurance company owned one of the Territory's rehabilitation services. In my view, that verges on slander. His statements were tantamount to an accusation that this insurance company covertly instructs its rehabilitation service to reduce its liability for compensation payments by pushing injured workers back to work before they have completely recovered. That is an outrageous statement and I hope Mr Tullgren has some evidence to back it up if he intends to stay out of the court. If I were involved with an insurance company accused of that, I would be taking the matter to court to have the record set straight. I will be very surprised if Mr Tullgren does not find himself in trouble over that matter.

Northern Territory Public Service

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Mr Speaker, I understand that the government has stated that, in the course of this financial year, it will save 600 Northern Territory Public Service positions to take the figure from around 15 600 down to about 15 000. If that is correct, can the minister explain why the total salaries bill this financial year, as contained in the budget papers, is up by $15m and further can he state whether a significant component of this increased cost is due to the upward reclassification of positions related to the new staffing structures? Further, could he confirm that there are 8 new E4 positions in the Department of the Chief Minister as a result of the reclassification structure?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would be happy to provide some detail on that question. We will be decreasing public service numbers down to a figure of 15 030. Over the last couple of years, the figure has been 15 500 to 15 600. However, not all of those positions have been filled. In fact, we will be losing about 240 people who have become excess to requirements. We are working very carefully to ensure that nobody is made redundant compulsorily.

The Leader of the Opposition would be well aware of the nurses' anomaly pay claim which has resulted in a significant increase in costs to the public service. He would also be aware of the $10 increase that came into effect in March of this year. That $10 increase is being paid. He would be aware that a 1.5% increase is likely to come into place. Hopefully, it may be delayed, but a 1.5% increase will probably come into place this year and had to be allowed for in the budget. I have no problems at all with the fact that costs have increased because of the increased costs of the nurses' anomaly pay claim, the 1.5% increase and the $10 increase earlier this year. We cannot hold back the growth of the public service in the very essential areas of police, teachers and nurses. Their numbers are increasing all the time with the growth of the Northern Territory. We have to allow for those people and that answers the questions asked by the Leader of the Opposition. He mentioned 8 new positions in the Department of the Chief Minister. I do not have details of that before me at this time, but I will look into that matter and get back to him on it.

Mr Smith: Eight new E4 positions.

Mr McCARTHY: I am sorry, say that again.

Mr Smith: Eight new E4 positions.

Mr McCARTHY: I do not believe that is the case, but I will get back to the Assembly with details of that during the course of these sittings.

Bradshaw Terrace Bus Bay

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

What is the present situation concerning the Bradshaw Terrace bus bay and what was the outcome of any discussions he has had recently with the Darwin City Council?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to confirm that at least the city council came some way towards seeing the light, so to speak, in regard to the particularly dangerous situation at Bradshaw Terrace. The council has agreed to defer its final decision on that area until we complete a comprehensive report on all the possible options. The current situation is that 3 of the 6 stops in the area have been eliminated. Whilst that has not created a significant problem for travellers, it has meant some rescheduling and the cost associated with that.

The real problem is that the council, contrary to the advice that we would have given it, has installed a second pedestrian crossing less than 10 m from the Linton Street intersection. It does not take much imagination to visualise the dangerous situations that will arise there and some have already been observed by bus service employees. Pedestrians are moving across the road right next to the intersection, which is dangerous in itself. In addition, while people are on the crossing, buses are stopped across Linton Street thus blocking off traffic and creating a further hazard. We have drawn the attention of the council to the situation and, hopefully, it will address it quickly.

The situation illustrates the problems which can arise when people make gung-ho decisions without proper deliberation about the full implications of their actions. Whilst I commend the council for postponing its final decision on the matter until we can properly report, I find it quite difficult to sit by without commenting on another dangerous situation the council has inadvertently created with this crazy pedestrian crossing next to the Linton Street intersection.

The survey will be completed in November or December and hopefully will put forward some practical, safe options for council to adopt, with or without the support and assistance of the Department of Transport and Works. We certainly have not been other than totally responsible in proceeding with the comprehensive study, with the assistance of Lend Lease, which ought to be commended for its serious input into the matter.

Grant of Crown Land at Berry Springs

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Is it a fact that the government has given or is thinking of giving a grant of Crown Land to Aboriginal interests in the Berry Springs area for commercial purposes? In tandem with this proposition, what discussions have taken place with the local progress association, the local people and the Litchfield Shire officers and where do the proposed plans fit in with the deliberations of the Rural Planning Authority?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am happy to lay to rest some of the speculation and innuendo that appears to be coming from residents of the rural area. It appears that on talkback radio I mentioned the possibility of an Aboriginal cultural centre being established on commercial land adjacent to the Berry Springs Nature Park and Zoo. May I explain, for the benefit of the member for Koolpinyah, what is proposed. There is a 40 ha site adjacent to the Berry Springs Zoo on which it is intended to establish commercial concessions because we believe that it will be the most visited tourist destination in the Top End. The proposal is for the establishment of a caravan park, a restaurant and a souvenir and craft shop.

I was approached some 6 months ago by Aboriginal interests about the possibility of establishing an Aboriginal cultural centre in Darwin. I put it to them that the perfect location was adjacent to the commercial ventures being established at Berry Springs Zoo. The reason for this is obvious. It is on the road leading into Litchfield Park, which will attract visitors and locals alike. The Aboriginal cultural centre will not proceed unless the Aboriginal people, in conjunction with the government, are able to organise their finance. The accusation that we are establishing another reserve such as Bagot or Kulaluk is quite wrong. What is proposed is a building within which Aboriginal people and their organisations will have the opportunity to sell and possibly manufacture their arts and crafts. This fits perfectly with the policies of the Northern Territory government to do whatever it possibly can to involve Aboriginal people in tourism.

Mr Speaker, the member for Koolpinyah has been invited by myself to join the management committee of the Berry Springs Zoo. Very shortly, the membership of that committee will be finalised and draft terms of reference that I have prepared will go to that committee. It will investigate how the concessions will come to fruition and how an Aboriginal cultural centre may be implemented. I would like to put at rest the minds of those rural residents who feel that they have not been advised properly. My ministerial officer spoke at length with a member of the progress association who gave an assurance that he would take a more positive role. In effect, by allowing such land to be used for commercial purposes, we are bringing enterprise to the rural area. This will create employment.

It will be one of the greatest assets available for tourists travelling to the Top End. We make no secret of the pressures being placed on our visitors in Kakadu. We need another location close to Darwin and the publicity that was given recently to the establishment of Berry Springs Zoo says it all. It will be one of the world's best and most outstanding features because it will deal generally with everything Territorian. Once again, I put on the record my congratulations to the members of the Conservation Commission who have helped in developing that facility. I have no doubt that it will be one of the outstanding successes of tourism in the Top End. An Aboriginal cultural centre, a restaurant and a caravan park operated independently of government will do nothing but add to the asset and attract tourists to visit Berry Springs, the nature reserve and the zoo on the way through to the Litchfield area.

Cutback in Darwin Operations of Commonwealth Department of Administrative Services

Mr REED to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

In Tuesday night's adjournment debate, the minister reported the concerns of the Australian Professional Engineers Association, which also expressed its concerns on the ABC radio news this morning, regarding the cutback in the Darwin operations of the Commonwealth Department of Administrative Services. What impact might this move by the department have on the Northern Territory economy?

ANSWER

In a word, Mr Speaker, significant.

Mr Bell: That will do, Fred.

Mr FINCH: My answer does warrant some elaboration because a particular problem has been identified for a number of years and I, naturally enough, have a solution.

The Department of Administrative Services construction group, along with federal government departments, is facing some cutbacks. The Deputy Secretary of the department has opted to eliminate quite a large number of level 1 positions. The position of the Darwin senior officer is one of them but that in itself is not the end of the story. Changes to the departmental structure will reduce the design capacity in the local office to an absolute minimum. Similar problems have been raised in the House on a number of occasions. Well before I entered this House, Paul Everingham spoke about problems which went right back to the immediate post-cyclone period when all management functions for the department in the South Australian and Northern Territory region were transferred back to Adelaide, despite the vast predominance of work being carried out in the Northern Territory.

Since Cyclone Tracy, I believe there has only been one annual period where the workload for South Australia has exceeded that of the Northern Territory. In one particular year, $90m was spent in the Territory while $1m was spent in South Australia, for a fence at the Adelaide Airport. The department's rationale for not increasing local design capacity was the difficulty of recruiting staff in the immediate post-cyclone period. Despite many moves to change this over a period of time, there has been only a token increase in the establishment of the design cell here, and that came about in 1983-84. That capacity is now to be reduced again. Whilst there was some increase in the number of design jobs carried out here for Territory projects, that is to be wiped out.

The impact will extend much further than the department's local staff of 20 to 30 people. There will be no capacity to give work to local consultants where it will be done by local people in local offices. That will not only affect jobs. It has been clearly illustrated over the years that products coming out of design offices in Adelaide are usually most inappropriate for the Northern Territory environment. We need designs which take account of environmental considerations like the heat, cyclones, horizontal rain and so forth, which designers in Adelaide are not at all familiar with. We have previously had projects designed in Adelaide where the materials were not available in Darwin and local manufacturers, agents, and suppliers did not have an opportunity to bid. The cost involved in bringing in these specialist materials is onerous in itself. Construction techniques which are appropriate in other places are inappropriate locally. The cost of that is in itself quite tremendous. I estimate that 100 or so jobs are involved for Territorians. Apart from that, the cost to the public purse of having jobs designed inappropriately elsewhere is of great concern.

The other night, the member for MacDonnell seemed to have great difficulty accepting that I was seeking a bipartisan approach in this matter. I wonder whether the Labor opposition in the Northern Territory does have any access to Canberra because my suggestion that we ought to take this matter on as a cooperative issue was scoffed at. This is a serious matter for the Australian taxpayer and also for local employment. If members opposite do not believe that, they should talk to the people in housing and construction, in architects' offices, in quantity surveyors' offices, in engineering offices and in surveyors' offices and those people will tell them what it means in job terms.

One solution is to get the federal department to reverse its decision and listen to what its Darwin people and its Adelaide office people are saying and reinstate the status quo. Probably a better solution would be for the Department of Transport and Works, which has the capacity and the local expertise and is able to coordinate local consultants, to take on an agency basis all of the design work that is to be completed within the Northern Territory. With a military base to be established and an air terminal to be constructed, hopefully in the near future, there will be a high demand. It would not only be good for the federal government but also it would ensure maximum benefits to the local community. Those benefits are not simply short term during the design phase. They will be realised during construction when there is a need for the designer and the guy in the field to be able to talk directly. There is also a need for people to be available on a long-term basis to provide ongoing consultancy.

The situation that has arisen now could have been avoided by the relocation of the principal regional headquarters to Darwin where it rightfully belongs. If that is not to happen - and I suggest that perhaps there should be some lobbying in respect of that - the federal government should be realistic and accept the offer of the Department of Transport and Works to complete these works effectively and efficiently on an agency basis.

Block H Finnis River

Mr BELL to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, can the Treasurer confirm that, as acting Minister for Lands in January this year, he instructed the Northern Territory Land Corporation to sell Block H at Finnis River for $650 000?

ANSWER

The answer is no. I did not instruct the Northern Territory Land Corporation.

Odours at Northlakes

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he offer the residents of Northlakes and nearby residential areas some relief in the matter of unsavoury odours which drift from the Marrara golf course treated-effluent irrigation system?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am in a position to give honourable members a rundown on the developments that have occurred in that particular area. The member for Sanderson has been in my office on a number of occasions about this particular issue and, of course, the member for Jingili, who lives some distance away but represents an area within the immediate vicinity, has also mentioned it. As the local member myself previously, I worked very hard on this particular issue. Unfortunately, as the member for Berrimah, I happened to go to the office of the Minister for Transport and Works. The member for Sanderson was that minister in those days. I used to discuss this particular issue at some length with him. It was not until I became minister responsible for the Power and Water Authority that we saw the action really speed up on this particular issue.

I am happy to be in a position to offer fresh cause for optimism to the long-suffering residents in the area and to the Minister for Education who has long suffered complaints from his constituents about the quality of the air at various times.

Mr Hanrahan: It was pretty bad last night.

Mr COULTER: The member for Flynn would share his concern about this matter.

Perhaps I should outline the nature of the problem briefly for the benefit of honourable members who are not fortunate enough to have such a well-grassed and well-watered 18-hole golf course in the middle of their electorates. In 1981, agreement was reached to utilise treated effluent to irrigate the golf course and other nearby recreational areas. However, since commissioning it in 1983, growing numbers of complaints have reached the government about unpleasant odours emanating apparently from the golf course which had had the effect of putting entire families off their nightly dinners. Those complaints came to a peak late last year and, following representation from the member for Sanderson, it was resolved that something had to be done about it.

From the number of complaints and from on-site investigation, it was obvious that the main source of the odour problem was the effluent storage lake. The first stage of the remedial exercise involved aeration of the lake to reduce the growth of blue and green algae. I am pleased to say that the aeration process, which began mid-year, has distinctly improved the effluent quality and reduced the rate of the build-up of sludge. The second stage has involved stopping chlorination of the effluent at Leanyer, with the approval of the Department of Health and Community Services, and a third stage involves introduction of a freshwater flushing cycle into the golf course system at the end of each irrigation cycle. This reduces the effect of stagnation in the mains. To this end, the 1987-88 budget allocated $70 000 as a grant-in-aid to the Darwin Golf Club to provide a freshwater flushing facility. Further remedial plans involve the possibility of introducing fish - and the Minister for Industries and Development would be interested in this I am sure - into the lake to improve the biological cycle and further reduce the growth of offensive blue-green algae.

In summary, I can report that, since aeration of the lake started in earnest, no complaints from residents have been recorded so far. I believe we have put an end to this problem which has frustrated people in the area for some time. I would like to congratulate the people from the Water Directorate for the energy and effort that they have put into resolving this particular issue. It has presented some problems at times, and we have been unsuccessful at times in the remedial action that we have tried to implement out there. However, at long last, it appears that the solution has been found.

Conservation Commission Headquarters and Herbarium

Mr TIPILOURA to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Can he confirm or otherwise that the headquarters of the Conservation Commission and the commission herbarium are to be transferred from Alice Springs to Darwin?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the herbarium will remain where it is for the moment, until we finalise the arrangements for the move to Palmerston.

Mr Ede: So it is moving.

Mr HANRAHAN: It is intended ultimately to establish the Conservation Commission in toto at the Palmerston site, including the herbarium.

After working with the Director of the Conservation Commission for some considerable time now, I have made the decision to move the Director, and only the Director, back to Darwin. That move will be effective on 1 February 1988. There will be no significant change within the structure of the Conservation Commission as it stands at the moment, but there will be an additional position in the Alice Springs region which will virtually become Deputy Director South, if my memory serves me correctly.

I have been attempting to create a commission that operates as efficiently as possible and, to all intents and purposes, the only way ultimately to achieve this aim, because of the workload and the balance of staff in the regions in the Territory, is to have the Director live in Darwin. For that purpose, he will take up residence in Darwin effective 1 February 1988.

Park Area for Larapinta Valley

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

A number of blocks of land in the Larapinta Valley area have been set aside for future land use. These uses include parks, sporting oval sites and a future school site. In view of the fact that some 700 people are now in residence in this area, when will a block of land be handed over to the Alice Springs Town Council to enable at least one park to be made available to the children of the residents of this new area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise the constituents of the member for Araluen in the Larapinta Valley area of his effective representations. Only yesterday, I was able to write to the Alice Springs Town Council and offer a piece of land for the development of a park, at nil cost and with freehold title to ensue. The land is Lot 7178 Lindervale Drive.

I share the concerns of the member for Araluen. The Larapinta Valley is a fast developing area. Many people are moving into the town. It lacks some of the basic infrastructure of a suburb somewhat removed from the main business area and I think it is essential that a high priority be placed on it to ensure that the establishment of parks and other community facilities takes place. Of course, I say that in the context of the budgetary constraints on us this year. I certainly give an undertaking to the residents of the Larapinta Valley area that I will work closely with the member for Araluen, listen to his advice and do whatever I can to ensure that the development of parks and other community assets in that particular area is a matter of priority.

Howard Springs Community Health Centre

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Recently, on television, the minister indicated that the government was prepared to subsidise the operation of the Howard Springs Health Centre if private medical practitioners were willing to establish a practice there. In light of the fact that the centre was closed recently due to financial cuts, what form and level of subsidy is the minister prepared to provide?

ANSWER

I made those comments in a television interview when the reporter asked me for details about the Howard Springs Community Health Centre. It turned out afterwards that the story had come from the Nurses Federation and was all about how I was supposed to be privatising every community health centre in the Northern Territory. Obviously, that is not the case.

The Howard Springs Community Health Centre was closed because I believed that government funds could be saved whilst the same service could continue to be provided through the Berrimah and Palmerston centres. Infant care, for example, would be handled from Palmerston while domiciliary care would continue to be handled by the same people, based in the Palmerston or Berrimah centres. All outreach services in the area would continue. The other main reason for closing the centre was that we had received some expressions of interest from private practitioners who wished to open up a service in that area. This would mean that not only would the previous services continue to be provided for the residents there but they would be enhanced by the availability of a general practitioner, as well as attracting a pharmacy into the area.

I have been negotiating with a number of doctors who have indicated interest. The point I made in the TV interview about the possibility of government subsidy - which is not really the appropriate word - was that we may have to help the business over a short period of time in order for it to become viable. This could perhaps be done by not charging rent for the premises or something of that nature. If that is the case, so be it. It will be one way of increasing health services in the area. I have been very pleased indeed with the number of expressions of interest from GPs to operate in that area. I can advise the people in the Howard Springs area that health services will actually be increased because of the cuts in the government's budget in respect of health and community services. I am confident that that will be evident in a very short period.

Leanyer Sewage Ponds

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Mr Speaker, my question follows from a question put by the member for Jingili. Is the minister aware of dangerously high sludge levels in the Leanyer sewage ponds and can he assure the House that the Power and Water Authority will take whatever action is necessary to prevent the emanation of noxious odours and their dissemination over the northern suburbs as a result of those high sludge levels?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Karama for his question. It is interesting that the member for Ludmilla has not asked the same question. I understand that he is quite happy and that the effluent pumping system in his electorate is operating quite well and without any noxious odours emanating from it. The design of the Leanyer sewage ponds is such that sludge builds up. I am not sure that the member for Karama is right about it having reached dangerously high levels. Engineers from the Water Directorate tell me that the sludge build-up will be treated in the normal manner, as it was designed to be treated, and that the design limits have not been exceeded. When the sludge is removed for treatment, I suppose there may be some odour.

Honourable members will be aware that people living in the Leanyer area are no strangers to odours. The Leanyer dump was a source of odours for some time and, over a period of time, design changes were made to stop noxious odours emanating from it. Eventually, of course, a new dump site was found. I advise the member for Karama that we are aware of the sludge build-up which is designed to be part of the operation. The sludge will be treated and I suspect that, when that happens, there may be an odour for a short period of time. That is an inevitable result of the operation.

Discovery of Alanite at White Range

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I know the minister is well aware of the discovery of alanite at White Range in the Arltunga area near Alice Springs. Alanite is the compound from which yttrium, a rare earth element, is derived. Yttrium has real potential for use in superconductors, an exciting scientific development. Will he undertake to encourage Australian investment in this particular compound and also to encourage secondary and even tertiary production relating to it here in Australia so that Australians will reap the full advantage of it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member's question may arise from an article in the Centralian Advocate. I do not have the date of the issue it appeared in but I took a copy of it. The headline was: 'The Japanese Move in on Mining Scoop'. I also noted that the member for Stuart, speaking in the debate on the Appropriation Bill, seemed to agree with the member for Sadadeen about the need for Australian involvement in processing industries.

The article gave the impression that Arltunga is one of only 2 places in the world where this particular commodity is found. My advice from my department indicates that that is not correct and that the material is found in beach sands right around Australia. Apart from Queensland, there are not too many places where beach sands can be mined although I believe Western Australia recently received $100m from a Japanese consortium to develop a similar process with semiconductor material. The major occurrences of rare earth materials in Australia, which appears to be relatively rich in them, are in heavy mineral beach sands which contain monazite, which is a by-product of heavy mineral beach sands mining for ilmenite and zirconium.

Active exploration is under way for rare earth elements in a number of places in Australia, including the Hall's Creek district in Western Australia. Rare earth elements are produced by Renison in Tasmania and exported to France. The French company Rhone-Poulenc announced its intention in January this year to build a $100m monazite processing plant in Pinjarra, Western Australia, to treat monazite produced from Western Australian beach sand products.

The point that I am making is that, at the moment, the end users of this product seem to be the ones with the risk capital. There are not too many Australian companies who have demonstrated that they wish to become involved with the value-added product. I guess that is nothing new in Australia. It is what I spoke about in relation to the Appropriation Bill. I said that the Northern Territory should investigate every possibility to become a resource producer of value-added products, not simply provide the raw material. One of the areas where we could become heavily involved in secondary and tertiary product development is the uranium industry. It would be good if we could become involved with rare earth minerals because that is the state of the art technology, as the member for Sadadeen pointed out to us recently. These metals are much sought after by mining companies. If we could develop anything like that in the Northern Territory, it would be advantageous to us.

The recent interest in rare earth elements stems from the discovery that alloys containing rare earth elements become superconductors at temperatures above that of liquid nitrogen. If further research can produce an alloy that conducts at room temperature, the effect on the electronic industry would rival the effect of the invention of the automobile on the transport industry.

In the vicinity of White Range near Arltunga, an interesting deposit containing the material alandite has been discovered by Alice Springs prospector, Bluey Bruce. The mineralisation occurs in association with pegmatitic veins on the exploration licence that has been granted to Mr Bruce and his associates. The tenement at this stage remains in the names of individual holders and has not been included in the property that forms part of the White Range Gold NL float. The discovery of alandite in this area is interesting but requires much further exploration before its significance can be assessed.

In the article in the Centralian Advocate, the comment concerning the presence of infrastructure and activity on site is related only to the exploration for gold in the White Range area. To date, no significant exploration in the area that contains alandite has taken place. We wish Bluey Bruce all the best of luck. I hope he can find a substantial amount of this quality product and that he can attract venture capital from Australian companies or even overseas companies. Wherever possible, we should look to Australian investment but we should remember that the British developed that magnificent state of Texas in the United States of America. The British set up the big cattle ranches and the ribbons of steel across the state. We will take investment from wherever we can get it. However, it would be nice to see some Australian entrepreneurs helping Bluey Bruce to develop this exciting product.

Australian Traineeship System

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Has any progress been made on the introduction of the Australian traineeship system in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is a very timely question. The subject of the Australian traineeship system was a significant agenda item at the Labour Ministers' Conference that I attended in Sydney last week. Honourable members will be aware that the Australian traineeship system was announced in 1985 in the federal budget. This announcement signifies the federal government's adoption of a recommendation from the Kirby Inquiry into training.

The Australian traineeship system is aimed at providing an additional window to employment for school leavers in the 16 to 18 year age group. Traineeships have a duration of 12 months, involving integrated on- and off-the-job training and are conducted in a non-trade area. The Australian traineeship system in the Northern Territory is administered by a joint secretariat consisting of officers of my department and officers of the federal Department of Education, Employment and Training.

To date, there have been 2 traineeships completed in the Northern Territory. The first was within the Australian Public Service and some 8 persons graduated on 27 March this year. All of those 8 persons were offered full-time employment within the Australian Public Service within the Territory. On 24 April 1987, the first private sector traineeship in Australia was completed when 8 trainees were awarded their competency certificates after having completed a tourism and hospitality industry traineeship conducted at the Beaufort Hotel. All of those trainees were employed by the Beaufort Hotel in a full-time capacity following graduation.

Currently, there are 3 traineeships in progress within the Territory. Firstly, there is a traineeship for 10 people in the tourism and hospitality industry - again at the Beaufort and I commend the Beaufort for its effort in this regard. The Australian Public Service has commenced another traineeship for 15 persons. Finally, in the building and construction industry, some 14 trainees commenced the Territory's first group traineeship under the sponsorship of the Master Builder's Association in May - 10 of these trainees are from Darwin, 3 from Katherine and 1 from Jabiru. These trainees are undertaking a package of training which includes a range of skills in construction occupations, including concreting, steel fixing, scaffolding and building labourer requirements.

A further development in this area is agreement between the Territory and Commonwealth governments on the funding of a position of traineeship liaison officer. This position is located within the Darwin office of the Confederation of Industry and Commerce. That officer commenced employment during August this year and is responsible to the Confederation of Industry and Commerce for the development of Australian traineeship systems in various industries under the umbrella of the confederation's membership. I should perhaps mention here that a similar offer was made to the Territory Trades and Labor Council, but it has not yet taken up that offer.

Many of the delays in getting traineeship schemes off the ground have resulted from the need to negotiate individual agreements with the particular union covering the area concerned. Whilst much progress has been made in these negotiations, there is significant scope for them to be streamlined, and further negotiations are under way with the Federated Miscellaneous Workers Union for an umbrella agreement. If these negotiations are successful, such an umbrella agreement will obviate the need for individual agreements on individual traineeship schemes.

In the area of forward planning for further traineeships, I can advise the Assembly that discussions are well under way for developing a training package, together with the Transport Workers Union, for a traineeship in the furniture removals and storage industry. Within the area of local government, a training package has been finalised for local government municipal works and parks and gardens traineeships. Recent indications are that traineeship schemes in this area of employment may be able to be implemented in early 1988.

Initial discussions have been held with the Northern Territory Cattlemen's Association aimed at examining the feasibility of a station hand traineeship. If these discussions prove fruitful, it is proposed that that scheme will be based in Katherine. That is logical because Katherine is recognised as a service centre for the majority of the cattle stations within the Top End. Discussions with Katherine Rural College management are planned for this month. These discussions are aimed at an assessment of the college's ability to provide the off-the-job training component.

Work has commenced on the drafting of a formal agreement to facilitate an office-clerical traineeship in the private sector in the Northern Territory. To this end, Territory offices will be in contact with federal officials in the Federated Clerks Union to finalise this agreement. It is expected that the training package for an automotive replacement parts traineeship will be completed. The industrial agreement to facilitate this traineeship has been agreed to and it is to go before the Arbitration Commission later in October.

Preliminary work is under way to assess the potential for an insurance industry traineeship being conducted within the Territory. With regard to the traineeship proposed for the Northern Territory Public Service, I must advise the Assembly that significant difficulties have been experienced in reaching any sort of agreement with the Australian Public Service Association for this traineeship. What is promising is that a way has been found around the Australian Public Service Association's intransigent attitude and, at this stage, it is anticipated that a traineeship in the office-clerical area, within the Northern Territory Public Service, will commence early in 1988 in order to coincide with the school leavers seeking employment and the semester requirements of the Darwin Institute of Technology which is to provide the off-the-job training component.

As a general response to the question, traineeship schemes in the Northern Territory have been somewhat sluggish in getting off the ground. Of course, there is the exception of the high level of success in the tourism and hospitality area, and I am sure that all members will agree with me that this is a very important area for training, given the Northern Territory's growing tourist industry. However, the future outlook of the Australian traineeship system in the Northern Territory is promising. The groundwork carried out over the last 12 months is now starting to bear fruit and I would anticipate an acceleration of traineeships over and above those that I have outlined in the Assembly today.

Mr Speaker, the federal government has strengthened the scheme recently and I see a great deal of hope for it. I think it is one of our best potential means of training people in the Northern Territory, and they are very happy with the way the Territory government has been supportive of the scheme. I hope that unions will take the same responsible attitude and do away with their intransigence. The pressures that they place on the ability of people to employ trainees, in demanding levels of payment beyond what is required, has been the major factor in slowing up the development of some of those schemes.

Air North Settlement

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

In the last sittings, I asked the Chief Minister a question concerning Air North and the settlement of the aerial medical contract. He said that a proposition had been put to the government by Air North as settlement of any legal action outstanding over the contract. Has that proposition been accepted by the Northern Territory government and does it involve payment of moneys by the Northern Territory government in settlement of any claim or any legal expenses incurred by Air North?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not have details of any funds changing hands between the Northern Territory government and Air North as a result of the finalisation of the contract. My participation in this matter has involved getting the contract started by Skywest. That took place on 4 September. I have no information about any moneys changing hands between government and Air North in any settlement.

Darwin to Alice Springs Railway

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer to the front page story in the leading Japanese financial daily yesterday which, amongst other things, stated that preference will be given for concessions relating to our rich natural resources in return for investment by Japanese companies in the railway. What concessions have been discussed and what agreement has been reached?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot say this question comes as any surprise given that the Leader of the Opposition gave a clear indication through the media this morning that such a question would be asked. I will preface the answer by saying that I received a copy of this press report late yesterday. Honourable members will be aware that I made some public comment that I would be seeking to find out where the report came from and to verify the accuracy of the statements made in the report. We have been unable to identify the source of this particular statement and apparently the media has been unable to track down the source of the statement also.

I would like to refer to some of the comments the Leader of the Opposition made in the media today because it would be worthwhile having the matter clarified. In Territory Extra this morning, and also in news reports, the Leader of the Opposition indicated that the suggestion to include proposals, such as potential rights to develop mineral resources or other projects, is somehow a new issue that has been thrown into the ring as far as this railway is concerned.

I will not suggest that the Leader of the Opposition is either deliberately lying or deliberately misleading the people. I must work on the assumption that either he does not do his homework or, quite frankly, is simply incompetent in terms of following the debate on the railway. I would like to refer honourable members to a number of reports. I refer to a media release that I issued on 20 April 1987. It said: 'Mr Coulter discussed mineral developments and markets with his Japanese counterpart while Dr Conn is to represent the Northern Territory government in the Japan Australia Transport Study Group'.

There was an article in the NT News of 20 April. The front page story referred to myself: 'He said all parties involved in the $610m railway project had shown strong interest in possible allied mineral developments'. On 20 April, at a press conference in Darwin, I stated: 'With the other industries that can be developed off that transport mode - mining, agriculture and other industries that become more viable with the rail line - you start to get an understanding of why it should be called a transport study group rather than really a railway study group'.

On 29 April, I said in answer to a question put in this Legislative Assembly: 'I might say here that the project may involve more than a railway line. The line is really the linchpin in the development of a transportation system which involves shipping, ports and rail as related transport modes. It is possible that other projects can be mixed and matched with the railway in a consortium-backed multi-project venture that could well improve the viability of the total scheme, and provide more investment opportunities for the Northern Territory'.

Mr Speaker, I can say to the Leader of the Opposition that that is still the position. The concept of concessions is similar to the process that was used in the United States in the construction of rail services there. As I have said consistently on the railway, we may well blend in other development opportunities, as concessional rights to the consortium that would construct the railway line, to improve the overall viability of the total project. There is no suggestion of subsidies, underwriting or other special arrangements in respect of the railway line. The objective is to get a railway line built and if, in doing that, we can blend together other development opportunities that become viable with the railway or which - to use a colloquialism - can 'sweeten the pie' to improve the overall viability of such a business consortium, then I support that approach fully, because to use a railway line and to accelerate economic development in other areas in combination can only work to the benefit of the Northern Territory and Australia generally. There is no suggestion there of any hidden subsidies.

This railway line is a significant and fundamentally important social infrastructure and transport infrastructure facility and, as such, deserves careful consideration of any options that are available. There have been no fixed agreements on any form of concessions or otherwise. Certainly, different options have been outlined in a similar vein to the way they are being outlined in the House.

Those discussions are open for consideration by the government and consortium members and consideration is being given to how they can be brought together. There will be meetings during November which we hope will further advance the proposal. I reiterate the comment I made yesterday, that I am heartened by the interest being shown in the railway. I advise honourable members that interest is increasing on almost a weekly basis among Australian businesses. They are showing keen interest in examining the railway project with a view to possible participation in the consortium.

In case any members run the risk of being misled, I can advise that we are still working towards the creation of a consortium. The study group is the vehicle for examining opportunities and identifying potential participants in such a consortium. The consortium is not yet formed. We are working towards that and the details will be worked out as the project develops. I still feel reasonably confident that we can commence construction of the railway some time during 1988. I make no firm commitment to that date because the task is very complex and difficult. The establishment of this railway has confounded governments in the Northern Territory community since 1911, but I genuinely believe that we are far closer to the realisation of our plans than ever before.

I would like to remind honourable members that the Leader of the Opposition has been an active proponent of the view that the Northern Territory should reconsider the federal government's 60:40 proposal, which would involve a direct capital works injection by the Northern Territory government of around $300m.

Mr Smith: No, that is wrong.

Mr HATTON: The injection would be 40% of $610m in 1986 dollars. The Leader of the Opposition can do his own sums, but it is certain that any such amount would be a very high direct cost to the Northern Territory community. I will not rule out the possibility of the Northern Territory government becoming involved in the railway, although my preferred position is that it be a 100% private enterprise project. Equally, whilst there may be some opportunity costs in encouraging private investment, the net benefit to the Northern Territory would be more than offset by those. Although I am not suggesting that it will be the case, benefits offered could include the waiving of rights to mineral royalties. The entire project could be put together in such a way that it would generate additional business development along the rail corridor.

Mr Smith: It will be subsidised by the back door rather than the front door.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition refers to that as subsidisation through the back door. I am talking about the possibility of giving a concession in terms of forgoing revenue from projects that would not start if there were no railway line. If there were no railway line, there would be no revenue from such projects because the projects would not commence. These matters will be considered in more detail as issues develop. We know the opposition likes to criticise and knock developments in the Northern Territory but I was really sad to see the Leader of the Opposition jump on the bandwagon and try to find some way of criticising yet again what could be one of the most exciting development projects or consortiums that the Northern Territory has seen. Our government will work with all expedition to try to have this project under way in the interests of the Northern Territory and to generate some wealth both for the Territory and Australia.

Annual Leave Loading

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Can he advise of any progress on the government's decision to apply to the Arbitration Commission to abolish the 17½% annual leave loading?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, members will be aware that the air fares, district allowance and 17½% leave loading conditions enjoyed by government employees are covered, in some cases, by awards of the commission. This is especially the case in respect of the 17½% leave loading. It is therefore necessary for the government to apply to the commission to vary those awards. In the case of air fares, those applications seek to abolish air fares for all employees recruited after 1 August 1987 and covered by awards. In the case of the district allowance, the applications seek to reduce the amounts of allowance to the levels agreed in discussion with the TLC - that is, down to zero for employees without dependants and $960 per annum for those with dependants.

In the case of the 17½% loading, the applications seek to remove the provision from all awards covering government employment. The government's intentions in that respect are no surprise to honourable members and certainly no surprise to the unions. It was the subject of considerable discussion in the talks with the unions in June. It is pretty fair to say that the TLC is not happy about that but it recognises the government's right to seek to remove the 17½% loading from the award. The applications have been before the commission for some time now. The commission has a very heavy schedule and we do not have a definite date as yet for those applications to be heard. We have to fit in not only with the commission but within the fairly heavy schedule of the person who is taking our case to the commission. I would expect that those hearings will come up in the fairly near future.

Darwin to Alice Springs Railway

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

The story in the Japan National Economic Day purported to represent the Northern Territory government and its position in places. Can he provide this House with a categorical assurance that the story was not planted by either the Northern Territory government directly or by any agent of the Northern Territory government who has been involved in these talks, particularly Dr Ishizaki or Dr Sugawara?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have advised the House already that we do not know the source of this story. We have been trying to check it. We have spoken with Dr Ishizaki who was equally surprised at the story and denies any knowledge of having fired the story. Equally, I can assure the honourable member that I certainly did not plant the story and I know the Treasurer did not. It came as a surprise to us. We have not yet been able to make direct contact with Dr Sugawara but I must say that we would be very surprised to hear that he had any involvement. It has been confirmed today that one of the companies named in that report, EIE Pty Ltd, with which Dr Ishizaki is associated, has subsequently denied the report and is confirming what I have said in this House today: that there is no fixed agreement. I am genuinely confounded as to where that story came from, as is our government. We have been trying to source it down ourselves.

Imprisonment of Juvenile

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

I refer to the case of a 15-year-old girl who was sentenced to 9 months imprisonment, which has received a great deal of publicity recently. Is he satisfied that his department has performed adequately in this matter?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this young lady certainly attracted widespread media attention when she was sentenced to 9 months imprisonment by the Darwin Juvenile Court on 12 August 1987. While in Darwin Prison, the young lady was seen by a psychiatrist and a psychiatric nurse who provided relevant reports on her psychological and emotional condition. As a result of their visit and a subsequent assessment completed on the young lady, the staff at the Darwin Prison were instructed as to the most appropriate means of ensuring that her emotional and psychological needs were met while she was in the prison.

Reports from the prison indicate that she responded extremely well to the program established for her in prison which included an educational component, supervised by the education officer within the prison. Further, the reports indicated that her behaviour and attitude within the prison improved markedly. The assessments indicated that she required consistent handling while she was in prison and highlighted the benefits to be derived from family counselling upon discharge.

On Tuesday 13 October, through her solicitor, the young lady appealed in the Darwin Supreme Court against the severity of her sentence. Upon hearing the appeal, the judge confirmed the sentence of the lower court. However, he released her forthwith on a 12-month supervised bond of $500 in her own recognisance. She was ordered to enter into the bond and to accept the reasonable directions of a delegate of the minister with regard to residence, associates and employment, and to abstain from alcohol and drug consumption except that prescribed by a medical practitioner. She has now returned to live with her mother.

As a result of the Supreme Court's action, arrangements are being made for the family to receive family counselling from staff of the Tamarind Centre in conjunction with community welfare officers. In addition, the fact that she has been placed on a supervised bond will require juvenile justice officers to maintain regular contact with her. Now that the court has made the decision to release the young lady into the community, every effort is being made to ensure that her return to the community is successful.

Mr Speaker, I want to place that on record as being what I hope is the final chapter in this episode relating to this young lady. I said publicly that I was surprised that the matter attracted media attention. I was also surprised at the criticism that was launched against members of my department in the welfare area in particular and, I dare say, criticism of the magistrate for his decision in sentencing this young lady. It did nothing to help in her rehabilitation. Whilst I do not advocate it for future cases, I believe the sentence had an impact on the young lady. I certainly hope the young lady takes the decision that she has a future in front of her and that she will stick on the straight and narrow. The appeal court confirmed the sentence. If she does misbehave, she will go straight back to Darwin Prison.

Society becomes very frustrated over the number of houses that are being broken into and the number of similar offences that are being committed by juveniles, particularly in the Darwin area but no doubt right throughout the Northern Territory. I think the sentence of the magistrate was indicative of that frustration. It is too late for parents to start criticising welfare workers, prison officers, magistrates, police and the like once their children reach that stage.

Mr Speaker, I would like to leave you with some food for thought. Following the introduction and publicising of mandatory reporting of suspected child abuse, the number of notifications increased greatly. During the last 12 months, an increase in notification has been quite evident.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The opposition has been fairly tolerant during question time over the last few sitting days but, quite clearly, the minister has gone right over the top on this particular occasion. He was asked a particular question about a particular person and he now intends to deliver a general speech on a general subject. If he wants to do that, he should do it by way of statement.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I would like to speak to that point of order. In fact, the question was whether I was satisfied with the work that my officers had been doing in the department relative to these matters. I believe that the answer that I am giving is quite relevant.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order, but I ask the minister to keep his answer relevant to the question.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, in September 1987 alone, 39 reports were received and, if this trend were maintained, 400 reports could be anticipated in the 12 months from July 1987. In the past 12 months, the overall number of child protection reports has approximately tripled. The number of substantiated reports has approximately doubled. I put the challenge out to the parents of children in the Northern Territory to take a look at themselves before their children find themselves before a Court of Summary Jurisdiction where they are likely to be sentenced to a term of imprisonment.

The number of child abuse cases that are emerging is horrific. I have no doubt in the world that they are nothing more than the tip of the iceberg in terms of what is occurring in some homes in the Northern Territory. I can assure honourable members that welfare officers are working extremely hard on a number of cases which have been reported to them. I make a plea to parents of young children to look to their responsibilities as parents and not cry out when matters reach the stage where their offspring are sentenced to terms of imprisonment.

Prison Labour from Gunn Point Prison

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

What has been done by the Division of Custodial Services to use prison labour from Gunn Point Prison to work on maintaining facilities for campers and picnickers in the Gunn Point area and to act as agents for the Department of Lands and Housing in the administration of this area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Minister for Conservation has put that proposition to me recently and I am investigating the matter through the department to see if we can come up with some agreement on how we can work together in that area.

Deregulation of Aviation Industry

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Since the federal Minister for Aviation has made an announcement regarding deregulation of the aviation industry, is the minister able to advise the House of the benefits the Northern Territory is likely to receive in relation to international aircraft visits?

ANSWER

A number of developments have occurred since the time of the federal government's announcement on deregulation and termination of the 2-airline policy in 1990. A couple of those developments are of concern to us, although the Northern Territory government certainly endorses and supports the removal of government interference in the marketplace in the aviation industry.

I have written recently to the federal Minister for Transport in regard to the possibility that, should one of the existing 2 airlines gain pre-eminence in the industry, predatory activities might commence and there would be a need for some oversight. My concern is based on the fact that Australian Airlines will require some considerable financial injection over the 3-year period to 1990. This could come from the government or, more appropriately, through some form of privatisation of Australian Airlines which would ensure that it could be an equal competitor with Ansett. My concern was that the federal minister had announced that he would leave any oversight of the industry to the Trade Practices Commission and the Prices Surveillance Authority. I suggest that their powers and limited expertise might be inadequate and that such machinery would be both cumbersome and ineffectual. I have written to the federal minister reinforcing the view which this government expressed in the review of May 1985. We proposed then that, at least during the initial period, there should be a specialist and independent statutory authority which could encompass restricted trade practices functions in relation to the aviation industry. The problem is that the Northern Territory, particularly with its long routes and relatively low numbers of passengers, may receive some harsh treatment from the major airline companies. Whilst we welcome the deregulation announcement as such, I have expressed those fundamental concerns to the federal government.

The second area of concern relates to Qantas. Whilst deregulation will allow Qantas to take advantage of interlining, which is the picking up of international tourists from domestic ports, the decision did not go far enough in relation to the Northern Territory, Western Australia and northern Queensland. I believe there would be great advantage in allowing the international carriers to pick up domestic passengers to fill empty seats on routes to and from those areas. This would make additional routes available to Territory passengers. One would assume, for example, that there would be some excellent holiday packages to and from Townsville, where Qantas currently lands.

A couple of days ago, the federal Minister for Tourism expressed some concern about the 50% rule which requires Qantas to gain 50% of passengers travelling into and out of the country. I would support the relinquishment of that 50:50 arrangement, which would certainly enable more passengers to be flown in and out of the Territory so that we can exploit our promotion of tourism and, we hope, a new terminal building to be built in the very near future.

In summary, deregulation will not lead immediately to cheaper air fares unless some no-frills airlines develop over the next 3 years. I hope that there will be no adverse effect on air fares. There is potential, should the federal government act appropriately, to allow domestic pick-up by Qantas and to adjust the 50:50 arrangement so that we can achieve additional international tourist numbers in the Northern Territory.

Roadside Inn Review Report

Mr EDE to MINISTER for TOURISM

I refer him to a question I asked him on 17 September 1987 regarding the Roadside Inn Review. He advised in response that, within 30 days, he would submit the report to Cabinet and immediately thereafter the report would be made a public document which he would be more than happy to circulate far and wide. I ask him to advise this House on the truth or otherwise of stories that this report has been given selective distribution and, regardless of his answer to that question, will he allow us mere mortals to see this report?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure that I would give the member for Stuart status as a mere mortal but, for his advice, the Roadside Inn Review Report is still not before Cabinet and will come there in due course. Particular details relevant to individual operators have been forwarded to the operators for comment. Most of the recommendations in the report have already been acted upon and are in train. I would hope that, before the end of the year, I will be in a position to make the document public. I really do not have any objections at all to giving the member for Stuart an advance copy. The only thing I would ask is that he respect the confidentiality of certain parts of it that deal with facts relevant to particular operators. I am sure those operators would not be prepared to have some of the comments publicised far and wide and I think they should be given the opportunity to answer the relevant recommendations contained within the report.

Budget Directions and Information

Mr HARRIS to TREASURER

Yesterday's editorial in the NT News was rather critical of the Northern Territory government's direction with the budget. Comment was made about taxpayers not being allowed to know what is happening with their money and also that the budget has been hijacked by the public service. What is the true position regarding the direction of the budget, and what avenues are available to inform the public of what is happening with their money?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Port Darwin for his question. Indeed, it was interesting to read yesterday's editorial and the comments. The rounding out of the figures used was very interesting. The cost of running the public service is a favourite hobbyhorse of many journalists. $500m was the figure used for the salaries of public servants. Of course, the figure is around $450m, but that was not rounded down to $400m; it had to be rounded up to $500m.

I would like to cover that issue in rather more detail. There really have been meaningful cuts in the past 3 years to staff numbers in the public service. The maximum staffing allocation in 1986-87 was 15 700 and we are now funding just over 15 000 public servants. Significant inroads have been made into the reduction of the number of public servants employed in the Northern Territory. The quarterly expenditure figures are now available and give considerable detail. I have heard members on both sides of this House doubt the authenticity of some of the matters mentioned in the column on the back page of the Sunday newspaper: the Bushranger column. From time to time, some members have expressed their concern about the authenticity of those particular items. I for one am a convert to some of the items now, in particular where Bushranger suggested that he had a copy of the quarterly statements when he was preparing his article. I do not have the actual item here, but that is interesting. As it became a public document and was gazetted on the Friday, I guess he did have a copy and therefore we should not doubt the authentic nature of some of the comments in the future.

The quarterly statements provide considerable information about the budget and the member for Port Darwin can gain considerable insight into the budget from those figures. It is true that capital works have been reduced this year. I mentioned that in my budget speech. Indeed, we will be dealing with the Appropriation Bill today and I will be speaking in reply to the second-reading debate immediately after question time. I will be drawing attention to the contributions made in this Assembly about the capital works program. There is nothing new in that. We have said that we have had a scaling down of capital works programs in the Northern Territory. The largest single component was the completion of the Channel Island Power Station which has resulted in the capital works' allocation being $70m lower in 1987-88 than in 1986-87. Other major cuts to capital works have been possible because of progress that we have made in previous years, in particular in relation to roads and housing, the 2 areas which suffered the most severe cutbacks in the last budget.

There was a cut of $17m in roads funding and some of that was due to cuts in federal funding. The housing allocation was down some $6m. Members would be aware that we have reduced our housing program from 600 houses down to fewer than 200 houses in this budget. The allocation for the safe anchorage is down $5m. There were reductions in allocations for many capital works. Special regard had been paid to the effect of cuts on small contractors, especially in the Darwin region. There was a $3m provision in the budget for small, labour-intensive projects. We also intend to upgrade some 1474 houses in order to inject work back into the community. There were also significant cuts in relation to repairs and maintenance.

Mr Speaker, much more information will become available today during the committee stage of the Appropriation Bill. The quarterly statements became available to the general public last Friday in the gazette. As I will indicate in my reply to the debate, the budget is working. In the first 3 months of this financial year, the government's direction has been maintained and we are developing a truly meaningful economy in the Northern Territory that is being led by private investors rather than the government, which has led the economy in previous years.

Land Application in Pine Creek

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer him to comments by the Minister for Labour and Administrative Services and resolutions from the Pine Creek Branch of the Country Liberal Party saying that he should step down from the consideration of decisions with respect to his uncle Jeff's application for the block in Pine Creek, on the corner of Kakadu Highway and Stuart Highway. Will the minister in fact step down?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will take the opportunity to clarify the situation so it can be put into perspective. There appears to have been much ranting and raving by various people as to the status of the application. Quite simply, the application came before Cabinet in a summary document that indicates briefly all the applications made for land, be it by the Darwin City Council, the Alice Springs Council, this department or that department. That is the status of the application. The concern that has been expressed as to my involvement is possibly a little premature. I doubt whether anything will sit on my desk as Minister for Lands and Housing relevant to this development application for some 6 or 7 months. It will take that long for all the issues to be resolved.

What I will say is that I am prepared to look at the matter in a positive way. It is not very often that we are presented with developmental proposals in the Territory from people who are prepared to spend money. I would rather see how we can address the genuine concerns of the people of Pine Creek and also ensure that the development is not lost to the Territory. Certainly, I think that is very possible. I would welcome any further discussions with members of the CLP in Pine Creek, the local government authority and anybody else who would like to put a proposition before me.

As for the question from the member for MacDonnell, I certainly have no intention of standing aside in this matter. This morning, I advised the Chief Minister that I would ensure that any decisions relating to the matter would be taken to Cabinet so that Cabinet as a whole could be properly informed and make the decision. I trust that keeps the member for MacDonnell happy.

Jawoyn Land Claim

Mr REED to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he advise the Assembly of the results of his visit to Katherine last Friday to discuss the Jawoyn land claim, particularly in light of weekend press reports on the matter?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to be able to advise that I went to Katherine last Friday and took the opportunity to speak to a wide cross-section of the community there. The object of my visit was, firstly, to initiate dialogue with the Jawoyn Association and the Jawoyn community on a number of very significant issues that are vitally important to the Northern Territory and to have those matters resolved in the interests of the Territory. Secondly, I wished to gauge the opinion of the people of the Katherine region, both Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal. In that respect, I must say that the meeting was particularly successful. During the course of the day, I met with Mr Werner Sarny, the major tour operator within the Katherine Gorge National Park. I met with regional heads of Northern Territory government departments. I met with the Jawoyn Association and with representatives of the Katherine Town Council, the Master Builder's Association, the Confederation of Industry and Commerce and the Tourist Promotion Association. I met also with the Katherine Gorge Action Committee and, at a public meeting late in the afternoon, I met with interested members of the public in the Katherine area.

Mr Speaker, there was some comment in the media over the weekend about my being kept waiting and that somehow that was a gross humiliation of the Northern Territory government. I must advise honourable members that the Jawoyn Association itself advised us last Thursday that, prior to the meeting commencing, there would probably be a delay as the people came together as they wished to sort out the procedures for that day for what was a general meeting of the Jawoyn Association. We understood that and, in fact, we advised the media of that fact prior to proceeding to Katherine. Whilst there was a delay, it was not an unexpected or an unforeseen delay, and it was not an undue delay. In fact, I allocated a period from 10 am until 12.30 pm of that morning for the discussions and they were successfully concluded prior to that time.

I am sure honourable members will be pleased and interested to know that the Jawoyn Association has nominated a negotiating group of 9 representatives of the association who will be advised by 3 members of the Northern Land Council. The objective of that group is to meet with the Northern Territory government to seek to resolve the issues arising from the Aboriginal Land Commissioner's recommendations which deal with such matters as the future of the Katherine Gorge National Park. On the agenda, equally, is the issue of land tenure over that particular park. It will deal also with issues of detriment, particularly as that relates to access to a suitable water supply to meet the needs of the Katherine region.

I place on record again the fact that the Jawoyn Association has consistently maintained the viewpoint and given undertakings that it will ensure that there will be access to water and has said that the Katherine Gorge National Park will be maintained as a national park. Public statements were made by representatives that it would be operated in the same manner that it is now. Quite obviously, however, the hows and whens and wherefores of that need to be resolved. That can be done and it is our intention to ensure that they are resolved properly and satisfactorily in the interests of the entire community during the course of those discussions with the Jawoyn Association.

I will be meeting the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs at the earliest opportunity and, again, I will be putting to him that there should be an opportunity for us to resolve these matters prior to the grant of any land. The statement I made in the Assembly last week is still the position of the Northern Territory government and I can advise honourable members that our position with respect to that was specifically referred to the Jawoyn Association during our discussions.

I might add also, in case there is any misunderstanding, that at all meetings with the various sectors of the community there was an acceptance of and support for the course of action that I have recommended and am adopting. That came in the course of those debates from all sections of the community, and I include in that the Katherine Gorge Action Group, the business community and the representatives of the public. There has been widespread support for the approach being adopted by our government in trying to resolve this, and I welcome the positive approach adopted by the Katherine community and particularly I thank the member for Katherine for his positive contribution in this exercise. I know he will continue to play an active role to see this matter satisfactorily resolved in the interests of all Territorians.

Administrator of the Northern Territory

Mr TUXWORTH to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer to the determination that the Prime Minister made some 18 months ago in that the renewal of the Administrator's commission would terminate in June next year and would not be reviewed. Has the Chief Minister commenced discussions with the Commonwealth government on whom the Administrator's replacement might be, and would he be prepared to give Territorians an undertaking that a true Territorian will be put forward as the Territory's nomination for the next Administrator?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for that question and I would like to make a couple of points in responding. Firstly, we have been making representations to the federal government and we intend to make further representations in the near future, specifically to the Prime Minister. It is our view that there should be no replacement of the Administrator, particularly during the bicentennial year. My first submission to the Prime Minister will be to seek that the federal government review its decision, made late in 1985 or early in 1986, a decision which the Northern Territory government and the member for Barkly opposed strongly. It was a pre-emptive decision, taken without consultation with the Northern Territory government. Mr Speaker, I will be seeking an extension of the current Administrator's term. Unfortunately, because this is not a state, we do not have the right to make recommendations directly to the Crown. If this government's reasonable request is refused, I can assure the honourable member that we will be recommending that a Territorian should be nominated as the next Administrator of the Northern Territory.

NT News Editorial on Northern Territory Public Service

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

I refer him to yesterday's editorial in the NT News, headed 'NTPS Feeds Itself', which stated: 'This financial year, the Northern Territory Public Service wage bill for the first time will exceed $500m. Add to that the cost of office space, stationery, electricity, the vast car fleet and the rest. Add then the interest on borrowings, the Territory's fastest rising budget item, and it is no exaggeration to say the administration of the Territory government is consuming about 60% of total outlays'. Can the minister comment on the accuracy of that part of the editorial?

Mr Ede: The question has already been asked.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question has not been asked. The question asked by the member for Casuarina is quite different from the question that was asked of the Treasurer. It relates to whether the public service is unproductive and whether it consumes an enormous proportion of our budget. As the Treasurer indicated, the figures in the NT News were wrong. This year, the Northern Territory Public Service will cost about $50m less than the $500m quoted.

I would like to refer directly to some comments in the editorial concerning the budget of the Department of Labour and Administrative Services. The $7m expenditure in the first 3 months of the financial year has not been unproductive. Most of it - $4.425m in fact - has been spent on the rental of office accommodation. This expenditure goes back into the community because the majority of our space is leased from private developers who themselves employ people, including cleaners and so forth. Money is also expended on electricity, security, grounds maintenance and legal costs, none of which are unproductive. Private developers employ cleaners, ground maintenance staff and, dare I say, lawyers.

The editorial infers that our public service is unproductive and is growing more quickly than it should. In fact, public service numbers have been maintained at a very reasonable figure over a number of years. In 1979, 13 100 persons were employed in the public service. That was the figure in the year following self-government and it has since grown by 16% to 15 200. In that same period, the total labour force in the Northern Territory has grown by 47%, from a base of 51 300 to 75 400 and the Northern Territory residential population has grown by 34% from a base of 114 000 to 153 800. The increase in public service numbers is quite modest in comparison. The approved figure for this year is 15 038, which represents a reduction of 500 in the last 12 months. Taking into account all the activities of the Northern Territory government during the last few years, there has been a very insignificant growth in public service numbers.

The number of public servants was 13 100 in 1979, 14 100 in 1980, 14 300 in 1981, 14 100 in 1982, 14 600 in 1983, 15 000 in 1984, 15 400 in 1985 and 15 500 in 1986. That growth has not occurred primarily in administration. Because the Territory is growing, we have to employ more teachers, more health professionals, including nurses, and more police. Those numbers have to increase with the population. The growth in the public service has been insignificant compared with the 47% increase in population.

As far as I am aware, the editorial's figures are reasonably correct. Certainly, the figure for the Department of Labour and Administrative Services is correct.

Mr Hatton: The figure for the Chief Minister's Department is not. It is more than our entire budget.

Mr McCARTHY: I did not check the figures for the Department of the Chief Minister but those for my Department of Labour and Administrative Services are correct. We have spent $4.425m on rentals for office space, with the remaining $2.575m being spent on other labour and administrative costs. I do not think that is outrageous. The public service of 15 000 people is working extremely hard. We have kept the numbers down and we are getting very good value for money from our public service. It is hardly a problem here compared with other states and the federal government whose public services are growing at an enormous rate. I think that that particular editorial ought to end up in the wastepaper basket because it is totally unresearched.

Stormwater Drains in Larapinta Valley Subdivision

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

At present, due to the lack of community facilities in the Larapinta area in Alice Springs, young children are using stormwater drains to play in and there are reports of young children walking some 200 m up these pipes. At this time of year, Alice Springs can be subject to sudden heavy rainfall and flash flooding. What action is the government taking to provide stormwater drain covers in the Larapinta Valley subdivision?

Mr Bell: The question is why they were not put there in the subdivision, Eric. The government ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member for MacDonnell can wait for the reply.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I think that is a most reasonable question from the member for Araluen and it is very similar to one raised by the member for Jingili recently in respect of action at Casuarina. In fact, the difficulty in finding a workable solution at Casuarina was that there were a number of entry points along the drain itself which could have led to an even more dangerous situation if gratings had been provided across the ends of the main drain.

The whole question of responsibility for drains in the Northern Territory is still to be resolved. In this particular instance, we are talking about a drain that may expose local children to some danger. As there are no additional entry points along the length of that particular drain, I have written to the department seeking its cooperation. At this stage, although the department had already offered to hand the drains over to the local government in Alice Springs, in this case the department will install gratings. This should ensure a safer environment for the children in the honourable member's electorate. I am sure that he will be delighted to hear that news and that the children in the electorate will be able to play more safely.

Alice Springs Water Supply

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I understand that contracts have not been let in time for new water bores to be drilled and commissioned in the Mereenie field to maintain an adequate water supply for an expanding Alice Springs this summer. Will he take the action necessary to ensure that Alice Springs has a water supply secured for the high demand summer period?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure which bore field the honourable member is referring to.

Mr Collins: It is the Mereenie Basin outside Alice Springs.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I will take that question on notice and provide the honourable member with more detail. Can I tell the honourable ...

Mr Collins: The bores were in the budget.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I will take that question on notice and supply the honourable member with a more detailed answer during the course of these sittings.

Land Application in Pine Creek

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

I refer him to the Minister for Lands and Housing's previous answer that he would not step down from decisions about the block in Pine Creek. I also refer him to the Westminster tradition of collective Cabinet responsibility as summed up by Pettifer in his comment that 'it is required by convention that all ministers must be prepared to accept collective responsibility for, and defend publicly, the policies and actions of the government or else resign'. Will he accept the decision of the Minister for Lands and Housing not to step down or will he resign?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I think that is a very unusual question. In actual fact, of course, I will accept the decision of the Minister for Lands and Housing. That is his decision. It is his right to make that decision. I said that I would bring to the Minister for Lands and Housing the proposal from a meeting held at Pine Creek last Sunday. It was a much wider meeting than a meeting of the local CLP. Other people from the town attended that meeting. It was more a public meeting. Resolutions were passed at that meeting and I said that I would bring them to the minister, and I pointed out to those people on that day that this was the prerogative of the Minister for Lands and Housing. I think that his agreement to take this application to Cabinet for decision is the right one.

Hansard Staff

Mr SMITH to SPEAKER

Can you confirm, Mr Speaker, that Hansard staff worked through the night until 4 o'clock this morning?

ANSWER

I am advised by the Clerk that that is correct. They worked until 4 o'clock this morning.

Bradshaw Terrace Bus Bays

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I heard this morning that, because of the Transport Workers' Union, a decision has now been taken by the Darwin City Council to remove all the bus bays along Bradshaw Terrace. Is that information true?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have been advised this morning that a council meeting last night decided to remove the final 3 bays from Bradshaw Terrace. It is no wonder that one becomes frustrated in these matters. It is bad enough that the council itself is prepared to act without appropriate technical advice but we also have the Transport Workers Union, which cannot even take the advice of its own members, acting as traffic engineers. That is apparent from the northern suburbs rag that the member for MacDonnell is holding up. The position taken by the Transport Workers' Union is certainly one of the options that is being discussed by the consultants in a constructive and positive way, but it has a number of negative features. I find it absolutely astounding that the committee of the council should take the advice of Mr Hearn of the Transport Workers' Union who is putting himself up as some sort of traffic expert.

Mr Dondas: I wonder what role Jamie Robertson has in this?

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, I do not really know what role Alderman Robertson has played in this matter but one cannot help but be a little suspicious. I mentioned that the union was working without the advice and support of its own members because, at a recent visit to Casuarina interchange, I was told by supervisors and the bus drivers themselves that the situation as it had recently stood resulted in less traffic congestion and a safer environment, with the exception of one point which I will come to in a minute. It was the opinion of the drivers themselves that our approach was the correct one: to undertake a deliberative study on the effects and impact of the possible options for overcoming the Bradshaw Terrace problem. In addition to the moves made by the council, what was required was simply to install a single, proper crossing.

What did the council do? It has gone off half-cocked again, without any appropriate technical advice, I would suggest, and installed a crossing that is creating a dangerous situation because buses are being backed across Linton Street. And what has the council done now? On this so-called magical advice from the Transport Workers Union, it has removed those 3 stops. Passengers - school children, like those sitting in the gallery this morning, pensioners, ladies with babies, ladies heavily laden with shopping - have to cross

Linton Street, without the facility of a pedestrian crossing now, in order to catch a bus at the interchange. Who will take responsibility for that, Mr Speaker? I would suggest that residents of the northern suburbs, and those who use Casuarina Shopping Centre, ought to be taking their concerns direct to the council aldermen, and I would be pleased to provide them with some telephone numbers so they can do so effectively.

Mr Speaker, this is another clear example of people acting irresponsibly and without proper advice. I can see that the Transport Workers Union has set itself up as some sort of expert and it ought to be condemned for its interference in a matter that is none of its business and condemned for not even listening to the advice of its own members.

Bradshaw Terrace Bus Bays

Mr BELL to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

In relation to the previous question and the answer given by him, and the savage calumnies heaped on the Transport Workers Union, is he able to confirm that, in January this year, his department received this constructive proposal about the safety problems and the problem of protection from the elements for patrons of the Darwin Bus Service?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am able to confirm that the department received that proposal along with 4 or 5 others. For nearly 12 months, the Department of Transport and Works has been trying to obtain the cooperation of the city council in completing a proper study and assessment. The preliminary assessment which the member opposite waves around has been put forward as a panacea to all the problems. It contains some pitfalls. It does not take much to see the difficulties of making major changes in Trower Road and Linton Street and in providing safety measures for people travelling to and from Monterey House. Those are factors that need to be taken into consideration before one runs off half-cocked.

Despite the fact that the council is responsible for that whole area, the Department of Transport and Works was prepared to share the cost of a proper study and provide technical input. That was not good enough for the city council. What did the Department of Transport and Works do? It took it upon itself to accept total responsibility, in a financial and technical sense, for examining this matter which is extremely important to pedestrians and shoppers in the northern suburbs. Its position can only be seen as one of total responsibility. I should add that Lend Lease also made a financial contribution. The Department of Transport and Works has nothing to be ashamed of in relation to its efforts.

Kulgera Roadhouse

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

My question comes as a response to persistent rumours I have heard during the last couple of months and I think it is time they were put to rest. Does he have a financial interest in the Kulgera Roadhouse?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am very happy to answer the question from the member for Sadadeen. The rumour campaign has been rather interesting and it appears that Uncle Jeff is growing in stature each day. As I understand it, his was one of 3 or 4 competing interests and that, together with his partner Barry Browse, he purchased the Kulgera Roadhouse, which was on the market in the normal way. At various times, I have been touted as a director, a silent partner and a financial backer. Indeed, all sorts of interesting roles have been attributed to me. I can certainly advise honourable members that I have no financial interest nor any intended financial interest in that roadhouse. I am not a financial backer, nor are any of my family companies or my family itself financially involved in any way, shape or form with the Kulgera Roadhouse.

The new owners of the roadhouse have embarked upon a $500 000 stage 1 development plan. It is anticipated that total works to take place at Kulgera over the next 2 years will be worth $1.5m. Kulgera was our biggest problem in terms of tourists entering the Territory and I would like to commend those 2 entrepreneurial gentlemen for doing such a good job because the comments of tourists and people who are in a position to compare the present facility with the previous one indicate that highly commendable progress has been made. I wish those 2 gentlemen every success in their future ventures.

Marine Industrial Chemical Complex

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Rumours continue to circulate about the construction of a marine industrial chemical complex on the foreshore of Frances Bay. Is he aware of these rumours and will he confirm that there is no proposal for the construction of a marine industrial chemical complex on the foreshore of Frances Bay?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Fannie Bay has made representation in this regard also. The suggestion of a chemical plant at Frances Bay is absolute rumour which, certainly to my knowledge, is not based on any proposal which has been put forward. What is required there are some additional facilities to provide support to the safe mooring basin. I am delighted that support from local industries and businesses has complemented that facility. There are some additional requirements that will evolve as a result of fishing companies relocating their bases to Darwin. A 5 ha area adjacent to the fishing mooring basin is settling and, once it has settled sufficiently to allow the provision of services and roads, we will be able to consider the provision of further support infrastructure for the fishing industry. It is needed, not only for the fishing industry but for pleasure craft as well. The developments that we will see in that port area will be quite commendable. As I mentioned, there is no foundation at all in any rumour relating to any chemical plant or any other sort of facility.

Drug Abuse Education Program

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

I understand that he has recently given approval for the first police officer in the school-based community policing program to travel to the United States to take part in a drug education training program. What are the details of this visit and the benefits which are expected to flow to the Territory from it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Jingili for this question which shows, once again, that he has a finger on the pulse of his own electorate because the officer concerned, First Class Constable Scott Mitchell, is one of his constituents as well as being a constable based at Casuarina Secondary College. For some time now, the police have been looking at the United States Drug Abuse Resistance Education Program which attempts to give school children the confidence to resist the temptation to experiment with illicit hard drugs and soft drugs like alcohol and tobacco. The DARE program gives students accurate information about drugs, teaches them decision-making skills and shows them how to resist peer pressure to take drugs. It is purely a preventive program aimed at kids who have not experienced drugs.

I understand that the preliminary evaluation of the DARE program by the NT police is encouraging and there is a possibility that it will be incorporated in the very successful school-based constable program which was pioneered in the Northern Territory. I am sure honourable members opposite will take note of this advantage of the school-based constable program, and some of the roles officers are performing, following the debate yesterday. The Los Angeles Police Department has invited the NT Police Force to send a representative to undergo training in the DARE program. The federal government, the NT Department of Health and Community Services and the Police Department are covering the cost of sending a police officer to Los Angeles to be trained in the program next month as part of Australia's national drug offensive.

First Class Constable Mitchell was selected because, as the member for Jingili correctly stated, he was the first Northern Territory police officer to take part in the police-in-schools program. Additionally, it is considered that he has the experience to appraise the DARE program thoroughly and to assess its suitability for introduction into the Northern Territory.

My government is strongly committed to the fight against drug abuse. There is no greater tragedy for a family than to have one of its members become addicted to alcohol or hard drugs. Drug abuse adds seriously to crime, the cost of policing and the cost of providing health care. Also, it has an immense and immeasurable cost in terms of human suffering. The tragedy is magnified when, so often, it destroys the lives of young people. Anything that we as a government can do to reduce this burden should be welcomed by all the community. I believe our comparatively minor commitment to sending First Class Constable Mitchell to Los Angeles will prove to be a valuable investment in the fight against drugs in the Territory, and I look forward to reading his report when he returns to Darwin.

Air North Settlement

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

In the September sittings, he said a proposition had been put to the government by Air North in relation to settlement of any outstanding legal action over the aerial medical contract. I asked the question last week. Has the government reached an agreement with Air North over the settlement of outstanding legal action in respect of the aerial medical contract and does any settlement involve the government in payment of legal expenses or other monies to Air North?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not aware whether any settlement has been reached at this stage but I will have that confirmed.

Mr Smith: That is what you said at the last sittings.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, during the last sittings I said that, at that stage, no settlement had been reached. I have been asked a question today. It is not a matter which directly involves me in my ministerial role. It is a matter that has been referred to the Attorney-General for advice, and I am not even sure that the matter has been resolved at this stage.

Mr Smith: Do you want me to ask the Attorney-General?

Mr HATTON: I will check with the Attorney-General and advise the Leader of the Opposition during the course of these sittings.

Transport Link to Olgas

Mr REED to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Is he able to provide any comparisons of cost and effectiveness between a monorail system, as proposed this morning on the radio by the Australian National Parks and Wildlife Service, and a road service to the Olgas?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, quite obviously the member for Katherine, with his background in conservation matters, is very sensitive to the proposal that has been put forward, unlike the member for MacDonnell who, last night, had a bit of a lash at my response when he suggested that the federal government was not being the least bit serious. If the federal government was not being serious, I will refer him to Hansard of yesterday. Secondly, I will refer him to this morning's radio broadcast by one Professor Ovington. As a man in charge of a public service establishment, one can only take it that he means what he says. He was seriously advocating the monorail as the environmental solution.

Mr Bell: What is wrong with it environmentally?

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, let me tell the honourable member what is wrong with it environmentally. Professor Ovington was advocating a 1-metre high monorail that would run along between the sand dunes.

Mr Bell: Yes.

Mr FINCH: 'Yes' says the member for MacDonnell. It must be some time since he visited that area. What has to be appreciated is that, in general terms, the sand dunes between Yulara and the Olgas run in the opposite direction. One would have to snake backwards and forwards between lines of sand dunes for some hundreds of kilometres before reaching the Olgas. The member for MacDonnell is treating this lightly. It is a serious matter when the head of the ANPWS and the honourable member, who is on the Uluru Board of Management, can treat the environmental aspects with such light-heartedness.

Let me tell him about the environmental aspects. As a consulting engineer, I had the pleasure to visit that area before there were any roadworks in the Yulara area. To construct a monorail would impose on the environment the construction of the same width for the total length of the monorail, not just a little blob where you put down the column. The impracticality of Professor Ovington and his Minister for Tourism leave me absolutely astounded.

The second aspect of a monorail is that it can only work on a circuit or loop system. We are not talking about 1 run out to the Olgas; we are talking about 2.

Mr Bell: Why?

Mr FINCH: The honourable member asks why. To go backwards and forwards takes an hour each way. Given the number of tourists required to make this proposition viable, we would need a monorail of 2 km or 3 km. The visual impact on the environment of this long snake carrying 3000 or 4000 passengers at a time is almost beyond belief.

Aside from the environmental problems that Professor Ovington has overlooked, we have an extremely dangerous situation when people like the Minister for Tourism and Professor Ovington seriously advocate such things inside the Northern Territory and we have no say. The irresponsibility of such a project, if it stood any chance of success without input from the Northern Territory population, is very clear.

Let us come back to the financial and technical feasibility. If you were moving towards this futuristic and supposedly environmentally satisfactory solution, you would run the monorail out to Ayers Rock as well as the Olgas. Thus, you would be talking about at least 100 km at a current cost of at least $4m a kilometre, not including the cost of the trains themselves. Even if you could repeat capital city prices in this remote area, you would be talking about $400m-plus for a start.

All we are asking for is a safe and environmentally acceptable road. All the roads there have been constructed to take particular cognisance of the environment. There is already a prohibition on 4-wheel-drives leaving the main roads. We are talking about $4 or $6m. The interest component on $500m is $60m or $70m per annum and $60m or $70m would not only provide that road but also a free helicopter service so that every tourist could land on the Rock as well. That does not include the running costs.

What we are talking about with the monorail is electricity. Maybe the member for MacDonnell is proposing that we should have a solar monorail.

Mr Bell: I hadn't thought of that. How much will that cost, Fred?

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, all we want is a simple, bitumen road that will reduce the extremely high risk to travellers, tourists and the honourable member's constituents alike, and that will minimise the damage to vehicles that is occurring daily at a cost of thousands of dollars. All we are asking for is a bit of cooperation in approving an alignment. There is no great deal about this. The honourable member knows that, for the last 3 or 4 years at least, he has sat on his hands and has not provided constructive support for having that alignment accepted. Apparently, we do not need to worry about the funding if a $500m project is being contemplated. This whole proposal is straight out of Disneyland or a Flash Gordon comic. The honourable member's federal colleagues ought to throw away their comic books and we can get back to some realistic jobs.

Deregulation of Aviation Industry

Mr LEO to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

When will the Northern Territory government follow the lead of the federal government and deregulate the Northern Territory civil aviation industry to the extent of removing the requirements for a licence to fly over a designated RPT route?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is quite a positive question. I am pleased to say that aviation in the Northern Territory has advanced and is continuing to advance. However, we need to be a little practical and realistic about it. We put out to public tender a proposed contract for renewal of the regional airline services. We have not quite reached the stage of being able to guarantee an open, deregulated marketplace. The honourable member has to think about his own constituents and the people of Katherine and Tennant Creek.

Mr Leo: We have been carrying Katherine and Tennant Creek for 5 years.

Mr FINCH: I will answer the honourable member's interjection in a moment. Unfortunately, at this stage, to ensure that these people have a minimum level of service we still need to provide some guarantees. The only way to do that is through free competition on a single contract system which gives exclusivity to the Alice Springs to Yulara run.

Mr Ede: It is all very well to criticise the federal government, but you do exactly what you accuse it of doing.

Mr FINCH: The honourable member has to be a bit realistic about these things.

To reinforce a point, there is a need to tie the whole Territory regional package up as one because the services to Gove and Groote Eylandt do not prop up the rest of the Northern Territory air services. In fact, what does prop it up is the very lucrative Alice Springs to Yulara run which is extremely heavily loaded. Quite clearly, this government has accepted a responsible approach by acknowledging that, to maintain a minimum service to his constituents and those down the Stuart Highway, the lighter-loaded runs, we have to tie the whole thing up in one package at this stage. There is no inconsistency. We are developing and there will come a time - and it will not be a hell of a long way away - when we will be able to deregulate the regional service. However, at the moment, it would be irresponsible of me and of this government to do other than ensure an adequate service to the honourable member's constituents and others in the rest of the remote areas of the Territory.

Crocodile Meat for Restaurants

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

My question refers to the croctail party held last month at the Sheraton Hotel which I had the pleasure of attending. Has he had any advice on the results of the launch of crocodile meat as a gourmet dish at that party, and is he aware of concerns regarding the cost of that product to restaurants?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the launch of crocodile meat as a gourmet dish went down very well. During the period since the launch, restaurants have seemingly sorted out their attitudes and strategies towards this new product on the market. I am aware that there is some criticism of the price being asked by the producers of crocodile meat and one large hotel, for example, has decided not to enter into the crocodile 'stakes', as it were, solely on the basis that it believes the price is far too high and, of course, that is that hotel's choice in a free market. Other consumers and retailers of the crocodile meat have certainly passed the comment that the price seems pretty high but, just the same, they are purchasing the product. As far as I am aware, most local restaurants and, indeed, interstate buyers have found that there is a market niche for top-priced crocodile dishes. An example of this is another local hotel which has placed repeated orders for crocodile meat, its main form of sale being as a small side dish of smoked crocodile.

Overall, the distributors of crocodile meat have reported reasonable levels of sales and high levels of interstate inquiries due to extensive southern media coverage. In fact, currently, they are distributing all the product as fast as they receive it. I am advised that 100 kg was consigned to Adelaide recently and it seems that the reported high price is not so high as to deter people from purchasing the product.

I was hoping that demand for crocodile meat would be so high in the Territory that we would not be exporting any outside our borders and it would be one of those specialities that people virtually had to come to the Territory to experience, with the exception, of course, of a farm in Queensland which is also producing some meat. However, that is not to be the case. Crocodile meat is going interstate, obviously to people who are prepared to pay the price.

Personally, I think that the launch of crocodile as a gourmet dish was a huge success. It really did launch the crocodile industry in the Northern Territory on a fully commercial scale. Honourable members are aware that the crocodile farms have spent a long time reaching this stage, at considerable expense to themselves as they tried to make ends meet whilst this government and others were attempting to have crocodiles appropriately placed on the international CITES lists so that captivity-bred animals could be exploited. Most members think of the tourist crocodile farm near Darwin when they think of the crocodile industry. Certainly, that farm has been able to obtain an income over the past few years from tourism, and a very good show is put on there as well. However, I remind honourable members that there are 2 other large crocodile farms in the Top End which are not tourist ventures as well. They have had to bear the costs of their industry to date and are now being able to reap some rewards through the sale of skins and crocodile flesh.

Amendments to Planning Act

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Will he give consideration to introducing amendments to the Planning Act so that third party appeals can be made to the Appeals Committee and so that the composition of the Appeals Committee will be investigated to do away with the majority numbers of developers and give majority decision to local area representatives?

ANSWER

No.

Abolition of First Class Air Fares for Government Travel

Mr EDE to TREASURER

I remind him of an economic statement delivered to this House on 11 June 1987 when he said that first-class air fares for all intra-Territory travel funded directly or indirectly by the government would be abolished. The member for MacDonnell and myself immediately entered into the spirit and the practice of using economy class air fares to Alice Springs and back. We have noticed increasing numbers of members opposite travelling first class. As a result, we realised that this decision must have been reversed at some stage and that we had not been advised. When was that decision reversed and, if it has not been, why is the decision relating to economy class travel not being honoured?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I ask that that question be redirected to the Chief Minister.

Mr SPEAKER: Does the honourable Chief Minister wish the question to be put again?

Mr HATTON: No, Mr Speaker. What the honourable member says is correct. In the economic statement, that was the position proposed. During the course of the budget deliberations and discussions during the public service dispute, that policy was slightly modified to the extent that all travel within Australia for government purposes is economy class, except in respect to departmental heads and ministers and 1 person travelling with a minister.

METAL Program

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has money been allocated to extend the METAL program to Alice Springs and, if so, when will it be made available?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, no appropriation has been made for extending the program to Alice Springs, although the matter is being assessed by government.

As the honourable member is aware, the METAL program has been extremely successful in Darwin where it has been operating for a few years. The reason for its success is the broad, community participation that is occurring. Intending motorcyclists undergo an intensive program to obtain the different types of licence in a fairly protected environment. Not only does the program result in better trained motorcyclists but, in some cases, it convinces young or not-so-young people that they may not be suited to riding a motorcycle. In some cases, people abandon their objective of obtaining a motorcycle licence, which is good in itself.

It has been recognised in Australia that such programs can result in a reduction of up to 50% in serious motorcycle accidents. As we are all aware, motorcyclists are extremely exposed on our roads. Recently, there have been 2 very sad fatalities in Alice Springs and I imagine they have partly motivated the member to ask this question. There has been increased interest in Alice Springs in having a METAL program started there but we need to assess the costs. There is no doubt about the value to participants and I will be raising the matter with my colleagues to see whether it is possible to fund the extension of the project to Alice Springs.

ANSWER TO QUESTION

Abolition of First Class Air Fares for Government Travel

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister)(by leave): Mr Speaker, I would like to take the opportunity to clarify my earlier answer and provide additional details. Departmental heads are certainly entitled to first-class travel as are the Administrator, all members of the Legislative Assembly, judges and those persons who had a pre-existing contract which specifically entitled them to first-class travel. Apart from those instances, travel within Australia is economy class.

Funding for Home Loan Video Scheme

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Has he received any response to his request of the federal Minister for Employment, Education and Training that funding be continued for the home loan video scheme?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am still waiting for his response but, for the benefit of members opposite, I will point out that members of the federal government have already commented in both the press and the Senate. The loan scheme is one which provides video recorders and television monitors to all School of the Air families living in remote areas of Australia, including the Northern Territory. Through the use of this equipment, students in remote areas are able to view specially-prepared educational video programs as part of their lesson material. Both of our Schools of the Air prepare these materials and they have now become an integral part of the School of the Air teaching program. I am very surprised that the member for MacDonnell, being a member for a remote area, has no knowledge of this particular program. It has been running for a number of years and is strongly supported by the ICPA. I am sure that other members for rural electorates are aware of it.

It is important for honourable members to realise that this program provides children in remote areas with an important teaching aid which is taken for granted by children in urban schools.

Mr Ede interjecting.

Mr MANZIE: The member for Stuart really does make some nonsensical statements. I am sure that he would want the public purse to pay for private satellite dishes but I am afraid that many people cannot afford to provide private facilities to pick up satellite pictures. I am also sure that he is aware that there are as yet no commercial television broadcasts anywhere in the Territory because the licence was given out in circumstances about which we had serious reservations. We are now waiting for that service to be provided in the knowledge that it could have been provided instantly by the Territory's existing commercial television organisation. It was another example of the federal government believing that it knows more about these matters than Territorians. I am sure there are some people in the member for Stuart's electorate who greatly appreciate the education video service. The majority of students who benefit from it come from families which can ill-afford the high cost of providing their own educational video equipment.

I wrote to the federal minister on 16 October and I am still waiting for a reply. I note that, on 21 October, a spokesman for the federal minister was quoted in the Centralian Advocate as stating that 'funding for the scheme past the end of this year will not be forthcoming'. Obviously, honourable members opposite do not bother reading about what is occurring in the education area in central Australia or anywhere in the Territory. Last Friday, Senator Tambling attempted to obtain more details about the federal government's commitment to the scheme from Senator Susan Ryan, who represents the Minister for Employment, Education and Training in the Senate. The senator acknowledged the success of the scheme. If honourable members opposite did a little research, they would also recognise the success of the scheme.

Mr Ede: I was on radio about it this morning.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart suddenly has a flashback. He has selective amnesia. I am sick and tired of the cheap efforts he makes to scare people and to promote misinformation in the Territory. People in the Territory are waking up to him and members of the media are starting to become aware of the sort of rubbish that he continues to inflict on Territorians.

Senator Grant Tambling asked a question of the senator representing the minister in the Senate and she acknowledged how successful the scheme had been. However, she went on to say specific purpose funding for the scheme would not continue after 1987. She suggested that the states would now be able to fund the scheme through the general federal government capital grants program. Unfortunately, it appears that this suggestion from Senator Susan Ryan amounts to a sleight of hand. The bottom line is that, in taking away any specific funding in relation to the scheme and saying the states can secure funding under the general program, the federal government is severely jeopardising the funding of the scheme itself. Under this system, funding of the scheme would have to be prepared as a specific project which would then have to be included in all other submissions. Approval would then depend on what funds were available and on the comparable advantages of all the other projects which have been submitted for funding under that program. Most importantly, there is no indication from the federal government that the total level of funding has been increased to allow for the provision of the scheme under the general capital grants program.

Mr Ede: What priority do you give it?

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, quite a high priority should be given to a service that provides to children in the outback of the Territory, who do not have access to television, the educational programs that are available to all other Australians. I put a high priority on that. Obviously, the member for Stuart does not, but I do not care because he is not responsible for trying to provide equal opportunities for all Territory students whereas, in an educational sense, I am responsible. I am sure that we all have evidence of the knocking attitude and the complete disregard that he has for anything that relates to Territory students except for promoting his own political advantage. I am getting sick of it and, as I said, so are other Territorians.

It is important that this particular scheme be continued. Under the present scenario, the Territory is unlikely to secure equivalent funding, if any at all, for the continuation of the loans scheme. I have sought support for this matter from my counterparts in Western Australia, South Australia and Queensland. I have written to the Territory federal members, representatives of both the ALP and the CLP, and to the ICPA. I will certainly pass on details to the member for Stuart although I am pretty sure from his attitude this morning that there will not be any support forthcoming from him. I ask all members of this House to use any influence that they have to ensure that Territory students can obtain access to the same sorts of programs that are the norm for other Australian students. The attitude of the member for Stuart in relation to education matters in remote areas is sickening. His performance is abysmal and that is something that the Leader of the Opposition should look at very seriously.

Vanderlin Drive

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Will the future planning for the duplication of Vanderlin Drive from Mueller Road to the McMillans Road roundabout take account of the close proximity of houses in Karama to the road, and will consideration be given to relocating the road away from those houses?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, to be absolutely blunt about it, any concept of moving the road away from its existing alignment is totally impractical and uneconomic. The pertinent point in the honourable member's question is that there will be a progressive need to duplicate Vanderlin Drive from Lee Point Road through to the roundabout at the Berrimah Police Complex. The forecast for duplication at the Karama end would probably be at least 5 years away. What is proposed in the current budget is to undertake duplication from Lee Point Road to Paterson Street. That is seen as a high priority because of the large amount of traffic that uses that section and the very dangerous situation that occurs, particularly at the Lee Point Road end and the entrance to the Hibiscus Shopping Centre.

At Lee Point Road, there will be a roundabout which not only will be cost effective in itself but, as a solution to that intersection problem, it will lead to a much freer flow of traffic. There is a real problem at the entrance into Hibiscus Shopping Centre and that problem will be alleviated by the duplication which will provide acceleration-deceleration lanes into and out of the shopping centre.

The traffic at the Karama end will increase with people travelling to and from Palmerston and the rural areas and to and from the Trade Development Zone when it employs some 2000 to 3000 people in the not-too-distant future. The traffic will warrant the duplication. Unfortunately, the road alignment was located well before the houses. Hopefully, the people who bought homes there would have recognised that problem before they purchased. The problem is aggravated by the location of the council waste disposal area. I am aware of problems with pieces of paper blowing onto adjoining properties. The solution is not to dig up the existing road section or relocate it further away from the houses. It is more realistic and practical to provide some visual screen, by way of trees or whatever, and for the council to accept its responsibility in ensuring that rubbish does not blow from open trailers etc or, at least, is recovered as quickly as possible.

My information for the honourable member contains a bit of good news and a bit of bad. We will have a duplicated road at some time in the future but, unfortunately, it will not be relocated away from the boundary.

Funding for FORWAARD

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is he aware that the organisation known as FORWAARD has had its funding withdrawn? If so, what is his government doing to provide funding to that organisation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would love to advise the House about the situation with FORWAARD and I will take a couple of minutes to run through it. FORWAARD is an Aboriginal organisation, based in Darwin, which has provided a residential rehabilitation program primarily, but not exclusively, for Aboriginal people. On 30 April 1987, as a result of a change in policy in DAA, and I stress that, a significant element of FORWAARD's funding was cut. DAA had decided, with a stroke-of-a-pen type of attitude I might add, to move from residential rehabilitation programs to preventive education programs - a nice bit of fancy footwork. The management of FORWAARD at the time believed that there was a continued need for a residential rehabilitation program in addition to the proposed preventive education programs. Funding was provided for FORWAARD, by this government, which allowed the group to continue operations until 31 August 1987, and that was after I talked with the committee of that particular organisation to try instil some common sense. This funding was intended primarily to allow for breathing space. FORWAARD needed the chance to develop new programs and to assess its future and the government needed to evaluate and assess where FORWAARD could fit into its overall drug and alcohol education and rehabilitation policy.

Unfortunately, FORWAARD has now apparently lost its principal source of funding - that is, from the federal government which is supposed to be looking after Aboriginal people. The organisation had a period of stability but it has now lost senior staff and officers to such an extent that its future now appears bleak. Aboriginal Hostels have withdrawn funding because the conditions of its funding have not been met. DAA appears likely to withdraw the remaining funding provided for outpatient preventive and education programs. In the circumstances, funding from the Department of Health and Community Services cannot be continued. Funding has been provided for cessation payments to staff.

Mr Speaker, it is important to ask ourselves why this has happened. FORWAARD has been placed constantly in a position where failure is an inevitable outcome. The people who have been involved deserve credit for having carried on for so long. FORWAARD has been asked to produce detailed planned programs, when the skills to do so have been absent; it has been asked to handle large sums of money without financial and administrative skills; it has had funding agencies impose different controls and conditions; and it has been required by funding agencies to follow different paths and to seek different aims. The organisation might be said to have been set up to fail. For instance, DAA's required change of direction in April, from residential rehabilitation to preventive education, was imposed without proper regard to the skills or experience of the management and the staff of the organisation.

What does the future hold, Mr Speaker? The Drug and Alcohol Bureau has been able to obtain the cooperation of DAA and AHL to participate in a review of drug and alcohol services to Aboriginals in the Territory. The Drug and Alcohol Bureau is doing all it can to speed up this particular process. The approach of DAA, which is now more cooperative and positive, should assist the process. All drug and alcohol programs are open to all Territorians. Nevertheless, there are programs specifically provided for Aboriginals with funding from Kalano, the Rockhole Rehabilitation Farm, family and youth workers at Maningrida, a worker among Darwin fringe camps and a substance abuse worker at Docker River.

The Northern Territory government has always taken a responsible attitude to the needs of Aboriginal people. This is yet another classic example of what this so-called ALP federal government is doing to the Northern Territory, and there are people here who stand here, on a daily basis, apologising for that federal government and its actions. It has totally disregarded 25% of the constituency of this Northern Territory in once again withdrawing funds from an area that is vital to the Aboriginal people.

Proposed Emily Lake in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

My question relates to the proposed Emily Lake in Alice Springs. In the planning for such a lake is it considered that, at times, it would be necessary for water to be pumped into it to prevent it drying up and becoming unusable and, if so, where would the water come from?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, recently, Cabinet has made a decision which has placed the Department of Lands and Housing in the role of manager and overseeing agent for the development of all the feasibility studies necessary to determine whether the Emily Creek site can be proved up. Necessarily, an environmental impact study will be undertaken. In addition, the Department of Mines and Energy is required to do some drilling. The Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority will be required to clear the site. Part of it is a proposition that has been put before the government and has been a matter for some public discussion by McMahon Constructions. It has involved an overall strategy to develop stage 1 of Undoolya for 1250 lots, incorporating a recreation lake that represented considerable savings to the Northern Territory government. It is certainly something that I can quite proudly stand before honourable members and say that I am pursuing very actively. The report from the Department of Lands and Housing is expected to be finalised and before government prior to June 1988.

One of the aspects of the recreation lake at the Emily Creek site was the possibility, which has been investigated to the costing stage, of incorporating a pumping system and a pipeline from the town basin out to the actual dam site. It is not necessary to make the recreation lake at the Emily Creek site feasible. It was done as an option in part of the presentation to the government, because of the problems that have been experienced with the town basin and the excessive build up of the water level over recent times, as well as salt problems that occur within the existing residential area of Alice Springs. Part of the environmental impact study will be to address the issue of the salt content of that water at various times if, because of low levels in the recreation lake, it is necessary to pump water, but that is not a critical element of the proposal.

Mr Speaker, it has a reasonable way to go but Cabinet has given a very clear indication that, subject to the necessary technical and environmental aspects relating to the Emily Creek site, the government hopes to establish in the future a recreation lake for the residents of Alice Springs.

Air North Settlement

Mr SMITH to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

My question relates to questions I asked previously concerning the statement by the Chief Minister during the last sittings that a proposition had been put to the government by Air North for settlement of any legal actions outstanding over the aerial medical contract. Has the government reached an agreement with Air North over that question and does this involve the government in payment of legal expenses of Air North or any payments to Air North?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, a file did go through my office yesterday regarding this matter. I am pleased to be able to say that the parties involved in the litigation apparently withdrew on the basis that the matter of costs would be settled. At this moment, Air North has been asked through its solicitors to provide details of the costs involved so the normal procedures for assessing costs can be undertaken.

Patents

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In the days when the Commonwealth was responsible for patents, a person seeking patent information could go to the State Reference Library, study the microfiche and take photocopies for the cost of a few dollars. Today, I understand the person has to go to the Patents Advisory Service where he is given the names of patent attorneys. He is told to write to them to seek information. The cost of this is between $400 to $1000. This is an impost on people. I ask if the former system could be reintroduced to the Patents Advisory Office.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not familiar with this matter. However, it is interesting that an almost identical question was raised with me by the member for Ludmilla yesterday. I have sought information from the department as to the public accessibility of patent information in the Northern Territory. I see no reason whatsoever why the information should not be as readily available to the public of the Northern Territory as it is to people anywhere else in Australia. I hesitate to say anything more than that at this stage because I do not understand the degree of confidentiality which might need to apply to files of patents. I will obtain this information and write to the honourable member or advise the House at the forthcoming sittings.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Oolloo Station Cattle

Mr PERRON (Industries and Development): Mr Deputy Speaker, while I am on my feet I will answer a question asked of me earlier during these sittings by the member for MacDonnell relating to cattle on Oolloo Station. I have received advice from the government's law officers that the matter is before the courts at present and is the subject of a writ by the Rixons to the Northern Territory government, and that I should not speak of this matter in any way in the Assembly.

Deer Farming Project

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he give me up-to-date information on the new deer farming project that I have heard is in the process of commencement in the Adelaide River-Daly River area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unfortunately, I am not a fount of information to the Assembly this morning. I will endeavour to obtain some information for the honourable member. I heard recently that there were parties interested in farming the Northern Territory deer. I am embarrassed to say that I am not even sure whether it is a native or a feral animal in the Northern Territory. I am told it is a feral animal. Certainly, my department would encourage any farming in the Northern Territory that would lead to a commercial venture of such livestock as would clearly be of benefit to the Northern Territory's economy. However, I will endeavour to find out for the honourable member if plans are firm by any particular party and known by my department and advise her of that information.

Air North

Mr SMITH to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Is it a possibility that part of the settlement with Air North will be the payment of part of Air North's legal expenses incurred in the various challenges over the aerial medical contracts, and can the Attorney-General give an estimate of when this matter may be resolved?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I certainly cannot say whether it is part of a settlement or not. I can say that approval has been given for information about the litigation and Air North's costs to be forwarded. That will be assessed and I will then be in a position to advise whether or not approval has been given for payment of those costs under the normal processes of litigation.

Plumbing Inspections in Alice Springs

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Will he appoint a second plumbing inspector in Alice Springs? I point out that building approvals in Alice Springs have been severely limited because of the failure to appoint a second plumbing inspector.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member's information is inaccurate. I have recently had discussions with the Deputy Secretary of Lands and Housing, Southern Region, the Master Builders Association and various other people involved in technical areas in private enterprise. Some concern has been expressed that there are delays due to the large number of applications and some of the large developments taking place in Alice Springs. Internal arrangements are being made within the department to the full satisfaction of the Master Builders Association and others who have made representations to me.

One of the areas of particular concern has been the matter of engineering structural certificates in relation to certain development plans. In the past, it has been necessary, because of the size of developments and the technical expertise involved, to send the plans to Darwin. That has led to delays. Arrangements have now been made for a Darwin-based officer to make regular trips to the southern region to address that issue, expressly to ensure that the process is speeded up.

Reference to Head of Aboriginal Development Unit

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES.

I refer him to last night's debate during which he referred to the head of the Aboriginal Development Unit and stated that my arguments were based on sour grapes. He made allegations that she had, in fact, provided me with information which I used in my contribution to the debate. I ask if he is now prepared to retract those allegations and to apologise to the lady concerned?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to answer that question because I made no reference to the head of the Aboriginal Development Unit. In fact, the member for Stuart made that reference in reply to jibes from members on this side of the House. I made no reference to the head of the Aboriginal Development Unit. I point out that the member for Stuart was again trying, as he and his cohorts tend to do, to create division between Aboriginal people and the rest of the Territory population. They have been trying to do this for some time and I am fed up with it. I am sure the member for Arnhem and the member for Arafura are fed up with it as well. All Aboriginal people get sick and tired of the divisions created by members opposite.

Reference to Head of Aboriginal Development Unit

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

I have a supplementary question. I will quote from Hansard to illustrate what we are talking about.

Mr HARRIS: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The copy of Hansard he is reading from has been placed on our desks this morning. It has not been viewed by members who spoke yesterday and there is a period of time for corrections to be forwarded.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, I refer to the page 76 of the Daily Hansard for Wednesday 28 October and the speech made by the minister.

Mr Hanrahan: Page number?

Mr EDE: Page 76, and we are talking about the division. He is stating that it has not been downgraded. I queried that, by means of interjection:

Mr Ede: It had an E4 before.

Mr McCARTHY: There was no E4 in that role.

Mr Ede: An acting E4.

Mr McCARTHY: There was an acting E4. In fact, that is exactly why the member for Stuart has it in front of him. It has come to him because of sour grapes.

Mr Ede: I have not met the lady.

Mr McCARTHY: It has all come out. I said I could have named the person, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, very obviously the minister was referring to the head of the division and I ask him if he will now withdraw that allegation. As he had stated earlier that he could have named the person, he brought out the allegation that that was the person who gave me the information. I ask him if he will withdraw that allegation.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the inference that we are referring to the same person there is quite ludicrous. In fact, I have a very deep respect for the head of the unit. That particular person is doing a magnificent job, and I am rather dismayed that the member for Stuart would bring out the references that he brought out yesterday and make accusations in this House that really showed the Aboriginal Development Unit and some of the persons in it in a bad light. I do not think that any of them would have wished that to happen yesterday, Mr Speaker. I certainly would not have.

I am very much aware of the difficult times that we are going through in getting that particular part of my portfolio into place, but it is being put into place. It is doing a great job. The head of that unit has my deepest regard, and I expect that she will continue to go on and do wonderful things for that part of my portfolio.

Mr Speaker, as the honourable member for Darwin pointed out, we have not had time to look at yesterday's Hansard. If you will bear with me for just a minute, I will read a short piece here. I presume I can quote from the unrevised issue as it has been done by the other side this morning:

There has been no downgrading in any way, shape or form of the Aboriginal Development Division. It is strong. It is important. It is a unique division and it will retain its autonomy within the employment and training area and it will continue to do the things that we expect of it.

Mr Ede: It had an E4 before.

Mr McCARTHY: There was no E4 in that role.

Mr Ede: An acting E4.

Then I went on to say that there was an acting E4 and, in fact, that was exactly why the member for Stuart had it in front of him.

Mr Ede: Exactly, exactly.

Mr McCARTHY: The member said: 'I have not met the lady'. That is what he said: 'I have not met the lady'.

Mr Ede: Just say she is a lovely lady.

Mr McCARTHY: It has all come out. I said I could have named the person. Mr Speaker, I rest my case.

Delays in Government Payment to Contractors

Mr COLLINS to TREASURER

I have heard in many centres over the last couple of months that the government is slow in paying contractors and the like. What does the government intend to do about restoring its good name in this regard?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Sadadeen is assuming, of course, that we do not have a good name if he says that we have to restore that name. The member for Sadadeen comes to this Assembly with many stories. If he could give me details of the contractors concerned immediately, I will obtain the answer for him before lunchtime today on the payment and the status of those accounts that he has heard particular stories about.

Mr Speaker, this question is raised from time to time. When I checked, I have found that the speed with which the Treasury is processing accounts is indeed very encouraging. I ask the honourable member to give me, before lunchtime, details of those contractors that he is concerned about and I will provide that answer to this Assembly immediately on receipt of those names and accounts. However, I will defend the people in Treasury. I have checked this on several occasions and I have found that the time taken to process those accounts has been very short once the paperwork has arrived on Treasury desks. I ask the member for Sadadeen to name the contractors concerned so that, on his behalf, I may expedite the processing of those particular accounts if that is necessary. However, can I inform the House that I am particularly impressed with the speed with which accounts are being processed by the Treasury officials.

Gold Find Near Tennant Creek

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he inform the House whether or not Mr Hall's gold find to the east of Tennant Creek will continue to produce by the 44-gallon drum full or has more sober and scientific evidence been produced which would suggest other levels of extraction?

ANSWER

Mr Deputy Speaker, it is interesting to note that I stood on my feet for 3 hours in the committee stage of the Appropriation Bill discussing a range of issues that are pertinent to my portfolio areas, and the opposition spokesman on mines and energy was not even present. There was not a single question on the industry that accounts for 18% of the Territory's GDP.

Mr EDE: A point of order, Mr Deputy Speaker! The comments of the Treasurer are irrelevant to the question.

Mr DEPUTY SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr COULTER: Mr Deputy Speaker, Mr Hall's gold find has been announced right throughout the world. It was a good luck story in a world of doom and gloom. With the indulgence of the House, I would like to relate a story in relation to Mr Hall's gold find. Yesterday, my press secretary was on the telephone and my ministerial officer responsible for mines and energy came to him and asked if he would speak to a lady from New York.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker. Obviously, the government is intent on making a mockery of this question time. We have a very specific question from the member for Nhulunbuy concerning the gold find and whether the original, optimistic projections of the honourable minister have in fact been proved up. He wants to seek the leave of this House to tell us a story about a telephone call from New York.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order but I would ask the minister to relate his answer to the question.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, we will tell that story at another time and another place, but it is part of the story concerning Mr Hall's gold find.

Mr Speaker, it would appear at this stage that the gold find is not as extensive as was first thought. There is need for further drilling and testing of the area. I am pleased to have questions from the opposition but, as usual, they are questions that tend towards the negative. You never hear from them when things are going well but, when matters look like turning a little sour, in comes the opposition. What a fitting name! Never has there been a more apt description for the 6 people opposite - opposition to anything.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I think we have demonstrated our point.

Gold Find Near Tennant Creek

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

On what evidence did he base his claim that gold was being produced by the 44-gallon drum full from Mr Hall's mine?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I was acting on advice. I understand the term was 'buckets' or something of that nature.

Mr Smith: 44-gallon buckets?

Mr COULTER: Members opposite would be experts in the use of buckets. However, people on this side of the House share the excitement and we encourage people to be productive and get on with the job of developing the Northern Territory.

Mr Speaker, I was informed by the Department of Mines and Energy that a substantial quantity of samples was brought into the department's office in Tennant Creek. I was told that it was a 44-gallon drum. That may have been a figure of speech, but there was a considerable quantity of samples. I can assure members that it was not a tobacco tin, although even a tobacco tin of gold these days would be quite valuable. Mr Speaker, if anybody turned up at your doorstep with a bucket of gold, you would not send him away as the Leader of the Opposition and his colleagues would have. They would have said: 'This is not good enough, where is the 44-gallon drum?' They would have sent him away with his tail between his legs.

We are talking about a find 200 km south-east of Tennant Creek, out behind the Devils Marbles. A lady from the Department of Mines and Energy travelled out there on the Friday, but our mines expert did not arrive there until Monday.

Members interjecting.

Mr COULTER: Here we go again, Mr Speaker. Have a listen to them. You are producing $1200m-worth of wealth for the Territory, but you got one wrong. What characters!

We have costeamed areas of the reef and it does not appear to be as extensive as was thought at first. But, do not give up, Mr Speaker! I still believe that to be one of the most prospective areas in the Territory and the member for Barkly may even recognise that himself. Recently, we apprehended a fellow down there with a bulldozer and a mineral detector. That fellow had taken from somebody else's EL $600 000 worth of nuggets. Unfortunately for him, one of my inspectors arrived and took him to court. That is the type of value that we are talking about in relation to this particular region.

Block H Finniss River

Mr BELL to TREASURER

I asked this question of him during the Appropriation Bill debate and he refused to answer it then. Let us see how we go today. Will he table the advice he received in January this year as Acting Minister for Lands from the department in relation to the sale of Block H at Finniss River to Input Pty Ltd?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, if the honourable member likes to write to the Northern Territory Land Corporation, it may assist him in that particular regard.

Bagot Road Pedestrian Traffic Study

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

My question concerns the problem on Bagot Road near the Nightcliff Hotel. We heard in the last Assembly sittings that he had undertaken some investigations as to how that matter could be resolved and had set aside a sum of money for that. Could he inform the Assembly whether progress has been made, and whether final decisions have been reached?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, technical solutions for that social problem have been considered. There is no perfect solution. When people wish to cross an extremely busy road in the darkest part of the night, in a state that is not exactly conducive to their own welfare, the problem is significant and not easily solved by means of an overpass or a set of traffic lights. Those are not perfect solutions by any means. Through the member for Ludmilla, we have been able to talk to the Bagot Community from whence many of the hotel's patrons come. I understand that there may very well be a community-based solution in the form of a bus. That is a sensible, practical solution.

Pensioners and school children who need to cross further along still have a problem. A recommendation has been proposed by the Department of Transport and Works suggesting that pedestrian-activated traffic lights be installed as an interim measure to assess their effectiveness. We are waiting for comments from the police and other interested parties before finalising that decision. The real problem, unfortunately, is drunks crossing a public road. Statistics in that area and for the rest of Darwin indicate that many pedestrians who are involved in motor accidents are under the influence of alcohol. When the honourable member can produce a practical solution to that problem, I will be more than delighted to hear from him.

Maintenance of Rapid Creek Water Gardens

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

My question is delivered on behalf of the people of Jingili who seem to have lost their member during this question time. Some concern has been expressed by the people of Jingili and others about the change in ground maintenance contractors for the Rapid Creek Water Gardens. Can he assure this House that the water gardens are being maintained at a standard at least equivalent to that which was provided by the previous contractor?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is an indication of the absolute ignorance of the Leader of the Opposition that the water gardens has absolutely nothing to do with the Department of Transport and Works. I am certain that the member for Jingili, who is one of the most active members of this House, knows more about representing of his constituents than the Leader of the Opposition ever will.

Maintenance of Rapid Creek Water Gardens

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I address my supplementary question to the minister responsible for the Power and Water Authority. On behalf of the people of Jingili, who have expressed concern on this particular matter, can the minister assure this House that the Rapid Creek Water Gardens is being maintained at a standard equivalent to that offered by the previous contractor?

ANSWER

The answer is yes.

Local Government Involvement in Planning

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

If he will not entertain the idea of third party appeals to the Planning Appeals Committee or consider changing the composition of the Planning Appeals Committee, will he at least look at earnest appeals from local governments that attention be paid to the wishes of local residents, with special reference to the Litchfield Shire?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am always ready, willing and available to speak to any member of any local government authority in the whole of the Northern Territory about any planning issue.

Sludge Levels at Leanyer Sewage Ponds

Mr EDE to TREASURER

I ask this question on behalf of the member for Karama who has not got over his bout of lockjaw. Is the minister aware of the dangerously high sludge levels at the Leanyer sewage ponds and is he now prepared to give the answer he was not prepared to give when the member for Karama asked his 1 question in these sittings?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I answered that question last week. The word 'dangerous' was actually used by the member for Karama. This is indicative of the opposition's performance in question time today. We have given members of the opposition every chance to ask questions and now they are repeating questions which were asked last week.

Cancellation of Elective Surgery at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is it true that elective surgery is being cancelled at the Royal Darwin Hospital? Why is the cancellation occurring and how long will this situation continue?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am certainly honoured to be asked the first intelligent question of the day. I can assure honourable members that this particular question pains me more than some will probably realise. Negotiations have commenced with the Darwin Private Hospital Pty Ltd to facilitate leasing of Wards 3A and 3B, together with 2 operating theatres and 3 delivery suites, for the establishment of a private hospital facility within the Royal Darwin Hospital. These negotiations are proceeding very well and rapidly, and the signing of the documents is imminent. Verbal advice is that the Darwin Private Hospital Pty Ltd anticipates commencing operations on Monday 23 November 1987.

To achieve this stringent deadline of the lease agreement, the following timetable has been developed. Work will commence on Tuesday 27 October 1987 to give vacant possession of half the third floor by Monday 9 November 1987, and the remainder by Wednesday 11 November 1987. Elective admissions, especially for surgery, will be controlled from Thursday 29 October 1987 and, where possible, all elective admissions will cease for the period 4 to 6 November 1987 inclusive. Mr Speaker, all staff including doctors, were advised of these facts on 28 September 1987, and they were informed of the necessity to impose stringent controls over elective surgery during the periods I have mentioned.

It is expected that some inconvenience to the public and doctors will result from the possible restrictions on elective admissions. However, every endeavour has been, and will continue to be, made to ensure that inconvenience is kept to an absolute minimum. This timetable achieves the required reduction in authorised beds in the shortest possible time, whilst also minimising disruption to patients and staff of the Royal Darwin Hospital.

Mr Speaker, let me add that everybody, even those very near and dear to me, will be treated in the same way. In fact, I was due to go in to have a follow-up to my recent operation, but I am pleased to say that it is in the category of elective surgery. I received a phone call yesterday afternoon saying that, because of my decision, that has been put off until a date to be fixed.

Solar-Powered Car Race

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

I believe a race for solar-powered vehicles is to be conducted between Darwin and Adelaide. What support has the government provided to the DIT entry to the world solar-powered car challenge?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am very pleased to be able to provide some information on this matter. The DIT has provided the only Territory entry in the Pentax World Solar Challenge, the car race for solar-powered vehicles from Darwin to Adelaide, which commences on Sunday 1 November from the Casuarina shopping centre. I would urge everyone who has an interest in any of those matters to be out at Casuarina shopping centre, not only for the start of the race on Sunday but also tomorrow when, I understand, there will be a display of the vehicles.

The Northern Territory government itself has supported the DIT project with a grant of $60 000. The Power and Water Authority, the Tourist Commission and the Department of Transport and Works are the government organisations that have provided assistance. Assistance has also been provided by Sitzler Bros Pty Ltd, the RAAF, the community radio station Top FM - which also does a superb job broadcasting the question time of this Assembly - CIG, Dunlop, Radio Australia, Mr Stan Kennon, the AANT, the Institute of Engineers, Toshiba, Telecom, Bob Jane, the Computer Shop, Silent Appliance Systems, Coates Hire, Sleeman Dunkley Treacy Maunsell Pty Ltd, the Mobil Bagot, Warsash Pty Ltd and the Casuarina City Twin Cinemas. All have contributed to assist the DIT and, if I have left anyone out, I apologise. That demonstrates the large number of groups that have provided support for this entry.

I think everyone realises that the Territory is really at the sharp end of solar technology. We have been utilising solar energy for many years, for heating water, for pumping systems, for electrical illumination systems and for communication systems right throughout the Territory. It is important to realise that the DIT, with very minor resources, has provided a very competitive vehicle to enter this race. The chassis construction, the design, the body, the resistance tests and the electrical work has all been done by staff and students at the DIT.

I believe that this entry will be very competitive against entries from such giant organisations as General Motors, the Ford Motor Company, which is utilising its space technology, and a number of Japanese companies which have spent millions of dollars on developing very hi-tech vehicles. The DIT may be the mouse that roared in this particular event and I am offering all my encouragement. I would urge every member of this Assembly and every Territorian to provide a bit of assistance in terms of attending the start of the race or sending a telegram or whatever, because this particular event will put the Northern Territory on the map. The race is starting in Darwin and we will have the eyes of the world on us. I believe the Territory entrant, designed and built by Territorian students and staff, with assistance from some RAAF personnel, will be very competitive and it will be right up there at the end of the race. I wish them all the best and I congratulate all those involved in the building, the driving and the commercial support of the venture.

Soapy Bore Water Supply

Mr EDE to TREASURER

I refer him to the debate during the last sittings of the Assembly regarding the lack of water for the school and community at Soapy Bore. I know that his people have been doing some work on it since then. What are the chances of the school receiving an adequate water supply so that it can become operational?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have spoken with the Director of the Water Authority who has been out to Soapy Bore and has assessed the situation, particularly the area where the houses have now been built, in relation to the tank and the water supply there. However, I simply took it that it was in hand, after speaking to him, and that the issues had been recognised and that we were looking at ways of addressing them. My briefing notes have not been updated recently and I have no further details than I have already supplied to the honourable member. However, I will be writing to him in the very near future to indicate what is planned for that particular area.

Darwin Private Hospital

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Will patients at the Darwin Private Hospital still have access to specialist services at the Royal Darwin Hospital following the opening of the private hospital?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there are contractual and employment arrangements which apply to specialists in the Darwin area. Firstly, there are the private specialists who make their own arrangements. They work now in the Royal Darwin Hospital on a sessional contract basis. I expect that they will be negotiating with the private hospital for visiting rights. I understand that that process is well under way. The majority of specialists at the Royal Darwin Hospital, who are employed by the department, have a contract of service which allows them to practice privately to a limited extent. These specialists will be able to make such private arrangements as their contracts allow.

For diagnostic services, particularly radiology and pathology, salaried specialists will be able to use their 35% right for private practice to provide these services to Darwin Private Hospital patients. Where a Royal Darwin Hospital specialist has an employment contract which does not allow for practice outside the hospital, at this stage, he would be precluded. However, I have asked my department to examine this matter and to report to me on the number of doctors in that category and the effect that a relaxation of their employment contracts would have on the activities of the Royal Darwin Hospital and the welfare of patients. I would point out that the private hospital fully intends to attract to Darwin specialists in a range of fields. This would increase the overall number of specialists available to the Darwin population. I look forward with a great deal of excitement to the increase in the quality of services in the health area, particularly hospital services, that will be achieved by the opening of the private hospital.

Private patients being able to use the Royal Darwin Hospital after the Darwin Private Hospital has opened is a matter of interest to many people. It is expected that most people who are insured privately will use the Darwin Private Hospital. They will certainly be encouraged by the Royal Darwin Hospital to do so. It is not intended that privately insured people who, for one reason or another might still wish to use the Royal Darwin Hospital, will be prevented from doing so. Indeed, the Medicare agreement apparently precludes it from preventing that.

Damming of Daly River

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to TREASURER

Can he give me information regarding the damming of the Daly River for power generation, with particular reference to other river users, for example, pastoralists and recreational fishermen?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I think the honourable member may be referring to a proposal that has been considered recently. I understand the minister for Industries and Development has an interest in the area as well which is largely in relation to small barramundi being able to travel up the river. That is a major concern. I understand a design has now been developed that will accommodate the movement of barramundi. Recently, I had the opportunity to look at concrete ladders that have been put in place in Canada to allow salmon to travel up and down the waterways. The ladders have dramatically increased the chances of the salmon travelling up the rivers. They no longer have to run the gauntlet of rocky boulders and grizzly bears. It has increased the salmon breeding population dramatically. Of course, the grizzly bears are not doing so well; they are buying cans of tuna.

Mr Speaker, the study is at a very preliminary stage and the barramundi problem was a major consideration. I understand that problem has now been overcome. However, there are many problems involved in the damming of any river in Australia. The member for Victoria River would be able to advise the House on some of the problems. If the honourable member would like me to keep her informed of developments in that area, I will do so.

'Land of the Lightning Brothers'

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

Did the Northern Territory government contribute financially to the production of the film 'Land of the Lightning Brothers'?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would like to preface my answer with the brief comment that we have heard complaints from the opposition in the media and in this House about their inability to ask questions and lack of time. Members on this side of the House were quite prepared to give members of the opposition a clear run today in terms of asking questions. However, all they could do was criticise the fact that no questions were coming from this side of the House. I do not refer to the crossbenchers.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister has been asked a specific question by the member for Casuarina. It does not relate in any way to an explanation of the attitude this government wanted to take in question time today.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The opposition has been allowed some latitude in prefacing its questions and the same latitude will be allowed to the Chief Minister.

Mr HATTON: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I simply wanted to make that point. I know that, once his front bench had blown the deal, the member for Nhulunbuy became so upset with it, he started reading a paper and then walked out of the House for a while.

I thank the honourable member for the question. The government provided a grant of $20 000 in 1986-87 to the Australian Film Commission to produce the film called 'Land of the Lightning Brothers.' This film is set in the Gregory National Park and portrays the rich and diverse Aboriginal rock paintings in the area. The film will greatly enhance the Aboriginal cultural aspect of Northern Territory tourism promotion. The film will be screened on ABC TV on 17 November this year as part of the season of Aboriginal films. I would urge all honourable members to take the opportunity to see that film. It is yet another example of the way the Northern Territory government is active in promoting Aboriginal involvement in the tourist industry.

Gold Find Near Tennant Creek

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Does he accept that, if sober and scientific evidence shows his public statements about Mr Hall's find prove to be extravagant or wild, investor confidence in the mining industry in the Northern Territory may be adversely affected?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can assure you that, unlike the member for Nhulunbuy, I have the utmost confidence in the intelligence of miners in the Northern Territory. They are very astute people and they understand the risks and the rewards of mining. Mr Hall's find may not prove to be as significant as was first thought. However, it is significant in that it confirms once again the potential of the area. I am not sure which extravagant claims the member for Nhulunbuy is referring to. If he could quote the specific remarks I made, I would be pleased to consider them in the context of the encouraging information that was supplied to me.

As I have said many times, I believe that Tennant Creek will become the Kalgoorlie of the Northern Territory. I believe that will happen in the very near future. I hope that the member for Nhulunbuy, the opposition spokesman on mines and energy, shares my enthusiasm. If he does not, I am prepared to make available to him a guided tour of the mines that are operating or about to commence operation in the very near future to reassure him that my confidence is not unfounded. It is not based on pub talk; it is based on hard facts which demonstrate that the Northern Territory is about to enter into a boom period unparalleled in mining history. It was the anniversary of Al Jolson's death last Friday. He was the man who coined the phrase 'You ain't seen nothin yet' and I suggest to the member for Nhulunbuy that he ain't seen nothin yet either. We have not even scratched the surface of the potential for the development of mining in the Northern Territory. I have every confidence that my statements about the potential of the Northern Territory mining industry are echoed by every miner swinging a pick or shovel out in the hot sun, as they gouge away in their efforts to realise the potential of the Northern Territory. I congratulate them.

Benefits of the Pastoral Industry

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

What benefits does the Northern derive from the pastoral industry, given allegations that the resources of the Territory are being exploited by the industry?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, recently honourable members may have heard some comments in the media about the usefulness of the pastoral industry to the Northern Territory and how it simply produces animals which are turned off from the Northern Territory for processing. I am sure honourable members will be interested to learn that, in the 1985-86 financial year, the total Northern Territory turn-off of cattle was 397 197 beasts. Of that number, 89 100 - or 22.4% of the total turn-off - were slaughtered in the Northern Territory in both domestic and export abattoirs, and 308 097 beasts were exported live either interstate or overseas. Some 43% of cattle are sent out of the Northern Territory for fattening and obviously the remainder go directly to abattoirs.

The issue reflects on the viability of abattoirs in the Northern Territory. The Leader of the Opposition's comments on this matter would seem to imply that, irrespective of the economics of an industry, one should simply require cattle property owners to turn off cattle to Northern Territory abattoirs without any consideration of whether that is profitable for them or not. Traditionally, store cattle have been sent interstate from the Northern Territory and the present situation is not significantly different. It is true that a number of Northern Territory abattoirs have closed down recently although, from memory, about 9 abattoirs, some of them quite small, are still operating.

It is unfortunate that industrial unrest has been an integral part of the abattoir industry in the Northern Territory. The member for Barkly has commented in this Assembly on how industrial unrest contributed significantly to the eventual downfall of the Tennant Creek Abattoir. No matter what the owners of the abattoir did, there was continuing industrial disruption and it reached such levels that Tennant Creek now has no abattoir at all.

Economies of scale militate against processing in the Northern Territory. Animals cannot be supplied to the abattoirs on a continuing basis throughout the year and this means that our abattoir owners are faced with a greater cost per beast than applies interstate. Most of our cattle now go to the large coastal abattoirs which can process the Northern Territory's turn-off as almost an incidental component of their annual through-put. Therefore, they can process cattle out of the Northern Territory far more cheaply than can Northern Territory abattoirs. Obviously, whether they are from the giant companies that own large cattle properties in the Northern Territory or small individual holdings, cattlemen will sell their cattle to whomever offers them the best price. It is clearly a completely economically-driven industry, and so it should be.

The mention that the Australian Agricultural Company Organisation's properties in the Northern Territory might be taken over by the Sherwin group has been raised, and I am advised that the 3 properties of the AACO in the Northern Territory, Rockhampton Downs, Brunette Downs and Avon Downs, collectively holding about 100 000 head of cattle, have traditionally turned virtually all of their turn-off interstate anyway. Yet, in comments to the media, the Leader of the Opposition seems to be implying that, if this company is taken over, then these cattle will be sent interstate. They are already being sent interstate.

I am not pleased with the situation. As Minister for Industries and Development, one of my targets is to attempt to have processing of Territory primary products done in the Territory wherever possible. Indeed, the department is examining aspects of the abattoir industry such as how we can improve the economics of the industry by processing hides, offal and by-products from the Territory animal further than has been the case in the past. In most cases, because of the small scale, it is simply not economical to start taking all of the offal cuts and putting them in cartons. In the Northern Territory, most of those cuts are sent off to the offal plant or to the dump whereas the big southern abattoirs can take the tiniest cut of an animal and, if they have enough through-put, they can produce tonnes of the offal and sell to speciality markets. In the Territory, we are denied opportunities of that sort.

However, I will have the department examine the possibility that the government might be able to encourage some further processing of products like hides, at least, to improve the value of the animals in the Northern Territory by quite a few dollars per beast. The Pastoral Industry Study also bears clearly on this matter, and I would be interested to hear the comments of opposition members on this subject when, at a later sittings, we are able to debate that study which is really laying down a broad scenario for further development of the pastoral industry in the Northern Territory. I look forward to the contribution of honourable members opposite at that time.

3. Aboriginal Employment

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

In view of the Northern Territory Government's stated commitment to improving Aboriginal employment and in the light of recent reports indicating a decline in Aboriginal employment levels, what are the numbers of unfilled positions in each of the following categories:

- (a) Police aides;
- (b) Trackers;
- (c) Health workers;

- (d) Assistant teachers in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities; and
- (e) Teacher aides in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities?

5. Skywest - Aero-medical Services

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

What are the details of the cost to the Northern Territory government of the financial, legal and other arrangements made with the Skywest Company to finalise negotiations allowing Skywest to begin the aero-medical services in the Northern Territory?

20 October 1987

4. Motor Vehicle Accidents

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

How many persons have been:

(a) killed; and

(b) injured

in motor vehicle accidents in the Northern Territory so far this calendar year and who were travelling as passengers in the rear of utilities or motor trucks?

ANSWER

As at 30 September 1987:

(a) 7

(b) 27

Alice Springs Plumbing Inspections

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Mr Speaker, my question is a repeat of a question I asked during the last sittings. I will ask the question first and then seek your guidance and perhaps that of the Chief Minister to find out who should answer it because there is some concern in construction circles in central Australia with respect to it. Will the Northern Territory government appoint a second plumbing inspector in Alice Springs?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the matter is presently being addressed by my department. There are several issues involved. I have had discussions with the Master Builders Association, as has the Assistant Secretary South of the Department of Lands and Housing, in an effort to find an appropriate solution. One plumbing inspector is employed in the Alice Springs region and there is not enough evidence that a second full-time inspector is needed. However, following discussions involving myself, the MBA and the department, we are looking at alternative solutions to the problem. These have been put to the MBA.

The first alternative is to employ a retired or part-time plumber as an inspector to be on call in periods during which there are several applications before the department and the workload is obviously too much for one inspector to handle. The other alternative is to change one of the staff classifications within the department in the southern region to allow for a joint role of building inspector and plumbing inspector and to fill that position with an appropriate person. I discussed the matter with the Assistant Secretary South as recently as yesterday and this morning. I am very aware of the problem and, as soon as we are able to identify a suitable person to fill either position, we will be taking appropriate steps. As I explained during the last sittings, I am very conscious of the concerns being expressed by those people in the industry who are experiencing delays with the inspectorial function at certain times.

I am also pleased to announce a new development in relation to structural engineering matters, which is another issue that I addressed during the last sittings and one which would be of interest to the member for MacDonnell. There were delays in approving some building plans because, in the absence of suitable staff in the southern region, documents had to be sent to Darwin for checking. In order to resolve this problem, tenders have been called from private firms in the structural engineering field in Alice Springs.

I have subsequently advised the department, upon receipt of those tenders, of an appropriate person who will fulfil that function in Alice Springs, thereby negating any further requirement to send plans and drawings to Darwin for checking and approval. That will reduce delays quite significantly and enhance the efficient handling of applications submitted by private industry.

The specific question in respect of the plumbing functions is being addressed. There are 2 options before me at the moment and it is a matter of finding a person for the job. It is simply a question of sorting the matter out and finding an appropriate person.

Northern Territory Business Council

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer him to a recent press statement about a request from an organisation known as the Northern Territory Business Council for a meeting to discuss the state of the Northern Territory economy. I ask the Chief Minister to advise honourable members of the background to this meeting and of what action has been taken to put it into place.

ANSWER

As honourable members have been advised on many occasions, the Northern Territory economy is rapidly changing from what has been described as an economy based on the public sector to one driven by the private sector. There is no doubt that this fundamental change in the nature of the Territory's economy will be beneficial in the medium to long term. However, we should not deny that certain of the changes that we are going through will be painful to at least some sectors of the business community. Painful though they may be, they are producing the desired results. We are moving towards private development and an economy driven by private enterprise, which is the only sustainable base for our economy in the long term.

The Northern Territory government is no longer in the business of underwriting virtually every new business development. Our role is becoming that of a facilitator of private enterprise rather than its financier. The budgetary and structural changes implemented by my government in recent times are bringing about a real and sustainable economy where real jobs and real growth are being created in the private sector.

The government's role in the future will be to work in partnership with commerce and industry to let business get on with business. Our job is to keep taxation and government regulations in check and to help with marketing and promotion, and that is what we have been doing. We have seized the initiative and we are actively promoting the growing range of Territory products, capitalising on our proximity to the markets in South-east Asia.

I would ask honourable members to look at a few of the facts and at what has been occurring, particularly during the last year.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister was asked a question which concerned the Northern Territory Business Council and its request for a meeting. He was asked to supply some background on the Business Council's request and some background on when the meeting might take place. I have no problem with the Chief Minister providing evidence on the state of the Northern Territory economy. In fact, we will provide him with that opportunity today on a matter of public importance. I do not believe that it is appropriate for him to launch that debate in question time.

Mr HATTON: I wish to speak to the point of order, Mr Speaker. If I am to properly answer the honourable member's question concerning the background to and purpose of the meeting with the Northern Territory Business Council, it is important that I give some summary of the situation that has led to this meeting being called. That is my purpose in making these points.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, as I was saying, I would like honourable members to look at a few of the facts about what has been occurring in recent times. Mineral production is about to exceed $1000m, exploration activity is expanding and new mines are opening. There is a boom in offshore gas and oil exploration that promises to outstrip even the tenfold increase of the past 2 years. Tourism has shown phenomenal growth with a 150% increase in international visitors over 4 years. Primary production is steadily increasing its export earnings. Non-residential construction approvals are higher than ever as private developments go up. There is plenty of good news about, news which the doom-and-gloom merchants opposite would have us believe does not exist. But there is no doubt, as I said earlier, that some sectors of the business economy are hurting at the moment.

It is against this background that I was approached by the organisation known as the Northern Territory Business Council which, I might add, was formed only in the last 3 weeks. As a result of that approach, I agreed to a meeting between its representatives and my full ministry.

I would like to address the issue of the formation of the Northern Territory Business Council. I have addressed this House and the public on numerous occasions about our government working with business. Last year, one of the initiatives that was put in place was the formation of an organisation, known as the Business Consultative Committee, which was working with the Minister for Industries and Development. During the last month or 2, there have been discussions between the minister and private sector organisations and it was felt that that structure was not an appropriate means through which to conduct more accurate and substantial discussions between the government and the business community in relation to a number of issues of concern to that community. It was agreed between the Minister for Industries and Development and the business community that we would adopt an alternative structure. That led to the formation of the organisation known as the Northern Territory Business Council, which will allow business to speak directly with ministers rather than working through a government structure. I might say that the Business Consultative Committee involved quite a significant number of senior public servants. The new organisation allows for more direct contact between the ministry and industry representatives.

Following private discussions with business representatives, I can assure honourable members that the intention is certainly to discuss the many difficult problems that are facing the business community as we experience this necessary adjustment to our economy. There is an inevitable shaking-out period and a lot of trauma is arising from that. The intention of the meeting is not simply to outline the problems because I can assure honourable members that the business representatives, together with my ministers, are well aware of those difficulties. What we are hoping to do, and what the organisations are hoping to do, is to sit down together and address positively any initiatives that may need to be taken to improve the method of identifying and easing the burden in this adjustment period.

Arrangements have now been made to hold the meeting next Monday morning. I look forward to this meeting with a group of positive Darwin business people who understand the current economic climate and want to contribute to the economic development of the Northern Territory. Contrary to what certain members of the local press and the economic illiterates opposite would have us believe ...

Mr Smith: At least we do not call them whingers.

Mr HATTON: ... there is no conflict between my government and the business community. I welcome its initiative in forming the Business Council and I can assure you, Mr Speaker, that my government will support and cooperate fully with it.

To respond to the interjection of the Leader of the Opposition, the fact is that many businesses out there are growing and developing at a rapid rate but it is also true that many people in the Northern Territory community have been living in easy times. With massive amounts of government money being pumped into the economy, their businesses and their business psychology have been based upon the assumption that they were operating in a government sheltered workshop, running from one government contract to the next. Those times have changed. If members opposite do not like that, they ought to get stuck into their federal counterparts who have been imposing massive restrictions on the finances available to our government. We are not whingeing about it. We are doing something about it but, in the process, that is hurting Territorians. We will go through the adjustment process and out of it will come a stronger and more vibrant Northern Territory economy.

We will not simply sit back and knock. We are doing it in the face of the continuous and unjustified attacks on the investment environment in the Northern Territory that the opposition have been imposing on us for the last 3 years. Yesterday, we had the Report of the Public Accounts Committee on Actual and Contingent Liabilities which finally has given the lie completely to the opposition's unjustified and unreasonable attacks on the Northern Territory government's contingent and actual liabilities. Members opposite have done untold damage during the last 3 years with their attacks on investor confidence. It has taken a great deal of effort to try to turn that around. With the Leader of the Opposition running around Australia in his new-found desire to make contact with the business community and pretending that it is the first time that it has been done ...

Mr Smith: It has you worried, hasn't it?

Mr HATTON: Not at all, Mr Speaker. I had feedback and I might advise the Leader of the Opposition to do the talking himself next time instead of leaving it to his staff members to undertake discussions with the business community. The business people were quite surprised to find the Leader of the Opposition letting his staff do all the talking. I have no worries at all.

The Leader of the Opposition should get his facts straight before he ventures out. He had no briefings whatsoever on anything that is occurring in the Territory. He did not talk to people in the Northern Territory business community about it. We checked with them and they deny that he made any contact with them about the situation. Lord knows what he said to a number of the people he visited. If he intended to do something positive, he should have done more than merely obtain a bundle of glossy brochures from the Trade Development Zone Authority. He could have obtained some facts and figures to take with him so that he could have drawn attention to some of the initiatives that were occurring.

Mr Smith: The TDZ doesn't put out facts and figures.

Mr HATTON: The Trade Development Zone Authority does put out facts and figures. It is a shame that he did not get a full briefing. Had he done so, he would not have engaged in the unconscionable attack on the first Australian investor to go into the Trade Development Zone. I am talking about Hungerford Refrigeration.

Mr Speaker, we look forward to this meeting with the Northern Territory Business Council and the continuation of discussions with the business community in a more direct manner to address the real problems that are facing the Territory and to work in cooperation towards the building of a real economy. We do not deny that the process of readjustment is painful. It is hurtful but it is absolutely essential that we do it if we are to build a real economy.

Charge for Electrical Inspection

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is it the intent of NTEC to charge $31 for the issue of inspection certificates for work inspected by approved licensed electricians on domestic electrical work?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for Nhulunbuy for his question. In fact, he gave me notice of it through the channel that he normally uses: ABC radio. Unfortunately, the ABC is on strike today and I do not have an update on any questions that will be asked today.

The question relates to self-inspection. In fact, ministerial approval to prepare draft legislation to enable limited self-inspection was obtained on 21 November 1985. Implementation has been delayed during the last couple of years but, in its attempts to cut red tape and allow people to get on with self-inspection, this government has organised a facility by which licensed electricians can carry out their own inspections. This will cut down time delays which are very costly. Waiting for inspectors to arrive can result in considerable expense and add considerably to the cost of a home. The facility will allow licensed electricians to carry out their own inspections. This is not new. In fact, it happens in that very progressive state, the wonderful state of Queensland. I understand that it also occurs in a number of overseas countries. Random inspection of contractors undertaking inspection will be carried out by the Power and Water Authority to ensure that standards are maintained. I believe that it is a step in the right direction. It is an example of this government cutting red tape and allowing people to get on with the job.

Mr Leo: At a cost of $31?

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I previously mentioned the cost of waiting for an inspector to turn up. With the building boom that is still continuing in the Northern Territory, it is difficult to have building, plumbing and electrical inspectors on site when you want them. If you are about to pour concrete for footings and you have a concrete truck and 13 labourers sitting around waiting, $31 pales into insignificance. There are many tradesmen, including plasterers, who would be only too pleased to absorb the $31 to be able to get on with the job. The effect of this initiative will ricochet through the whole industry and it is something that this government can be very proud of.

The requirement for contractors to test their own work will bring us into line with the states in an attempt to improve the general poor standard of electrical installation in the Territory. Consultations are being carried out in relation to how the system will operate and these will continue until 27 November. I understand that there is general acceptance of the move throughout the industry.

Charge for Electrical Inspection

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Mr Speaker, I have a supplementary question. The minister has not yet told the House whether or not the fee is to be $31. Could he also confirm, for the sake of the House and the populace of the Northern Territory, that the fee will not be levied only on new houses but will in fact be levied on all electrical work that requires inspection within the Northern Territory.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, let me return to the first question and give some very definite answers. I do not know where the honourable member gets his information from. I thought that he was fairly clued up on this issue but obviously somebody has recently given him the wrong drum. The decision will apply only to domestic installations.

Mr Leo: For all domestic installations, not just new work?

Mr COULTER: You said all electrical work in your supplementary question. You should get your questions right or accept the answers that are given.

The first inspection fee is proposed to be $31. That fee currently applies to subsequent inspections. We are trying to remove that impost and, if the member for Nhulunbuy cannot see the advantages of this move, he has a problem.

Efficient Management of the Public Service

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Mr Speaker, there has been a great deal of recent comment about the efficient management of the public service. What steps has he taken to improve the efficient management of the public service and to link functions of the public service more closely to the business sector?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is a very good question. As the member for Port Darwin pointed out, there has been considerable comment recently in the press about the public service and this has had a very unsettling effect on public servants, more so than any changes in administrative arrangements. In the last issue of the Sunday Territorian, the Secretary of the ACOA, Rod Ellis, commented extensively on the Northern Territory Public Service, all of which can be refuted. I am rather surprised that somebody of Mr Ellis' standing would do that. We all read recently in the Northern Territory News that even Frank Alcorta believes that Rod Ellis is a man of some standing and common sense but it is quite apparent to me that, once again, Frank has got it wrong.

In answering the question, I would like first to advise the Assembly that all departmental structures have been approved. The establishments for all departments are controlled by section 26 of the Public Service Act and have been approved by Executive Council, and our departments are functioning very well. As you would be aware, Mr Speaker, there has been a review of upper-level structures recently and we have initiated a review of levels from A1 to E3. That commenced last week and has also been the subject of considerable recent media comment. Much has been made of the fact that we are carrying out a review. This is the first major review of the Northern Territory Public Service since 1978 and I would have thought that everyone would have welcomed such a review, not the least public servants. In fact, I am aware that many public servants are very glad that we have initiated this review.

There is no doubt that, in some areas of the public service, classifications have got out of kilter. We have established a group comprising senior personnel people in the major departments and a representative of the Trades and Labor Council. This was decided by Cabinet some weeks ago and the review is under way. It will be completed early in the new year. Following that, we will have a far better structure than we have had in the past - one that does have some equity across the board.

Mr Speaker, the subject of the question asked by the member for Port Darwin is one that is very important to me: the ability to make the public service interact better with the private sector. Much of what we have done in the last few months, for the first time, has brought the public service into closer interaction with the private sector. The first of those actions was taken by the Chief Minister in March when he created the Ministry of Labour and Administrative Services. In this case, 'Labour' means employment - far from what is suggested by the name of the party of the members opposite, this is something positive. Labour in this case is something positive: employment. Employment in the Northern Territory is a big part of this government's initiative. We are working to get people employed. In respect of buildings like the Beaufort Hotel, the Sheratons and the casinos, we hear knocking from members opposite, but every one of those projects has created employment in the Territory - employment that would not exist if we had had a Labor government.

One of the results of our actions this year was the removal of an anomaly in respect of recreational air fares. In the past, recreational air fares have not been available for intra-Territory travel for holidays. We were unable, for example, to provide a recreational air fare for an employee in Darwin who wanted to take his holiday in Alice Springs. The holidays had to be taken interstate. I have removed that obstacle and employees entitled to a return air fare to Adelaide can use the value of that air fare to travel within the Territory. That policy has been in place since August. That will create the ability for people from within the Territory to travel around the Territory, to stay in our Territory hotels and to use our Territory facilities instead of taking their holidays either in Asia or interstate. I believe many people will avail themselves of that opportunity. That is one way in which our policies have impacted on the private sector.

Our policy to use office accommodation built by the private sector is another example. The majority of our public servants are housed in buildings built by the private sector, operated by the private sector, maintained by the private sector and cleaned by the private sector. That is creating jobs. We do not have a policy of building our own monuments. We use buildings built by the private sector and we create employment by that means. That again is an example of interaction.

It has been my hope that a Department of Labour and Administrative Services would be developed within the current ministry. The Chief Minister has told me that he has approved that and I am very pleased that we will be developing a Department of Labour and Administrative Services. The emphasis will be on employment. Within that departmental structure, I have developed the ability to get out there, search out jobs and to employ people. I have placed a strong emphasis on the ability to employ people in Aboriginal communities and in the non-urban communities of the Territory. That ought to please the members opposite but, of course, they will find a reason to knock it and to make it as hard as possible for people to be employed in those places. However, I am sure the members for Arnhem and Arafura will applaud that initiative.

In the development of a Department of Labour and Administrative Services, a strong emphasis will be put on providing services to the private sector in occupational health and safety, industrial relations and employment and training for our young Territorians. The initiatives that we are developing in that regard will go a long way towards overcoming our growing problem of unemployment in non-urban areas. 70% of our Aboriginal population is in non-urban areas - areas of high unemployment. That is a question that I intend to address and to overcome in my position as Minister for Labour and Administrative Services. Again, that will impact on the private sector.

A review of the Government Printing Office is currently under way. The Government Printing Office has operated at a loss for a long time - not a major loss but at a loss - and in competition with the private sector. We have much of our printing work undertaken by the private sector and we are reviewing our current operations at the Government Printing Office. It is my view that, in time, we will develop the ability to have the private sector handle most of the work that that particular facility is carrying out at present.

There is one other matter that I should comment on and that is the reduction in air fares for new recruits and the reductions in Territory allowance following our negotiations with the TLC. That has brought about a better equality with the private sector. We are no longer competing with the private sector in terms of providing allowances and air fares that it could not afford. The private sector in the Northern Territory is now on an equal footing with the public sector in being able to provide those sorts of conditions to employees. It is clear to me that, in the last 6 months or more, we have developed a range of areas that will assist the private sector in the Northern Territory and put in place the Chief Minister's and this government's initiative to create a private-sector-run economy.

Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Mr Speaker, I ask the Minister for Community Services and Health if he will confirm that, prior to the establishment of the Darwin Private Hospital, the Royal Darwin Hospital had 46 public maternity beds available and now has only 22 beds available to public patients or private patients seeking a bed in the public sector hospital with a doctor of their own choice?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, perhaps I could correct the honourable member on 2 points. I am the Minister for Health and Community Services. The Minister for Community Services and Health is the one who has to sign that declaration later this morning. It is not true that we had 46 public beds in the midwifery area. We had 46 beds available for public and private patients at the Royal Darwin Hospital. It is true that it is proposed that the number of beds in that particular area will be reduced to 23 at the appropriate time. I must stress that I have the capacity in the Royal Darwin Hospital to have 48 beds in that particular area if they are required. I stress the point that that is without taking into account the 64 beds that are available in the private wards at the Royal Darwin Hospital. We can have a capacity there of 64 beds plus 48 beds if we need it.

The matter of admission to the private hospital has been raised a number of times. I do not know whether all honourable members are aware that one does not book into a hospital in the same way as one books into an hotel. People are admitted to a hospital via a doctor, specialist or whatever. It is the responsibility of those professional people to counsel according to the requirements, either medical or financial, of each patient. It is their responsibility to point those patients in the right direction as far as their hospital care is concerned. It is not a matter for the staff at the Royal Darwin Hospital or, for that matter, the Darwin Private Hospital to direct people or counsel people on where they ought to go. I stress that, in the past, it has been the habit that doctors or specialists have merely sent their patients along to the hospital and, because of the dedication of the hospital staff in the admissions area, the requirements of those patients have been catered for. That system definitely will change and the responsibility will rest squarely on the shoulders of the professionals in having their patients admitted to whatever hospital they see fit.

Territory Loan No 14

Mr DONDAS to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, last week, the Treasurer announced he was seeking to have the Territory Loan No 14 extended from $40m to $48m and that this needed approval from the federal Treasurer. Given that the loan subscription closed last Friday, can he advise whether the extension was approved and whether the loan was fully subscribed?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Casuarina for his question. In brief, the answer is yes in every respect to that question but I believe that it requires a fuller response. It became apparent from the enthusiastic level of public response to Territory Loan No 14 that the $40m target that we had set would be reached comfortably well before the subscription date expired. Given the rate of response, approval was sought from the federal Treasurer for expansion of the loan from $40m to $48m and I am grateful that Mr Keating responded promptly in the affirmative. A range of investors and ladies with piggy-banks were willing to contribute more money. This loan was oversubscribed very early in its life and the $48m was easily obtained as well.

Since the Leader of the Opposition has had his charisma implant and has learnt that things are going pretty well in the Territory and one doesn't need to knock anything, he should learn about confidence that is available and which is being displayed through the Territory loan. If this doom and gloom exists and people are so worried about lack of confidence in the Northern Territory, why were we able to obtain oversubscription of $8m on a $40m loan?

Mr Smith: After the stock market crash?

Mr COULTER: Ah, the stock market crash! There would have to be something negative that the Leader of the Opposition would find. He could not admit that things were going all right. I think he needs a tune-up on his charisma implant because it is starting to slip and the real Leader of the Opposition shows through. It is so transparent. It will bring him undone eventually because he will never change. He will knock everything that he gets the opportunity to knock and he will never concede that anything is going well. Honourable members on this side of the Assembly are aware of that and I believe the public at large will soon see through that thin disguise of a new image which the opposition is trying to create around him.

The loan offered attractive and highly-competitive rates of up to 13.6% and, of course, that is another reason why there was considerable confidence in it. It won the endorsement of several well-known investment advisers, but it also demonstrated a gratifying public faith in the Territory and its future at a time when there were plenty of pessimists standing on their soapboxes preaching the end of civilisation as we now know it. For example, there was the member for Barkly's astonishing writings about the possibility of a Commonwealth takeover of the Territory. Who would have ever thought we would hear it?

Honourable members will be interested to hear that the Northern Territory Treasury is undertaking a survey of the subscribers to Loan No 14 to establish a profile of these investors in the Territory and I think the Leader of the Opposition would be interested in the results of that survey. He could call on them too. The only proviso would be that I doubt if they would give him their names so that he would be able to speak to them. That would be consistent with the attitude of the business representatives that he visited recently.

Indications are that surprisingly large numbers of subscribers are Territorians themselves, and that is something that I am very pleased about. If the salt-of-the-earth Territory people are choosing to invest their savings in Territory bonds, that is the best answer to the pessimists that I can imagine. One interjection by the honourable member for Stuart was that they are leaving at a rate of 1000 a week. That interjection was not picked up but I heard him make it.

Mr Ede: A month.

Mr COULTER: A week it was but, anyway, a month. The members for Fannie Bay, Arnhem and Arafura and myself have said many times, if it reaches the point where there are only 2 people living in the Northern Territory, 1 of them will be me. I believe that confidence in the Northern Territory still exists. We were built on hard times in the Northern Territory and we will continue to progress and develop. Territory Loan No 14 and the oversubscription that has supplied $48m for development of the Northern Territory is only one example of the confidence that stills remains despite the attempts of the Leader of the Opposition and members opposite to knock the Territory at every possible opportunity.

NTGPASS

Mr COLLINS to TREASURER

Why did the Northern Territory government set up its own superannuation scheme when, as we heard yesterday, we inherited a $120m liability from the Commonwealth and have an ongoing, accumulating debt of, according to the member for Stuart, around $20m and, according to the Minister for Industries and Development, $50m?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is a good question. Yesterday, we passed the Superannuation Amendment Bill and that was a good opportunity to talk about that. However, because we do not like to go back over hard times and we do not like continually to knock the Commonwealth, I did not use that opportunity. However, honourable members will be aware of the activities of the Minister for Finance, Senator Walsh. Mr Speaker, you may remember that there was very little choice at the time about our accepting or not accepting that particular burden. In fact, it was thrust upon us.

Mr Collins: You could have accepted.

Mr COULTER: Well, we could have. Another option would have been interesting. If, at the time, those transferees had accepted a payout of their benefits, it would have bankrupted the Commonwealth system because it would not have had the money to pay them. That would have been a very interesting scenario at that stage. I forget the exact figures but I will get the detailed information and the timing of how it happened for the honourable member. I do not have that in my head at the moment but it makes very interesting reading indeed to see the amount of money that would have had to be paid out.

We found that we had a liability to Territorians, to people who had set up their homes despite the fact that some Commonwealth departments would not sell them houses and allow them to put down roots in the Northern Territory. We were not prepared to desert those Territorians who had spent a considerable time in the Northern Territory and we were not prepared to walk away from them as the Commonwealth was.

Premiums for Workers' Compensation

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Has the Work Health Act had any effect on workers' compensation premiums currently being charged by insurers?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can give an answer to the member for Jingili. The Work Health Act has resulted in across-the-board reductions in all classes of occupational rates by the approved insurers. All rates have been reduced by at least 10% before discounts for good safety records are taken into account. The building industry, in particular, has benefited significantly from the new work health measures as rates for that industry have been reduced from the previous level of 18.2% to as low as 11.1%, which is a reduction of up to 38%. General farm rates have dropped from 9.2% to as low as 4.3%, a reduction of 53%. The authority's information base will allow for identification of hazardous workplaces which can then be targeted for remedial action in cooperation with employers and workers.

Such measures should ensure that costs associated with workers' compensation are kept to a minimum. They put the lie to many accusations which have been made and claims by the opposition and the TLC that our system would not work and that we should use the Victorian system. I do not need to highlight the problems with the Victorian system. It is in the red by at least $500m and is going down the drain at a great rate of knots. Nevertheless, people like Mr Tullgren of the TLC continue to say at meetings of the Work Health Authority's advisory council, of which he is a member, that we should adopt the Victorian model. How ridiculous!

Prison Trust Accounts

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Mr Speaker, my question concerns the trust accounts in the names of the prisons in the Top End. I know there is a trust account for the Gunn Point Prison Farm. Why isn't there a trust account for Darwin Prison and Beatrice Hill Prison? Also, can the minister give me details of the general prison industries trust account?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, rather than give the honourable member details which may not be sufficient to fully answer her question, I will take the question on notice and supply her with the details.

METAL Training Scheme

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Mr Speaker, can the minister advise if and when the METAL training scheme, which has been so successful in Darwin, will be expanded to include the Alice Springs region?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Araluen raised this matter during the last sittings. Unfortunately, I was not able to give him any good news then although honourable members will recall that I was well aware of the clear and justifiable need for such a program.

We are talking about young lives. About 80% of young Australians who ride motor bikes require ambulance treatment as a result of accidents in their first year of riding. Community-based training programs interstate, in which young riders are given appropriate levels of training, have led to reductions of as much as 45% in accident rates. Unfortunately, because of the constraints on government when making budget decisions earlier this year, the extension of the METAL program to Alice Springs was not funded. However, that did not stop us from going ahead with some planning, identification of appropriate sites and some training of personnel to eventually conduct the program. I am delighted to say that, as a result of some efficiencies and cost savings within the Department of Transport and Works, we are able now to allocate $127 000 towards a building for the METAL program in Alice Springs. I am sure that, if it saves only 1 life, it will be well justified.

I mentioned efficiencies and savings in the Department of Transport and Works. We have heard a fair bit about poor morale in the public service. I can tell you, Mr Speaker, that I have visited at least 90% of my departmental staff in their various places of work to see what they are doing and to talk with them about meeting the challenges of this new era in which we have to do more with less. I can say quite frankly that morale is extremely high and I think that is a result of meeting the challenge of having to do things better. I am sure that, apart from METAL, we will be able to find ways of supporting additional programs. The Treasurer is glaring at me but I am sure other things can be accomplished.

We are not saving the money only through administrative measures. I mention administrative savings as being the source of funds for METAL. Like other departments, we have been reducing staff on a voluntary basis and staff numbers were to be reduced from 1440 to 1380 by Christmas. My department has not only met that target but surpassed it whilst continuing to provide an adequate level of service. I believe we have 20 fewer employees in the department than the number targeted for January and that is excellent. We have also reviewed the way we do things. A review of construction standards is already having some results. We now have a new method of constructing school buildings and other community buildings which involves a capacity for relocation. That means that, apart from an initial 10% saving in construction costs, long-term benefits will be far greater. In the context of constraints on the department and the reduction of staff levels, as well as the media hype, it is rewarding to talk with staff at the coalface and to see their enthusiasm for getting things done efficiently and effectively. The Department of Transport and Works is quietly getting on with its job of providing appropriate infrastructure so that the private sector can continue its economic growth.

Mr Speaker, I am sure that we will see the benefits of the METAL program in Alice Springs and, more importantly, of the savings which the Department of Transport and Works is making in its drive for greater efficiency.

Performance Incentives for Chief Executive Officers

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Can he confirm that a Cabinet submission has been prepared by the Office of the Public Service Commissioner which canvasses performance incentives for Chief Executive Officers of between 10% and 45% of salary and which also recommends that low-interest loans be made available to Chief Executive Officers and that annual air fares be made available to Chief Executive Officers and their families?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it sounds like another beat-up to me. Even if a Cabinet submission were being prepared, it would be inappropriate to speak of it here today. If it is a matter for Cabinet, it goes to Cabinet before it goes anywhere else. However, to put the mind of the Leader of the Opposition at rest, there is no such Cabinet submission being prepared.

Horticultural Industry

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In a ministerial statement in July, he foreshadowed additional assistance for the horticultural industry in the Territory. Is he able to advise what assistance is proposed, particularly in relation to marketing and training?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the government takes the horticultural industry, as it does all other industries, very seriously. The Katherine region is emerging continuously as one of the big players in the Northern Territory's horticultural and grain industries. Recently, as a result of the representations made to the government by the Horticultural Advisory Committee, we have taken up its suggestion and instituted a position whereby the government will be offering 2 horticultural scholarships in 1988 and encouraging promising young Territorians to take up a field of study in agriculture and horticulture. The scholarships will be for courses commencing at Northern Territory tertiary institutions and then flowing through into southern universities in due course. Hopefully, in this way, we can commence in a small way at least a stream of Territorians becoming professionals in what is a very exciting industry for the Northern Territory and one which has a very big future.

Major research is done on cropping in the Douglas-Daly Research Station. However, we are working on ways to develop more research capability in the Katherine region. At this stage, we do not have an experimental farm in Katherine. Some years ago, the current Katherine Rural College was a government research farm in that region. However, there is other land available in the region. The department likes to do some trial cropping on land under the control of farmers but monitored and sponsored by the government.

We are also proposing, as opportunities arise, to transfer some of the positions - not necessarily the people, depending on their wishes - in our horticultural section from the Darwin region to the Katherine region because there is a need to boost resources in the Katherine region. We will be doing that within the resources of the department by relocating positions within our structure.

The government recently launched the 'Territory Fresh' sticker, a small sticker which has been developed for retailers to place on quality Territory produce as it reaches the shelves of shops and supermarkets. This sticker is to be used by those retailers solely on top quality local produce. We are trying to identify for consumers in the Northern Territory produce which is produced here. Many Territorians no doubt would not be aware of the very wide range of top quality fruit and vegetables produced in the Northern Territory, particularly during the dry season. Many of them probably think that the goods on the shelves come from interstate. Even strawberries are produced in the Northern Territory on a commercial scale yet very few Territorians would appreciate that fact.

The 'Territory Fresh' sticker is to be used to try to encourage Territorians to buy Territorian and we hope that that will be a big success. It will depend largely on the attention and attitude of retailers. Retailers' shelves can be monitored to ensure that the sticker is placed only on top quality Territory fruit and vegetables. I hope I receive reports if ever the sticker is seen on any other fruit and vegetables or produce that is not of top quality. We would then propose to withdraw usage of the stickers from that particular store. We are the only people printing and distributing them.

As a result of input to the government by the Horticultural Advisory Committee, we propose to establish next year a database of information on prices and quantities of fruit and vegetables that is relevant to Northern Territory growers. Currently, we are gathering information as to how we might go about that in order that Territory farmers will have regular, up-to-date information on the quantities of goods being sold, the demand, where demand can be forecast, and certainly the prices on various interstate markets so they can make sales choices themselves in the Northern Territory. The government is doing a great deal to assist the horticultural industry and the Katherine region will play a big role in this regard.

Restricted Areas Inquiry Report

Mr EDE to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, on our latest advice, the Treasurer is still responsible for racing, gaming and liquor and I refer him to his reply on the Liquor Amendment Bill during the last sittings where he stated that the d'Abbs Report, the Restricted Areas Inquiry Report, was being given the very highest priority. Is it his intention to table that document today or tomorrow and give us the opportunity to debate it during these sittings?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the answer is yes. It will be tabled during these sittings.

Funding for Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr TUXWORTH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Mr Speaker, in view of the fact that the federal Minister for Community Services and Health has taken a very difficult and arbitrary approach towards the Northern Territory's licensing of the hospital, has the minister received from the federal minister any undertaking at all that funding to the Royal Darwin Hospital - and I am talking about the base funding for the operation of the hospital - will not be cut or affected in any way as a result of the Northern Territory government's diminution of beds and control of beds in that hospital?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the agreements relevant to funding the Royal Darwin Hospital were put in place in February 1984 and, in fact, expired in June 1987. Despite the information the opposition has been fed through Dr Blewett's office - obviously originating from persons up here in the health area who have a particular aim in mind - there has been ongoing negotiation at departmental level for the renegotiation of that funding for this year. In fact, the previous agreement has been extended by negotiation to June or July of 1988. The reason for that extension was to enable negotiations relating to changes resulting from the private hospital to be taken into consideration and an appropriate funding level finalised. We did not have a specific written agreement from the minister as to what the funding would be in the future. Obviously, it is still under negotiation. We did have full knowledge at officer level of the negotiations and the financial agreements at the time. They are in place. Renegotiations are under way and the department has always been fully aware of that.

Pearl Shell Resources

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he advise when the untapped pearl shell resources in the Northern Territory waters will be exploited?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to inform the Assembly of those details. The re-exploitation of the pearling industry in the Northern Territory has been under examination for some time. As honourable members will be aware,

25 years or more ago, the Northern Territory had quite a substantial pearling industry. Before we opened it up once again for export, we wanted to be careful that we did not fall into a trap, as has happened in some other fisheries such as the northern prawn fishery and the barramundi industry, where the numbers of licences issued placed such a strain on the resource that governments were forced to buy some back. In the case of the pearl industry, the same principles apply. The resource renews itself naturally and can sustain a certain degree of harvesting without affecting the base resource.

A working group of Commonwealth and Northern Territory officials has now provided a draft development plan for the pearl industry. The Commonwealth is very much involved in this process because it has constitutional control over coastal waters from 3 to 250 miles offshore, which is the zone wherein most of the pearl resources will reside. The goal of the development plan is to develop a pearl culture in the Northern Territory based on shell collected in waters adjacent to the Territory. The plan has been accepted in principle and the Commonwealth minister has been requested to confirm that he is prepared to enter into the administrative arrangements necessary for the Northern Territory to administer that offshore area on behalf of the Commonwealth, in respect of the pearl shell industry. I am pleased to advise honourable members that the federal minister indicated yesterday that he is prepared to approve the pearl shell development plan and to allow the Northern Territory to administer that particular fishery.

A package of information and a draft advertisement have been prepared and will form the basis of an invitation to prospective participants in the pearl shell industry in the Territory. There are 2 current licences for the taking of pearl oysters in the Commonwealth waters off the Northern Territory. These licences will terminate at the end of this calendar year. No doubt, those operators will reapply for the more permanent licences which will be issued next year. The closing date for expressions of interest is proposed to be 15 February 1988. A date has been determined for selection of participants and licensing will take place on about 15 April 1988.

I am sure honourable members will join me in closely watching the development of the pearl industry in the Northern Territory. Licensees will be able to take some mother-of-pearl, as the shell is known, but the prime purpose of the licences will be the development of a cultured pearl industry in the Northern Territory by harvesting young pearl shell and establishing cultured pearl farms. Honourable members will be aware that we have one successful cultured pearl project here which has been run for many years by the Paspaley family. That particular farm has used young pearl shell harvested in Western Australia. In the future, however, we hope that Northern Territory pearl shell will produce some of the biggest and most valuable pearls in the world, as has occurred with the shell from Western Australia.

Outbreak of Meningitis

Mr EDE to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is he aware of the outbreak of meningitis over our borders in Western Australia and South Australia? The health service there is conducting a mass vaccination program. What is he doing for the citizens of the Northern Territory in that area? Is he aware that the ceremonial travel from that area up through central Australia is about to start and therefore the matter is of some urgency?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am aware of all of the matters that the honourable member has mentioned. I have called for a full report from the department.

Site of New Dam for Darwin

Mr FIRMIN to TREASURER

Has the government determined where the new water reservoir for Darwin and its environs will be built?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as members would be aware, the question of where to build a new water reservoir for Darwin and to serve the needs of the budding horticultural industry and the aquacultural industry has been around for some 10 years. In the last several months, I have talked to various resident groups in Adelaide River, Batchelor and Berry Springs and put to them the options available to government at some of the sites that have been identified for the development of such a facility.

The first preference was for the dam to be built in the Batchelor region and I had a meeting with the Batchelor residents. Engineers from the Power and Water Authority worked very hard to produce a feasibility study for the development of the reservoir in that particular catchment area. I can inform honourable members that I have taken to Cabinet this week an interim report on the proposal to build the Batchelor dam and the results of that report suggest to me that the Batchelor dam should be deferred and that the Warrai dam at Adelaide River should be investigated as the preferred option.

The issue there is whether or not it is feasible in terms of engineering to develop a dam in that particular region. There is also another issue which needs to be resolved in that there are 2 sacred sites in the Warrai Valley. Of course, we have commenced negotiations with the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority to address the issues involved with the sacred sites in that region. I can inform honourable members that Power and Water Authority engineers will be out in the Warrai Valley. We have the advantage of having some core samples that were taken from the region in 1980-81 and we will be reporting back to Cabinet at a very early stage on the development of the Warrai dam and the 2 issues that have been identified: whether or not it is feasible in terms of engineering to build the dam in this location and whether or not the issues involved with the sacred sites in that area can be resolved. I am anxious to bring this to a head and to make a decision because it will affect several investments in the region. Many millions of dollars have been invested at Tumbling Waters, Acacia Gap, the Marrakai Crossing area, the Finnis River, Batchelor and the Adelaide River area.

I have said in this Assembly, in reply to a question from the member for Koolpinyah, that the government is aware of the rambutan plantations and the pastoral improvements that have occurred in the region of the proposed dam site at Batchelor. The Warrai dam site involves another problem. There are exploration licences over that particular region and we are having discussions with the Department of Mines and Energy and the miner involved so that he may start drilling to determine whether there are minerals to be exploited in the area before we flood it. We are also talking to Bill Doyle from Camp Creek who would be the landholder most affected in that area.

As I said, I am keen to bring this matter to a satisfactory resolution as fast as I possibly can because of the the possible effect on the livelihood and investments of people. Many people are now refraining from further development in the region as a result of the government's announcement that it would look at potential dam sites in the area. Nobody wants to build a new house only to find that it will be under 30 ft of water shortly afterwards. I am anxious to come to a decision on this issue to allow development to proceed as quickly as possible. I will keep the House fully informed on developments in this matter.

I would like to thank the people from the Department of Lands and Housing and the employees of the Water Directorate for the haste with which they are addressing this issue. It is to their credit that they have been able to assemble the interim report and present it to Cabinet in such a short time. Although it is some 30 days outside of the time frame which I outlined in an undertaking at the Batchelor meeting, sometimes ministers are a little impatient and attempt to resolve issues faster than is possible. I believe that both the Department of Lands and the Water Directorate have pulled all stops out to address this particular issue. I congratulate them and I appreciate their efforts.

Proposals to Dam Elizabeth and Blackmore Rivers

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

In his answer to the previous question, the minister mentioned proposed dam sites that were being investigated. Could he tell me if investigations are to be carried on in relation to constructing a dam at the mouth of the Elizabeth River or at the mouth of the Blackmore River at Haycock's Reach?

ANSWER

Honourable members may be aware that, many years ago, one Phil Purich was in charge of water resources in the Northern Territory. He was very innovative and carried out many water projects in the Northern Territory. The member for Koolpinyah is very close to him.

The proposal to dam the Blackmore River at its mouth, where it is very wide, was discussed some 15 years ago. Another proposal which the Department of Lands is currently investigating and which would be of some benefit, although the people of Palmerston may desire some compensation, is the damming of the Elizabeth River. Given adequate compensation, I am sure that the people of Palmerston would be only too willing to allow that dam to go ahead. It could have a dual function as both a water supply and a recreational lake and the department is examining that. I am unaware of the status of the Blackmore River proposal but I know the investigation of the Palmerston proposal is well-advanced. It would also provide fresh water in a very short time indeed. I understand that salinity would practically disappear in the first year or perhaps 2 years.

Of course, detailed feasibility studies would be carried out before such a dam was built. Filtering and pumping stations would be required and these cost $22m to build, with electricity costs of about $750 000 per year. There would also be investigation of possible uses for the foreshores of any lake which was created. I will obtain information for the member for Koolpinyah on the work that was carried out some 15 years ago by Mr Kingston in relation to the Blackmore. I would also like to re-examine those proposals myself. I hope that the Blackmore option could also be looked at in terms of its feasibility and cost-effectiveness in providing water for the people of Darwin.

We need to make a decision on a dam proposal for Darwin. I believe construction would have to commence in approximately the mid-1990s to enable us to meet potential demand. The Department of Lands and Housing is looking at a dam which is an 85-year facility able to cater for a population of 1 million. Honourable members may think that we are looking too far into the distant future but I believe it is a visionary approach. Our immediate short-term needs, however, have to be met by the mid- to late-1990s. Any proposal that can cater for those needs should be fully investigated. The disadvantage of both the Elizabeth and Blackmore Rivers, of course, is that it would not be possible to release water downstream for horticultural use although it may open up some possibilities for aquacultural use.

Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody

Mr HARRIS to CHIEF MINISTER

Is the Northern Territory government making a contribution to the Royal Commission into Aboriginal Deaths in Custody and, if so, is he able to indicate what the amount of that contribution will be?

ANSWER

I can advise the honourable member that our government has been approached by the Commonwealth government which has proposed a cost-sharing arrangement whereby the Territory would provide instructing solicitors and support staff to the royal commission. It would be premature to commit the resources contemplated until such time as the extent of the inquiry is known because of the possibility of the commission being over-resourced in the Territory. The Territory will provide court facilities and also reporting facilities if required, but it is considered inappropriate that the Territory meet the cost of providing transcripts. The Territory will bear the cost of its officials required to appear before the commission and does not consider the Commonwealth responsible for providing legal assistance to Territory officials.

The Territory government welcomes the commission and believes it can achieve much in addressing the concerns that all Australians have about this particular problem. As to the specifics of the dollars associated with the cost, these are matters which have not been finalised between the Commonwealth and ourselves. Cost-sharing arrangements between the states, the Territory and the Commonwealth will resolve themselves over the next few weeks.

Darwin Private Hospital Fees

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Mr Speaker, Mr Russell Schneider of the Voluntary Health Insurance Association of Australia said this morning on ABC radio that the Darwin Private Hospital charges are much higher than in many other places in Australia. He said:

And I am of the view it would be cheaper for my members to fly their sick contributors to Adelaide or Brisbane, have them treated there and then fly them back. And maybe we will look at doing that.

Has the honourable minister involved himself in discussions with the Darwin Private Hospital on the setting of its fees and is he satisfied that appropriate fee schedules have been established by the Darwin Private Hospital?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the discussions in relation to the private hospital were always based on whether or not the proposition was viable. We have a major company in Australia involved in the construction and the management of this particular private hospital and it is its commercial decision that it can run the hospital on a profitable basis. Obviously, there has been considerable concern about the charges that will be implemented by the private entrepreneur. Negotiations have been continuing with the various insurance companies so that the gap between the amount charged by the hospital and the amount recoverable from the insurance company is down to a reasonable level. I am advised that the level is now down to about $10 or $12 which is the average throughout Australia. At one stage, it looked like being about $80 or $90 and that, of course, would not have been acceptable to the consumer. If it were not acceptable to the consumer, he would not go to the private hospital and it would go broke. It is a business matter that is negotiated between the private hospital and the insurance companies and I am sure that they have arrived at an equitable level. The concern for the consumer is that the moiety be no more than $10 or $12.

Proposed Amalgamation of University College and DIT

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Mr Speaker, my question refers to statements from the federal member for the Northern Territory, Warren Snowdon, about the amalgamation of the University College with the Darwin Institute of Technology. Has the minister received any details of such a proposal?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for the question and I certainly hope that honourable members opposite will agree with me when I say that the honourable Mr Snowdon's performance on the matter has been nothing less than farcical. The first I heard of Mr Snowdon's much-vaunted proposal was when he issued a press release after speaking in the House of Representatives to the Students Assistance Amendment Bill on 19 November. In that press release, Mr Snowdon called on the Northern Territory government to carefully consider a federal government proposal to amalgamate the Northern Territory University College and the Darwin Institute of Technology. My immediate reaction was to ask: what proposal? The Northern Territory government has not received any such proposal from the federal government nor have we received any official indication from the federal Minister for Employment, Education and Training that such a proposal might be on its way.

The matter became a little clearer after reading the speech Mr Snowdon made in the federal parliament when it was revealed that the so-called proposal was being prepared by the Commonwealth Tertiary Education Commission - which I think honourable members would realise is soon to be replaced - for the federal minister who, according to Mr Snowdon, has yet to consider it. I would ask honourable members to consider that scenario for a few minutes. Mr Snowdon is asking this government to consider a proposal that we have not yet received, that we do not know exists and which, apparently, has not even been considered by the federal minister even though, supposedly, he is to put it to us. Obviously, that is a patently absurd statement to have made.

Mr Speaker, let me make something very clear. I am certainly not closing the door on anything the federal government may put to us in this regard. Indeed, I have written to the federal minister asking him to inform me whether or not any such proposal actually exists and, if it does, to send me details as soon as possible. I would like to make it very clear that this government will not accept any proposal which compromises the future of Northern Territory students at either the University College or the DIT. I will repeat that: we will not accept any proposal which will compromise students of either institution.

In saying that, I must express my disappointment and, I suppose, my disgust at the way in which Mr Snowdon has attempted to undermine the basis for any further discussions on the matter. One of the throwaway lines in Mr Snowdon's press release, which he was very quick to abandon, was that students at the University College 'are currently suffering from a lack of teaching staff and morale'. I think the Warden of the University College has very effectively and officially scotched those allegations. Indeed, our teaching-staff-to-student ratios are extremely good. I would also like to point out that the only person who has lowered morale amongst students at the University College is Mr Snowdon himself because he made those comments and accusations during examination time. It is pretty easy to imagine how students would have felt going into quite intense exams when the question of their future had been raised in a statement by the federal member. I reiterate that students at the University College and the DIT certainly have nothing to fear in that regard.

I do not intend to run through the whole history of the issue but I would like to make one point in regard to the amalgamation proposal, and I will quote from Mr Snowdon's speech to the federal parliament on 19 November:

The fact is the Northern Territory government could have had almost everything it asked for, with Commonwealth funding, if it had only agreed to it through the Darwin Institute of Technology, the established tertiary education venue in Darwin. The Territory government was told that, if it placed the university campus at the Darwin Institute of Technology, it would receive the necessary capital funds and that recurrent costs per student would be made available.

It is amazing that that allegation could be made by Mr Snowdon. To say it is 'untrue' would be a massive understatement - 'malicious slander' would be closer to the mark. In fact, the Territory government was told nothing of the sort. We were told that we could have a maximum of 20 university places at DIT a year, spread over 3 years. Not 1¢ of capital funding was ever offered. I can assure honourable members that, had CTEC suggested that such arrangements could have been put in place for a reasonable number of university students at the DIT - and I remind honourable members that there are more than 200 students presently at the University College in its inaugural year and they are doing courses that are recognised throughout the country as being first class - I would have been very happy to negotiate for joint use of the DIT site. However, CTEC refused to budge from its stance of 20 places or nothing. We went through some rather exciting periods and abuse was heaped on officers of the Territory government by the Chairman of CTEC during that period.

We now see that more than $7m of federal funding is going towards a building at DIT simply to cater for present demand. That was something that was needed desperately, and it has been catered for. However, that is simply for the students that are presently there and for the administrative needs of that institute. I wonder how much luck we would have had in obtaining another $5m to put in university-level laboratories at DIT, another $1m for temporary accommodation for 1 year and funds to expand the library which would have been under extreme pressure.

I reiterate that I am willing to discuss any reasonable proposal that is put to me by the federal government regarding our tertiary education. It is worth noting that, if the Territory had received university funding on a per capita basis equal to the rest of Australia, no more and no less, we would have received $12.2m this year. Something is wrong when Territory students are not treated equally with other Australians. We are used to it but it rankles and we continue to fight for equality in this country. However, there is no avoiding the conclusion that the Northern Territory federal member has behaved abysmally on this matter. I certainly hope that, in future, he represents Territorians in the federal House and not simply the minority views of certain people in his party who are thousands of miles away.

Recognition of Aboriginals at Arltunga

Mr BELL to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Mr Speaker, I refer the minister to a letter that appeared in the Centralian Advocate from Irene Sandy and other students at Yirara College expressing concerns that park interpretation at Arltunga does not include any recognition of the importance of Aboriginal people at Arltunga. In that letter, she says:

I think Arltunga history about the miners is all right but it is missing out something. What about the Aboriginal people? They were there before the miners and nothing is said about them in the history. The Conservation Commission should recognise the importance of the Aborigines at Arltunga. It should put signposts and have the Aboriginal history included in the visitors guide and in the pamphlets.

What efforts have been put in train by the Conservation Commission to remedy this shortcoming?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in my view, the Conservation Commission in the Northern Territory does not have any shortcomings at all. I find its operation generally impeccable. I am not aware of the details of what the member is referring to. However, what I can say is that I am very proud of the Conservation Commission's efforts in restoring Arltunga. In fact, the funding from the Commonwealth government through the Commemorative Program and the Australian Bicentennial Program and the contributions of the Northern Territory on a dollar-for-dollar basis has restored Arltunga virtually to its original status. One of the surprising things about Arltunga today is the cooperation between the Conservation Commission of the Northern Territory and the Department of Mines and Energy in restoring and making available certain of the pits and mines in the area for tourists.

I have been to Arltunga several times and I wonder whether the member for MacDonnell has been there several times. From my visits, I am aware of aspects of Aboriginal culture that are there for people to see. In all Territory parks and certainly in areas of historical significance, the Aboriginal people have been recognised. Perhaps what the member for MacDonnell is alluding to is the level of recognition that is given at certain times. If the students of Yirara and the member for MacDonnell feel offended in any way because there may have been an oversight or an omission, in their terms, I am happy to ask the Conservation Commission to examine the matter. However, in doing so, I would officially place on record again that, in my view, the Conservation Commission of the Northern Territory is one of the outstanding organisations for conservation of the environment in the Northern Territory and, in fact, in Australia. Everyone involved with the Arltunga project certainly deserves the praise of honourable members here.

Federal Industrial Relations Bill

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

Is it true that the federal government intends to reintroduce the Industrial Relations Bill next year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is my understanding that that is the case. The Industrial Relations Bill is of paramount importance to the Territory and it is appropriate that I advise the Assembly of developments in that area. Honourable members will be aware that the federal Minister for Industrial Relations withdrew the bill from the House of Representatives immediately prior to the July election, and we can all imagine why that was done. I think it is true to say that everybody except the federal government disagrees with and has concern over the provisions and likely effects of the Industrial Relations Bill in its present form. The Northern Territory government is certainly no exception to that. The federal Minister for Industrial Relations has recently advised that he intends to reintroduce that bill in the autumn sittings of the federal parliament next year. I understand the minister has agreed to allow us to put our views forward and we will be making the fullest use of that option.

One area of particular concern to the Northern Territory is the proposal in the bill to amend the Northern Territory (Self-Government) Act. In its present form, the bill seeks to revoke that section of the Self-Government Act dealing with the establishment of those Northern Territory tribunals covering police and prison officers. I have already written to the minister requesting that that amendment be not proceeded with. There is no doubt that the police and prisons arbitral tribunals have served the Territory extremely well over the years and the federal government has given no reason for the revocation of those tribunals. In fact, it would find it very difficult to give a reason that would stand up.

I have also advised the federal minister of the possibility that there may be further requests for changes to the bill. This will depend on the report from Sir John Moore concerning his examination of the options for a system for industrial relations in the Northern Territory following a grant of statehood. Honourable members should be aware of the importance of any moves by the federal government to change the federal Conciliation and Arbitration Act. The Northern Territory government is specifically precluded by the Self-Government Act from legislating in respect of industrial relations. It follows that the dominant system of industrial relations operating in the Territory is that dictated by the federal act and any changes to it will have a direct effect on the whole of the work force in the Northern Territory. That is not the case in the states because they have control over the arbitral acts in their own jurisdictions. The Northern Territory should certainly be the same. Honourable members can be assured that this government will be extremely vigilant in its scrutiny of the federal government's intentions in this most important area and that it will take every opportunity to protect the Territory's interests in the passage of this piece of legislation through the federal parliament.

High Voltage Electricity Transmission Line

Mr REED to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he provide any information on the proposal to construct a high voltage electricity transmission line linking Jabiru, Katherine and Darwin?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am indeed in a position to advise the honourable member of the latest developments in the proposal to develop 2 transmission lines, one connecting Darwin and Katherine and the other Darwin and Jabiru. Expressions of interest were called for both proposals recently and a short list of tenderers has been compiled. I believe about 5 companies are on the short list.

The line to Katherine is of particular importance to the member for Katherine in the context of recent blackouts there and the opening of the new power station. That new gas-powered generating facility has a 19.5 MW capacity. There is, however, rapid growth in that region. Indeed, the member for Katherine is very privileged to represent such a rapidly growing region and I am sure that, if he had had the opportunity to contribute to debate on yesterday's matter of public importance, he would have been able to tell the Leader and Deputy Leader of the Opposition just what development means in his region. In terms of the development we believe will occur in Katherine within the next 3 years, the new $33m power station that has just been commissioned will require updating and upgrading. In fact, the generators at the power station are presently operating at 1 MW above their original design capacity. We believe that the 19.5 MW capacity available at Katherine will be exceeded within the next 3 years, at today's rate of expansion. Whilst the contractors who developed the Katherine Power Station went to the trouble of installing an additional pad to mount another generator, there is now some consideration being given to offsetting the cost of running a line from Darwin to Katherine by not proceeding to mount that fourth generator. That will considerably reduce the cost of the line.

There have been some other recent developments along the road to Katherine. These include a proposal to develop a large generating capacity at Cosmo Howley. Indeed, NT Gas has negotiated with Dominion Gold, the operators of Cosmo Howley, to set up a very large generating capacity in that region. There is now a proposal to investigate further the possibility of supplying electricity on a grid into the Douglas-Daly region. I know that the member for Victoria River is very supportive of that proposal which would make a big difference to the farmers in the region. I am sure that the Minister for Industries and Development would also be very excited about the possibility of having reticulated electricity in the farm region there. It would open up the possibility for additional mine sites in the area to be linked into the system. I believe that an electricity conduit, together with the pipeline, will further open up the Pine Creek district to mining ventures.

The next century will be about energy and people who have energy at a price will be in front as we pass the year 2000. The Territory is very fortunate in having the opportunity to be in that position. It is interesting to note that lead, silver and zinc smelting operations are now being conducted in Europe. That is because of the very low cost of nuclear power which is running at some 2c per kilowatt hour. That is why raw material is being transported to Europe for smelting. It requires a lot of power to melt these base metals down to a state wherein they can be used. The Northern Territory is in an excellent position to be able to provide electricity through its gas and the large uranium resources that it has.

In terms of the line to Jabiru, we have employed a consultant to do an environmental impact statement on the possibility of running a powerline through the Kakadu region to Jabiru to bring Jabiru on line with the Channel Island Power Station. This will provide an additional base load for the Channel Island Power Station and, the more gas that we can burn through the pipeline corridor, the quicker we will reach a point where we can stabilise electricity prices in the Northern Territory. The more electricity we use, the better it is for everybody.

This project is proceeding and the interest in terms of design, construct and finance is extremely high. There is to be rapid development of the region at Jabiru, including the new crocodile motel and the proposed 200-bay caravan park. If Jabiru is to become the hub for tourist infrastructure in that area that, some years ago, the Prime Minister told us it would become, then it will require power. That power can be supplied from Channel Island by running electricity out into that region. The Prime Minister said that he would give us $70m and honourable members are fully aware of the facts: we received 7 barbecue plates. The order was messed up, Mr Speaker. The consultant is working on the route for the line to enable it to proceed through Kakadu and he will have his environmental impact study report ready very soon. I am hopeful that both projects can start early next year.

Industrial Tribunals and Awards on Statehood

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Does he agree with his Minister for Labour and Administrative Services that it would be desirable for the Northern Territory to set up its own system of industrial tribunals and awards to be administered by a Northern Territory body after the achievement of statehood?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not agree with the honourable member's interpretation of what the Minister for Labour and Administrative Services said. If he is seeking a clarification of my view and the view of our government, I will give it. Whilst we believe that, on the achievement of statehood, the equivalent powers in respect of industrial relations that apply under the constitutional arrangements between the Commonwealth and the states should apply, that does not necessarily mean that, in the administrative or organisational arrangements, there should be a separate tribunal. That can be done by way of a combined commission of the Commonwealth and Northern Territory. A considerable amount of preliminary work has been done on the practicalities of that sort of a structure. As the honourable member will be aware, Sir John Moore, the retired immediate past president of the Australian Conciliation and Arbitration Commission, is working as a consultant for our government preparing an options paper for consideration on the whole industrial relations powers question. As I said at the last sittings, we anticipate some results from his consultancy early next year.

We anticipate that there would be a combined commission of the Commonwealth and the Northern Territory. That would certainly be the most attractive option financially. In terms of the practical operation of the industrial relations system in the Northern Territory, it would overcome many of the difficult problems, such as the Moore and Doyle case issues and the jurisdiction-jumping and competing jurisdiction problems that the states are plagued with. Those are matters we would like to avoid and certainly would be determined to avoid so far as the Northern Territory is concerned. I am aware, as I know the honourable member is aware, that all participants in the industrial relations community - employers, the trade unions and the tribunals - are of a similar view.

Crop Contract Scheme

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Now that the government has announced the details of its Crop Contract Scheme for the coming cropping season, what is the extent of plantings proposed for this year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise honourable members of the crop plantings for the coming year because it is an interesting story and one which accords with projects across the Territory in that it is a story of growth. The estimate for cropping in the year 1987-88 will be approximately 10 010 ha. Compared with the 1986-87 figure of 7816 ha, this represents a 28% increase. I will give brief details of the crops being planted on those 10 010 ha which I am sure will be of interest to honourable members.

150 ha of peanuts will be planted as compared with last year's figure of 440 ha. The area of production of peanuts, in particular, will be reduced considerably for a number of reasons. There were a couple of bad experiences with peanuts in the last cropping year, as honourable members may have been aware. We had a bad year generally, seasonally at least. 1900 ha of maize will be planted. This is a marked increase over last year's production of 1187 ha. This increase should provide sufficient grain for the Northern Territory market and is in line with a conscious effort to provide more maize for the stockfeed industry. Of this area, 930 ha are covered by the Crop

Upgrading of Drains

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

My question relates to a matter I raised in the adjournment debate last night. Will he consider a staged program for the upgrading of drains in Territory towns to a standard at which local councils will be prepared to take over their maintenance and management?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Sadadeen has raised an issue that is of special concern to me, particularly in the Alice Springs area. The drains referred to are the responsibility of the Northern Territory government until they are upgraded to a standard sufficient to allow local governments to take them over.

I am pleased to inform the member for Sadadeen that funds have been allocated in this year's budget for the Department of Lands and Housing and certain upgrading work will take place on a priority basis. The Bradshaw drain will be upgraded first, followed by the Larapinta drain, followed by problem areas in Sadadeen. That, of course, is no reflection on the member for Sadadeen. It is a genuine coincidence because the drain in Sadadeen is by far the most modern and requires the least amount of maintenance.

The Larapinta drain is of the greatest concern to me. In fact, only last week, I directed that certain urgent works be undertaken at the junction of Larapinta Drive and the drain because of the large amount of water that had accumulated there. I must admit that that action occurred as a result of a direct representation to me by the member for Araluen who expressed considerable concern about the long grass and mosquitoes breeding in the water that had collected around in the drain. Mr Speaker, you would be very much aware of the problems experienced in Alice Springs during times of heavy rain and major flooding. Those problems need to be dealt with as a matter of some priority, particularly in the Alice Springs area.

I am not aware of any significant concerns in any of the other major communities throughout the Territory. However, to take on board the question from the member for Sadadeen, I will certainly ask the Department of Lands and Housing to investigate the matter. In due course, I will report to the member for Sadadeen in writing.

Statistics on Visitor Numbers

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TOURISM

Can he advise of any statistics he has on visitor numbers in the Northern Territory so far this year and the revenue derived from that source, and is he able to advise whether the target of 1.1 million tourists by 1991 is still achievable?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, following a preliminary survey, we announced a figure of 762 000 visitors to the Northern Territory this year. That figure has been revised downwards by the small number of 25 000. It has been very difficult to quantify the amount of money that contributes directly to the Territory economy. However, estimates put the amount at close to $300m. I can say that the average growth rate in all areas of visitation to the Northern Territory is 15%. That applies to both international and domestic tourists and, incidentally, happens to be some 5 times the national average.

I believe that many factors will contribute to an ever-increasing number of visitors coming to the Northern Territory. Of course, one reason is that, in the Top End, we have yet to experience the full overseas impact of 'Crocodile Dundee'. People are still arriving on the east coast of Australia and, because of the cost and lack of services, many of them are only going to Ayers Rock before exiting through Sydney or other east coast ports. In discussions that I held in Sydney prior to departing overseas, a group of some 20 wholesalers advised me that they were reorganising completely their itineraries and programs.

Traditionally, whether we like it or not, most tourists have 4 major images of Australia: Ayers Rock, the Sydney Harbour Bridge, the Opera House and the Barrier Reef. Most visitors to Australia spend 2 nights in Sydney, transfer to Ayers Rock, then to the Barrier Reef and then exit. Anybody who has tried to obtain a room in Sydney during the last 6 months will realise that he will be required to pay between $190 and $240 per night for a room. That cost is having a major impact on the visitors into Sydney. The planes are full and an extra 7 services are booked into Australia. I think Qantas recently leased 2 jumbo jets overseas. That means that the pressure on Sydney will become unbearable.

For 6 months of next year, it will not be possible to get near Brisbane because of Expo. All of the itineraries are being redeveloped so that there will only be 1 night in Sydney. That means that places such as Melbourne, Adelaide, Perth, Alice Springs and Darwin will benefit. That is one small aspect of the reason why I believe that the target of 1.1 million visitors to the Northern Territory by 1991 will be achieved.

In addition to that, we have not experienced a full year of traffic on the newly-sealed south road. We have not yet had finalised the possibility of 1 or 2 international flights into Darwin in 1988. As a result of negotiations being undertaken by the Minister for Transport and Works, there is a very strong chance of more flights, particularly since Qantas and Singapore Airlines have reached agreement on extra services into Australia.

One thing that I found outstanding in my visit overseas, both in America and major countries in Europe, was the staggeringly high profile of the Northern Territory as compared to the rest of Australia. We promote and market the Northern Territory overseas as 'Australia's Northern Territory'. Thus, we definitely identify with Australia. We are not very parochial as yet. Unless one goes overseas and talks to people, it is difficult to grasp the full impact of the 'Crocodile Dundee' film. In every briefing that I had with tour operators and the press, what was on their minds was 'Crocodile Dundee'. I believe that, once 'Crocodile Dundee II' hits the market, we will have another rush. Let us hope that, in the interim period, most of the infrastructure that will obviously be needed to handle these people can be developed.

There is some hope on the horizon that finally the airport facilities within the Northern Territory will be recognised by the federal government as being a very important link in the national tourism network. One of the most important things that I found during my trip was the untapped potential of the east coast of America. Of some 20 wholesalers in Los Angeles, for example, nearly every one has transferred a subsidiary operation to New York and Toronto, and that is seen as one of the fastest growing areas of tourism, particularly to Australia. The Northern Territory Tourist Commission is addressing that as a matter of priority. Unfortunately, Queensland, which happens to have unlimited dollars and resources, has approximately 16 people in the United States. The Northern Territory has 3 people to cater to 260 million people in America and 60 million people in Canada. Nevertheless, there is no doubt that the Northern Territory has a far higher profile than Queensland has. That must be vindication of the fine marketing efforts of the Northern Territory Tourist Commission. Certainly, operators in the Northern Territory are aware that there will be an ever-increasing number of tourists.

In conclusion, I will comment on the matter of the bed tax. My visit overseas convinced me how important it is that the Northern Territory government stick to its guns to ensure that the tax is introduced. Wherever I went in America and Europe, praise was heaped on the various governments and organisations that levied these charges on hotels. For example, Colorado raises some $16m per annum from visitors and every cent goes into a trust fund and is spent on marketing Colorado. I think that our industry needs to become aware that the Northern Territory government has made this commitment, and that it is making this effort to promote the Northern Territory overseas and within Australia with remarkable success. It is only fair and proper that the industry realise that the efforts of the Northern Territory are limited in their funding, and that it should make a small contribution. When it realises that every cent raised through the tourism marketing duty will be spent on marketing the Northern Territory, I think it will see further success for tourism in the Northern Territory.

Prevocational Course in Katherine

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is it true that the 4 instructors from the Territory Training Centre Annex at Katherine will not have their contracts renewed at the end of the year and that this will mean the end of the very successful prevocational courses that have been run in Katherine? Of the 10 people completing the course this year, already 7 have jobs.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot give the honourable member a yes or no answer at this stage because I have made arrangements to meet the federal minister to discuss several matters in relation to federal funding of particularly successful programs which seem to have some financial problems in the rearrangement of the federal Department of Education and Training. I believe that we are only talking about administrative problems. Certainly, I shall be making the federal minister aware that we have a number of successful programs which have been supported by the Commonwealth.

At this stage, there seems to be a possibility that some courses have not been recommended even though they follow the stated line of the federal government and the Prime Minister indicated that there would be extra emphasis on training, especially in respect of Aboriginal people. The courses provided at the Katherine Rural College are excellent. They are rated by the industry as being first class. Every year, every person who has undertaken the course mentioned by the member for Stuart has managed to obtain employment. That indicates not only that the program is working successfully in terms of its educational value, but that it is providing the training that industry requires.

I am most hopeful that we can reach a successful arrangement with the federal government regarding the continued funding of such courses. There are a number of others that are in limbo at the moment because of the changes. However, I think we can sort the matter out. I assure the honourable member that I will be making personal representations in an effort to ensure that that course and a number of others continue to be funded. Quite often, the Northern Territory government is castigated for not being able to provide training opportunities in remote areas. We have programs that are far more successful than the programs that were finally put into place interstate and we must ensure that they continue.

3. Aboriginal Employment

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

In view of the Northern Territory Government's stated commitment to improving Aboriginal employment and in the light of recent reports indicating a decline in Aboriginal employment levels, what are the numbers of unfilled positions in each of the following categories:

- (a) Police aides;
- (b) Trackers;
- (c) Health workers;
- (d) Assistant teachers in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities; and
- (e) Teacher aides in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities?

5. Skywest - Aero-medical Services

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

What are the details of the cost to the Northern Territory government of the financial, legal and other arrangements made with the Skywest Company to finalise negotiations allowing Skywest to begin the aero-medical services in the Northern Territory?

23 February 1988

15. School Cleaning and Maintenance

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

What were the amounts paid out during 1987 for contracts to provide:

- (a) ground maintenance; and
- (b) cleaning

for each primary and secondary school in the Northern Territory?

19. Northern Territory Land Management

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. How many grants of land have been made to the Northern Territory Land Corporation (NTLC) since its inception in 1986?
2. How was each grant valued and what was the valuation in each case?
3. For what purpose was each grant of land?
4. Which parcels of land were so granted?
5. When was each grant made?
6. Was each decision to grant land discussed at Cabinet level? If not, which grants were not discussed?
7. How many grants of land were made to its predecessors, the Northern Territory Development Land Corporation (NTDLC) and the Northern Territory Conservation Land Corporation (NTCLC)?
8. How was each grant valued and what was the valuation in each case?
9. For what purpose was each grant of land?
10. Which parcels of land were so granted?
11. When was each grant made?
12. Was each decision to grant land discussed at Cabinet level? If not, which grants were not discussed?
13. Which parcels of land have been purchased by the NTLC, the NTDLC and NTCLC?
14. What was the purchase price of each such parcel?
15. For what purpose was each such parcel purchased?
16. When was each such purchase effected?
17. Was each decision to purchase land discussed at Cabinet level? If not, which purchases were not so discussed?
18. Of which parcels of land has the NTLC, the NTDLC or the NTCLC divested itself by way of sale, grant, gift, or any other process?
19. For what reasons were the transactions referred to in question 18 above carried out?
20. When was each transaction referred to in question 18 above carried out?

21. How was the value of each grant, sale gift or other divestment of land valued and what was the valuation in each case?
22. Was each transaction referred to in question 18 above discussed at Cabinet level? If not, which such transaction were not so discussed?

20. Staffing of Giles House

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

1. How many staff are employed at Giles House?
2. In which categories are these staff employed?
3. How many people have held the position of Superintendent at Giles House during -
 - (a) 1984;
 - (b) 1985;
 - (c) 1986; and
 - (d) 1987?
4. Of the other staff employed at Giles House, how many changes have there been in each category of staff in 1984, 1985, 1986 and 1987?

21. Parks and Reserves - Tourists

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TOURISM

What was the number of visitors to each of the following parks, reserves or lands managed by the Conservation Commission in 1985, 1986 and 1987:

Alice Springs Telegraph Station Historical Reserve;
Arltunga Historical Reserve;
Finke Gorge National Park;
Glen Helen Gorge Nature Park;

Berry Springs Nature Park;
Butterfly Gorge Nature Park;
Daly River Nature Park;
Douglas Hot Springs Nature Park;
Holmes Jungle Nature Park;
Howard Springs Nature Park;
Imbrawarra Gorge Nature Park;

Cutta Cutta Caves Nature Park;
Katherine Gorge National Park;
Keep River National Park; and
Mataranka Pool Nature Park?

22. Macassan Prau Project

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

1. How much has the Macassan prau re-enactment cost the Northern Territory Museum of Arts and Sciences?
2. What is the estimated cost of construction of a second prau?
3. What is the anticipated cost of getting a second prau to the Yirrkala museum?

23. Advertising - Channel Eight, Darwin

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

1. How much did government departments and authorities spend on advertising on Channel 8, Darwin in 1987?
2. What was the breakdown of that amount by department and authority?

24. Helicopter Charters - Minister for Tourism

Mr SMITH to MINISTER FOR TOURISM

1. What is the total cost of helicopter charters undertaken by the Minister for Tourism in 1987?
2. What was the take-off point and the destination for each journey?
3. Who were the passengers, if any, on each of these trips?

25 June 1987

2. University College of the Northern Territory
Enrolments

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many full-time students are enrolled at the University College of the Northern Territory?
2. How many part-time students are enrolled?
3. How many students who completed Year 12 at Northern Territory schools are:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents at the University College?
4. How many:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents are in the Arts faculty?
5. How many:
 - (a) full-time; and
 - (b) part-timestudents are in the Science faculty?

ANSWER

1. 67 full-time students (plus 11 additional full-time enrolments for semester 2 approved to date).
2. 144 part-time students.
3. (a) 18 full-time students (10 in Science faculty; 8 in Arts faculty).
(b) 1 part-time student (Arts faculty).
4. (a) 45 full-time students.
(b) 119 part-time students.
5. (a) 22 full-time students.
(b) 25 part-time students.

Total enrolment (including 9 external students) = 220.

23 February 1988

6. Darwin Private Hospital
Staffing

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH

1. How many staff members at the Darwin Private Hospital are on leave from the Royal Darwin Hospital?
2. Are those staff covered for superannuation by virtue of the arrangements related to their leave of absence, rather than proper employer-employee provisions which would be the case in a private hospital established under normal conditions?

ANSWER

1. There are currently 22 employees of the Department of Health and Community Services working at the Darwin Private Hospital. All have applied for and been granted 12 months leave without pay from the department, including approval to engage in outside employment with DPH during the 12-month period.
2. Superannuation arrangements for the employees concerned is a matter of personal choice. As members of either the Commonwealth Superannuation Scheme or Northern Territory Government and Public Authorities Superannuation Scheme they may choose to continue their contributions, thereby retaining entitlements, to either scheme during their period of leave without pay. Alternatively, they may be able to negotiate superannuation coverage arrangements with Darwin Private Hospital but that is a matter between individual employees and DPH.

7. Royal Darwin Hospital and Darwin Private Hospital Integration and Disease Control

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH

1. What are the details of the integration of Darwin Private Hospital and the Royal Darwin Hospital in respect of facilities such as theatres, bearing in mind the stringent controls needed for control of infectious disease, in a way that is compatible with the infectious diseases policy of the Royal Darwin Hospital?
2. Have actions circumventing the fly prevention measures introduced at the Royal Darwin Hospital several years ago taken place at the Darwin Private Hospital?
3. Did any formal liaison take place between the Health Department and the Darwin Private Hospital as far as the integration and liaison of infectious disease control within the Royal Darwin Hospital building is concerned? If not,
(a) why was the decision not to consult made; and

(b) was it made with the minister's knowledge?

ANSWER

1. Darwin Private Hospital accepts the need to comply with RDH procedures to maximise disease control.

The advice of the RDH Infection Control Sister has been sought to ensure that infection control guidelines are uniform throughout the hospital. Weekly discussions between the Chief Executive Officers of the 2 hospitals routinely address the question of infection control.

2. Yes - with the exception of prohibiting pot plants. In 1983, the cause of a fly problem was traced.

As part of the measures introduced at that time, all pot plants were removed from the hospital even though they were not found to be a source of the problem. Advice from entomologists involved in fly control is that pot plants should not be a source of breeding for flies providing that care is taken in selection of soil and regular cleaning of the pot is carried out to prevent discarded food rotting in pots.

RDH will not be re-introducing pot plants because of the work involved in keeping the soil clean. DPH have elected to use pot plants and have agreed to maintain them adequately.

3. Yes. Written into the lease agreement are clauses requiring DPH to take reasonable steps to ensure that its activities do not interfere with RDH, including causing illness to patients in RDH. The Territory has the right to inspect DPH for the purpose of infection control.

All cleaning and processing of linen and instruments used in surgery is either carried out in RDH or in a manner that is required of RDH staff.

8. Royal Darwin Hospital Relocation of Wards

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH

1. Were maternity patients and paediatric patients placed in close proximity on the seventh floor of the Royal Darwin Hospital because of overcrowding while the Darwin Private Hospital was being established, in the contravention of proper procedures with a view to the prevention of cross infection and at risk to those patients.
2. Has this practice and any other similar practices, ceased? If so, why were such practices, to quote the Minister's colleague, the Member for Port Darwin, regarded as 'acceptable inconveniences and a price for the establishment of a private hospital'?

ANSWER

1. Prior to handing over the third floor to Darwin Private Hospital on 11 November 1987, statistics showed 50% of all deliveries over a 12-month period were private.

Midwifery bedstate at that time was 46 beds.

Unpredictable fluctuations in numbers required that any patients in excess of the designated maternity beds be accommodated in general wards. It was judged that a substantial proportion of maternity patients would seek admission to the private hospital and so reducing the demand for maternity beds in the public hospital. However, the the 2 weeks following the opening of the private hospital, up to 46 maternity beds were maintained depending on demand.

Ten of these beds were initially located on the seventh floor and were used as an interim measure only. These beds were reserved for ante-natal patients only and were strictly segregated from the paediatric patients. Although this is well within infection control standards, the arrangement was restrictive to these ante-natal patients. Consequently, wards 5B and 6B were expanded by utilising vacant areas to accommodate maternity admissions in lieu of the seventh floor.

From 9 December 1987 midwifery bed numbers were reduced to 23 with an expandable capacity of up to 30. This reflects actual demand.

2. The practice ceased within 2 weeks when the Private Hospital became fully operational and attracted maternity admissions.

9. Royal Darwin Hospital and Darwin Private Hospital

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH

Is the Royal Darwin Hospital acting as a purchasing agent for the Darwin Private Hospital's supplies, including pharmaceutical supplies? If so,

- (a) what is the cost to the taxpayer of such a service;
- (b) what fee, if any, has been established for that service; and
- (c) in what way does this reflect a thorough estimate of the costs to the taxpayer of the public hospital's overall purchase of goods?

ANSWER

Under the agreement with Darwin Private Hospital, the Royal Darwin Hospital supplies medical sundries and pharmaceuticals to the private hospital at purchase cost plus 10%. It has been assessed by the Chief Pharmacist that the actual cost to the Royal Darwin Hospital of handling and issuing these goods equates to a 10% on cost.

Products that attract federal sales tax are not supplied by the Royal Darwin Hospital.

There is a nil net cost to the public moneys.

10. Work Health - Hospitalisation

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH

1. Has a policy been adopted by the Work Health Authority and its adjunct in the Department of Mines and Energy vis-a-vis the type of hospitalisation of workers suffering injuries or illness? If so, will such patients be placed in the Royal Darwin Hospital as private patients or will they be placed in the Darwin Private Hospital?
2. What would be the cost if such patients were to be exclusively placed in the Darwin Private Hospital, given studies of previous hospitalisation of work-related injury and illness cases?

ANSWER

1. There has been no change to the admission policy of the Royal Darwin Hospital. Patients have the right to be admitted with a doctor of their choice (private) or as public patients. Territorians now have a third choice - to be admitted to a private hospital.

The question of respective insurance coverage is a matter between patients and their insurers. Following advice from TIO, patients admitting as motor vehicle accident victims are advised that TIO does not cover private admission charges.

2. The Work Health Authority may be able to answer this question.

11. Royal Darwin Hospital
Availability of Beds

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH

1. Did the minister say, in the Legislative Assembly on 22 October 1987, that private patients would be encouraged to place themselves in the Darwin Private Hospital? If so, how is this undertaking by the minister reconciled with the assurances he gave the Federal Health Minister on 24 November 1987?
2. Did the Royal Darwin Hospital have 46 public maternity beds available prior to the establishment of the Darwin Private Hospital and does the public hospital now have only 22 beds available to public patients or private patients who seek a bed in the public sector hospital with a doctor of their own choice? If not, what are the reductions in public bed numbers?

3. Will the minister provide an undertaking that no patient will be encouraged or forced to a maternity bed outside the public wards of the Royal Darwin Hospital because of maternity ward cutbacks?
4. In emergency circumstances, will the Department of Health rent or lease back from the Darwin Private Hospital beds for public use?

ANSWER

1. No. However, on 29 October 1987, I stated that, 'It is expected that most people who are privately insured will use the Darwin Private Hospital. They certainly will be encouraged by the Royal Darwin Hospital to do so'.

Hansard of that same day also clearly records my statement that: 'It is not intended that privately insured people who for one reason or another might still wish to use the Royal Darwin Hospital will be prevented from doing so'. This is in line with the assurances given to the Federal Health Minister.

2. The Royal Darwin Hospital did have 46 designated maternity beds and now has 23 so designated. The demand for maternity beds has reduced from an average of 32 prior to the private hospital opening to 22 now. Such a reduction was expected as 50% of maternity patients had previously elected to be admitted as private patients. A significant percentage of patients seeking private admissions have chosen to seek admission to the private hospital. The maternity ward is accommodating all patients seeking admission to the Royal Darwin Hospital.
3. Demand for maternity beds fluctuates and it is standard practice to accommodate overflows in other wards within RDH. This practice will continue.
4. Provision has been made in the agreement to lease back staffed beds from the Darwin Private Hospital should the need arise.

12.

Commissioner of Taxes
Unpaid Tax

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

The Northern Territory Treasury Annual Report 1986-87 on page 17 has the following table:

	Number of Inspections	Unpaid Tax Detected	Tax Collected
1981-82 (9/12)	146	380 221	380 221
1982-83	148	846 213	655 888
1983-84	206	873 135	801 725
1984-85	176	595 505	437 224
1985-86	195	1 779 757	512 892
1986-87	128	1 422 155	642 504

1. Why is there a discrepancy between the unpaid tax detected and tax collected in each year since 1982-83?
2. What action is being taken to reduce or remove this discrepancy?

ANSWER

1. Specific details relating to individual tax payers cannot be given as these may breach the confidentiality provisions of the tax legislation. However, the discrepancy between unpaid tax detected and tax collected during the relevant years is accounted for by a number of factors.
 - (a) In many instances although the tax is identified in a particular year, arrangements may be entered into which provide for the tax to be paid over a period of time extending beyond that year. This is accepted practice and a number of such arrangements have in fact been entered into. The tax collected will progressively be credited to the relevant year, which will narrow the gap between unpaid tax detected and tax collected over time.
 - (b) Tax identified as unpaid may be subject to dispute. Taxpayers have the right to challenge an assessment. This may proceed through objection, to appeal to the Supreme Court with a consequent delay in collection. If the assessment is varied, or overturned, the total tax outstanding for the relevant year is adjusted accordingly.
 - (c) Tax identified through inspection may relate to a company that was in, or has subsequently gone into liquidation. The amount of tax ultimately paid after liquidation processes have been completed depends on the amount available for distribution to creditors. The amount rarely equals the identified tax liability and it may take some years to finalise payment.

- (d) In 1985-86 community councils were assessable for pay-roll tax as they did not fall within any of the recognised exemption heads. Since then these organisations have, by an amendment to the act, been accorded local governing status and entitled to exemption from the tax.

Steps are now being taken to reduce the outstanding tax by the amount previously assessed for these organisations.

- (e) There will always be some degree of lag between the identification of tax and its collection and this may cross financial years.
2. Apart from some $200 000 in disputed assessments yet to be settled and the adjustment for community councils of some $1.1m, action to reduce the balance of tax outstanding is being taken through normal recovery processes by arrangements, recovery action by the Department of Law and for companies in various stages of liquidation, through the appropriate legislative avenues.

13. Yulara Development

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. What is the nature of the Northern Territory Government contribution to the proposed $17m Yulara development?
2. How much is it expected the Northern Territory contribution will cost?

ANSWER

1. It is proposed that an additional 60 housing units be constructed at Yulara for the Housing Commission as part of the 1988 program.

In conjunction with this program, and to keep pace with the increasing visitation to the resort, there will need to be some augmentation of the Yulara power station by the Power and Water Authority during 1988-89.

2. The housing cost is estimated at $5m, as part of the $17m total program. The balance of that program will be funded by the resort owning company. As it will be invested in revenue producing assets no increase is expected in the level of the general annual support payment made by the government to Yulara.

The cost of power augmentation has not yet been assessed by the Power and Water Authority.

14. Spaceport Facility

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Has a feasibility study been undertaken into a spaceport facility in the Northern Territory? If so:

- (a) who undertook the study; and
- (b) what were the broad results of that feasibility study?

ANSWER

- (a) A feasibility study was conducted by a working party comprising:

Mr Geoff Chard (Chairman) Department of Industries and Development
Mr Ian Prince, Department of Industries and Development
Mr Ian Gordon, Department of Transport and Works
Ms Jane Large, Northern Territory Treasury
Mr Sam Durland, Department of Industries and Development (representing Nortrade)
Ms Barbara Singer, Conservation Commission of the Northern Territory
Mr Ken Ward, Department of Lands and Housing
Mr Graham Bailey, Department of Lands and Housing

In addition, assistance was given to the working party by:

AUSSAT Pty Ltd (Dr Gordon Pike)
CSIRO (Office of Space Science and Applications - Dr Ken McCracken)
Department of Industry, Technology and Commerce Department of Science

- (b) Having regard to the availability of a suitable area of land required for launching purposes located as near as practicable to the equator, the study focused on a site to the east of Darwin.

The 4 common launch trajectories are the equatorial (equatorwards of east); 28.5° (from due east); 57°; and 108°.

In terms of frequency, the equatorial trajectory is overwhelmingly the most common, and the 108° the least common.

With reference to the preferred site, or any other possible coastal location, the study indicated that the drop zones for the various booster stages involved in launching vehicles into space coincides with centres of population in the cases of the equatorial, 28.5° and 57° trajectories.

Government considered the outcomes of the study and because of the range safety problems have decided against pursuing the prospect of establishing a launch facility in the Territory.

16.

Adult Education

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. What were the number of positions of Adult Educator -
 - (a) available; and
 - (b) filledby location in 1986 and 1987 and the expected numbers at each location in 1988?
2. What were the numbers of full time and part time positions providing support services to Adult Educators in each TAFE office in urban centres for the years 1986 and 1987 and what are the projected numbers for 1988?

ANSWER

See following table.

17. First Home Owners Scheme

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. How many grants were made out under the First Home Owners Scheme?
2. How much money was applied for this scheme by the Commonwealth?
3. How much was applied for this scheme by the Northern Territory?
4. What variations have been made by the Commonwealth and Northern Territory Governments to this scheme since its inception in 1983?

ANSWER

The questions are not relevant to the Northern Territory Government. The first Home Owners Scheme commenced 1 October 1983 and was administered by the Commonwealth Department of Housing and Construction.

It is now administered by the Commonwealth Department of Community Services and Health, corner Litchfield Lane and Knuckey Street, PO Box 2310, Darwin; Telephone 811339. The Northern Territory Government has not been involved in the administration of the scheme.

18. Crown Land - Proposed Development

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

What is the current status of the proposed development referred to in the Determination of grant of Crown Land in the Northern Territory Government Gazette No G45 of 11 November 1987 (P4) which refers to Section 1574 Hundred of Guy?

ANSWER

The former Minister for Lands and Housing approved the grant of a freehold title over section 1574 Hundred of Guy to the Conservation Land Corporation for a hunting and recreation area.

This is one of the more popular hunting and recreation areas close to Darwin. Development will be of a low level and comprise of boundary fencing already in place with perhaps some barbecue areas.

The vesting of the land in the Conservation Land Corporation will enable a formal management plan to be prepared and proper management and control exercised over activities in the area. The present study into the wetlands east of Darwin may have a bearing on further development plans.

Report 'Who Speaks for Katherine?'

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

When did he first see the report 'Who speaks for Katherine?'

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I first saw the report entitled 'Who Speaks for Katherine?' on the day that the Leader of the Opposition and the ABC attacked me. I want to be very accurate about the time because the Leader of the Opposition has been trying to mislead the people of the Northern Territory on a number of matters recently and this is just one of them. I first saw the report on the day that he was working with the ABC to put together an item on the matter on the 7.30 Report.

Tourism Study 'Towards 2000 and Beyond'

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for TOURISM

Can he advise honourable members concerning the study called 'Towards The Year 2000'?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I came under attack during the last Assembly sittings in 1987 because of the government's supposed lack of direction in developing tourism in the Northern Territory. At that time, I answered the member for Stuart's criticism by telling him that we were well advanced with the development of a major study entitled 'Towards the Year 2000'. A study group is currently travelling throughout the Northern Territory and is well advanced in discussions with the entire industry. The aim is to develop a strategy that will not only lead to a review of our policy and direction but address the issue of what infrastructure will be required for the future of tourism in the Northern Territory. This relates particularly to information concerning growth, bed rates, the type of accommodation required - whether it is budget, middle-of-the-range or 5-star - and the expansion in areas which are coming under extreme pressure, such as camping grounds.

In these times of economic hardship, members opposite argue that the Northern Territory economy is in such a state of decline that all is lost. On this side of the Assembly, however, we share a renewed optimism for the future of the Northern Territory. I can say that unequivocally because of a confidential document which landed on my desk this morning and which is about to be circulated among members on this side of the House. It is an update of the tourism infrastructure which is planned or under construction in the Northern Territory and it states that the amount of money planned to be spent on tourism and related infrastructure in the Northern Territory is $600m. That represents a 50% increase on the amount which I advised this House of in September and October last.

'Towards the Year 2000' includes a major study of the wetlands of the Top End and a major study of the Gulf region. An additional study is looking at a 5-year plan for tourism development. It is a very important initiative because it comes at a time when there is increasing competition in Australia to attract both international and domestic travellers.

One particularly important aspect relates to our image. Not so long ago, everybody automatically thought of the Northern Territory as the outback of Australia. Unfortunately, that is no longer the case. Western Australia, South Australia, Victoria, New South Wales and Queensland all now lay claim to the outback of Australia. The outback now includes Mildura, Broken Hill and western Queensland. In fact, Queensland is rude enough to claim that the Gulf country in the Cape York region is outback Australia. We have not exactly lost the initiative because I think we will always retain the basic identity of being the true outback but it is important to note that interstate governments are initiating massive advertising campaigns to take advantage of what we have created: the image of outback Australia. We are therefore working on developing a new approach and part of the purpose of my forthcoming overseas visit is to promote an image which was very successful in the last marketing exercise: the equity participation of Aboriginal people in tourism and the development of further infrastructure.

I have 4 documents that I will table for the information of honourable members. There is a brochure that has been distributed to every pastoral property in the Northern Territory encouraging them to become involved in tourism. That is one of the images that we will be developing. The opportunities are infinite for members of the pastoral industry to become involved in tourism. There is a brochure aimed at Aboriginal communities explaining in fine detail answers to all the questions that they may have about tourism. It is entitled 'Tourism Awareness'. There is a new guide to Northern Territory Aboriginal tours, arts and crafts entitled 'Come Share Our Culture'. Also, I will table for the information of honourable members the document that has won just about every possible award: 'People of Two Times'. That document dates from 1985.

This study will highlight many of the problems that have already been identified and, more importantly, it will put them in perspective. It will set a direction in which the Northern Territory needs to head to ensure that appropriate infrastructure is developed within the necessary time frame to enable the people of the Northern Territory to benefit greatly from the obvious economic advantages of tourism. I believe that, ultimately, it will become one of the biggest income-generating and employment industries in the Northern Territory.

Report 'Who Speaks for Katherine?'

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Can he confirm that a copy of the report 'Who Speaks for Katherine?' was handed to an officer of his department in October 1987 - 1 month after the report was completed? Can he also confirm that the person who supplied the copy of the report was the Secretary of the Katherine Social Planning Committee and that the person who received it was the secretary of his own department? If he can confirm that, can he tell this House why he did not get to see that copy?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have not brought to the Assembly copies of all the so-called interim reports on this matter. I think, Mr Speaker, there are about 6 or 7 of them.

Mr Smith: So you have seen interim reports and done nothing about them?

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will be heard in silence.

Mr DALE: I was handed those reports by the chairperson of that committee a couple of days ago when he came from Katherine to talk to me about this subject because he was so disgusted with the Leader of the Opposition's misrepresentation of the entire issue. It seems that all the Leader of the Opposition has done since last year is to change his hairstyle and downgrade the health and community services portfolio in opposition ranks by taking it away from a very reasonable and responsible member, Mr Lanhupuy.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I have asked a very specific question and the minister is doing his best to avoid it. He should either answer or sit down.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, that simply shows how long it takes to get a totally incompetent person upset.

Transportation of Handicapped Children

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Could he advise what arrangements, if any, have been made this year for the transportation of handicapped schoolchildren within the Darwin area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the honourable member for Ludmilla has an ongoing interest in handicapped children. Honourable members will no doubt be aware that the member has the Ludmilla Special School within his electorate and that he takes a very specific and constructive interest in that school. The contracts for the transportation of handicapped school children in the Darwin area have now been finalised. 10-year contracts have been let, worth a total of $272 000 per annum. The contracts were re-let late last year after some rationalisation and reassessment of the tender documents which has resulted in some savings as well as an improvement in the level of the service itself. Contracts have been awarded to 3 companies: Ace Taxi Trucks, Keetleys Tours and Chadwick's Transport and each will be serving specific areas. In addition, there is provision for taxi transport of some specific individual schoolchildren.

The Territory government is very mindful of the need and the right of all Territorians to education and I am sure that the new service will prove to be most acceptable and most efficient. I congratulate the companies which have won the contracts. I understand that they have special new equipment designed to last for at least 15 years. Once again, I compliment the member for Ludmilla on his very positive attitude towards this sector of the community.

Incidents at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

I preface my question by thanking him for his previous vote of confidence. Is it a fact that a security guard has been assigned to the maternity ward at Darwin Hospital? Is it also a fact that this follows 2 attempts at baby snatching by psychiatric patients from the adjoining ward? Finally, when will he make some lasting arrangements to protect newborn babies and their mothers?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there was a second incident of a person from the psychiatric ward wandering into the maternity section of the hospital in the last week or so. I was concerned about the incident and I have instructed the management of the hospital to take all necessary steps to ensure that such an episode does not recur.

Tax Estimates

Mr DONDAS to TREASURER

On Friday 29 January 1988, the Leader of the Opposition was quoted on ABC radio as saying that the latest quarterly accounts showed that Territory taxation is down 7% on estimates in the areas of stamp duty and payroll tax. Can he confirm this situation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for Casuarina for his question. It is my sad duty to inform this House that the Leader of the Opposition has got it wrong again. We know the Leader of the Opposition is going through a difficult time with his charisma implants, a new hairstyle and the aggressive nature that we have witnessed for the first time this morning. Probably, this results from the activities of the committee that has been established to advise him. I have to tell him that the advice he is receiving is still not helping his image at all.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister has been asked to address a specific question and has not come within a bull's roar of that at this stage.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order but I would ask the minister to relate his reply to the question.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I was merely trying to point out that no amount of advice can help the Leader of the Opposition. He is about as organised as a tossed salad and as politically effective as Dennis Thatcher.

Mr Speaker, before we examine how he got it wrong, I would like to quote a comment which the Leader of the Opposition made on ABC radio this morning in his contribution to the economic debate. He said: 'It is no use denying that problems exist'. We should carve that in granite as a testament to great socialist economics. Our gloomy spokesman on economic affairs has absolutely no idea what the problems are or how to address them. How anyone who cannot understand quarterly accounts can purport to offer informed comment on our economy, I don't know. The last time we issued financial statements, he could not tell the difference between an annual and a quarterly account, as the Hansard will show. This time, he can't add up.

For the benefit of honourable members opposite, I will outline the real situation on our stamp duty and payroll tax estimates. Our 1987-88 budget shows provision for an estimated $18.025m revenue from stamp duty and $54.5m from payroll tax. Our estimates on each have been revised downwards by $975 000 and $400 000 respectively; that is, the expected total revenue from these 2 items of $72.5m is down by a total of $1.375m. My calculator indicates this to be a 1.9% reduction and nowhere near the 7% alleged by the Leader of the Opposition.

As always, the quarterly accounts provide only an interesting snapshot of the budget at that particular time. They are not a good indicator of end-of-year results unless they refer to the end of the June quarter and I never use them as an opportunity to express either praise of or concern for the budget's progress. I keep telling the Leader of the Opposition about this but he cannot help himself and insists on making inane statements predicting doom and gloom every time such accounts are released. Even the member for MacDonnell reckons he could do a better job as Leader of the Opposition. The mind boggles, Mr Speaker!

The Leader of the Opposition reminds me more of Walt Disney's sorcerer's apprentice than of a wizard. Obviously, he is recognised as such by the member for MacDonnell. We all know how dangerous a little knowledge was in the hands of the apprentice. I believe that Mickey Mouse starred in that production and Mickey Mouse economics is an apt description of the Leader of the Opposition's financial abilities.

Proposed Anderson Development

Mr HARRIS to CHIEF MINISTER

There has been considerable comment of late concerning the proposed Warren Anderson development. When will he be in a position to release further details on that particular proposal?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for the question because it gives me the opportunity to make a few basic facts clear. Firstly, the government has received a proposal which has the potential to inject a significant amount of capital works into the Darwin economy.

Mrs Padgham-Purich interjecting.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, in response to the member for Koolpinyah, I would suggest she looks very carefully at what she says about ripping up the Stuart Highway and the multiplier effects for the Darwin economy. It might help a road contractor and an asphalt maker, but what will it do for businesses in Winnellie and Berrimah and many of her subcontractor constituents who are suffering as a consequence of reduced outlays on capital works?

The reality of the situation is that a proposal has been brought to government which provides a very interesting and potentially exciting conceptual structure for this end of the city. If it is responsible and viable, it could provide the opportunity to make a significant contribution to the future structure of this section of the Darwin central business district.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: More office space will not help the situation.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I wish the member for Koolpinyah would button up and listen. She might learn something.

Mr Speaker, at this stage, we have simply received a proposal. The government is giving it serious and priority consideration in terms of the economics, practicality and the appropriateness of the project. No decision has been taken, even in principle, to proceed with this venture. It is, however, being examined very seriously. I am not prepared to be bulldozed into rushing the decision and neither is my government. We will address the matter seriously and as a matter of urgency. When the full analysis has been completed, I will be in a position to advise the honourable member whether we will proceed with it or not. I will then be in a position to address the many questions that are of obvious concern to the community, particularly matters that the member for Koolpinyah keeps chattering on about across the room.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: Aren't you going to tell us when you tell him?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I will be happy to advise all honourable members of the situation if a decision is made during the course of these sittings. Otherwise, statements will be made publicly and honourable members will have the normal opportunities to find out exactly what is going on. I can assure all honourable members that we are undertaking a detailed analysis of the cost benefits of the proposal to the government and to the Northern Territory community as a whole before making any final decision.

Tenancy of Howard Springs Community Health Clinic Building

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

I have heard well-founded rumours that the minister has made up his mind concerning the tenancy of the Howard Springs Community Health Clinic building which has been vacant for over 6 months. Can he confirm whether a decision has been made in relation to which private medical practitioner has been successful in gaining the rights of tenancy for that building?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, all honourable members will be aware that the community health centre at Howard Springs was closed because we had to make cutbacks after the federal government made enormous cuts affecting our budget. I said that, despite the closure of the centre, people who lived in the area previously serviced by it would not experience any reduction in the quality of services which they had previously received. Let me say that that is in fact the case up to this time.

I also said at the time that I believed that the closure of the centre should encourage some private practitioners to show an interest in setting up business using the facility. That, in fact, has been the case. Several doctors have put submissions to me concerning the provision of private GP services using the facility and, I might add, some of the submissions have also proposed pharmaceutical and dental services.

I have also received submissions for other uses of that building and I am now looking for other premises in the area to accommodate those services.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: Are you going to tell us what they are?

Mr DALE: When the appropriate decisions have been made, I will certainly be letting the Assembly know.

The submissions have all been considered in detail. It is true that it appears that one general practice will be going into that particular facility. Negotiations on the actual details of the deal are being examined at the moment. I anticipate that the general practitioner service will be operational in the Howard Springs area by the end of April.

Traffic Roundabout in Alice Springs

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

At what stage are the plans for the establishment of a traffic roundabout at the major Alice Springs intersection of Stott and Leichhardt Terraces?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, works on that particular intersection are about to commence. A $270 000 contract has been awarded to an Alice Springs company and work is expected to be completed by May or June this year. Honourable members will be well aware that the intersection has been extremely dangerous and was the scene of a fatal accident late last year. The member for MacDonnell, who resides in Alice Springs, might not be particularly interested in this matter but I certainly applaud the member for Araluen for his interest in road safety matters.

In addition to the work on Stott Terrace, a study is well under way on all intersections and traffic flows in Alice Springs. It is being undertaken by ...

Mr Bell: I wrote a letter about that 9 months ago and I still have not heard anything.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell is again illustrating his lack of attention in this House because the matter was reported on in the November sittings last year. The study will address all of the intersections and dangerous locations in Alice Springs and, I am sure, will lead to some sensible, practical and economic solutions to those problems.

The problem of the intersection referred to by the member for Araluen will be solved by the installation of a roundabout. Honourable members may be aware of the benefits of roundabouts as opposed to more formalised traffic signal arrangements. It is interesting to note that some public relations work carried out in Darwin recently by the Department of Transport and Works has indicated that some sectors of the community are concerned about the use of roundabouts. It seems that some people who are entrenched in their driving habits and have not been exposed previously to the use of roundabouts have some fears about them. These people tend to be older than 45, and perhaps honourable members might like to help allay such fears.

Roundabouts are certainly a cost-effective means of traffic control. They do not have the maintenance costs of traffic lights and they certainly help with traffic flow. Interstate experience and the operation of the few roundabouts which exist in the Darwin area now show that they are a most effective means of solving traffic congestion and, more importantly, dangerous situations which may result in serious or fatal accidents.

Child Protection Workers

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is it a fact that his department has been unable to provide trained child protection workers to investigate reports of child abuse, except during office hours? Has this been the case since May 1987? Is it a result of his department's failure to negotiate appropriate pay levels for after-hours work?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, welfare workers have of course been very busy working in the area of child abuse and I intend making a ministerial statement regarding that matter during these sittings. It is also the case that there have been negotiations with welfare workers concerning the terms and conditions under which they will operate after-hours services. That matter is still being negotiated with the Public Service Commissioner.

Results of Minister's Overseas Visit

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

He recently undertook an overseas visit, on behalf of the Chief Minister, to Hong Kong and South-east Asia. What positive achievements or new initiatives have developed as a result of that visit?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, since becoming responsible for this portfolio, this was my first trip to Asia on Trade Development Zone business although I have visited Brunei on matters not related to the zone. My recent trip was very useful in assessing the progress of our Trade Development Zone in the Asian region and in observing how the Northern Territory is being represented by our various agents. Honourable members will be aware that the Trade Development Zone has agents in Hong Kong, Bangkok, Singapore-Malaysia and Taipei in Taiwan. I went to all of those places on this trip and participated in seminars for potential investors conducted by the Trade Development Zone Authority. These seminars had been organised over preceding months in advance of my attendance.

In addition to the seminars, we held many meetings with potential investors, some of whom had been to Darwin on more than one occasion during the past year and prior to that to examine the prospects for their establishing businesses here. We also held a series of press conferences at each centre, with the exception of Singapore, where we advised substantial gatherings of the local media. I point out to honourable members that it is not always easy to raise enough interest in places like Hong Kong to get together a decent-sized press gathering. That is because, as a world centre of finance and business, it is a place where there is a great deal of news which, in many cases, is seen as having more importance than information generated by the Northern Territory. However, I was very pleased to see that, as a result of the hard work of our representatives there, we were able to put together a press conference attended by representatives of 10 separate organisations, including radio as well as newspapers, leading to extensive coverage.

It is important to note that every state of Australia is now represented in Hong Kong, which is the centre of the push for Asian investment. With one exception, all states use local Hong Kong agents rather than people from Australia. Australian Embassy staff in Hong Kong advised me that the Northern Territory's profile in Hong Kong, in circles in which investment is chased, is the highest of all the states. The Northern Territory is very highly regarded by the embassy staff because of our policy towards investment here and because of the attitude taken by our representatives in Hong Kong in their many approaches to the embassy, particularly on matters relating to immigration and business migration. During the last couple of years, there have been many contacts between the staff of the Trade Development Zone, particularly its chairman, Ray McHenry, and immigration officers in Hong Kong. I was very pleased to hear those officials of the Commonwealth government offer unsolicited praise for the way the Northern Territory government has gone about its business.

It appears that, unlike most of the states, the Northern Territory is seeking manufacturing investment in Hong Kong. We are seeking to bring people here to establish either a new business or a branch of their existing business and to create jobs for Australians with the attendant economic spin-offs for the whole of the Northern Territory and, indeed, the nation. It seems that many of the people who are seeking investment in places like Hong Kong, under the Business Migration Scheme, are primarily attempting to sell existing establishments, office blocks, or other forms of real estate. Whilst, I am sure that the states also seek investment in the form of overseas businesses carrying out manufacturing activities in Australia, that is the Northern Territory government's only thrust. We are not up there trying to sell off pieces of the CBD just because that will enable an investor to come here under the Australian Business Migration Plan. I am sure that is what lies behind the positive approach of the staff of the Australian Embassy to the Northern Territory government's thrust. It was certainly very good to hear that praise.

In Bangkok, 125 people attended our major seminar, which was held in the Australian Embassy. It was conducted very professionally by staff of the Trade Development Zone. Videos with a Thai commentary were shown. They depicted the zone in Darwin and the investment opportunities that exist. We also had interpreters present to translate speeches from people such as myself and the chairman of the authority. I am told that it is exceptional to attract 125 manufacturing investors to a seminar in a place like Bangkok. Normally, you are considered to be doing very well if you get 40. People there are very busy. The Thai economy is in really good shape with high levels of growth and high levels of investment from countries such as Japan, which are building vehicle factories, parts factories and so on at a furious pace. Thus, of all people in the Asian region, the Thais do not have many reasons to pack their bags and waste half a day at a seminar organised by some distant government such as that of the Northern Territory.

However, our local representatives in Bangkok have been hand-picked as people with the right connections with industry organisations. I point out that the Asians place an enormous emphasis on their respective industry associations. We have been targeting executives of chambers of commerce and chambers of manufacturers. A very good rapport has been built up and that is what resulted in 125 people attending the seminar.

As a result of that trip, between 35 and 45 new people will be coming to Darwin to have a look at the Trade Development Zone. Normally, such people come for 1 week and receive complete briefings on the government's policy and incentives for developing in the zone. We brief them on the transportation system, the communications systems, the education system and the real estate market. When investors move to the Northern Territory, they know exactly what they are letting themselves in for. They know exactly what our rules are, the nature of Australian wages and conditions and whom they can bring from overseas to assist their factories to become established and to train local workers. They know the cost of accommodation for any executives who may be based here, the costs of car registration and so on.

One group of Asian business people is leaving Darwin today at the end of its visiting program. That brings to a total 217 the number of Asian people who have paid their own way to Darwin to receive briefings on the Trade Development Zone. Many of those people are in receipt of continuing information in respect of the zone.

I point out to honourable members that the trade zone now involves 80 non-government jobs. There are 4 manufacturers in place as well as the bond store. A couple of manufacturers are talking about expanding their existing establishments and I am sure that that will be the order of the day for the future.

Attracting investors has been a slower process than we had originally hoped that it would be. We are now working on the basis that the average time between the first contact with an interested company and its actual setting up in the zone will be approximately 2 years. It is a long, slow process. Once you become involved in migration procedures, the whole system bogs down to a fair degree.

While I was away, I had the opportunity to meet with the Thai partners in the Northern Territory Thai fishing joint venture which operates from Darwin. It is sending fish products interstate and has even sent trial shipments of fish products to the United States to see whether a market exists there.

In Taipei, I met with 10 members of the Taiwanese fishing organisation that has been licensed to fish Australia's northern waters for the last 9 years. I made it very clear to that organisation that the Northern Territory government would not support a renewal of a licence after October this year, when its current licence expires, unless that licence contains a condition which will lead to the establishment of shore facilities in Darwin. The representatives accepted that as a matter of principle and sought our assistance in negotiations with the Commonwealth to extend the period of the licence. To date, these have been issued for periods of 12 months. As the representatives rightly claimed, it is difficult to expect people to spend considerable money investing onshore in a foreign country when they only have a 12-month period in which to recoup their expenditure. We will be supporting a licence period of at least 3 years but hopefully it will be 5 years. I have reason to believe that the Commonwealth is amenable to that proposal.

I advise honourable members that the trip was very successful. Probably, it should have been my third visit rather than my first since assuming this portfolio. I see very good reasons for my making occasional visits to those areas in the near future. People in Asia place great store by having a government minister address their organisations.

Electrical Connection Fee

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Has the Power and Water Authority commenced charging a connection fee of $5000 to consumers who wish to connect 50 kVA and more?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will get back to the honourable member with an answer during the course of these sittings.

Spillage at Ranger Uranium Mine

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is he completely satisfied that the spillage incident at Ranger Uranium Mine on 2 February was contained without damage to the environment and that all safety procedures were followed?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for Casuarina for his question. Of course, his concern is twofold, arising from his membership of both the Northern Territory government and the Sessional Committee on the Environment. I understand that, in fact, he is the chairman of that committee.

I received a report on the incident at Ranger within 24 hours of its occurrence. In summary, the report said that the incident was minor and of no real concern, that no spillage occurred outside the restricted release zone, that personnel were not exposed to any danger and that no detriment to the environment had occurred. Senator Richardson made great play of the fact that he had demanded a report and so on. As a matter of courtesy, I have forwarded to him the report which I received.

What happened was simply this. On 1 February, Ranger restarted its mill after a 2-month shutdown. As is usual during start-up, froth was produced in one of the processors and it was allowed to flow in controlled fashion into the bunded area under the tanks that run-off was to flow into. The pump returning the liquid to the tank began to cavitate, causing the liquid to build up until it flowed through a crack in the bund. Some of this liquid flowed into a drain which discharges into the retention pond, which is exactly what is supposed to happen in these circumstances. Hardly a big deal, Mr Speaker, for Ranger, the Department of Mines and Energy or the Office of the Supervising Scientist. It was a very big deal, however, for the radical element of the environment movement: Chernobyl Mark II or the beginning of the end of civilisation as we know it. It just proved, they said, that the Coronation Hill project had to be stopped. Curious logic, Mr Speaker! How does a potential goldmine at Coronation Hill relate to an actual mine at Ranger? The mining processes are totally different and, in any case, the safety net worked just as it was supposed to do.

I am no longer surprised by the verbal excesses of the environmental lobby but what does surprise me is the apparent credibility it still retains with the media after so many examples of blatant exaggeration, scaremongering and half truths. If it continues in its present direction, people will be arrested for eating eggs on the grounds that they are consuming unborn chickens. We have come to expect immaturity from the messengers of doom in the Environment Centre, but I wish the media would show a bit more maturity in its reporting of the Environment Centre's outrageous beat-ups.

Sadadeen Secondary College Stage 2

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

In view of the likelihood of overcrowding at the Sadadeen Secondary College in 1989, when does the government intend to build stage 2 and have it ready for use?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can advise the honourable member that the second stage of the Sadadeen Secondary College is on the design list. I am currently investigating, as part of the research into the Commonwealth's Green Paper, the further development of the interface between ASCOT - the Alice Springs College of TAFE - and the Sadadeen Secondary College. However, the member for Sadadeen can rest assured that the government of the Northern Territory has the situation well in hand.

Higher Education in the Northern Territory

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Higher education is in the spotlight at the present time and we must make sure that we are united in our efforts to come to grips with the issue; otherwise, Territorians will be disadvantaged. Unfortunately, it appears at present that those involved are moving in different directions. What is the minister doing to ensure that the Territory approach to the federal government regarding this very important issue is a united one?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Port Darwin for his question. My comments this morning relating to public squabbling were directed at the people whom I expect to sit down rationally around a table to discuss matters. They have, in fact, already begun to do this. I was attempting to say that this cannot be achieved through letters to the editor and disruptive activities circumventing the consultation process, such as reports falling off the backs of trucks or being wrapped in brown paper and changing hands in a bar. Mr Speaker, all I am saying is that people in responsible positions should not be seen to be choking themselves to death in public. However, I support rational debate and any public discussion of these matters has my full support. The more of it, the better. I am happy to see it happen.

It is important to note that, some 3½ weeks ago, I instigated a working party made up of those people who are directly involved in the decisions on and in the formulation of various responses to the Green Paper. These people, who come from the University College, the DIT and the Department of Education, have already sat around a table. They have developed their positions. We cannot really expect them to agree, but what I wanted to achieve was a starting point which related to people's known positions, their areas of agreement and their areas of disagreement. This has been achieved. The DIT council met last night. I have spoken to its chairman and I am aware of its direction. I have spoken to Professor Thompson at the University College and I am aware of his position.

Last Friday in Melbourne, I chaired a meeting of the Australian Education Council which involved the education ministers of all states and the federal minister, John Dawkins. There was unanimous agreement at that meeting concerning the general direction and the 5 principles of the Green Paper and it is important to note that direct discussions with the federal minister certainly highlighted areas not sufficiently addressed in the Green Paper. One of these relates to formula funding based on enrolment numbers and the student units which relate to those enrolments. Many things are happening in the area of higher education, including amalgamation, consolidation and other initiatives.

To his credit, John Dawkins gave a very detailed explanation at the ministers' meeting of matters of relevance to amalgamation and consolidation in such places as Tasmania, the Western District of Victoria, South Australia and various outback areas of New South Wales and Queensland. The matter is virtually an open book. In this context, one very important fact is that we have a timetable in place for the development of a submission to the Commonwealth. That has been agreed upon with the federal minister. I have fixed dates for continuing discussions. A further meeting of the Executive Council of the Education Ministers of Australia will take place in Melbourne in April, where the matter will again be raised. My prime objective is this: to achieve a situation that allows every Northern Territory education institution equal rights, on an equitable basis, with such institutions in the rest of Australia. That, of course, includes the appropriate funding.

In this context, I welcome some of the comments made on this morning's Territory Extra by the member for Stuart, the opposition spokesman on education. He said: 'We must have a tertiary institution which not only is, but is perceived to be, equal with anything here in Australia or overseas. We also have to ensure that our education system fits in with the Territory's needs'. That is quite correct although he is about 3 weeks late. He also said that the Green Paper is a window of opportunity. It certainly is, but members opposite have a different interpretation of what that means. They believe it is an opportunity for them to backtrack at a million miles an hour on some of their previous statements on the establishment of the University College of the Northern Territory.

The member for Stuart knows full well that, this year already, enrolments at the University College total 440. We were not anticipating that level of enrolment until 1991. I have to ask the member for Stuart: what do Territorians want, and what do they need? Is their disinterest in the University College so obvious? Of course it is not. They are very encouraged by the quality of the degrees and the various courses at the University College, otherwise they would not be enrolling in the numbers that they are. The 440 enrolments at the University College include about 15 overseas students.

It is also important to note the level of enrolments at the DIT. Enrolments in advanced education courses are: external 199, full-time 826, and part-time 766, giving a total of 1711. Enrolments in the TAFE area are: external 46, full-time 314 and part-time 1855, making a total of 2215, coupled with 55 overseas students. By the way, that enrolment brings revenue to the college of some $400 000 this year. Total enrolment at DIT is 3981.

There was one further comment that the member for Stuart made this morning on Territory Extra, and I will not be too tough on him because I would like to give him the opportunity to correct it. However, he did make it, and I am rather aghast if it reflects the direction of honourable members opposite because, if it does, we are in all sorts of trouble. He said: 'If we can put together something this year, a package which will allow our tertiary institutions' - and this is the part which counts - 'to be fully funded by the Northern Territory government with both recurrent and capital expenditure, to give us that standard excellence that we all agree on'.

Would the honourable member like to say that he was a bit excited at the time and could not collect his thoughts, and that really he meant the Commonwealth government? Mr Speaker, that remark shows the member's lack of attention to detail in addressing issues of considerable importance. We all know the role that the Commonwealth plays in funding higher education, not only in the Northern Territory but all over Australia.

What I want to highlight is that we have a process in place and a timetable. The member for Stuart is quite correct in saying that the Green Paper presents a window of opportunity. Face-to-face discussions with the federal minister were required to ensure that the directions which we want to consider and discuss in the Territory would be considered in the light, not only of their true merit to the education system in the Northern Territory but in terms of the best possible end result for Northern Territorians. Because of our enrolment figures, the funding formulas contained in the Green Paper will seriously disadvantage the Northern Territory unless there is consideration of special circumstances. That discussion has taken place and certain undertakings have been given by the federal minister.

I welcome the member for Stuart's announcement that he will be travelling to Melbourne or Canberra to catch up with the federal minister. I hope that he does not perform his usual trick of disrupting the whole process with his ranting and raving. I have a direction in place that has been accepted by the federal minister and I will be pursuing it rigorously to ensure that Northern Territorians are not disadvantaged in any way, shape or form in the areas of higher education, TAFE funding and the development of future facilities. It is an area of great concern to me. We have 5 or 6 different options open to us, all beneficial to Territorians and it is just a matter of reaching agreement with the federal government. I am very pleased with the attitude towards the Northern Territory displayed by the federal minister. I hope I can welcome similar comments and constructive criticisms from members opposite.

Effluent Overflow in Ludmilla Creek

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I refer to the widely reported problem of sewage effluent overflow in Ludmilla Creek in my electorate. Can he assure me that there is no health risk to the people of my electorate, particularly to the children of the Ludmilla Preschool, the primary school and the Montessori school and, secondly, that the problem is being addressed and will be rectified?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for Ludmilla for his question. The issue has been of great concern to him and he has made representation to my office on several occasions over the last few days in relation to it. I can assure him that the sewage effluent backup has not gone as far upstream as the Ludmilla school or the area around his own electorate office. Ludmilla Creek appears to have become identified with the well-known creek which people sometimes refer to as a result of the opening of a valve to allow the ingress of stormwater into the sewerage system. The valve is left open during the wet season to allow this excess stormwater to dissipate more readily, mainly to protect some low-lying blocks in the Ludmilla area, particularly in section 4052.

The problem has arisen as a result of the sewerage pipe in that region developing cracks and slips in the joints which allow stormwater to enter the creek. The product that emerges is somewhat diluted as a result of the excessive flow of water but the Leader of the Opposition, who I understand has some expertise in this area, can verify that the material entering the creek included some matter rather more solid than water.

The problem with the pipe is being addressed by the Power and Water Authority which will carry out a process known as 'reveal and seal'. A television camera is placed in the sewerage line and travels along it. It has been suggested that some sympathy should be extended to the monitor in this process as he studies the passage of the television camera through the sewerage network. It is not an easy job. We on this side of the House of course are used to it because we get a fair bit of it thrown at us from the opposition from time to time. The reveal-and-seal process will identify the location of cracks in the joints, after which a special epoxy resin will be used to seal the lines. There is no need to dig up large strips of pipeline to carry out repairs. The procedure will cost in the vicinity of $700 000 and that has been budgeted for.

The problem need not have been as great if a valve, which was installed to prevent the backup of material during heavy storms, had not been left open for an inordinate length of time. Officers will be paying more attention to the opening and closing of this valve in the future. I can assure the member for Ludmilla that the reveal-and-seal process will begin soon and I sincerely hope that that new name which has been given to the creek will soon be changed.

Incidents at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Will he confirm that a psychiatric patient from Ward 5 in the Royal Darwin Hospital was recently found on the sixth floor in the Special Care Nursery where premature babies are kept in humidity cribs or on life support systems?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot confirm that at this stage. The honourable member referred to the sixth floor. I assume he is not referring to the recent case where a patient went from Ward 5A to 5B. I shall seek advice on the matter and advise the House during these sittings.

Shared Equity Home Ownership Scheme

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Can he advise on the progress towards implementation of the proposed Shared Equity Home Ownership Scheme?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Shared Equity Home Purchase Scheme is one of the innovations promised by this government. It will provide the opportunity for single-income families to be able to purchase part equity in a house and, in future years, to take up full equity. Such a program has been introduced in other areas of Australia with very limited success. A scheme was presented to Cabinet recently and, after some discussion, it was felt that there needed to be some changes to the scheme. I am concerned to ensure that mistakes which have occurred in southern states should not occur here. I have asked my department to investigate some aspects of the scheme, to examine the problems interstate and to produce a revised version. However, I would like the member for Karama, whose ...

Mr Bell: Why did you promise it at election time?

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I can assure the member for MacDonnell and all honourable members in this House that not only will the concept provide assistance to low-income families but that it is a concept of which we are very proud. It will come to fruition. I can assure the member for MacDonnell that, prior to the next election, even constituents in his electorate will be able to participate in the scheme. Instead of deriding the scheme ...

Mr Bell: Not deriding.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell will cease interjecting. I warned a number of honourable members yesterday. Today, I will tolerate none. I advise honourable members, as I have in the past, that this part of the parliamentary proceedings is being broadcast throughout the Territory. In fairness to the general public, honourable members should remain silent while questions are being asked and replies are being given.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, instead of deriding the scheme and the time involved in processing it, the honourable member should be concerned about the fact that, when the scheme was rushed into operation in some of the Labor states, it was found to have great problems which caused undue hardship to people who could least afford it. Most sensible people would agree that, before such a scheme is introduced in the Territory, we must ensure that all the pitfalls are covered and that it will not cause problems for the people who participate in it. It should achieve what it sets out to achieve, which is to enable single-income families to purchase at least partial equity in a house and to give them some stake in the Territory. The derisory comments of members opposite typify their attitude because they do not care about ordinary Territorians. They would rather see us rush into some process that causes hardship. Mr Speaker, I can assure you that I will not be doing that.

Magistrate's Dismissal of Case

Mr COLLINS to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Is it legal for a magistrate to dismiss a case when the prosecution is not in court on time, as happened in Alice Springs recently?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I believe that, under standing orders, it is not appropriate for me to give a legal opinion in this House to another member.

Child Protection Workers

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

This is the same question that I asked yesterday and I hope I will get a straight answer. Will he confirm that there has been no after-hours child protection service by trained staff since May 1987, and will he confirm that this means that, at the time when children are most at risk, no trained staff are available?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in late May 1987, the welfare workers ceased providing after-hours welfare services in support of a demand for higher remuneration for participation on the after-hours roster. In July 1987, I approved a basis for negotiation with welfare workers to recommence the service in Darwin and Alice Springs with improved remuneration. The Public Service Commissioner's office has been negotiating with the relevant unions since that time.

Mr Speaker, 2 separate offers have been made to the unions and have been rejected. They have simply failed to respond. In fact, the unions have had an offer from the Public Service Commissioner now for quite some weeks. Probably unfortunately, I have been flagging my intention to take action in relation to the problem of child abuse. I wonder whether the unions' lack of response is an attempt to place pressure on me when I introduce measures to assist some of our children in the Northern Territory.

The service is being carried out by senior public servants. I know that the welfare workers of this Northern Territory government's Department of Health and Community Services are extremely dedicated people, and they are overworked. We are looking forward to negotiating a reasonable settlement to this dispute but, if the unions want to sit on their hands whilst we are waiting to implement measures in respect of child abuse, there is little that I can do to provide the appropriate services to the people of the Northern Territory and, particularly, our kids. Now that he has been given the enormous task of taking on the shadow ministry of health and community services, I would advise the member for MacDonnell to get off his butt. He should not just be sitting around and criticising what is happening in a very delicate area; he should get out and try to negotiate with the unions to resolve the issues.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I think the terms being used by the honourable minister are decidedly ...

Mr Dale: You used it yesterday.

Mr BELL: In answer to that interjection, Mr Speaker, I very rarely use anatomical reference of that sort inside the parliament. In terms of vocabulary, I appreciate that the Minister for Health and Community Services has a fairly severe limitation to a basic 500 words of English, but I would suggest that the half dozen of them that are offensive and unparliamentary should be ruled out of order.

Mr Dale: I have never claimed to be a linguist who sits around doing nothing but study words; I am a doer. I withdraw the term that I used, Mr Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER: I had not ruled on the point of order. I believe that there are probably more descriptive terms which I would regard as being unparliamentary. I do not know that the term used by the honourable minister would, at least in this instance, be regarded as unparliamentary, but possibly there are more refined words that could be used.

Army Worm Infestation

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he outline what controls on monitoring procedures have been introduced to combat the recent army worm infestation found in Top End grain crops?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, an outbreak of day-feeding army worm, Spodoptera exempta, which honourable members will be familiar with, was reported by several farms in the Katherine district on 28 January. These day-feeding army worms rarely cause extensive economic damage to Northern Territory crops. I am informed that the last serious outbreak occurred in February and March 1973, when quite large numbers of larvae severely damaged crops throughout northern Australia and Papua New Guinea.

The infested properties in the Katherine area have now been sprayed successfully. The spraying recommendations came from the department's entomologists in Darwin. All other crops around Katherine were inspected and all farmers were warned of possible army worm infestation, either directly, by phone or via broadcast rural reports.

The damaged sorghum crops have recovered extremely well from the army worm attack and only minimal yield losses should result. The entomology section has established a chain of pheromone traps which, as honourable members will be aware, are designed to capture only army worm moths. These traps are located on properties from Gunn Point to Daly Waters and should enable the early detection of any future army worm outbreak which will, of course, be responded to promptly.

Norman Lawson Case

Mr TIPILOURA to CHIEF MINISTER

Has he formally rejected a request from Mr Henry Lawson for a coronial inquiry into the suspected death of his son, Norman, and if so, can he explain on what basis?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Arafura for giving me the courtesy of advance notice of this question. The Norman Lawson case is a very tragic one, particularly for the family concerned. To remind honourable members, on Sunday 19 October 1986, Norman Lawson went to the old South Alligator crossing with 4 other persons. On Wednesday 22 October 1986, he was seen to walk away from the river crossing carrying a throw net. Since then he has not been sighted. An extensive police search and investigation has failed to locate Norman Lawson. The latest development is a recently reported sighting of Norman in the Darwin area and that is being investigated by the Darwin CIB. The investigation is being conducted as a missing person inquiry and is not subject to a coronial inquest.

To answer the honourable member's question specifically, the coroner has perused the file and has found that there is insufficient evidence to reach the conclusion that Lawson is deceased. It is not, therefore, within his jurisdiction to conduct an inquiry and that is why there has been no coronial inquiry. The matter has been referred to the coroner and he has said that there is insufficient evidence that young Norman is in fact deceased and therefore he could not conduct an inquiry. The matter is being treated seriously by the police as a missing person inquiry and the latest sightings are being investigated with vigour by our CIB.

Cullen Bay Marina Proposal

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Constituents of mine in Kahlín are concerned about recent activities in the form of drilling surveys being carried out in the area that is proposed to be developed as a marina. I ask the minister, what is the reason for the work presently being carried out, and what is the current position of the Hans Vos marina proposal?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to be able to advise the member for Port Darwin, who has certainly pursued this matter on behalf of his constituents in recent times. The geotechnical survey work carried out in early February was supplementary to work carried out last year to ascertain the condition of the bottom of the harbour in that region, both in terms of the bedrock levels and consistency and, of course, the nature of the deposits above that. Obviously, that work is very important in order to estimate construction details precisely and, therefore, construction costs of the works associated with the Cullen Bay Marina.

Honourable members would be aware that, some 2 years ago, this government determined that it would support the development of a ferry terminal there, which previously was to have been located close to the Legislative Assembly building. When Hans Vos and his colleagues came forward with a proposal for a marina that would provide facilities for private boat owners, yachties and people who wished to live in that environment, his suggestion was that the terminal might be best associated with his development. The government was keen to see him pursue those endeavours and, in negotiations, has determined the most appropriate arrangements for a level of government investment to provide ferry facilities which would cater to charter boats operating in the harbour, now and in the future.

The work at Cullen Bay certainly had no impact on the environment. I suppose people assumed that the project was commencing, but the activity was simply survey work carried out by means of a small boat. The developer is now in a position to refine his estimates of costs and the market value of his proposal. He has received from the government a list of specific lease terms for the total development and that is adequate for him in his discussions with potential investors. We certainly wish him well because the marina would provide a much-needed facility and a most appropriate one for Territorians and tourists. It would also provide a level of construction work which would benefit the community. The ball is now very much in the developer's court; it is up to him to demonstrate the feasibility of the proposal and I look forward to hearing from him in the near future. I understand that he and his colleagues are currently interstate talking to potential investors and I hope that he will be able to proceed very shortly.

Northern Territory Pavilion at Expo

Mr EDE to CHIEF MINISTER

Is it a fact that the Northern Territory Cabinet has made a last-minute decision to mount a pavilion at Expo, 10 weeks before Expo starts? Is it a fact that construction of the pavilion will cost in the vicinity of $300 000 and is it also a fact that, as a result of making the decision at the eleventh hour, all construction and other work on the pavilion will have to be done by companies from outside the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will seek to address this rather convoluted and confusing question in the best way possible and take the opportunity to provide some information to the House in respect of the Brisbane Expo. It is true that Cabinet has taken a decision that the Northern Territory will now participate in the Expo in Brisbane. The government's earlier decision was that, because of the costs involved and the budgetary restraints imposed on the Northern Territory in the last 2 years, we could not afford to go ahead with the presentation at Brisbane Expo. At that time, a number of the states were equally considering their positions in relation to Expo.

Late in January of this year, Sir Lew Edwards, the organiser of the International Expo, wrote to me as Chief Minister requesting that we reconsider our position. He advised that he had kept aside some prime space at the Expo in case we were prepared to reconsider but that we needed to make a quick decision. He advised that, at that stage, all states were now participating in the Expo and also that its success is now well-assured with 7.1 million visitations already having been pre-sold.

Obviously, Expo will provide a significant opportunity for marketing of the Northern Territory both as a tourist destination and as a place for business investment. As a result, Cabinet took the decision to send officers from the Department of Industries and Development and the Tourist Commission to Brisbane to examine the feasibility of the Territory participating in the Expo. The report from that group came to Cabinet last week. It proposed that, for a total of $500 000, we could mount a creditable and beneficial display at that Expo. Assistance is available from the federal government in the form of a $100 000 subsidy and Expo organisers have offered to make staff available, at no cost to us, to hand out pamphlets and other information at the display. It will be used as a principal vehicle for marketing the Northern Territory, both for tourism and industry development, and the budget allows for displays within the period. We are quite confident that the money will be efficiently and effectively used to promote the Northern Territory as a place to visit and a place to invest in.

We were assisted in our decision when our first budget review indicated the success of our strategy of restraint in recreating the financial foundations of our budget which has given us the opportunity to participate in more positive promotion of the Northern Territory. In that regard, I particularly compliment the many people throughout the public service who, over the last year, have gone through quite considerable trauma due to the reorganisation and restraint that has necessarily been imposed on them. Their efforts have greatly assisted us in achieving a balanced situation and have created the opportunity for us to act far more positively in promoting the development of the Northern Territory. I compliment the many people in the public service who, in difficult circumstances, have done a creditable job to assist us in what has been a very difficult and traumatic task. The government is confident it will be a positive initiative.

In respect of the honourable member's final point, I cannot provide details about who will be undertaking the development. The stand will be set up in Brisbane. We have been advised by the people who put forward the proposal that there is sufficient time to develop the stand and to display a very presentable face for the Northern Territory at this Expo. I look forward to its success and to our participation in what will be a very successful Expo.

Mr Speaker, in conclusion, over the last 4 years ...

Mr Ede: No spin-offs for Territory business?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, if our government is down there promoting the Northern Territory as a place for investment and as a tourist destination, there will be a direct benefit to the businesses of the Northern Territory and the development of jobs in the Northern Territory. At the moment, I am unable to advise whether or not a specific contract is being let to a Northern Territory firm to construct this particular facility in Brisbane.

Darwin, Katherine and Jabiru Electricity Transmission Link

Mr REED to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Is he able to provide further information regarding the proposed electricity transmission line to link Darwin, Katherine and Jabiru?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am indeed in a position to advise the member for Katherine on developments in relation to the 132 kV transmission lines that are proposed to be constructed - one from Darwin to Katherine and another from Darwin to Jabiru. These are innovative proposals which offer an opportunity to put a power grid across the top half of the Northern Territory from some of the mining corporations developing in the Pine Creek and Cosmo Howley areas and perhaps even to provide reticulated electricity to the Douglas Daly farm region. I have spoken in this Assembly before about the economics of providing a powerline to connect the Katherine region with the Darwin Channel Island Power Station and the various economies that could be achieved as a result of that.

I would like to add that we have had full cooperation from Energy Resources of Australia who have entered into the spirit of the project on the basis of 'let's see what the bottom line is and then we will negotiate'. It has been extremely cooperative in its attempts to see this project become a success.

For the past 12 months, the authority has been pursuing proposals regarding the construction of the 132 kV transmission line interconnectors from Darwin to Jabiru, a distance of 270 km, and to Katherine, a distance of 300 km. Consultants have been appointed to coordinate work necessary for environmental impact statements and the preparation of transmission line and terminal substation technical performance specifications. Should project approvals be obtained, the present schedule is for completion by October 1989.

On 3 October 1987, the authority called for expressions of interest from parties seeking to design, construct, finance and own the interconnectors. By 11 November 1987, the registration closure date, 25 expressions of interest were received. After additional information was directed to the interested parties, 15 formal expressions of interest were registered and on 26 November 1987, 5 pre-qualifiers were issued detailed project performance specifications and invited to submit detailed proposals by 15 February 1988.

Mr Speaker, those processes have been carried out and a Cabinet submission will be made when the proposals have been assessed. We are looking for both legal advice and financial advice on the packages that have been provided to us and this is currently scheduled to be available by the end of March 1988. I will not go into the proposals in great detail because of their confidential nature, but they do offer Territorians a great opportunity to participate in the development of the tower structures for the 2 lines. The initial project proposals were budgeted at about $62m. I understand that considerable savings can be achieved by having the 2 powerlines considered together.

There are some grey areas in terms of positioning power transmission lines in Kakadu National Park. We have engaged a consultant to work on that proposal and I certainly hope that it gets the go-ahead from the Australian National Parks and Wildlife Service. It is not unusual to have power transmission lines in national parks and I certainly hope that common sense will prevail and that we do not have to put plastic branches on the towers to camouflage them. The need to supply power transmission lines into Jabiru is evident, now that we are developing Jabiru as a hub for Kakadu National Park. The development of the motel unit, and the interest in developing a new 200-bay caravan park indicate the need for increased power supplies. Electricity is presently supplied from the power house at Ranger Mine.

Equally, the rapid growth of Katherine, which was expounded upon by the opposition yesterday in a very negative way, has led to increased demand for electricity. With the new supermarket consuming almost 1 MW and the meatworks coming on stream and consuming about 1.5 MW, there continues to be an increasing demand for power in the region. When we developed the $33m power station for Katherine, we installed an additional bay to supply another generator on that site. It is hoped that the economies of scale that may be achieved by the development of an interconnector from Channel Island to Katherine will alleviate the need to supply that additional generator and that we will be able to meet the needs via the excess capacity which currently exists at Channel Island Power Station. I, for one, look forward to the development of these 2 very exciting projects within the near future.

Assistance to New South Wales Liberal Party

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he assure the House and the people of the Northern Territory that no persons in the employ of the Northern Territory government or receiving incomes deriving from the Northern Territory coffers, have been sent or will be sent to New South Wales to assist Nick Greiner in his attempt to emulate Robert Askin?

ANSWER

No, I will not.

Incident at Berrimah Police Headquarters

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he give any information about an incident that occurred at Berrimah Police Centre earlier today?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for his question because, in the course of some heated debates in the last 24 hours, there has been some criticism to the effect that the police force has no human face, and people such as the Leader of the Opposition have inferred that the police are somehow engaging in unreasonable practices. In that context, I think it is valuable for all members present to hear of an incident which occurred this morning and which shows the extent to which our police are actively and sensitively involved in assisting members of the community in a multitude of ways.

I am advised that this morning a couple residing at Palmerston suddenly realised that their eagerly-awaited baby had decided to make an entrance into the world with very little warning. In the dash to town, they realised the impossibility of reaching the Royal Darwin Hospital in time and the father-to-be, who was driving the car, became quite distressed. What did he do? He drove immediately to where he thought he would get the best help in the quickest possible time. He went straight to the Berrimah Police Centre. There, in the car park, 2 police officers who were in the process of coming off duty after the midnight shift, assisted the couple to successfully deliver a baby daughter. The officers were Senior Constable Gary Wenck and Constable Fiona Pooley. The baby was delivered safely and the mother and child, both in good health, were taken by ambulance to Royal Darwin Hospital.

I would like to offer my congratulations to the 2 police officers, who were obviously tired after a long and strenuous evening on night shift, for their prompt and considerate assistance. I add my own thanks to those of the parents of the child for this prompt and efficient assistance. It is yet another example of the way in which our police force acts in a wide range of areas to support the community. It also demonstrates how members of the force are regarded by the community as people to turn to when help is needed, contrary to the ill-informed criticism that comes from members opposite from time to time.

Pastoral Leases and Covenants

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Is the government equally vigilant in its administration of all pastoral leases and their covenants, especially in the Top End and, if slackness in fulfilling these covenants by lessees is apparent in some cases, what will he do to make pastoral lessees responsible for their stewardship of government land?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have no knowledge of anything that would indicate that preferential treatment is being given to any particular pastoralist in any area.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: Do you want me to tell you which one?

Mr MANZIE: If the honourable member can supply me with information which she thinks may lead me to suspect that there is a possibility that this is happening, I will certainly take up the matter on her behalf and also on behalf of the government. Obviously, within reason, we have a duty to ensure that people do the right thing in relation to their land and in relation to covenants. I think we would also expect the officers concerned with that work to utilise some common sense in not acting immediately according to the letter of the law, but enabling problem situations to be resolved with goodwill on both sides. Most certainly, if the honourable member believes that there is a problem and can provide me with details, I will address it.

ANSWER TO QUESTION

Psychiatric Patient at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr DALE (Health and Community Services): Mr Speaker, earlier today, I was asked a question by the member for MacDonnell regarding an incident of a psychiatric patient - or 'dangerous person', to use the term I think he used - going to Ward 6 of the Royal Darwin Hospital. Mr Speaker, I have received no report of an incident of that nature involving the special care nursery. However, I would advise the honourable member that, if his informants are going to give him a day-by-day description of every single incident that takes place at the Royal Darwin Hospital so that he may concoct questions ...

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Minister for Health and Community Services used the term 'concoct', which implies that I am telling lies to the Assembly. I request that he retract that.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I was simply implying that the honourable member is being given information by staff at the hospital, and is using that to put together questions to ask in this House.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr DALE: Perhaps I understand the word 'concoct' better than the honourable linguist does. However, I would point out to the honourable member and his informant that, if an unfortunate woman happens to be under some stress and strain that requires her to be in Ward 5A, and if that lady has had a baby at about that time, then I think it absolutely reasonable that such a woman, escorted by a nurse, should be able to go and see her own child. I hope the member for MacDonnell does not want me to lock that woman away from her child.

TAB Turnover

Mr DONDAS to TREASURER

Can he advise that the immediate TAB turnover increased following linking with the Victorian TAB last year and that the increase has been sustained through 1988?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I certainly can provide that information to the member for Casuarina. May I preface my answer by saying that I am in a position to talk about racing, which is far more than members of the opposition appear to be able to do. Yesterday, I rang the office of the Leader of the Opposition to find out who was the shadow spokesman on racing. Nobody knew who it was and I was told that I would be rung back. Later, we rang again. They were still not sure but it would appear that there has been ...

Mr Leo: I have always been the spokesman. I am over here, Barry.

Mr COULTER: Could somebody tell the Leader of the Opposition's office staff that, please, because they don't know.

Mr Leo: I told you yesterday.

Mr COULTER: It appears that there has been a division. Racing has been kept within one area whilst the member for MacDonnell has kept, say, the casinos. My job would be made considerably easier if I knew, and the Leader of the Opposition might also be happier if he knew, who the shadow spokesman on racing was. He never knows who is behind his back anyway.

Mr Speaker, the TAB turnover has been a very big success story. The TAB was knocked by the opposition which argued that it should not have been set up and had no place in the Northern Territory. The government, however, resolved to bring in the TAB.

The TAB turnover for 1987-88 is now estimated to be $30m. For the benefit of honourable members, the turnover in 1985-86, when the opposition was canning the TAB, was $18.6m. In 1986-87, it was $22.6m. The TAB budgeted for a turnover of $25.8m this year, a 14% increase on the previous year's. However, turnover is now expected to reach $30m, which will be a 33% increase over the 1986-87 figure.

The increase can be attributed to 4 factors. As the member for Casuarina mentioned, the first is the linking of win/place pools with the Victorian TAB. Sky Channel has made a fantastic success of racing right throughout Australia. The interest that is now shown in racing as a result of the advent of Sky Channel has helped promote that industry considerably.

With PubTAB, we have come a long way in 3 years. Three years ago this Legislative Assembly had legislation outlawing alcohol on betting premises. Today, we have betting premises in hotels. PubTAB has been an outstanding success. Whilst the shadow spokesman on racing wants to talk to me about that, the facts cannot be denied. The turnover and the amount of money available to racing has increased greatly since the advent of PubTAB. I guess the opposition will knock that too. I will deal with that when members opposite knock it, as they have knocked every other government initiative.

The flow-on from major promotional campaigns from 1987 has also had a dramatic effect on racing in the Northern Territory. The extra increase from PubTAB has not reduced the turnover at agencies and that is interesting. I guess that is one of the issues which the shadow spokesman will raise when he gets ...

Mr Leo: What has it done to the oncourse bookies, mate?

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, the honourable member asks what it has done to oncourse bookies or what it has done to the people attending race clubs. When the TAB legislation was introduced, the member for Fannie Bay, who was then the responsible minister, brought into this Assembly an article which predicted exactly what would happen to racing crowds in Australia on the basis of what had occurred in North America: the crowds would diminish. At Flemington, one of the biggest racecourses in Australia, less than 5000 people attended a recent meeting. Reduced oncourse attendances happen to be a fact of life but the opposition has no understanding of the facts of life. Racing will continue, though, and the major carnivals will be the drawcard. The money that is contributed via PubTAB and so on will assist racing throughout Australia.

The contributions from TAB to the Racecourse Development Fund, which is 1.5% of turnover, will increase to $450 000 this year against the original budget of $387 000. It is estimated that the TAB's net profit will be around $1.2m and this will result in the doubling of the TAB contribution to Consolidated Revenue this year. The contribution to the Industry Assistance Fund will be $600 000. I accept that there has been a downturn in receipts from bookmakers' turnover tax, but I suggest that that is simply a fact of life. I would like to point out to the shadow spokesman on racing that Pioneer Park in Alice Springs now has an Adelaide-based bookmaker who flies there each weekend. That is an example of confidence in Northern Territory racing and I congratulate the person concerned. We have heard opposition members whingeing about TAB before. I have demonstrated to this side of the House that the TAB has been very successful in the Northern Territory.

Assistance to New South Wales Liberal Party

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

How many people in the employ of the Northern Territory government have been sent to New South Wales to assist the New South Wales Liberal Party in the forthcoming New South Wales election, for how long have those people been sent and what is the cost to the Northern Territory taxpayer of sending those people to New South Wales?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, let us put this into its proper context. It is true that, during election campaigns right around this country, political parties assist each other in fighting such campaigns. That has never been regarded as an improper course of action. It was not regarded as improper by members opposite when, during the last Northern Territory election campaign, they brought in Premier Bannon and his staff, federal ministers and their staff ...

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The question has been asked and the Chief Minister will be heard in silence while he gives his reply.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the point that I am making is that assistance provided by political colleagues around the country is not an abnormal practice and it has never been regarded as an improper practice. The Leader of the Opposition took advantage of such assistance during his campaign last year. The member for Barkly and his group took advantage of people on the government payroll when fighting his election campaign last year. If I believe it will be of assistance to us ...

Mr Smith: Who is us?

Mr HATTON: The Northern Territory. If we decide that it is appropriate to follow what has been a common practice around this nation - providing assistance to political colleagues - I will do so. I was asked specifically in the first instance if I would give a guarantee that we would not do so and I said no.

Mr Speaker, I do not propose to answer the details of the honourable member's question.

Mr Leo: You do not intend to answer any part of it.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am prepared to consider putting assistance into election campaigns elsewhere if I believe it is appropriate. I do not apologise for it.

Government Consultancies

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

How many consultancies does Mr Graeme Lewis have with the Northern Territory government and what is the purpose of those consultancies?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, to my knowledge, Mr Graeme Lewis has no consultancies with the Northern Territory government.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
LNG Plant at Alice Springs

Mr COULTER (Mines and Energy): Mr Speaker, in Tuesday evening's adjournment debate, the member for MacDonnell asked some questions about the LNG plant to be established at Alice Springs. In particular, he was interested in the supply of LNG to Yulara. I would like to provide the information that the honourable member was seeking.

A contract was signed on 16 April 1987 between Energy Equity Corporation Ltd and the Power and Water Authority for the purchase of supplying regasified LNG at Yulara. Energy Equity Corporation Ltd will purchase gas from the Power and Water Authority to be supplied from the Palm Valley to Alice Springs gas pipeline, liquified at the Brewer Estate and delivered by road transport to the Power and Water Authority power generation facility.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I am quite sure the Clerk will correct me on this if I am wrong. I am certainly interested in the minister's answer but I believe that, whilst ministers are given a certain latitude to answer questions that have been asked in question time at some other stage, this does not apply in relation to questions raised in adjournment debates, as this one was. I believe that the minister's answer could be supplied in the adjournment debate.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The question is a legitimate one and the minister is entitled to supply an answer.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell said that he was interested in what the story was. I congratulate him for having the foresight to be interested in this particular matter because it is on the leading edge of technology and of great interest to Northern Territorians, particularly those who live in his electorate. If members listen, they will learn about some of the things I have put in place.

As I said, the regasified LNG will be available at Yulara and it will be delivered by road. One of the particularly exciting things about this aspect of the project is that the vehicle transferring the LNG to Yulara will also be running on LNG. In fact, as the LNG is being vaporised in the truck, the truck will be specially modified so that it can run on LNG. This has great potential for Northern Territory road transportation. The member for Barkly has been talking about this issue for some considerable time and I am sure he shares my interest in this very exciting project.

Mr SMITH (Opposition Leader): Mr Speaker, I move a motion of dissent against your ruling.

Mr Speaker, speaking to the motion of dissent, what we have here is an unparalleled attempt by the Minister for Mines and Energy to extend the concept of question time as it has been used traditionally in this House and, I am sure, in other parliaments. I have never previously seen a situation in this House where a minister has risen in question time to provide information in relation to a question that was asked in an adjournment debate on a previous day. Mr Speaker, if you examine the logic of that, we might as well forget question time.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I am advised by the Clerk that a motion of dissent from a Speaker's ruling must be moved at once. Otherwise, it must be put on notice.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, I move dissent against that ruling.

Mr Speaker, the position you have put to us is ludicrous. It has always been the practice of members on this side of the House to treat motions of dissent very carefully. We certainly do not treat them lightly. Mr Speaker, what you have just said in your ruling is that, when I put a matter to you 30 seconds or 45 seconds after it occurred, it was too late. I cannot accept that that is an undue delay. Mr Speaker, your ruling prevents us exercising our right to issue a challenge to yourself on the substantive question that was put to you in relation to whether the Minister for Mines and Energy can use question time to answer a question that arose during an adjournment debate. Mr Speaker, to argue ...

Mr Coulter: It is a success story; that is what you are worried about.

Mr SMITH: We are quite happy to hear the answer.

Mr Speaker, to argue, as you have done, that a time lapse of 30 or 40 seconds makes it too late to put forward a dissent motion is absolutely ludicrous. We needed time to investigate what the standing order said. Do not forget, Mr Speaker, that the minister has done something which has never been done before in the history of this House. Before moving dissent motions, we need sufficient time to check the record to ensure that there is a point to argue. Mr Speaker, for you to say that 30 seconds is too long a period of time to take to do that is to debase the position you occupy in terms of ruling this House impartially and fairly. That is the basis of the dissent motion that we have put, Mr Speaker. Your ruling is not impartial and it is not fair because it deprives us of the opportunity to move a motion of dissent on a previous ruling which relates to a substantial matter that has never been addressed in this House before. That is why we are moving this dissent motion.

Mr HANRAHAN (Leader of Government Business): Mr Speaker, I would like the opportunity to put in context the seriousness of a dissent motion. I would also like to destroy the Leader of the Opposition's ridiculous motion of dissent. Mr Speaker, what we are actually debating is your ruling on the impartiality or fairness of a direction given to you by standing orders.

Let me make this point. If, as the member for MacDonnell stated in his speech in the adjournment debate, members opposite were seriously interested in hearing the answer to the question, they could simply have allowed the Minister for Mines and Energy to continue and to let question time proceed. The hypocrisy of the Leader of the Opposition's argument is shown by the way he is debating this dissent motion in question time, which is broadcast live, when he could be asking questions. That makes a mockery of what he says.

Mr Speaker, we on this side of the House have no doubt about your impartiality and fairness in directing the proceedings of this House.

The hypocrisy and stupidity of the Leader of the Opposition's motion of dissent is demonstrated by precedent. A motion of dissent against the Speaker's ruling is one of the most serious motions that can be moved in a parliament under the Westminster system of government. It is more serious than a censure motion against the government because it calls into question the whole operation of the House. If the basis of the opposition's original point of order is that it is being denied fair use of question time, and that this side of the House is using questions asked in the adjournment debate to influence the time spent in answering questions without notice, it is wrong. The minister was answering a question which was fairly asked and which warranted an answer. As the Minister for Mines and Energy has said, the question deserved an answer.

This motion of dissent is nothing more than a silly game being played by the Leader of the Opposition in an effort to improve his standing and show that he is more aggressive. That is fair enough from his point of view but the course of action that he has taken is absolutely stupid. He has taken that course of action, to my mind, without any serious consideration of the seriousness of a motion of dissent from the Speaker's ruling.

There is no doubt in my mind that we will now debate the motion of dissent quite fully. I would suggest that there will be very little time left for answering questions in this House. Mr Speaker, this side of the House has no doubt at all concerning your impartiality and the fairness with which you rule this House in the interests of ensuring that fair and equitable debate takes place. The Leader of the Opposition has not only acted out of character but in a manner that puts in question the ability of the opposition to represent the people of the Northern Territory. I have no doubt that the Leader of the Opposition has no idea of the seriousness of his motion of dissent. Mr Speaker, we will vote against, object to and, as far as I am concerned, destroy any attempt by members opposite to pass a motion of dissent against the Chair.

Mr EDE (Stuart): Mr Speaker, I will not take long because it will not take long to destroy the argument put forward by the Leader of Government Business. It is based on the concept that any minister can stand up here at any time, without a question being asked in question time, and make a ministerial statement on any subject which has been raised in any debate during a sitting of this parliament. That is absolutely ridiculous.

We have provision for ministerial statements ...

Mr FINCH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! With respect, the point before the Chair at the moment is a question of dissent from your ruling. It has nothing at all to do with the original debate.

Mr SPEAKER: There is a point of order.

Mr TUXWORTH (Barkly): Mr Speaker, I would just like to say a few words on this matter without inflaming the situation and perhaps to bring the discussion back within the bounds of reason without the hype and yelling and screaming. It is a pity that we are perhaps proving to the people of the Northern Territory, in this morning's broadcast of question time, that we are probably not competent to run the place.

Mr Coulter: Speak for yourself.

Mr TUXWORTH: I am speaking for you too because if you could hear what is going on you would be bloody ashamed of it.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr TUXWORTH: I withdraw, Mr Speaker.

Mr Speaker, I would like to make a couple of points, the first one being that it is quite common for ministers to rise and answer questions on issues of current public importance, before, during and at the end of question time. Over the years, it has been done most commonly at the end of question time so as not to interfere with the proceedings of question time itself, because ministers are referring to matters that have been raised on another day. It is not common for questions raised in adjournment debates a day or 2 before to be discussed in question time as the Minister for Mines and Energy did this morning, unless they relate to a matter of current public importance.

I would also say that the matter raised by the minister is a very important issue, one that deserves worthy debate in this Chamber with 4 or 5 speakers on each side, not a few throwaway lines from the minister in question time. I invite him to re-present the information as a ministerial statement so that everybody can have a chew on it, because it is very important to the future of our economy.

The Leader of the Opposition is reflecting his frustration or exasperation and perhaps was a little quick to draw and shoot this morning. I must say that I have some sympathy with him in the sense that he moved a motion of dissent from your ruling and you then continued by inviting the minister to respond to the question. That perhaps was a rather cursory way to treat this very serious motion of dissent.

Mr Speaker, I think it probably would not be a bad idea if we all went for a tea break and came back in 5 minutes and started again. If the day is going to continue like this, we might as well not proceed.

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, I would like to speak to the motion of dissent from your ruling that the first attempt to put a motion of dissent was not in accordance with standing orders in that it had not been made forthwith. I understand I have described the situation correctly, despite the toing-and-froing and histrionics we have seen from members opposite.

Mr Speaker, I refer to standing order 82, 'Dissent from Ruling'. I will read that standing order for the benefit of honourable members and others who may be witnessing the events this morning:

If any objection is taken to any ruling or decision of the Speaker, such objection must be taken at once and a motion of dissent, to be submitted in writing, moved which, if seconded, shall be proposed to the Assembly and debate thereon shall proceed forthwith.

Mr Speaker, the issue is whether or not your ruling on the first attempt to put a motion of dissent was in accordance with standing orders. The standing order quite clearly says 'at once'. The words 'at once' mean what they say. They mean 'immediately'. The Leader of the Opposition did not act immediately; he debated with one of his colleagues what action he should take. That is my assumption; they were huddled together. Whilst the honourable minister was proceeding with his answer to the question, the Leader of the Opposition rose and moved a motion of dissent.

Mr Speaker, I fully support your ruling on the matter. You are bound by the standing orders of this Chamber, which are prepared and submitted by the members of this Chamber. You are not solely responsible for the form and contents of the standing orders; this House is. It is your responsibility to enforce those rules and you have done so fairly and properly.

Mr Speaker, this whole exercise by the Leader of the Opposition can only be described as petulant. Childish petulance has led him to carry on in this way and to waste the time of this House, as he does from time to time. Every time something goes wrong, he continues to exercise ...

Mr Smith: If you don't want a question time, we won't bother coming.

Mr HATTON: There he goes again, Mr Speaker, just as he and his colleagues continually do, breaching standing orders by interjecting and talking over the top of the member who is speaking.

Mr Speaker, it is a fact that members opposite, particularly the member for MacDonnell, regularly use the adjournment debate to ask a multitude of questions of members on the government benches.

Mr Bell: That is my right.

Mr Leo: You have the whole day to make ministerial statements.

Mr HATTON: Listen to them, Mr Speaker. That is the honourable member's right. I do not deny him that right but it is also appropriate under standing orders for ministers to use question time to answer questions which have been put to them. Mr Speaker, the member for Barkly has quite rightly indicated that, in the past, question time has been used to answer questions that have been asked on the previous evening.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister is no longer addressing the dissent motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition. He is addressing the matter of your ruling on my point of order.

Mr SPEAKER: There is a point of order. I ask the Chief Minister to relate his comments to the motion.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I apologise if I have done that. I was merely trying, by way of explanation, to emphasise the point that both your rulings were quite proper and in accordance with the standing orders. This serves only to exemplify the extreme petulance which is so readily displayed by the Leader of the Opposition whenever he is frustrated in the little games he would like to play in this House.

Mr BELL (MacDonnell): Mr Speaker, there are 2 issues at stake here. To respond to the Chief Minister's comments about standing order 82, his insistence on a particular interpretation of the phrase 'at once' is to ignore the question of the conduct of the Assembly's business. I also draw the attention of honourable members to standing orders 113 and 258.

I believe that, in the context of the dissent motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition, 2 issues need to be considered: the original ruling about the statement being made by the Minister for Mines and Energy and the question of whether the dissent ruling 'at once' is appropriate. I speak in support of the Leader of the Opposition's dissent motion. His motion of dissent from the original ruling was appropriate because, as standing order 113 says, 'an answer shall be relevant to the question'. Let me say, parenthetically, that I appreciated the answer that the honourable minister was giving but ...

Mr HATTON: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Members opposite have been insisting that the debate be totally and specifically relevant and you have supported that, Mr Speaker. I ask that you rule that the member for MacDonnell is not addressing the motion before the House.

Mr BELL: Speaking to the point of order, Mr Speaker, as I said at the outset of my remarks, there are 2 procedural issues that have become inextricably interwoven. One of them is the issue of the appropriateness of a motion of dissent in these terms. In fact, that is the second point. The original point at issue was the appropriateness of the comments being made by the Minister for Mines and Energy. I do not believe that it is appropriate to insist that this particular debate be restricted to the second of those points. As I said, it is important for the good conduct of business in this House ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! What is the point of the order?

Mr BELL: With respect, Mr Speaker, I am speaking to the point of order raised by the the Chief Minister.

Mr SPEAKER: I will rule on it.

Mr BELL: I want to finish my comments on the point of order if I might. Mr Speaker. I believe you have to rule against the point or order called by the Chief Minister because these 2 issues have become inextricably interwoven and deserve a full and frank debate in this Assembly. The fact of the matter is that if the Minister for Mines and Energy ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I am ruling now on the point of order. My advice is that I can pull any member up if I am convinced one way or the other. There is a point of order raised by the Chief Minister and the member for MacDonnell must confine his remarks to the dissent motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, in the context of an Assembly that sits for 30 days per year and has a 6-man opposition which does the government like a dinner day after day, I can understand the government being sensitive about this. As far as I am concerned, the dissent motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition was quite appropriate.

Mr FINCH (Transport and Works): Mr Speaker, I despair. The member for MacDonnell is himself a member of the Standing Orders Committee and I would have hoped that he understood standing orders. When his contributions and those of his leader show their lack of understanding of the detail of the standing orders of this House, I can only wish that Senator Bob Collins were back here as Opposition Leader. Certainly, when he held that position, there was no doubt in the minds of members on this side of the Assembly concerning his knowledge and comprehension of the operation of the House. The span of attention and concentration of members of the opposition has been clearly demonstrated to be lacking. The initial 35-second delay, which members of the opposition would interpret as being 'at once', also clearly illustrates that.

Mr Speaker, we are discussing the basic question of whether you have correctly and impartially interpreted the standing orders relating to a motion of dissent. All members on this side of the House have absolutely no doubt whatsoever that you have done so and it is time we got on with the job.

Mr SMITH (Opposition Leader): Mr Speaker, in closing the debate I think all members of the parliament owe an expression of thanks to the member for Barkly. I think that sometimes we get carried away with things in here but, certainly, members on this side of the House have been expressing our frustration over what appears to be an increasing use of question time by ministers to make ministerial statements. What happened today was a new government initiative in making ministerial statements on questions asked 2 days ago. The next initiative I expect from the government is for a minister to rise and answer a question that was asked 2 or 3 years ago in this House which, Mr Speaker, would be equally legitimate according to your ruling.

The dissent motion before the House relates simply to the interpretation of the words 'at once'. What I would put to you, Mr Speaker, is that it is in the interests of the procedures of this House that the words 'at once' not be interpreted literally. Does 'at once' mean within 1 second? That is the sort of question that arises. What does 'at once' mean? Is it within 1 second, within 5 seconds or within 10 or 15 seconds? The point of view that I have put in this debate is that the motion of dissent was put at once to you, Mr Speaker. It was put within a period of 30 seconds, after it had been written out, which is, of course, a requirement. Moving dissent is not simply a matter of rising to one's feet and saying, 'I wish to move dissent'. The motion has first to be written down. The motion was written down and presented to you and I would think that any reasonable person, either in the Chamber or listening on radio, would interpret a period of 30 seconds as a reasonable time for that to occur and as being, practically, within the meaning of 'at once'.

Mr SPEAKER: The question is that the ruling of the Speaker that the Leader of the Opposition's original motion of dissent was not made at once be dissented from.

Mr COULTER (Mines and Energy): Mr Speaker, as I was saying before I was interrupted, the LNG will be stored at Yulara in liquified form and regasified by heating prior to use as a fuel.

Subsequent to the signing of the contract, the detailed design work for the LNG plant has been nearly completed. An agreement has been reached with TMOG Resources Ltd for the use of part of its Brewer Estate site for the LNG plant and a pipeline licence application has been submitted for the 10 km spur line from Palm Valley to the Alice Springs gas pipeline to the Brewer Estate. Land has been acquired at Yulara to house the gas storage facility. The Yulara Corporation advised recently that its requirements for electricity on current peak load, which is 3 MW, will increase to approximately 6.5 MW. Therefore, the use of LNG at Yulara will greatly exceed that envisaged in the original contract. It is a fantastic success story and part of the gas program that the Northern Territory government has entered into.

Next week, I will have one of the senior directors from Equity Corporation in the Northern Territory and it is my intention to organise a full briefing with the member for MacDonnell on how he can obtain further information on the availability of LNG for remote communities within his electorate. I will be endeavouring to contact the member for MacDonnell and to arrange a meeting with the executive from Equity Corporation when he is in Darwin next week, in an attempt to further pursue the utilisation of LNG throughout the Northern Territory.

Teachers Membership of School Councils

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

On radio this morning, the President of the Northern Territory Teachers Federation gave the impression that teachers and Department of Education employees would be precluded from involvement with school councils. Mr Speaker, I believe the Teachers Federation president's comments to be incorrect and irresponsible and my question to the minister is: do the proposed school council regulations preclude teachers and Department of Education employees from becoming involved with school councils?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Port Darwin for his question on what certainly is a topical matter at the moment. In a nutshell, the answer to his question is no. Departmental employees and teachers are not excluded from being members of school councils. I make that point because much of the discussion in the broader community is along the lines that the regulations governing the constitution of school councils exclude teachers or departmental employees. In fact, they limit the total number of teachers and departmental employees to one third of the total numbers on a school council. In fact, there is even better representation than 33.3% because the principal of the school is automatically appointed to the school council, therefore making the percentage in the vicinity of 40%.

Mr Speaker, I welcome the question and the opportunity to clarify the situation for the general public because, as I said, there is considerable misinformation being spread by certain people. Let me start with the consultation process. Discussions were held in all centres of the Northern Territory in 1987 on the issue of devolution. The government has made no secret of the fact that it wishes to ensure that schools are governed by the parents and the wider community. I think that is a very sensible move. It is also fair to say that there has been a general apathy among parents and the wider community towards becoming involved in the running of schools. Members on this side of the House see such participation as the linchpin of future devolution of full control of schools, including financial aspects. The government's policy is that parents must be given more say and there must be more power for schools to be accountable to their community. I can think of no better group of people to be in charge of school councils.

Under the new regulations, department employees represent one-third of the makeup of school councils, plus the principal. They also have the opportunity to have a secretary or registrar in support. There will be provision for a departmental nominee on school councils although that is not a mandatory requirement. It will occur as a result of discussions between the secretary of the department and the various school council chairpersons. There is no discrimination. Any departmental officer can stand for election at an AGM within the one-third allocation. It is interesting to note that departmental employees, who constitute about 3% to 5% of the population, have access to approximately 40% of the places on school councils. Parents and the wider community, which make up approximately 95% to 97% of our population, have access to approximately 60% of the places on school councils. I would have thought that that was very fair and equitable.

School councils can determine, either in their constitutions or through the AGM election process, what proportion of the one-third consists of teachers or other employees of the Department of Education. No employee is denied the opportunity to stand for election. In my view, teachers get a fair go. They also have full access to staff meetings, departmental committees, panels of various types and professional associations. Mr Speaker, I must stress that it is the wish of this government to work in partnership with teachers and parents and the wider community.

The regulations allow for the cooption of people in the community with special expertise to assist schools. That is a very sensible move. If, in relation to a particular project, a school council requires architectural, financial or banking experience, it has the opportunity to coopt that expertise. Again, that is in line with our policy on devolution.

One comment of the Leader of the Opposition showed that he had no idea of how to read and correctly interpret the regulations. He said that I had the power to exclude even the Chief Minister from membership of a school council.

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The member for Port Darwin asked a question of the Minister for Education concerning the right of access of parents to school councils under the new regulations. The Minister for Education is talking about comments I made about the role of MLAs and the minister's power over them.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order but I would ask the minister to relate his remarks to the question.

Mr HANRAHAN: Mr Speaker, I would like to clarify for the Leader of the Opposition that the point that he missed, in paying such a great deal of attention to questions asked within this House, was a reference to comments made by the President of the Northern Territory Teachers Federation on radio this morning and the remarks made by himself ...

Mr Smith: Why are you talking about comments made by me?

Mr HANRAHAN: I am doing so in the context of the question - as well as answering on the issue of teacher and parent representation on school councils.

Mr Speaker, because it has been raised, I will clarify the reasons for the regulation change which allows for the cooption of MLAs and local government representatives onto school councils. I state again that that is not a mandatory requirement. It is up to the school councils themselves to decide whether or not they want local government representatives and or the local MLA.

Mr Smith: And then you have to agree.

Mr HANRAHAN: My approval will be required if the school council takes its opportunity under the AGM election process and has a full number of elected representatives. If a council then wishes to coopt the local government representative and the local MLA, which would take its membership over the number provided for under the regulations, I will allow it to do so. I do not think that that is an unfair course of action.

Mr Speaker, to respond more pertinently to the member for Port Darwin, as a result of the meetings that have been held recently throughout the Northern Territory, under the auspices of the Education Advisory Council, concern has been expressed to me in relation to the correct interpretation of various aspects of the regulations. Since the gazettal of the regulations, I have received advice of concerns from COGSO, secondary schools, school council chairpersons, individual councils and parents and the Northern Territory Teachers Federation. I have taken action in that I have extended the date by which Annual General Meetings of school councils are to be held from 15 March to 30 April. This extension will allow all school councils to amend their constitutions and hold their elections in accordance with these regulations. This will also allow further consultations to take place in an area where I have a particular concern and where there will be particular problems. That is in Aboriginal communities and smaller communities which have school councils.

I have indicated to the representatives of COGSO and the various school councils that, after 30 April, I will review any individual problems that arise. I am aware that various school councils have encountered problems. As I said, I have given an undertaking to meet with various representatives of school councils and COGSO after 30 April to ascertain exactly what the problems are and, more pertinently, where the problems are, and to sit down and see if we can solve them.

The Secretary of the Department of Education has clarified the situation that relates to part-time and temporary employees who are not actually involved in the one-third component. This category includes relief teachers, part-time instructors, casual employees and so forth. The secretary of the department has also given an undertaking to the various chairpersons throughout the Northern Territory that he will consult with the particular council concerning the individual departmental employee who will join the school council. As I say, this is not a mandatory requirement, but it is a necessary requirement to make sure that the flow of information and communication is improved.

I stress that this government believes that the parents and the wider community must make up the majority representation on school councils and must become involved if we are to proceed down the path of devolution.

Criminal Compensation for Rape

Mr SMITH to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Is the increase in compensation claims under the Crimes Compensation Act due in part to an increase in claims by victims of rape pursuing their entitlements under the act and, as a result, is it true that the Crimes Compensation Act is under review with a view to rape being excluded as an offence for which criminal compensation can be claimed?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in response to the question of whether the criminal compensation area is under review, the answer is yes. In reply to the question of rape being excluded as an offence for which criminal compensation can be claimed, the answer is no.

Freighters in Darwin Harbour

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

What is the status of the 3 freighters which have been lying at anchor in Darwin Harbour for several months?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am asked quite often about those 3 vessels. I can indicate to this House that they are not the first 3 vessels of the Northern Territory government's own shipping line. The response I often give is that the port is so busy these days that the ships are waiting to be processed. I need to talk at some time about how busy the port is.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: Talk about how long it takes to process a ship.

Mr FINCH: In reply to that interjection, Darwin has an excellent record in the rapid processing of ships. In fact, ships very rarely have to anchor in the harbour and wait to come alongside. As well, cargoes are moved away to their destinations extremely rapidly after unloading. That is in contrast to the current situation in Sydney where the container loader system is causing delays of 2 to 4 weeks in the dispatching of cargo.

In respect of the specific question, those vessels have been there since November. They are Philippines-registered vessels crewed by Filipinos. The problem is that their ownership is in dispute. The dispute pertains to the purchase price of the vessels. The parties to the dispute are the Bank of Brazil and some Scottish companies. Temporary managers of the dispute have been appointed by the Supreme Court and local solicitors are handling that matter. In the meantime, Burns Philp is supplying all stores, fuel and water. The vessels were not carrying cargo when they arrived. At the moment, no payment is being made to the Port Authority but there is some spin-off to the local community through the provision of stores.

Mr Speaker, I hope that the day will come when we will have a significant flow of traffic in the port. The Port Authority is working very hard to encourage additional freight, particularly by offering land bridging from the South-east Asian region to other parts of Australia and, in the interim, using backloading on road trains. When the rail system is in place, that will provide further advantages.

Mines Safety Control Act

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

I remind him of an undertaking he gave in the Assembly last year when he assured me that he intended to amend the Mines Safety Control Act by redefining 'mine' within the act so that employees employed by mining companies but not necessarily working on a mine site may be covered by the Work Health Act as opposed to the Mines Safety Control Act. When does the minister intend to proceed with that amendment to the Mines Safety Control Act?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not in a position to provide an accurate response off the top of my head. I will provide the information to the honourable member during the course of these sittings.

Psychiatric Patient

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Impressions may have been gained from comments made by members of the opposition yesterday that the person involved in an incident where a nurse was injured with a star picket at Berry Springs last weekend has been wandering around the maternity ward for months. Is this correct?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would suggest that that was probably the main aim of the matter of public importance raised yesterday by the opposition. I have made inquiries into the matter so that I could absolutely assure the people of the Northern Territory that what the opposition was leading them to believe was not the case. There have been no reports of this person ever having entered the maternity ward and no evidence whatsoever to suggest that he has ever done so.

The person concerned was not permitted to leave the psychiatric ward without an escort. The visit to Berry Springs was an essential part of the treatment of the patient. The patient is now in Ward 9 where an assessment will be made of his current condition and where the trigger for his latest emotional outburst will be sought. I hope that allays any fears that this person was roaming around the corridors of the maternity ward.

Violent Videos and Films

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

What are he and the government actually doing, as opposed to simply talking about doing, to restrict drastically the flood of vicious, violent videos and films into the Territory, in line with the restrictions wanted by decent, responsible members of the public?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I find the tenor of the question rather strange. If the honourable member had a look at the legislation that she herself was involved in passing through this House, she would have a full comprehension of the restrictions and the requirements set out in the act.

I would notify the honourable member that I am presently preparing for the Australian Censorship Ministers' Conference which is to be held in March. I am also in the processes of looking at the provisions of exemptions which were made in the legislation that we passed in this House 2 years ago regarding the display of R-rated videos as well as X-rated videos. I will be notifying people in the video industry of the government's decision in relation to the removal of that exemption by the end of June.

A great deal of concern is being expressed around the country in relation to the classification of videos. The concern is being directed away from X-rated videos into the area of R-rated videos. There have been a number of instances where some sort of connection has been suggested between R-rated violent videos and incidents of extreme violence occurring in specific areas of Australia. I believe that the Censorship Ministers' Conference will be dealing with that particular issue. I am certainly very concerned about the fact that, in a number of instances, young members of our community have unrestricted access to material of this type. I was recently made aware of a report that suggested that the incidence of violence depicted in R-rated video material, in comparison with X-rated material, showed it to be very violent. The report suggested that there was a connection between the behaviour of some young people and the content of these videos.

To return to the member's question regarding the classification legislation that was passed in this House, a process in which she was involved, that legislation lays out restrictions very clearly and concisely. Obviously, the government is moving along in conjunction with those laws. If the honourable member believes that they should be changed, it is within her prerogative to introduce a private member's bill to suggest changes. If she is aware of any instances in which she considers that the government is not complying with the legislation, I would be interested to hear of them.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Mines Safety Control Act

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, during the course of this question time, the member for Nhulunbuy asked me if I could provide information on what we are doing about the redefinition of a 'mine'. I have had the opportunity to get across the subject since the question was asked.

On 24 November last year, I referred to a possible amendment to the definition of 'mine site'. I was responding to a claim made then by the member for Nhulunbuy that the definition of 'mine' in the Mines Safety Control Act meant that all employees of a mine, including clerks, typists and the like, were subject to the safety provisions of that act as opposed to the Work Health Act or some other safety regime.

As I understood it, the honourable member's reference was to requirements under the Silicosis and Tuberculosis (Mine-workers and Prospectors) Act, for all workers working on a mine, even in offices, to be x-rayed annually. I can advise the honourable member that that particular requirement was rectified on 23 December by means of Regulations 1987 No 53 of the Mines Safety Control Act, which empowers the Chief Government Mining Engineer to designate areas of silicosis risk and the Chief Medical Officer to denote the frequency of x-rays. In addition, the Mines Safety Control Act is currently under review and will be circulated to industry for comment next month.

SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, in question time on Thursday 25 February 1988, when the Minister for Mines and Energy was answering a question which had been raised by the member for MacDonnell during the previous day's adjournment debate, a point of order was raised by the member for Nhulunbuy seeking my ruling on whether it was appropriate to answer such a question during question time. My reply was to the effect that the question which the member for MacDonnell had raised the previous day was a legitimate question and the minister was entitled to supply an answer.

It has long been a practice for ministers to receive a call during and at the end of question time to answer questions asked of them during previous sittings either during question time or during the course of an adjournment debate. This has been done with the indulgence of the Chair and thus in Hansard the parenthetical words 'by leave' have been included in some such cases despite no leave having been sought.

I have always considered that question time is the most appropriate time for members from both the opposition and the government backbench to obtain information from ministers. It is also an appropriate time for ministers to provide information previously sought by members although I will not countenance answers which are more in the nature of ministerial statements than direct answers to questions previously asked. I heard the question asked by the member for MacDonnell on Wednesday 24 February and, in view of the practice of this Assembly, I was perfectly satisfied that it was appropriate for the Minister for Mines and Energy to answer the question asked as and when he did.

Entry to Darwin Prison

Mr SMITH to MEMBER for MacDONNELL

Did you or did you not attempt to enter Darwin Prison yesterday as stated by the Minister for Health and Community Services on ABC Radio this morning?

ANSWER

I must confess that my breakfast this morning was ...

Mr COULTER: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Unless there is business before the House on which the Leader of the Opposition is seeking information, he is not at liberty to ask a question of a member of his backbench.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, standing order 110 clearly states: 'Questions may be put to a member, not being a minister, relating to any bill, motion or other public matter connected with the business of the Assembly, of which the member has charge'. Mr Speaker, quite clearly, my question relates to the business of the Assembly. I am sure that the members opposite will prove that later in this question time if this particular point of order is upheld.

Secondly, it is clearly the business of the member concerned because he was not only the member concerned in the incident, but he also has responsibilities recognised by this House as the shadow minister for health and community services. In our view, it is quite appropriate for this question to be asked of the member for MacDonnell, the shadow minister for health and community services.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I wish to address this point of order, not for the purpose of prolonging the debate and further absorbing the time of the House but because I think it is important for honourable members to note standing order 110. It refers quite clearly to 'any bill, motion, or other public matter connected with the business of the Assembly, of which the member has charge'. I would submit that the reference to any 'public matter connected with the business of the Assembly' would refer to something on the Notice Paper.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, I would point out to you that there is precedent for this situation. During the time I have been a member of this Assembly, I have been asked a question by an honourable member opposite. That question did not relate to a bill. I will try to recall the question. Meanwhile, I suggest that the matter could be deferred whilst a ruling is obtained and discussed again later in question time. As I recall it, I was asked whether certain of my actions related to the Labor Party's policy on uranium. At that stage, I was the shadow spokesperson on mines and energy. The question was allowed and I answered it.

Mr BELL: In speaking to the point of order, I would like to reply to the contribution made by the Chief Minister. He is very good at reading and quite correctly read standing order 110. It refers to public matters before this Assembly. The Chief Minister is well aware that there has been fulsome debate on the public issue of the care of Ward 9 patients and that representations on the issue have been made to me as a member of this Assembly. I have no doubt that it is an appropriate matter to be addressed in question time. It is a public matter before this Assembly and there can be no doubt about that.

Mr Coulter: Of which the member has charge?

Mr BELL: In answer to the Treasurer's interjection, I point out that, with respect to the business of this House, I have charge on behalf of the opposition for matters relating to health and community services. I have no doubt that the matter upon which the Leader of the Opposition has sought to elicit information from me falls within the ambit of standing order 110.

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, I am advised that the member for MacDonnell has no business on the Notice Paper related to the question asked of him. There is therefore a point of order and I must disallow the question.

Proposed Hi-tech City

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he advise the Assembly of any details of the proposed hi-tech city which is being studied by the Commonwealth and state governments and can he inform the House concerning the Territory government's attitude towards it?

ANSWER

The project has the strange and possibly bureaucratic name of Multi-function Polis. That is the heading in government agenda papers and conference agenda papers dealing with the subject. A request originating in Japan has led to the federal government initiating a study into the possibility of establishing a city in Australia, comprised of persons coming from outside Australia, with a view to solving many problems and creating a stimulus to the Australian economy. Press releases from the Leader of the Opposition have referred to the Northern Territory's bid for what he has called the hi-tech city.

The Chief Minister and the Treasurer had some discussions in Japan quite some time ago with a Japanese senator representing the relevant Japanese minister. The matter was raised in those discussions to test the Northern Territory government's reaction on a very preliminary basis. The matter was raised formally at the Conference of Ministers for Industries and Technology in Christchurch late last year. The Commonwealth sought the reaction of the states to the establishment and funding of a major feasibility study into this matter. There was some caution in the reaction of various state ministers and myself. It was the first time that we had had input on a formal basis and I believe there was some political trepidation about leaping forward and saying: 'Yes, we will be in the front line in developing such a new city in Australia'. There was, however, concurrence at the meeting that a full feasibility study should be developed. To that end, the states and the Northern Territory are contributing to the feasibility study. The study is expected to cost somewhere between $2m and $5m. I am not sure of the actual timetable for its completion.

As I said, the idea was first floated by the Japanese government with the Australian government. The concept is a little vague at the moment, but basically it is for the establishment in Australia of a group of people from foreign governments and from private enterprise who would build a new city based on leisure, recreation, education and high technology research. The idea has developed somewhat from the initial concept of a single metropolis somewhere in Australia to, possibly, one centre with a number of regional sub-centres spread around the country. That, I believe, is the concept which will be developed in the feasibility study. The whole of Australia may share in what could be a very exciting event. If the project goes ahead, it could be a major step in the history of Australia.

Mr Ede: A pity the opposition wasn't running this.

Mr PERRON: If the member for Stuart takes any interest in this matter, which is of major importance, he might care to keep his interjections to ...

Mr Ede: Why don't you make a ministerial statement so that I can?

Mr PERRON: Perhaps the honourable member wants to waste even more of question time than the opposition has done already this morning. If not, I am sure honourable members will be pleased to hear about this matter from time to time as it develops further and, if the opposition has no interest in the matter, so be it. I am sure other Territorians do and certainly my colleagues on this side of the House are taking a keen interest in the matter. The Northern Territory government has contributed $40 000 towards the feasibility study and that will enable the Territory government to have some input as well as keeping completely up to date with its progress. I will undertake to keep the Assembly informed, from time to time, on the matter.

Leave Loading

Mr EDE to CHIEF MINISTER

Is the government's attempt to remove the 17½% leave loading from public servants the spearhead of an attack on the families of working people throughout the Territory, is the government allowing itself to be used by right-wing forces as a front organisation for a nationwide attack on workers' families, will the government explain how on earth this attempt can be justified in light of its attempts to attract workers to holiday in the Territory and will the government withdraw its application to have the leave loading removed?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member has asked me a number of questions. The answer to the first 2 is no. With respect to the third question, I can advise honourable members that, during the course of debates over public service terms and conditions of employment, the trade union movement was advised that the issue of the 17½% leave loading would be submitted to the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission for determination.

It is a fact that the trade unions were opposed to any moves in respect of the leave loading. I can understand that particular position. It is a matter that has been the subject of considerable and contentious debate in the Northern Territory and elsewhere in Australia. The matter will be resolved by the body that should resolve it and that is the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission. If the honourable members opposite wish to continue to support ...

Mr Leo interjecting.

Mr HATTON: I note the interjection from the member for Nhulunbuy. He has often made the point in this Assembly that, if matters need to be raised in respect of terms and conditions of employment, they should be dealt with through the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission where both parties can present their arguments. That is exactly the process that is being adopted in this particular case. Quite frankly, I have been surprised at the overt reaction of the trade union movement. If the unions believe their case is strong, then they should be confident that they can win the matter before the commission. Their actions seem to indicate that perhaps they do not believe they have a particularly strong case.

Mr Speaker, this has been a contentious issue in the community for some 15 years. The ...

Mr Smith: What it indicates is that the workers of the Northern Territory are concerned about it.

Mr Ede: They want to know why you are trying to screw their rights.

Mr HATTON: ... circumstances surrounding particular matters have been contentious for many years. Whether members opposite like it or not, it is a fact that many people in the community find little justification for the provision of the 17½% loading for workers other than shift-workers. The issue will be finalised through the processes of conciliation and arbitration and we should let the arguments stand on their merits in that jurisdiction. The government's move is not a spearhead for any sort of attack on anybody. It is a matter of principle that is being addressed through the appropriate forum.

Police Administration Amendment Bill

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer to the proposed Police Administration Amendment Bill. Can he confirm that he has received representations not to pass the Police Administration Amendment Bill, in its present form, from no less a personage than the Secretary of the Nightcliff Branch of the Country Liberal Party, Mr Eugene White, and will the Chief Minister accede to his representations?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there are people in the community who do not support this particular legislation.

Mr Smith: Only the secretary of your own branch!

Mr HATTON: That applies equally within my own party. I do not propose to debate this particular matter in question time. Since the honourable member has raised the matter, I might add that the bill was discussed at considerable length during the central council meeting of the CLP last weekend. At that central council meeting, the party strongly endorsed the approach which the government is taking.

Gidgee Bush

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

On your behalf as the member for Braitling, Mr Speaker, I ask what action the government has taken to combat the problems caused by what is commonly called gidgee bush?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as you would well know, the problem of gidgee poisoning, particularly in the area north-east of Alice Springs, has plagued a number of properties for many years. It is very pleasing to see the initiatives taken by some of those pastoralists as a result of their frustration with the inability of governments and others to come up with answers to this problem over the years. They have themselves funded a certain amount of research into the problem and seem to be making some considerable progress in finding a solution to it.

The research is being carried out by the University of New England and, naturally enough, the group has sought funding from the Northern Territory government and others to assist with it. The research is directed towards the development of rumen detoxification of fluoroacetic acid in cattle. For the benefit of honourable members to whom that is not perfectly clear, it is the development of bacteria which can be implanted, as it were, in the stomachs of cattle and which will neutralise the effects of gidgee. To date, progress has been very encouraging. In January, the Northern Territory government approved a grant of $14 000 to the group and I understand that the Australian Meat and Livestock Research and Development Corporation is expected to provide some funding towards this project next year.

Gidgee poisoning does not affect properties in the Northern Territory only. It also affects some properties in south-western Queensland and severely reduces their productivity. It has caused great hardship to some property owners. I commend those people who have undertaken and funded research themselves. I hope that their target of finding a solution within 3 years is met and I wish them the best of luck. I will be pleased to keep honourable members informed about developments in this matter and to provide further government assistance where possible.

Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority

Mr LANHUPUY to CHIEF MINISTER

Has he asked for a report on the operations of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority? If he has, could he advise me whether he intends to make it public?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the matter has been referred to the Minister for Lands and Housing and I refer the question to him.

Mr MANZIE (Lands and Housing): Mr Speaker, I advise the House that the review has been completed. The report has been delayed because of numerous legal actions affecting people involved. I will be taking the report to Cabinet for its consideration and Cabinet will decide on what action, if any, is to be taken, including whether or not to release the report publicly.

School Council Regulations

Mr SETTER to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

With regard to the recent change in regulations governing school councils, can he confirm whether these changes apply to school parent associations and parent and citizens associations? If not, will there be any effect on their operations?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have heard a number of people suggest that there may be a way of avoiding the new regulations in respect of school councils. I advise people who are thinking along those lines that a number of school councils are holding meetings this week to consider the new regulations. I expect that the councils will realise that the new regulations are sensible and that they reflect the wishes of the majority of the community. Those who do not realise that and who seek to defy the wishes of the government will only shoot themselves in the foot. Continued refusal to adopt the new regulations will ultimately mean that school councils will lose the ability to play a real and positive role in the management of their schools. In such cases, control will revert to the old system under which the department deals directly with the principal.

Milatos Project

Mr TUXWORTH to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, there has been press comment and reports that indicate that the Milatos motel and golf links project includes provision for a casino and gaming floor. I direct this question to the Chief Minister because I understand that, as coordinator of the government's activities in relation to tourism and gaming, he may be across the matter. Does the Northern Territory government still have an agreement with the Diamond Beach Casino operators that guarantees them sole casino rights in Darwin for some years to come? If such an agreement exists, does Mr Milatos have the authority or the approval of the government or the present casino operators to offer such facilities to any new operator who might manage his motel and golf links project?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, whilst it is true that I have been involved in this particular project, the question refers specifically to a range of agreements with the current operators of the Diamond Beach Casino. To ensure the accuracy of the answer, the minister responsible for racing, gaming and liquor will deal with those aspects.

Mr TUXWORTH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! As a matter of clarification, I directed my question to the Chief Minister because his office was quoted in the press as being supportive of the project. I assumed that he was the minister to take the question.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, to assist the honourable member, I will advise that Mr Milatos has approached the Northern Territory government seeking support. I understand that he has lodged applications for a direct land sale in respect of the development of a tourism-related hotel development in conjunction with the upgrading of the public golf course at Palmerston Park. There have been discussions, over some considerable time, in relation to the proposal. I have been involved in discussions with Mr Milatos. Because the proposal involves land currently under lease to Darwin City Council, there have also been considerable discussions with the council in terms of the actual development and the various proposals and conditions. As often happens in such matters, the details can evolve and change.

The proposal would involve what is currently known as the Darwin Markets area, part of a public street and the corner of a gully at this end of the public golf course area. The proposal therefore involves the road reserve, land currently under the control of Mr Milatos and land currently under lease to Darwin City Council. The proposal incorporates an offer by Mr Milatos to spend $2m to upgrade the public golf course to an executive 9-hole course to be controlled and operated by the council as a public golf course.

In the discussions in respect of the hotel proposal itself, Mr Milatos has raised the possibility of obtaining an extension of the existing casino licence to operate a separate gaming room in his hotel. I would refer the question concerning detail of this proposal to the Treasurer in the context of his responsibilities for racing, gaming and liquor.

Mr COULTER (Treasurer): Mr Speaker, as the member for Barkly would be well aware, there is an exclusivity clause in the licence arrangements with the casinos in the north and the south. The southern licence is held by Ford Dynasty Pty Ltd and the other is held by the Aspinall group. I suppose the borders of the 2 regions would meet around Tennant Creek or the Tropic of Capricorn.

I can advise the member for Barkly that, under the exclusivity agreement with the casino operators that considerable discussion has occurred with the current operators in respect of providing alternative venues for casino operations within the Darwin region. Mr Milatos has been involved in discussions with Mr James Osborne of the Aspinall group in relation to having a gaming facility in his proposed establishment in Palmerston Park. This is a commercial decision to be made by the operators. Because of its interest in terms of legislation on gaming and the licensing of premises, the government will be following those negotiations with interest. I can advise the member for Barkly that detailed discussions and negotiations have been entered into by the Aspinall group and Milatos in relation to the provision of a licensed premise within the new development.

Flat Rating System

Mr HARRIS to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

A number of local government organisations have expressed an interest in what is termed 'the flat rating system'. Does the Local Government Act provide for flat rating and, if not, will legislation be amended to allow such a system to be introduced?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there is concern among local government bodies that the ability to institute a flat rating system may have been lost to them. Certainly, flat rating was possible under the old Local Government Act. As a result of a challenge to that provision in another state, this ability appears to have been lost. A number of amendments to the Local Government Act are being processed currently. In fact, one of those will be the ability to levy a flat rate in council areas. Those proposed amendments have not yet gone to Cabinet but I hope in time to be able to bring to the Assembly a list of amendments, including that particular provision.

Leave Loading

Mr EDE to CHIEF MINISTER

The Chief Minister will agree that, in the unlikely event that he achieves his aim of removing the 17½% leave loading for Territory public servants, other Territory workers would lose the loading together with workers throughout the country. That is because the government's challenge relates to a federal award. I ask whether he has carried out any economic analysis of the effects of a national loss of $3000m in the spending power of Australian citizens and the effects of this upon the Territory tourism industry and small business?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am somewhat flattered at the compliment that is being paid to this government by the member for Stuart, who seems to assume that we are launching a national campaign of some sort. I know that argument has been expounded by members opposite in order to beat up emotions in relation to this particular case.

Mr Speaker, I am sure that you and other members will be well aware that particular cases throughout Australia need to be determined individually by the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission. Although the trade union movement may seek to develop this case into a full-blown national test case, I have no evidence that other governments or other employers are seeking to develop similar cases.

There are, of course, 2 sides to every economic analysis. If it is true that $3000m is expended on wages and salaries in the form of the 17½% loading, that is a very significant cost to Australian business. I am only quoting the figures used by the member for Stuart and I cannot confirm them but, if that is the case, the other side of the coin is that removal of the loading would free up $3000m for investment which would create a few more jobs in this country.

Changes in Aboriginal Affairs Administration

Mr REED to CHIEF MINISTER

What, if any, discussions have taken place with the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs concerning proposals for the establishment of an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander Commission and the proposals enunciated in his statement 'Foundations for the Future'?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unfortunately I must advise the House that there have been no discussions with the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs on this matter. This is of particular concern to the Northern Territory. Whilst the proposed new organisation propounded by the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs will apply throughout Australia, we must remember that approximately 25% of the Northern Territory population is Aboriginal. These people are a very significant element in our community, which is not the case in New South Wales where the Aboriginal population numbers 45 000 in a total population of 5 million, which is less than 1%. We are talking about nearly a quarter of our population and the minister's proposals will have profound and significant effects on the administration and the role of government in the Northern Territory.

It would seem appropriate, therefore, for the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs to take the time at least to fully brief and consult with this government, as he indicated he would do during the Australian Aboriginal Affairs Ministers' Conference in Perth last year. He has done nothing of the sort. In fact, he has been in the Northern Territory for some considerable time, moving around Aboriginal communities and consulting with them. I do not object to that at all. It is quite an appropriate course of action for a minister involved in such a matter. I do, however, believe that he might appropriately take some time to talk to the government of the Northern Territory about the implications of the new structure for government administration throughout the Northern Territory.

I wrote to the Prime Minister on 20 February relaying our concerns and the concerns expressed by Aboriginal people at the hasty introduction of Mr Hand's proposals and the lack of genuine consultation. The Minister for Labour, Administrative Services and Local Government has also written to Mr Hand to express these concerns which include the undue haste to introduce the commission, inequitable representation on the regional councils, the unnecessary bureaucracy introduced by the proposal for zones, boundaries incompatible with Aboriginal community interests, the apparent lack of Aboriginal control of the commission and the interests of traditional people being made subservient to those of non-traditional urban dwellers. Members of this Assembly should be concerned with these developments.

As I have said, the Aboriginal people of the Northern Territory comprise about 24% of our population and are not some insignificant minority group to be subjected to centralist social engineering experiments. The fact is that Aboriginal communities have been taking up the Northern Territory community government model as the most appropriate form of community organisation. Nowhere in the minister's proposals do we see any acknowledgement that such far-reaching community development models are being adopted in the Northern Territory. This government continues to receive representations from Aboriginal communities expressing their concern at the Commonwealth's actions and we will continue to represent those concerns to the Commonwealth. The indecent haste and urgency with which this matter is being handled by the federal minister is doing Northern Territory Aboriginal communities a great disservice.

Mr Smith: He has talked to more of them than you have.

Mr HATTON: His proposals are badly thought out and they are creating significant concern in Aboriginal communities. And, in response to the interjection from the Leader of the Opposition, I would ask him to talk to his own colleagues, including Senator Collins, who also have real concerns about the proposals and have found real concerns among Aboriginal people.

There is no question that the federal minister should sit down with the Northern Territory government to address our real concerns about the implications of his proposals for the Northern Territory, as he undertook to do last year and has failed to do so. I have some serious concerns about the proposal in terms of its impact on the whole concept of federalism in our nation and whether it is actually a tool designed to create a nation within a nation. Our concerns and questions need to be addressed and we need the opportunity to speak with the federal minister.

We have received representations from the Aboriginal Development Commission seeking our support in opposing the minister's intention to disband its organisation, which is providing development finance for Aboriginal communities. The minister's intention is based on the view that it is perhaps inappropriate for the commission to be involved in some matters that could be classified as social issues, when those are also being dealt with by other organisations involved in Aboriginal affairs.

Report on AIDS in Schools

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

When will he release to me, and to other members who may not have already seen it, the government report on AIDS in schools, as promised in a notice in the Sunday Territorian of 21 February, which stated that the report would be sent to all MLAs for comment?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will contact the department for a briefing on the report and the undertaking that was given by the Minister for Education and I will ensure that his wishes are carried out. If that is what he said, I will personally deliver a copy of the report to the member for Koolpinyah during the next 15 minutes.

Maldives Airport Facilities

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has the federal government promised money to the Maldives to upgrade airport facilities there?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not able to confirm absolutely whether the federal government has or has not done so. However, I have received fairly reliable advice that some $2m has been allocated through the Department of Foreign Affairs to the Maldives, which is an island nation close to Sri Lanka. Of course, that gesture gives us great heart here in the Northern Territory. In a spirit of communication and dialogue, we have come a long way in terms of the potential development of the airport in Darwin and it is now up to the federal government to make its decision. Following a subsidy of some $10m to Vanuatu and $2m to the Maldives, there must be a great chance that the Northern Territory, with its potential to provide great development of the economy in Australia, will receive a reasonable hearing.

In the last 2 weeks, we have forwarded to the federal minister, Senator Evans, a proposal that outlines the basis upon which we believe development should proceed. That includes separation of the land from the terminal building through to McMillans Road, enabling us to put into place a series of developments which would not only be of benefit to the aviation industry but would also help to make the whole proposition viable. We are looking for a direct grant of land or, at the very least, a reasonable lease period, such as 40 years. Previously, we have gone through negotiations to try and make ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The honourable minister was asked whether federal assistance would be provided towards airport construction or reconstruction in the Maldives. He is now talking about the Darwin Airport which is at least 3000 km away from the Maldives.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the relationship between the granting of federal government funds towards airport construction onshore and offshore is very pertinent. Quite clearly, in asking his question, the member for Karama intended to relate that funding to the local scene which, I would have assumed, was of importance even to members opposite.

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, in speaking to the point of order, I refer you to standing order 109 which says: 'Questions may be put to a minister relating to public affairs' - and this may be considered to be a public affair - 'to proceedings pending in the Assembly, or to any matter of administration for which he is responsible'.

Mr Speaker, I appreciate that the minister and perhaps even the member for Karama are prone to a degree of self-indulgence, but even to contemplate that the Minister for Transport and Works in the Northern Territory is in any way involved in Australia's foreign affairs is to draw a very long bow. Personally, I am eternally grateful for the happy circumstance that he is not so involved. However, what is more important to this House is that the question should clearly have been ruled out of order. It has nothing to do with the Northern Territory or the administration of funding within the Northern Territory. It has nothing to do with any developments within the Northern Territory and it was clearly out of order.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. However, I would remind all honourable ministers to relate their replies to the questions. There is some validity in the point of order raised by the member for Nhulunbuy and I therefore suggest that the member for Karama rephrase his question.

Federal Funding for Airport Facilities

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has the federal government given money to the Maldives for the upgrading of airport facilities and does he believe that appropriation of that money to the Maldives will affect the probability of redevelopment of Darwin Airport?

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member for Karama has asked for an opinion.

Mr PALMER: Will the moneys appropriated to the Maldives have an effect on the redevelopment of Darwin Airport?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would hope that, in a meeting next week with the federal minister for Transport and Communications, Senator Evans, I will be able to confirm positively whether that is so or not. Honourable members may not be aware that, unfortunately, the new Minister for Land Transport and Infrastructure Support, Hon Peter Morris, is on sick leave following an appendix operation. Clyde Holding, who formerly held that portfolio, was on leave for most of the time he held it. Since Peter Duncan moved to another portfolio, it has been difficult to find out anything positive.

However, I hope to see Senator Evans and to clear up, once and for all, the extent of any grant or contribution by the federal government to this project. We hope to be able to get on with the job as soon as possible. We have advertised for expressions of interest from contractors, financiers and designers. We would like to be able to commence construction by about July and complete the project by the end of 1989, ahead of the Maldives.

Assistance to New South Wales Liberal Party

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Does he intend that the Northern Territory taxpayer will provide the Liberal Party in New South Wales with any assistance other than the provision of an unspecified number of personnel for an unspecified period of time and at an unspecified cost? If he does intend to provide any extra assistance, what will be the nature of that assistance and under what budget allocation will it be made?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I ask the honourable member to put that question on notice so I can find out what the blazes he is talking about.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Changes in Aboriginal Affairs Administration

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): I will take the opportunity to clarify my answer to a previous question in relation to the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs. I advised that there had been no discussions with the minister. I have been advised that the federal minister met, over breakfast in Alice Springs, with the Northern Territory Minister for Labour, Administrative Services and Local Government to discuss matters of concern to this government. Although that meeting does not affect the substantive point I was making, I apologise if I inadvertently misled the Assembly. I rise simply to correct the matter. It does not detract from my major point that there must be substantial consultations between the federal minister and the Northern Territory government.

Videotape and Transcript

Mr SMITH to SPEAKER

Mr Speaker, have you been able to assure yourself that the videotape and transcript supplied to you by the Chief Minister in his reference to you on the possible breach of privilege were official ABC video and transcript supplied by the ABC or were they supplied from other sources, possibly in breach of the Copyright Act?

ANSWER

I will have further discussions with the Clerk and give the information to the honourable Leader of the Opposition tomorrow.

Assistance to New South Wales Liberal Party

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

What is the total cost to the Northern Territory government of the campaign assistance which the Chief Minister has given to Nick Greiner for the forthcoming New South Wales election and under what budget allocation was this campaign donation made?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I must assume from that question that the honourable member is referring to a specific financial donation to the New South Wales Liberal Party.

Mr Leo: As far as I am concerned, any Territory expense in that election is a campaign donation.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the issue of the actual dollar value of the Territory contribution is a matter that I will ask the honourable member to put on notice.

News Report on School Councils

Mr REED to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is it his intention, as the acting minister, to sack school councils if they do not comply with new regulations for councils, as was stated in a report on last night's Channel 8 news?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. It gives me an early opportunity to respond to the offensive item which went to air last night on the Channel 8 news. As all honourable members will recall, in question time yesterday, I did not at any stage refer or even hint at any possible dismissal of any school council for any reason whatsoever. In response to a question from the honourable member for Jingili, I said that any school council which did not comply with any new regulations would not be doing itself any favours because it would eventually and ultimately cease to be a legal school council. In that situation, I said, the government would have no option but to revert to the previous system under which the Department of Education dealt directly with the school principal. In other words, by failing to comply with the new regulations, school councils would surrender their authority to make decisions affecting schools.

That is a far cry from what appeared last night in the news item concerned. Aided and abetted by the member for Stuart, who should know better but cannot help himself, the reporter stated in absolute terms that school councils would be sacked by me if they did not toe the line. The reporter offered his opinion that, as acting minister, I was uncertain about what might happen if school councils rejected the new regulations. He had no reason to form such an opinion as the matter is clear and simple. I went to some lengths in the interview to explain that and to stress that councils would not be summarily dismissed.

Mr Speaker, given the capacity for concern by parents about the future of school councils and given the efforts of the Northern Territory Teachers Federation to facilitate confusion and concern, I am extremely angry about the Channel 8 news item last night. I have lodged a complaint with the station's news editor and I hope that the reporter concerned redresses the matter publicly. I have stressed that I am not being thin-skinned. As honourable members will know, I have been involved in many a controversial issue in my time in politics and I have never lodged a complaint about the way I was handled by the media. I have no previous record of ever lodging a complaint about media reporting in the Territory. This matter, however, went far beyond the bounds of what might reasonably be expected.

Employment for School Leavers

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER FOR LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

What action has the government taken to ensure that school leavers are able to find meaningful employment in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as honourable members would be aware, considerable concern was expressed last year about the ability of the Northern Territory to employ school leavers at the end of 1987. In fact, approximately 1700 students were expected to leave school at the end of last year and there was some uncertainty about how many of them would be able to be employed. On the assessment of my department, it was believed that about 60% of those students would obtain employment on leaving school and the other 40% would gradually be employed over a period, with a number continuing with further education.

As a consequence of the concerns and the obvious need to facilitate the employment of school leavers, the Territory government committed itself to a program of school-leaver employment and traineeships at a cost this year of about $870 000 and $1.5m over a period of 4 years given that, obviously, some of the traineeships will continue into other years. At the base grade, we were able to take on 44 positions, 12 of which were part of the Australian Traineeship Scheme whilst the remainder were base-grade positions to be taken in over a period of months for a 4-month duration and then gradually absorbed into the public service.

A number of industry training committees have been established. In retail business, 24 participants were started on 14 February. As you are aware, Mr Speaker, the Tourism Training Committee has been working extremely well in the Beaufort Hotel and the young people who have completed the courses have been excellent participants in the tourism industry; it is considered that that initiative should continue. We have also put money into tourism training committees in Alice Springs.

Whilst there has been a downturn in the area of manufacturing, the construction industry agreed to take on a further 5 apprentices this year, with support from the Territory government. In connection with that, I agreed with the Masters Builders Association that construction apprentices employed by the Northern Territory government would become available for the association's pool so that the government would not be competing with the construction industry and so that government apprentices will be exposed to other aspects of the industry during the year. The 5 extra apprentices which the industry agreed to take on are in addition to those which it originally agreed to. The automotive industry also agreed to take on an additional 5 apprentices with support from the government. In the area of local government, another industry training committee has been established.

For some years, we have had a group intake scheme for Aboriginal people who were seeking employment in the public service but could not obtain it, basically because they lacked the necessary skills. This year, the group will involve 40 positions, which is 10 more than previously anticipated. I think that program will always be needed but I have changed its emphasis to include training for the private sector and to expand beyond the exclusive Aboriginal intake.

We have established 30 positions in pre-vocational courses. These are for young people who are seeking employment in an area but who lack skills and, therefore, cannot get a job. We have been able to reach an agreement with the Department of Education which will provide off-the-job training which will count towards their apprenticeship training. Mr Speaker, you are probably aware that those pre-vocational courses were previously funded under the Group One-Year Apprenticeship Scheme which was funded by the federal government and cut out last year. The courses were run at the Territory Training Centre and all students who participated in the scheme last year were able to get apprenticeships at the end of their training. It was of concern to me that such an option would not be available to young people this year but we have been able to retain it in conjunction with the Department of Education and there has been a very good response.

The architectural and engineering area has agreed to take on 12 cadetships and, again, we have provided support. I believe we have covered the field very well. We have not gone out to find jobs or to fund employers to take on young people, but we are seeking to train people for future jobs. I believe that that is the way the government should go. We should not try to create jobs which are not really necessary but we should look for young people who, with a little extra training, will not find it very difficult to get a job. That is exactly what we have done with these school-leaver initiatives. I have every confidence that the programs will be successful and able to be expanded in future years.

Cabinet Decision on Higher Education

Mr EDE to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

Would he confirm that Cabinet has made a decision in the last few days to abolish the Darwin Institute of Technology, amalgamating the upper level courses into the University College and incorporating the balance, including all Technical and Further Education courses, into the Department of Education, and is it true that the higher education planning group, which will now have to implement that decision, contains no representatives of the faculty associations or student bodies?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, if that is an example of the exercise of responsibility by the shadow spokesman in what is probably one of the most serious portfolios that anybody could ever hold, I am astonished. The content of his question is pure fabrication, designed to raise concern in the community. It has no substance whatsoever and it typifies his approach to one of the most delicate portfolio areas that anybody can be entrusted with. It concerns the welfare of our children in the Northern Territory and the role of government authorities in that, and the member for Stuart's approach should be condemned. Of course, Mr Speaker, the answer is no.

Police Administration Amendment Bill

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer him to this morning's interview on Territory Extra where he was asked by the interviewer whether, as has been suggested, some particularly prominent court cases are coming up in which he believes Williams Case will be used as a defence. I refer to his answer which was: 'There are, in fact, a couple of cases'. What are the cases and is it the intention of the government to commence the legislation in such a way that it will apply retrospectively?

ANSWER

Would the honourable member repeat the last part of that question please?

Mr BELL: I appreciate that the Chief Minister has difficulties with this legislation and I am more than happy to repeat my question. What are the cases to which the Chief Minister referred on the Territory Extra this morning? If these cases refer to offences that have already occurred and if it is the intention of the government that the substance of this legislation should apply to them, is it the intention of the government that the commencement date for the legislation will not be, as is normally the case, either the time of its passage or a future time but some time in the past; that is, will it be retrospective legislation?

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, now that I have the question clear, the answer is that it is not intended that it be retrospective legislation. I am not a lawyer any more than the opposition spokesman is a lawyer. I will not seek to interpret how legal counsel will argue cases in court any more than I would ask the shadow spokesman on police matters to seek to interpret how matters should be dealt with within the courts.

The reality is that there are cases before the police at the moment and that they arise regularly because of the very nature and requirements of police investigations ...

Mr Bell: What are the cases? Give us an example.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I will give some examples that may indicate the problems that exist as a consequence of the recent High Court decision and the problems that arise ...

Mr Smith: The 1986 High Court decision.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The Leader of the Opposition will cease interjecting. The member on his feet should be heard in silence.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I had not intended to use question time to debate the Police Administration Amendment Bill as the debate will take place tomorrow and I will have plenty of opportunity to do so then. However, I have been asked specific questions on this matter and I will take the opportunity to deal with them now in question time.

Mr Speaker, the fact is that, whilst the judgment in what is known as Williams Case did not change the common law ...

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! As the Chief Minister said, he has been asked specific questions. There is a bill before the House and the substance of that bill should not be debated. The question related to statements he made on Territory Extra this morning in reference to the legislation. The 2 questions were enunciated quite clearly by my colleague and they should be answered specifically. The substance of the bill should not be debated.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order but I would ask the Chief Minister to relate his reply to the questions.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am seeking to place my answer in context so that the member opposite will not be subject to any confusion when I refer to 2 particular matters which have been cited to me by the police as illustrations of the need for this legislation. Williams Case clarified a grey area in the common law, and that clarification will place an onus ...

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister is continuing to debate a bill before the House. He has not yet attempted to answer the questions put to him by the member for MacDonnell. He has not attempted to specifically answer the 2 questions. The first asked what cases are presently being prosecuted by the police that will be affected by this legislation. The answer should simply name them. The other question asked whether the legislation will apply retrospectively or not. The minister has not attempted to answer those questions; he has attempted to debate the bill.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, one of the questions has been answered already and I am entitled to answer in the way that I believe will most clearly address the question put by the member opposite. I am seeking to do that and I would have done so already if I had not been interrupted continually by spurious points of order.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The Chief Minister was attempting to put into context his reply to the member for MacDonnell's fairly detailed question.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am merely trying to outline the fact that the whole purpose of this bill is to counteract the judgment in Williams Case which made a specific declaration on what was a grey area of law and which was recognised by the legal profession as such. The judgment places an obligation on a defence lawyer to raise Williams Case when and if circumstances arise that would enable him to use it as a technical defence. That is a proper obligation on a defence lawyer.

Mr Speaker, I do not want to go into the details of specific arguments which have been dealt with and, undoubtedly, will be dealt with again. I will not name particular cases for obvious reasons. I do not intend to refer publicly to matters that will go before the courts. I do, however, wish to refer - as the Leader of the Opposition has done - to matters that have been sanitised against identification of individuals. I think that is the proper course of action to adopt.

On a Saturday afternoon, an accused person A induced two 7-year-old boys to enter his room at a house in a remote locality. The boys, B and C, upon being induced to enter the room, were threatened by the accused A who held a knife to one of the children's throats and told the youngster C to lie on the floor and cover his head with a sheet. The accused A then instructed B to lie on his stomach and proceeded to have anal intercourse with him. The act having been done, the accused again threatened both boys with the knife, warning them of dire consequences should they report the incident to anyone.

The matter came to police attention late on the Saturday afternoon. The accused's whereabouts were unknown. The accused, incidentally, resided in the house next door to the house of the victims. Information was received late on Saturday night that the accused had returned to the house. Police, knowing that the offender was a bolter, arrested him at midnight. The Criminal Investigation Branch in Darwin was advised at the earliest opportunity and detectives flew to the scene and commenced interviewing the accused at 2 pm, which was the earliest opportunity available. Full and frank admissions were made. The accused was flown out the following morning. He consented to a medical examination and the taking of pubic hair and blood samples. The accused was brought, forthwith, before the next available court hearing on Tuesday at 2 pm. The point is that, technically, the offender should have been brought before the 10 am court hearing in Darwin on the Monday, 1½ days earlier. This was totally impractical and would have made any effective investigation impossible. There was no realistic alternative to the course of action taken.

I refer to another matter, Mr Speaker. Following verbal instruction today from the officer in charge of the CIB, I submit the following. In late January 1988, 4 adult youths were apprehended in Darwin. The time was 0300 hours and they were apprehended whilst interfering with a motor vehicle. The offenders were not arrested at this time; they were conveyed back to the Berrimah Police Centre. They were placed in separate interview rooms. Computer inquiries revealed that the vehicle the youths were travelling in had been reported stolen in Alice Springs. One person was also wanted for questioning in relation to an unlawful entry and a sexual assault plus a number of unlawful entries and stealing incidents in Alice Springs. Another youth was also wanted for questioning in relation to a number of unlawful entries and stealing in Alice Springs. It was also ascertained that the group may have been responsible for interfering with a number of vehicles in the Darwin area, obtaining fuel. An expensive camera, suspected to be stolen, was located in the stolen vehicle. Due to the number of persons and the number of offences, totalling 94, interviews were delayed until detectives commenced duty. During this time, I am advised, the youths were happy to remain at the police station. I must say that, should they have sought to leave, they undoubtedly would have been restrained and technically would have been regarded as under arrest, although without having been charged.

One youth was arrested at 1145 hours, a second at 1520 hours, another at 1600 hours and a fourth at 2257 hours. A further youth was interviewed and then charged at 2308 hours. The delay in arresting these offenders was due to the need to complete the various interviews. All 4 were refused bail, their rights explained and they appeared in court the next day.

Mr Smith: Who refused bail?

Mr HATTON: The police.

Mr Smith: Did you get a tape of the interviews?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am happy to provide copies of proceedings to the Leader of the Opposition. I do not have copies here, but I will arrange for them to be circulated to members of the House.

Mr Speaker, both of the cases I have described impact directly upon the principles that are addressed in the bill and which relate to the decision in Williams Case. Those sorts of situations are not uncommon and occur regularly as a result of the necessity for police to carry out investigations. Members will note that the matters I have mentioned are not instances of organised crime. They do, however, deal with complex matters which need investigation.

In respect of the second matter I outlined, it is quite clear that people were detained initially as a consequence of interfering with a vehicle. Following on from that, some 90-odd other charges arose as a result of police investigations. In Williams Case, the person was detained originally in connection with 3 offences and a further 26 were later identified. Those 26 were eventually thrown out because the evidence was not acceptable. That is totally consistent ...

Mr Smith: That is not right. That is not what the judgments in Williams Case say. Why don't you get across it?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I have read Williams.

Mr Smith: Well, read it again before the debate tomorrow, please.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the trial judge ruled that that evidence was inadmissible.

Mr Smith: Why? That is the question. Why was it ruled inadmissible.

Mr HATTON: Because the person had not been brought before the court ...

Mr Smith: When he should have been.

Mr HATTON: ... 20-odd hours earlier, rather than being held whilst the police continued to investigate the additional matters.

Mr Speaker, that is precisely the situation. It is right for police to carry out investigations prior to bringing matters before the courts. The member for MacDonnell asked last week if I could provide some examples of cases which would be affected by the legislation. Now that I have done so, I look forward to watching him crawl down Mitchell Street at lunchtime.

Vanderlin Drive Duplication

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

What stage has the duplication of Vanderlin Drive reached?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the honourable member has a great interest in traffic matters in the northern suburbs and I am pleased to advise him that works costing $1.1m have commenced on Vanderlin Drive. The works commenced in January and are due to be completed by 18 July. There will be some interference with traffic flows because work will be in progress while traffic continues to utilise Lee Point Road and Vanderlin Drive. The works include a roundabout, and we heard some discussion about roundabouts the other day. A fairly large roundabout is to be installed at the intersection of Vanderlin Drive and Lee Point Road and the traffic lights there will continue to operate whilst that is being constructed.

As a PR exercise, departmental officers recently visited the Casuarina and the Hibiscus shopping centres and displayed the proposed works. Comments from the public were generally supportive, as one would expect. However, concern was expressed by some residents whose properties are adjacent to Vanderlin Drive that the duplicated roadway would be too close to the rear of their properties and that noise from it would be disturbing to them. That will not be the case, Mr Speaker. The noise levels should not alter at all and might even diminish due to a freer flow of traffic. The question of visual impact has also been attended to and an amount has been set aside in the contract to ensure that appropriate planting is undertaken.

I was concerned about some allegations from residents who stated that, when they bought those properties, the sales people stated on behalf of the developer that no roadworks were proposed in the future along Vanderlin Drive. I am having that matter investigated because, if that was in part of the sales pitch and even - as some people suggest - part of the contract, I would be more than concerned.

Some people on the Wulagi side of Vanderlin Drive have also expressed concern that access to and from their area might be interfered with to some extent. These matters have been referred to traffic engineers who have tried to balance such considerations with matters of safety. I believe that the best possible solution for all concerned has now been arrived at.

Mr Speaker, whilst there will be some minor interruption to traffic during the construction period, I believe that progress of the works will be in the general interests of northern suburbs residents, particularly those in VRD Drive and Leanyer Drive, which will experience less traffic.

Insurance Cover for Earthquake Damage

Mr POOLE to TREASURER

This question is addressed to the Treasurer in his capacity as minister responsible for the Territory Insurance Office. Shortly after the earthquake which struck Tennant Creek on 22 January this year, stories emerged which suggested that TIO policy holders were not covered for earthquake damage. Can the Treasurer advise whether or not this is the case?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, 10 claims have been received by the TIO for compensation for damage as a result of the earthquake. The total value of these claims is about $550 000. Of that figure, $500 000 is estimated to relate to damage to the gas pipeline. The honourable member is correct about immediate rumours which suggested that TIO policy holders were not covered for earthquake damage. I am happy to tell him that all relevant TIO policies carry an automatic earthquake cover with no additional premium. I understand that the policies of some insurance companies do not include earthquake cover but TIO policies definitely do so.

As a matter of interest, the TIO building in Tennant Creek stood up to the quakes and shakes very well. Being a steel-framed building, the only damage was minor cracks to the plaster.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Cabinet Decision on Higher Education

Mr COULTER (Treasurer): Mr Speaker, whilst I am on my feet, I will refer to the Cabinet decision in relation to the question which was asked of me earlier by the shadow spokesman on education. For the benefit of all honourable members, I will read from the decision. Cabinet:

(a) directed that all negotiations with the Commonwealth over the future of higher education will be conducted by the NT Minister for Education; (b) authorised nominees of the Minister for Education to enter into preliminary discussions with Commonwealth nominees as a precursor to the formation of the joint planning committee; (c) agreed that negotiations should be conducted on the basis of the preferred options presented in the submission; and (d) directed the minister to report back to Cabinet prior to any commitments or undertakings being entered into with the Commonwealth.

In terms of the available options, I will refer to a recent transcript of statements made by Nan Giese, who seems to have been much more able to come to grips with the third option than has the Deputy Leader of the Opposition. In a radio interview, she said: 'The options are described in the paper as 3 basic options. It does not say in any way that they are exhaustive so I do not believe that this paper excludes any options'. She is absolutely correct in relation to the third option and we will be discussing that in more detail later. I hope that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition will pay attention today because he may learn something.

Future of Darwin Institute of Technology

Mr EDE to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

Will he investigate whether the Secretary of the Department of Education yesterday went to the DIT and told members of the Darwin Institute of Technology that a decision had been made to abolish the institute, that its upper-level courses were to be incorporated into the University College and that the balance of courses were to be returned to the Department of Education? Following such an investigation, will he report back to this Assembly on the matter?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, we have come a long way from the Deputy Leader of the Opposition's earlier assertion about an alleged Cabinet decision. He has now come back with something else that he has heard. We saw him duck out to the phone to obtain another rumour. He must have a rumour machine that he can plug into. If question time went for 1½ hours, he would be exhausted from running in and out. We would have to pick him up for his last question.

The shadow spokesman on education's question will be answered during the course of the debate on the first item of general business later today.

Assistance to New South Wales Liberal Party

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Will he extend to other members of the House the same facilities that he has extended to Nick Greiner so that they may be able to support candidates of their choice in the forthcoming New South Wales election?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is a preposterous suggestion.

Mr Smith: Why?

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I have continually warned members this morning and I finally warn the Leader of the Opposition that another interjection will result in his being named.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Brisbane Expo Exhibit

Mr PERRON (Industries and Development): Mr Speaker, earlier in the sittings the member for Stuart asked a question relating to the Northern Territory government's decision to participate in the Brisbane Expo and whether work on the exhibit would be done in the Northern Territory or in Brisbane. I inform honourable members that planning is at an advanced stage even though the decision was made fairly recently. A model of the Northern Territory's exhibit is currently on display in the committee room and will be there until about 12.30 pm today for any honourable member who may care to look at it. I can advise honourable members that the design of the model and its construction will be undertaken within the Northern Territory.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I would very much like to hear a full description of what will happen at Expo. However, as I recall, the question was asked of the Chief Minister. The minister who is presently speaking has never even been asked a question about Expo in Brisbane or the Northern Territory's involvement in it. I do not see how standing orders can be extended for a minister to answer a question that he has never been asked in any context.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr PERRON: Mr Speaker, the Territory's participation in Expo is within my portfolio responsibility.

Honourable members will be pleased to know that virtually the only work that will be undertaken interstate will be the assembling of the stall, the blowing-up of photographs which the Territory does not have the capacity to undertake and possibly some electrical wiring. The exhibit will be predominantly tourism oriented with an emphasis on Aboriginal culture and industry and development. Incorporated in the display will be a theatre with seating for 30 people, a shop where 5 products unique to the Northern Territory can be sold and a homestead replica featuring a School of the Air exhibit. When honourable members see the model that is on display, they will indeed see that the Northern Territory's exhibit will do the Territory credit.

It will be unique at the Expo, I am sure. The majority of the work and expenditure will occur in the Northern Territory until the exhibit opens.

Fringe Benefits Tax

Mr DONDAS to TREASURER

Last year, he was a very strong opponent of the fringe benefits tax. Could he advise the House of the Northern Territory government's liabilities in respect of fringe benefits tax this financial year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is indeed a very timely question. We have heard so much about the federal government's balanced budget and, in fact, the surplus that it intends to achieve this year. We all know that one of the major factors in that outcome is that the fringe benefits tax recouped over $1000m more than was originally estimated. Anybody in Australia could have told the government what that tax would do to various industries, particularly motor vehicle retailers and restaurateurs.

The honourable member has indeed waved a red flag at a bull by mentioning the fringe benefits tax for it is in my opinion that it is the worst tax ever inflicted on the citizens of Australia. It erodes the very principles which have forged and made this country. I could go on about it for the whole morning but I will not. Honourable members should note with cynicism, however, that the federal Treasurer keeps getting delightful surprises about how much revenue the fringe benefits tax is raising for him. In 1986-87, the tax operated for only 9 months. It was estimated that it would raise $335m. In fact, it produced over $500m. In 1987-88, estimated revenue is $750m and I understand that the federal Treasury is excitedly hoping that it will actually collect more than $1000m. We could perhaps be forgiven for suggesting that the fringe benefits tax is keeping the federal government afloat financially.

To address the honourable member's question specifically, the Territory government's estimated fringe benefits tax liability for 1987-88 is $7.5m. The biggest component of that is the $3.8m which the government will pay on recreational air fares. The Territory government paid $4.6m in the 9-month period of 1986-87, plus a further $500 000 relating to a back adjustment, following an assessment by the Australian Taxation Office on the tax liability for air fares of compulsory transferees. We paid it reluctantly. We disliked the tax as much as ever we did.

Mr Speaker, it is interesting to note that, in Japan, companies are allowed to deduct their entertainment costs as legitimate tax-free expenses. One only has to have a look at the industries that have been developed as a result of that measure. It helps money to circulate in the economy. If the Leader of the Opposition has any doubt at all about the ability of the Japanese to run their economy, he should look at their surplus and the way that they are travelling the world today looking for investment opportunities. There has been no greater success story than that of the Japanese economy and we could all learn from looking at how it has been able to achieve its success. In Australia, we seem to have a lemming-like tendency to create a suicide pact in which we do exactly the opposite. We close down restaurants and we close down car retailers in order to provide millions of dollars which are drastically needed to keep this federal government afloat.

Vanderlin Drive Duplication

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

This relates to an answer he gave to a previous question. In view of the concerns expressed by residents in his electorate regarding the realignment of Vanderlin Drive and the ensuing noise problems, will he now consider the realignment of Vanderlin Drive where it abuts residences in Karama or will he consider other noise abatement measures?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to reiterate for the honourable member the advice that I gave him last year. There is absolutely no way in the world that one could contemplate bulldozing the very expensive bitumen alongside those houses in Karama. I emphasise again that, in the long term, the road will be duplicated all the way through to the highway. The setback between the road and the property lines was certainly based on normal practice. The road was there long before the houses were orientated and I believe that what is required is simply some landscaping to provide screening. There will not be any realignment of the road.

School Council Regulations

Mr LANHUPUY to MEMBER for STUART

I preface my question by pointing out to the House that the member for Stuart has a motion before the House seeking to disallow the Education (School Councils) Regulation 1988. I refer the member to legal advice he mentioned in debate in this Assembly and I ask whether that advice showed that the Secretary of the Department of Education advised school councils incorrectly concerning the range of employees covered by the regulations. Will he now table that advice for the benefit of members?

Mr HATTON: A point of order, Mr Speaker! This question is out of order in that it refers to a matter which is not yet before the House.

Mr Smith: It is before the House; it appears on the Notice Paper.

Mr HATTON: Notice has been given but it is not yet before the House.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, I will speak to the point of order and not to the fact that government members do not want to know the answer to the question. On the Notice Paper, under the heading 'On or Before 17 May 1988 Business of the Assembly', there is an item headed 'Education (School Councils) Regulations - Motion for Disallowance'. It reads: 'Resumption of debate on the motion of Mr Ede (25 February 1988) - That the amendments of the Education (School Councils) Regulations, as contained in Regulations 1988 No 4 and made under the Education Act, be disallowed'.

In prefacing his question, the member for Arnhem made reference to the disallowance motion which I have just read. His question clearly relates to that. It is an item on the Notice Paper. Mr Speaker, I refer you to standing order 110 which states that: 'Questions may be put to a member, not being a minister, relating to any bill, motion or other public matter connected with the business of the Assembly, of which the member has charge'. The member for Arnhem's question relates to a matter which is the business of the Assembly and is on the Notice Paper. I moved the motion and I therefore have charge of the business. The question is clearly allowable under standing order 110.

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, far be it from me to claim the same knowledge as the Clerk in advising the Chair. However, it is obvious that there is no point of order. Indeed, you have made rulings in this House over the last week which would indicate that the member for Arnhem's question was properly directed. It is the responsibility of the member for Stuart to reply to the question. It relates to a matter that is before the House. Whilst the question does not impinge upon the substance of the motion, it does impinge upon legal matters which relate strictly to the motion. Mr Speaker, it is my belief that you must rule against the Chief Minister's point of order.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I take the point made by the member for Stuart. He does have carriage of a matter that is substantively before the House, and I withdraw the point of order.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The member for Stuart has a motion before the House and may now proceed to answer the question.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have been challenged regarding this legal opinion, both by the Chief Minister, whom I thought would be very eager to obtain a copy, and by the Minister for Education, who is presently elsewhere.

I am quite prepared to table the advice that I have received. It states quite clearly that the letter circulated by the Secretary of the Department of Education to chairmen of school councils and school principals is incorrect at law. I have also received advice which indicates that the department itself obtained legal advice from the Department of Law which supports the advice I received.

Mr Speaker, I now seek leave to table the legal advice which I have received.

Leave granted.

I believe that it is vital for the future of school councils that they have clear advice on the situation regarding temporary, part-time and casual teachers as well as janitors and other people who work for schools and whether such people are, in fact, employees under the definition of the regulations or not. As I said, the letter from the secretary of the department said that such people were not employees and, therefore, were not covered. In fact, the legal opinion which I have just tabled makes it quite clear that such people are employees and, as such, are covered by the one-third restriction.

Mr Speaker, I have tabled my advice in the Assembly. I would ask the government if, in the interests of all members and in the interests of this debate, it will table the advice that it has received from the Department of Law so that all members can know just where it stands and so that all school councils can know where they stand.

Plastic Bag Manufacturer in Trade Development Zone

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Has a manufacturer of plastic bags, located in the Trade Development Zone, approached the government for additional assistance? If so, has such assistance been granted and what is its nature? Lastly, in round figures, how many plastic bags have been produced by the manufacturer?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not have information before me that would enable me to answer the honourable member's question at this stage. I will endeavour to obtain such information and advise him during the course of these sittings. I am aware that the principals of the plastic bag manufacturing company located in the Trade Development Zone have been in Darwin during the last few days, negotiating various matters associated with their business, but I really cannot inform the honourable member further without seeking advice.

Private Child Care Centres

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Can he assure me that full heed will be paid to reasonable requests from parents in relation to the care of their children in private child care centres with regard to government competition, staff ratios, toys, staff qualifications and so forth and that primary regard will not be paid only to staff members of the Children's Services Bureau of his department?

ANSWER

As a responsible member of this parliament, I always listen to the constituents of the Northern Territory.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Videotape and Transcripts

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, earlier today the Leader of the Opposition asked me a question concerning copyright for the transcript and video of the ABC 7.30 Report on February 25 1988. Pursuant to standing orders 87 and 253, the Chief Minister tabled the transcript and the video in the Legislative Assembly on Tuesday March 1 1988. This is a proceeding in parliament. Under these circumstances, in my view, the question of copyright in relation to the Speaker's action does not arise.

School Council Regulations

Mr EDE to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

If he agrees that the introduction of the new school council regulations has generated appalling levels of confusion, does he now intend to re-regulate and does he not agree that the only sensible course is to abolish the new regulations entirely?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not sure if the member for Stuart was in the House yesterday but we debated the regulations then. We removed much of the confusion which, in many instances, had been generated by him. The government's intention with the regulations is quite clear now. There were a number of issues that needed to be clarified yesterday. The intention in respect of part-time employees has been clarified. The reference to ministerial veto has now been amended to avoid any misconstruction. We have made it clear that the principal is an ex-officio member. The government has taken considerable measures to provide clarification for the opposition on some of the issues on which it had been confused. The intentions of the Minister for Education, as outlined in the Assembly last week, will be carried out.

School Council Regulations

Mr EDE to ACTING MINISTER for EDUCATION

Mr Speaker, the comments we have just heard do not answer my question. I would like the acting minister to advise when the amended regulations will be brought into place. What is the position of schools that are holding their AGMs tonight? They cannot abide by the old regulations because they are to be changed. They cannot abide by the amended regulations because they have not been put into place yet and they do not know what they are. They do not know whether they should be abiding by the regulations that were in place 6 months ago. It is completely confusing.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is a pity that the member for Stuart did not use his time in the adjournment debate. If he has a question to ask, one would expect him to ask it.

Mr Ede: I ask questions during question time.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, you have to take your hat off to him and his colleagues at the ABC. They have made a pretty good job of confusing this issue and the way they work together is a credit to them. The amendments to the regulations will be attended to as soon as possible. They are being drafted and as soon as that process is complete, the matter will be attended to.

Local Government Elections

Mr REED to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Will those persons living within the recently extended local government boundaries in Darwin, Katherine and Alice Springs be entitled to vote or nominate for election to respective councils and, if so, what are the closing dates for both enrolment and nomination?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there has been some confusion about the status of people in areas outside the old boundaries but inside the new boundaries of Alice Springs and Katherine in respect of their eligibility to nominate for election and to vote at the council elections to be held in May. I can assure them that they have that ability. The gazettal notice makes it quite clear that they will be able to enrol and nominate. The rolls close on 25 March, the closing date for nominations is 29 April and the polling date for the council elections is 28 May.

Some confusion has been created unnecessarily because it was said that the councils would take over responsibility for the charging of rates on 1 July and that they would take responsibility following the May elections. Some people thought that, because responsibility for the new areas would not be taken over until that time, people living in them would not be permitted to enrol, vote or nominate for positions on the councils. That is not the case, and that is quite clear from the gazettal notice. I will repeat those dates again for the benefit of those who did not pick them up: the rolls close on 25 March, the nomination date is 29 April and the polling date is 28 May.

Videotape and Transcript

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Who was the person who made the videotape of the ABC 7.30 Report tabled in this Assembly by himself on Tuesday, who was the person who made the transcript of that videotape and who authorised the taping and the production of the transcript?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the tape recording was made in my office on my authorisation and I will deal with the matter later. I have no further specific comment to make at present. Later during the course of this question time, I intend to address in more detail the specific issues raised by the Leader of the Opposition. I wish to ensure that my comments are both proper and comprehensive because I do not want to mislead the Assembly or fail to answer the question comprehensively.

MATTER OF PRIVILEGE

Mr SMITH (Opposition Leader): Mr Speaker, I wish to raise a matter of privilege. It is this. Section 48A of the Commonwealth Copyright Act quite clearly sets out restrictions in terms of how members of parliament can take copies of printed material or, as in this case, video material. It says that it can be done '... for the sole purpose of assisting a person who is a member of a parliament in the performance of the person's duties as such a member, by an authorised officer of a library, being a library the principal purpose of which is to provide library services for members of that parliament'.

The Chief Minister has just told this House that the copy of the videotape was made in his office. It was not made in the parliamentary library, which is the only way that it could have been made without breaching copyright. Mr Speaker, I believe that a prima facie case exists that the Chief Minister has breached the copyright laws of Australia. Such a breach is equivalent to the crime of common theft.

The point of this matter of privilege is that, by tabling in this House material which has been copied illegally under the terms of the Copyright Act, the Chief Minister has bought this House into disrepute.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I seek leave to make a personal explanation on this matter at a later stage.

Leave granted.

Mr SPEAKER: I am not quite sure whether the Leader of the Opposition is asking for this matter to be referred to the Privileges Committee. If that is his request, I will have to consider the matter and advise him at a later date.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, that is the response that I expected from you.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr FIRMIN to TREASURER

Mr Speaker, in this House last year we had a constant barrage of criticism from the opposition concerning the operations of Hungerford Refrigeration. I ask the Treasurer, in his capacity as minister responsible for the TIO, is he satisfied that Hungerford Refrigeration is proving to the TIO that it is a worthy vehicle for investment of policyholders' funds?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the TIO is indeed happy with the continuing progress of Hungerford Refrigeration in the Trade Development Zone. Sales have been growing steadily and, for the last 3 months, have run at more than $200 000 per month. That will be a revelation to the Leader of the Opposition, who has not yet managed to find a positive word to say about this company. According to him, the TIO's assistance to Hungerford Refrigeration was a complete waste - 'a financial sinkhole', he called it. I believe that the TIO's actions to assist Hungerford Refrigeration have been completely vindicated.

The board of the TIO has had faith in the advanced technology installed by Hungerford Refrigeration and in the company's enormous potential. That faith is now starting to receive its reward. Difficulties are still being experienced with bad debt problems with some company clients and slow payment of debts, and there are claims and debts from the past still to be settled either by way of negotiation or in court. It is hoped that, in 1988, the Leader of the Opposition will not continue to act as a de facto representative of the interstate companies making claims on Hungerford Refrigeration and that he will allow any such claims to be settled in the usual manner. We have seen the results of his cheap political point-scoring in relation to this matter.

Hungerford Refrigeration has a future in the Northern Territory, particularly in the Trade Development Zone. The fact that sales are now running at $200 000 a month is an indication that the TIO's faith and confidence in Hungerford Refrigeration has been totally vindicated and that its investment in that company will be rewarding for all policyholders.

Police Administration Amendment Bill

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer to his comment on the ABC radio news this morning that he was prepared to accept amendments to the Police Administration Amendment Bill. Will he please advise the House which amendments he is prepared to accept and in which areas of this complex issue he is prepared to accept amendments?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that particular statement needs to be placed in context. What I said was that, as is the normal practice, the government is receptive to rational argument but not to emotional polemic. That is what I said, although those were not the specific terms I used.

Mr Speaker, that is a natural and reasonable response. It has been the approach adopted by the government. I would remind honourable members that, during the course of a particular debate yesterday, a number of points were made with respect to school council regulations and, as a consequence of the arguments that were presented in the House and the legal opinion that was tabled only yesterday by the member for Stuart, the government was prepared to move ...

Mr Tuxworth: He offered last week.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the member for Barkly went on television last week claiming that the opinion had been tabled. He was wrong then too.

Mr Tuxworth: He tried to table it last week but you would not let him.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart did not try to table it. He indicated that he was prepared to table it if we asked him to. He has always had the opportunity to seek leave to table the opinion or to table the opinion. I would argue that it would not have been received. It was not put forward last week, Mr Speaker, but that is an aside.

My point is that if, during the course of the debate on the Police Administration Amendment Bill, matters arise which ...

Mr Ede: Are you fed up with running this government?

Mr Smith: I'll send you the bill for your ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart is getting a bit carried away with himself. The fact that he addressed a few areas of confusion that needed clarification and that the government acted responsibly by taking those points into account in the interests of the community should not be seen as indicative that the member for Stuart is running this government. That is drawing an extremely long bow.

I repeat that, in respect of any legislation before this House, the government is always prepared to look at rational and responsible amendments that may be proposed as a consequence of community consultation or that may arise in the course of debate in the Assembly. Yet again, I refer honourable members to amendments made to the Work Health legislation during the committee stage, as a consequence of the debate that occurred at that time.

As members of a responsible government, we are prepared at all times to deal with legislation as it is supposed to be dealt with in this House. We do not adopt a dogmatic, fixed approach. We do not consider that it is politically damaging to accept rational amendments. My government has never done that and will not do that. I regard that as a responsible and proper approach for government and in accord with the proper role of this House. I will continue to promote that view.

Police Administration Amendment Bill

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, I would like to nail this down because it is one of the most contentious pieces of legislation that has come before the Assembly for some time. It is being put through at very short notice.

Mr SPEAKER: I suggest the honourable member ask his question.

Mr BELL: Will the government accept amendments in respect of the following issues that were the subject of the so-called committee amendments: first, the right to communicate with a friend or relative - proposed as section 142; secondly, the tape recording of confessions and admissions - proposed as section 143; and, thirdly, the savings clause, proposed as section 143A, which included amongst other matters an affirmation of the right to remain silent?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, these are matters that will be dealt with during the course of the debate. I will reserve my government's position on any matters associated with the bill for the debate later today.

Closure of Rivers to Commercial Netting of Fish

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In recognition of the value to the Territory economy of recreational barramundi fishing, will the minister consider extending to other rivers in the Territory his recent decision to close the Mary River to commercial netting?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it has been put to me on a number of occasions that the government should extend to other areas of the Territory its recent actions in respect of the Mary River. Honourable members will be aware from recent press announcements that the closure of the Mary River to commercial fishing was confirmed quite recently following evaluation of a report on the monitoring of the Mary River system during the past year or so. The government decided to close the Mary River to commercial fishing indefinitely and to introduce a new buy-back scheme to reduce the netting effort by the commercial industry of barramundi in Northern Territory waters right across the board. Cabinet approved the purchase of 5 more licences, each involving 1000 m of net, from the commercial fishery.

The commercial fishermen argued very strongly that, in the context of attempts to reduce the impact on fish stocks in the river, restrictions should also be placed on recreational fishing. The government accepted that argument, as did the recreational fishing associations, to their credit. The Mary River system is recognised as the Northern Territory's greatest barramundi-breeding resource and we have now placed a number of restrictions on recreational fishing within it. These apply only to the Mary River system. The first is a prohibition on the use of cast nets. We have also imposed a bag limit of 2 fish per person per day. The normal barramundi bag limit in the Territory is 5 fish per person per day. We have introduced, for the first time in the Northern Territory, a minimum length of 50 cm for barramundi taken from the river by recreational fishermen. Honourable members may consider that a bit large for a minimum-sized barramundi bearing in mind that 50 cm is half a metre. The decision was based on expert advice. Indeed, some of the experts argued that the minimum size should be larger but we were not quite prepared to go along with that. The idea of having a large minimum size is to allow barramundi to reach the stage at which they change sex and become females capable of reproduction.

In relation to the Mary River system only, we have established an area of tidal influence which will be closed to recreational fishermen for the barramundi-breeding period which is currently recognised as extending from 1 October to 31 January inclusive. At the moment, no commercial fishermen in the Northern Territory can fish for barramundi during that period and that has been the case for some time. Within the Mary River system, this now applies to recreational fishermen also.

The honourable member asked whether we would extend some of these new controls on both commercial and recreational fishermen to other rivers. The government has not made a decision on that matter as yet. We believe that there should be some monitoring of other rivers prior to making such decisions, to determine whether there has been such a severe depletion in fish numbers that relief from fishing pressure is required to allow stocks to regenerate. To date, we have not commenced such heavy monitoring systems in the Daly River and Victoria River, the 2 rivers most frequently named as those which might be set aside for recreational fishing by locals and tourists as distinct from commercial fishing. I am happy to keep the situation under constant surveillance. I am a great supporter of the barramundi industry, which brings enormous economic benefits to the Northern Territory. We need to do everything reasonable to protect the resource, without going overboard. As resources permit, the Fisheries Unit in my department will mount monitoring programs of those rivers in order to be able to make judgments on the basis of scientific information rather than emotion.

Pearl Farming Licences

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

What is the current situation in relation to the issue of pearl farming licences in the Northern Territory and have any expressions of interest been received from Aboriginal organisations or groups?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to advise the honourable member that we are currently assessing applications for pearl licences in Northern Territory waters. As honourable members will be aware, the pearling industry has been largely defunct in the Northern Territory for in excess of 20 years and it is believed that there are now sufficient stocks to justify the issue of a number of licences.

The recent calling of applications brought a very good response. We received 21 applications for a maximum of 5 licences to be issued. It may be that less than 5 licences are issued but that will depend on the assessment of the applications which is currently in progress. The assessment panel includes a Commonwealth fisheries officer. The waters to be fished for pearl shell are Commonwealth waters but, under an agreement with the Commonwealth, the Northern Territory is to manage the fishery. Another panel member is a former employee of the Western Australian Fisheries Department. He is very knowledgeable about the pearling industry in Western Australia and, together with officers of my department and the Treasury, is a member of the panel which is assessing the applications.

Whilst I would not normally name applicants for licences, the honourable member specifically asked whether Aboriginal organisations had applied. I am prepared to confirm that that is the case. They will, of course, be assessed along with the other applicants.

Sunday Alcohol Sales

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Does the government support supermarkets selling alcohol on Sundays?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is good to receive a question of that nature from the opposition. I have had the same question put to me on a number of occasions recently by members on this side of the House.

The whole question of liquor, liquor sales and liquor licences is under review at the moment. There have recently been some dramatic changes in the availability of liquor in Queensland where 24-hour liquor sales have been proposed in various locations, for the tourist trade. This was not acceptable to the Bjelke-Petersen government but I understand that it is now being seriously considered. In fact, the Chairman of the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission recently visited Queensland to look at the legislation and proposals for its introduction. What we are doing is not just another review. Whilst I would be the first to admit that the liquor industry and the commission have had more reviews than the Tivoli Theatre, I am fair dinkum about this one.

There are a number of other issues, including the d'Abbs Report, which the member for MacDonnell referred to, and the implementation of some of that report's recommendations. A petition signed by 6000 people has been tabled in this Assembly, indicating that those people would like supermarkets to be able to sell alcohol on Sundays. That is valuable information from the community at large. Of course, I have also had representation from the Australian Hotels Association on the same issue.

The legislation itself is currently under review and we have a full-time officer working on that. I have advised the Cabinet and the party room that I will have a comprehensive and detailed report on the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission before them within 2 months. The sale of alcohol in supermarkets is one of the issues which is being addressed.

Light Vehicle Fleet Management

Mr POOLE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Would he explain the rationale behind the proposed introduction of a pilot scheme for light vehicle fleet management?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is part of ongoing research by the Department of Transport and Works to find more cost-effective ways of going about its business. In recent years, major organisations and government departments have examined and, in some cases, implemented private leasing or full-management schemes for their vehicle fleets. The Northern Territory government has a considerable number of vehicles, some 1500 of which are in the small to medium range. That has a significant impact on the Territory budget. The research is another responsible approach by the Department of Transport and Works to determine whether there are some financial gains in having private enterprise either lease vehicles to the government or perform full-management services.

During his very colourful history, the member for Araluen spent a period working for a major motor vehicle leasing company and I appreciate his contributions and comments in regard to this matter. We are about to advertise a package involving 120 small vehicles. We are looking for a variety of submissions either on total full vehicle management or leasing. Information required from tenderers will include an indication of the utilisation of local resources - suppliers, mechanics and so forth - in their schemes. I mention that deliberately because one of the fears expressed is that perhaps some multinational or large national company will come in here. I can assure honourable members that we will be looking for maximum local participation. We have already received a considerable number of expressions of interest from locals.

I am confident that the scheme will work. After 12 months, we will determine exactly what savings are afforded by such a scheme. I will be able to report to the Assembly at that time.

Employment in the Territory

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Can he advise whether the figures bandied around by the Leader of the Opposition last Thursday, which purported to show that 8000 jobs had been lost in the past 6 months, accurately reflect the real labour situation in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am happy to comment on that issue. The member for Stuart said that the figures came from the Australian Bureau of Statistics. That is what concerns me. Quite clearly, there are sets of ABS figures which basically laugh at one another. The Australian Bureau of Statistics would be the first to admit that the figures are based on very flimsy evidence.

Graphs that I have been shown recently indicate that there is a decline in employment figures in the Northern Territory. The graphs indicate that public service employment has declined at a steeper rate than that in the private sector. The problem that I have with the ABS figures quoted by the Leader of the Opposition ...

Mr Ede: How do you work your figures out?

Mr McCARTHY: Mr Speaker, I know exactly how many people have left the public service during the last 12 months.

Mr Smith: 700.

Mr McCARTHY: Mr Speaker, that is not correct. The actual figure is about 500. The Commonwealth Public Service and the Northern Territory Public Service combined constitute approximately one-third of the overall employment figures in the Northern Territory. The other two-thirds relate to the private sector. Even if employment were decreasing at the same rate in both sectors, the maximum fall would be 1500 to 2000 jobs.

Another factor that lends strength to my argument is that, while there has been a downturn in jobs, there has also been a downturn in recipients of social security benefits. Between August and November 1987, there was a reduction of about 700 in the number of people receiving social security benefits. At the same time, there was an increase of about 1600 in numbers of people aged between 15 and 65 in the work force.

Mr Ede: Where did you get those figures from?

Mr McCARTHY: ABS, Mr Speaker.

Mr Smith: ABS!

Mr McCARTHY: Mr Speaker, I told you at the beginning that the figures laugh at one another. That is exactly what I am trying to point out: the ABS figures laugh at one another. The ABS figures indicate a downturn of 7000 to 8000. We know how many positions have been lost in the public service, which constitutes about one-third of the Territory work force. If the downturn is equivalent in the private sector, the maximum number of jobs lost would be 1500. Even if we say the figure could be 2000, that is about as far as we can go. A downturn in social security recipients and an increase in population: it is quite clear that the figures laugh at one another.

Mr Speaker, the Australian Bureau of Statistics has itself pointed out that it has changed the basis of its collection of figures. If one takes a sample of people unemployed in Fannie Bay and another in Palmerston, the figures would be quite different. At Port Keats or Yirrkala, the sample would result in different figures again. Given our very small population and the small samples taken, I have very little confidence in the ABS figures in relation to employment. There is no way that we have a downturn anything like that suggested by the ABS figures which have been bandied around by the Leader of the Opposition. I have no problem in saying that. Given the decline in the public service, I am fully confident that there has not been the sort of downturn in the private sector that is indicated by the ABS figures.

Liquor Act

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

I address my question to the Chief Minister because I assume that he is still the head of the government. Does he believe that citizens should be penalised by the state if they have committed no crime? If he does not believe that, why does his government continue to support the provisions of section 96 of the Liquor Act?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the answer to the first part of the question is that, obviously, we do not believe people should be penalised if they have committed no crime. Of course, that begs the issue in respect of section 96 of the Liquor Act. I assume from the content of debates in this House that the honourable member is referring particularly to the confiscation of vehicles or property where a person has been charged with a particular offence. The legal argument is very complex. It may touch upon matters of evidence and a multitude of other circumstances. The reason this government has continued to support the confiscation provision in the Liquor Act is the continuing and very strong representations from Aboriginal communities. I am advised that they believe that it constitutes a deterrent. Obviously, people charged with offences are presumed innocent until proven guilty. While a matter is before the courts, confiscated goods are held but, in the event of a person charged being found not guilty, such goods are returned.

Mr Speaker, I am not a lawyer but the underlying principle is that, if a person commits an offence under the Liquor Act, the property of that person which was used in committing that offence ought to be forfeit as part of the punishment for the offence. The legalities and technical details of that are matters that I would leave in the hands of the court.

Liquor Act

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, my supplementary question is: does the Chief Minister believe that, under the Northern Territory's legal system, the guilt or innocence of individuals should be judged by the courts?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I ask for your ruling. I believe that I am being asked for a legal opinion.

Mr Leo: No, I am asking you for a personal opinion.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I advise the member opposite that I am awaiting your advice in respect of the matter I have referred to you.

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, I am prepared to rephrase the question if that would help matters.

Mr SPEAKER: I would suggest that that might be advisable.

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, is it the Northern Territory government's policy to penalise persons when they have not been convicted by a court for any crime? If that is not the government's policy, why does it insist on the maintenance of section 96 of the Liquor Act? Quite clearly, that section of the act enables the government to penalise persons who have been proven by a court to be entirely innocent.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have already answered the first part of that question. In respect of the second part of that question dealing with section 96 of the Liquor Act and the interpretation of that act which the honourable member is presupposing in his question, I will refer the matter to the appropriate minister.

Mr Leo: It is a matter of law.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, if it is a matter of law, the honourable member should not be asking the question in this House.

Mr Leo: I am asking whether or not you support it.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, it is a law of the Northern Territory. As a responsible government, obviously we support all Northern Territory laws.

Mr Speaker, I will refer the details of the Liquor Act and its administration to the relevant minister.

Mr COULTER (Treasurer): Mr Speaker, for the benefit of honourable members who may not be as familiar with this legislation as is the member for Nhulunbuy, section 96 of the Liquor Act deals with forfeiture.

Mr Speaker, may I tell you why section 96 is included in the Liquor Act? It is there largely at the insistence of Aboriginal traditional tribal elders. I have had the opportunity of travelling the Territory and discussing this very issue with such people and I can tell honourable members opposite that they are not representing the views of their constituents. I will give one example of the hundreds I could give if I had enough time. I will not name the communities or people involved.

I attended a meeting in one community. The women were on one side of the fence and the men were on the other. The men said: 'This grog-running has to stop. It is causing big problems in our community'. They went on to give details about what was happening and asked us to stop it. The women then had their chance to speak. One of them stood up and came forward. 'You see all these men sitting next to this fence here?', she said. 'They are the biggest grog-runners in this community. They use the council truck. They cover the grog with a load of sand and they bring it into the community'.

Mr Speaker, the confiscation provision is in the act at the insistence of Aboriginal people following widespread consultation right across the Northern Territory. They did not want people to run grog into their communities. They have seen confiscation as a way of stopping it by removing the means of supply. I could give examples of cartons of grog being thrown from a bus as a police car followed behind. Whether or not the people throwing cartons are innocent or guilty, it is fairly obvious to somebody who gets hit with a carton of Vic Bitter that the vehicle is carrying grog. The confiscation provisions were incorporated at the insistence of tribal elders who wanted vehicles carrying grog to be taken from their owners immediately.

Mr Ede: That is absolute rubbish. It assumes that it doesn't matter whether the vehicle owner is guilty or innocent. It just says, 'To hell with them'.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, that is an example of the opposition's hypocrisy.

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: The honourable minister will withdraw that word.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I withdraw it unreservedly.

We have been out to consult with the people. They have pleaded with us: 'Look, alcohol is a problem here. We don't want it here, please'. There have been cases where vehicles have been seized by the elders and taken away and burnt. Alcohol is one of the most serious problems in Aboriginal communities and it was at the insistence of tribal elders that section 96 was included in the Liquor Act.

Mr Speaker, the issue has been under review through the d'Abbs Report in which the forfeiture of vehicles and the effectiveness of dry-area legislation is discussed. Let me tell you, from my personal experience, that this confiscation provision is included at the insistence of Aboriginal people. They requested it when the legislation was first put together and that is why it continues to be in the act.

ANSWER TO QUESTION

Plastic Bag Manufacturer in Trade Development Zone

Mr PERRON (Industries and Development): Mr Speaker, yesterday the Leader of the Opposition asked me 2 questions about a company in the Trade Development Zone. He asked whether the company had approached the Trade Development Zone Authority for additional assistance and about the nature of that assistance. He also asked if I could provide details of how many plastic bags had been produced by that manufacturer in the Trade Development Zone. I am now in a position to respond to those questions.

I will not go into the history of the matter because it is not strictly relevant to the question but, under the agreement with the Trade Development Zone Authority, the company is eligible for assistance in the training of local employees. I am informed that the company has trained 4 local employees, in accordance with the agreement, and has approached the authority for the agreed reimbursement. This has not yet been finalised as the company has not supplied the required evidence of its expenditure. It is estimated that the amount in question would not exceed $2000.

I have no information of any other requests for any extension of assistance to the company. However, I should advise the Assembly and the Leader of the Opposition that the partners of the company are currently in dispute and negotiations are being closely monitored by the Trade Development Zone Authority.

On the question of production by the company, to date it has produced approximately 15 000 plastic bags. The majority of this production has been for a sample order to a local firm. The remainder of the factory's production has been used in the company's marketing.

Transport and Works Involvement at Tennant Creek

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Given that his department is the government's principal construction agency, what is the extent of its involvement in Tennant Creek following the series of earthquakes that rocked the town earlier this year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am extremely pleased to report on the most excellent and very responsible role played by the Department of Transport and Works following the series of earthquakes in January in Tennant Creek. There were 4 major quakes on 22 and 23 January, the biggest measuring about 7 on the Richter scale. Officers of the Department of Transport and Works moved quickly and were on site on 23 January, the second day of the quakes. Their role involved assessing damage sustained, advising residents of the extent of that damage and on their options with regard to repairs etc. A phone-in service was available from 24 January and calls from residents were responded to by engineers and building personnel by way of inspection and advice. Also, all public buildings were inspected. In all, 45 Housing Commission homes, 15 private homes and the abattoir were inspected. The department provided structural specialists and support staff for all of those inspections.

Despite the relatively high intensity of the earthquake, which measured 7 on the Richter scale, public buildings and all major office buildings sustained only minimal damage and performed quite well structurally. The damage was limited mainly to cosmetic and minor damage. Inspections of housing and private dwellings by the department revealed only minor damage.

Although the quakes could not be called a natural disaster, they certainly were a very significant event in the minds of local people. One pleasing feature was the excellent response of the Emergency Service, police and local council personnel. Alongside that, was the balanced, rational advice of the Department of Transport and Works which was extremely valuable in reassuring the community. The major problem which residents face at such a time is in understanding the significance of events or the potential problems. Although technical services are very important in such a situation, it is also very important to communicate with the local community to ensure that things are under control.

I understand that the local member was in town at the time. I am not suggesting for one moment that he was responsible for the earthquakes but, true to form and for the sake of much-needed media coverage, he put forward some alarmist views to the NT News. He stated that the damage to homes was probably quite extensive and suggested that all 2-storey buildings in the town had suffered severe structural damage and had been evacuated. Although it is not a matter for major debate, it is sad that the honourable member did not take the opportunity to help console his electorate and to provide some constructive support to the community. His alarmist statements were not in the least bit supportive.

One of the biggest problems with natural disasters, whether they be cyclones in Darwin, bushfires in Victoria or earthquakes in Tennant Creek, is misinformation spread among the public. People are nervous enough anyway. What is required is a very balanced and rational approach. One would certainly hope that there will be no further earthquakes in Tennant Creek and also that, in the event of similar events in any electorate, local members will seek to be supportive and positive rather than alarmist and negative.

MATTER OF PRIVILEGE

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, earlier today the Leader of the Opposition, pursuant to standing order 83, raised as a matter of privilege the tabling on 1 March 1988 of a video and transcript of a portion of the ABC 7.30 Report of 25 February 1988. The Leader of the Opposition claimed that, by copying the video and having a transcript prepared, the Chief Minister had breached the Copyright Act and that, by tabling the video and transcript, the Chief Minister had tended to bring the Assembly into ridicule or contempt. He asked that I refer the matter to the Committee of Privileges.

It is not the responsibility or the province of presiding officers to interpret or to adjudicate upon actions taken by members which could be governed by statute. That is the province of the judicial process. I do not propose to refer the matter to the Committee of Privileges.

STATEMENT

Letter from Northern Territory Football League

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, I received the following letter from the President of the Northern Territory Football League following our message to the team yesterday.

Dear Mr Speaker,

On behalf of the players and management of the Northern Territory Football League team, I wish to express my sincere thanks for the good wishes of honourable members. Today we play the all-Australian amateurs in the semi-final. When our team takes the field, they play for their team, the game and the Northern Territory and all Northern Territorians are in our hearts and in our minds.

Tony Shaw
President

Mr EDE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Given that some of question time has been taken up with various notices, is it possible that you would intercede with the government to allow an extension of question time to allow us to ask the questions that we have not had time to ask?

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The first statement I made related to a question asked by the Leader of the Opposition and the second statement took only a few seconds.

4. How much money is being spent advertising in each of the newspapers in the Northern Territory?

58. Illegal Grape Varieties Grown in the Territory

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

1. Is the Minister aware of recent discoveries in the Mildura and Medindie areas of illegal grape varieties that are claimed to endanger the Export Table Grape Market (currently worth some $90m to Australia), which could have introduced new diseases into this country to the detriment of the Table Grape Industry?
2. Are any such illegal varieties being grown in the Territory?
3. Is the variety claimed by Territory Grape Farms to be Perlette, indeed that variety: in light of the fact that Territory Grape Farms Perlette comes in after its Flame Seedless, whereas Perlette from other Territory growers comes in ahead of Flame Seedless?

59. Open Space Development Strategy

Mr BELL to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Will the Northern Territory government carry out the development objectives outlined in the Open Space Development Strategy prepared by Land Systems Pty Limited, dated September 1986?

3. Aboriginal Employment

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR and ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES

In view of the Northern Territory Government's stated commitment to improving Aboriginal employment and in the light of recent reports indicating a decline in Aboriginal employment levels, what are the numbers of unfilled positions in each of the following categories:

- (a) Police aides;
- (b) Trackers;
- (c) Health workers;
- (d) Assistant teachers in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities; and
- (e) Teacher aides in Aboriginal schools on Aboriginal communities?

ANSWER

As at 8 February 1988 the number of vacancies in the above categories were as follows:

- | | |
|---|-----|
| (a) Police Aides | 1 |
| (b) Trackers | 7 |
| (c) Health Workers | 19 |
| (d) Assistant Teacher | Nil |
| (e) Teacher Aides - not a separate designation. | |

5. Skywest - Aero-medical Services

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

What are the details of the cost to the Northern Territory government of the financial, legal and other arrangements made with the Skywest Company to finalise negotiations allowing Skywest to begin the aero-medical services in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

The identifiable costs to the Northern Territory government of the financial, legal and other arrangements made with the Skywest Company to finalise negotiations allowing Skywest to begin aero-medical services in the Northern Territory amount to $229 354.53. This amount is broken down as follows -

Settlement arising out of legal action (damages and costs)	$226 426.27
Cost of visit by Secretary, Department of Health and Community Services and the Secretary, Department of Law to Perth to negotiate with Skywest (airfares, accommodation, meals)	$ 2 928.26
TOTAL	$229 354.53

The new contract arrangements have resulted in significant savings over the previous arrangements. The extent of the saving on a monthly basis is in the order of $70 000.

21. Parks and Reserves - Tourists

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TOURISM

What was the number of visitors to each of the following parks, reserves or lands managed by the Conservation Commission in 1985, 1986 and 1987:

Alice Springs Telegraph Station Historical Reserve;
Arltunga Historical Reserve;
Finke Gorge National Park;
Glen Helen Gorge Nature Park;

Berry Springs Nature Park;
Butterfly Gorge Nature Park;
Daly River Nature Park;
Douglas Hot Springs Nature Park;
Holmes Jungle Nature Park;
Howard Springs Nature Park;
Imbrawarra Gorge Nature Park;

Cutta Cutta Caves Nature Park;
Katherine Gorge National Park;
Keep River National Park; and
Mataranka Pool Nature Park?

ANSWER

This question should have been directed to my colleague, the Minister for Conservation. However, I have requested the information from the Minister for Conservation and his reply follows.

The Conservation Commission has taken positive steps in recent years to improve visitor monitoring in its parks and reserves.

Visitor use information is of crucial importance if the Commission is to satisfy the demands of what is, as you will note from the figures below, a rapidly increasing visitor load while at the same time protecting the amenity and other values of the areas that these people come to enjoy.

The estimated total number of visitors to each of the areas identified, region by region, for the years 1985, 1986 and 1987 is set out in the following tables.

ALICE SPRINGS REGION

AREA	VISITOR NUMBERS
	1985	1986	1987
Alice Springs Telegraph Station Historical Reserve	180 000 m	196 000 * (8.9%)	224 700 (14.6%)
Arltunga Historical Reserve	6 000 m	11 400 m (90.0%)	12 700 (11.4%)
Finke Gorge National Park	40 500 h	54 700 h (35.1%)	56 700 (3.7%)
Glen Helen Gorge Nature Park	No Specific Data Available (see Ormiston Gorge data below **)
Ormiston Gorge and Pound National Park 	59 000 m	70 000 m (18.2%)	98 000 m (39.4%)

Key: h - high reliability data
m - moderate reliability data l - low reliability data (%) - percentage increase in visitor numbers from the previous year

* - Visitor numbers for the Alice Springs Telegraph Station Historical Reserve for 1986 and 1987 are projections based on 1985 data using estimated annual increases in tourist numbers and resident populations, they are necessarily of low reliability.

 - Data for Ormiston Gorge, 10 km east of Glen Helen Gorge along Larapinta Drive, is considered indicative of visitor numbers in the West MacDonnells District generally.

DARWIN REGION

25. Commissioner of Taxes
Unpaid Tax

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

I refer to the table on page 17 of the Northern Territory Treasury Annual Report:

1. Why was the number of inspections only 128 in 1986-87 compared to 195 in the previous year?
2. How many average staff years were deployed to inspection work within the Inspection and Enforcement Unit during each of the financial years ended 30 June 1982 to 30 June 1987?
3. What has been the coverage ration (total inspections divided by total registered taxpayers) for those same years?

ANSWER

1. The decline in the number of inspections between 1986-87 and the previous year can largely be attributed to staff shortages.

This problem has since been overcome by:

- (i) the upgrading of existing positions (thereby attracting qualified accounting staff); and
- (ii) the recruitment of 2 additional investigation officers.

The Investigation and Enforcement Unit is currently at full strength.

2. Average staff years deployed to inspections:

1981-82	1.02*
1982-83	1.58*
1983-84	3.18
1984-85	2.90
1985-86	2.88
1986-87	1.97

* Unit staff by 2 inspectors only.

3. Total inspections as a ratio of total registered taxpayers:

1981-82	0.14
1982-83	0.13
1983-84	0.17
1984-85	0.13
1985-86	0.14
1986-87	0.09

26. Arrears Administration Fee

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. What was the total amount of arrears administration fee imposed on Housing Commission loans during 1987?
2. Upon how many loans was the fee imposed?

ANSWER

An Arrears Administration Fee (AAF) is imposed monthly on each Northern Territory Home Purchase Assistance Scheme (NTHPAS) loan which is $50 or more in arrears. The Fee consists of 10% of the outstanding instalment balance.

1. The total amount of Arrears Administration Fee imposed on NTHPAS loans during 1987 was $125 594.30.
2. Arrears Administration Fee was imposed on 462 loans during 1987.

28. Trade Development Zone Authority Trade Missions

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

1. How many trade missions:
 - (a) were convened during 1987;
 - (b) in which cities were these missions convened; and
 - (c) on which dates did these meetings take place?
2. Were the missions separately targeted to types of industry?
3. Outside the trade mission effort, how many potential investors were approached on a one-to-one basis during the calendar year 1987:
 - (a) within Australia; and
 - (b) overseas?

ANSWER

1. The Trade Development Zone Authority does not normally undertake trade missions as a form of promotion. Promotional activities are generally by way of seminars and, to a lesser extent, trade fairs.

Seminars and trade fairs which were held, or participated in, by the authority during the course of 1987 are as follows:

DATE	ACTIVITY	LOCATION
February
10	Seminar	Sydney (to Japanese companies participating in the Return Japanese Investment Mission to Australia)
16	Seminar	Melbourne (in conjunction with the Australian Chamber of Manufacturers)
26	Seminar	Bangkok
March
2	Seminar	Kuala Lumpur (in conjunction with the Malaysian Manufacturers Assn)
4	Seminar	Singapore (in conjunction with the Singapore Manufacturers Assn)
May
8	Seminar	Singapore (Business Migration)
11	Seminar	Sydney (in conjunction with the Chamber of Manufacturers of NSW)
12	Seminar	Kuala Lumpur (Business Migration)
13-15	Trade Fair	Sydney Export 88
20	Seminar	Hong Kong
25	Seminar	Kaohsiung
27	Seminar	Changhua
27	Seminar	Taichung
28-30	Trade Fair	Darwin (NT Expo)
August
10	Seminar	Bangkok
October
20	Seminar	Taipei
21	Seminar	Changhua

2. Promotional activities by the authority primarily target manufacturing industry, specifically export manufacturers. However, at overseas seminars, small numbers of people attend in order to obtain more general information about the Northern Territory.
3. It is not possible to provide a complete record of the numbers of inquiries generated or companies approached by the Zone Authority. TDZA promotional activities yield a wide range of inquiries on an individual basis to both the Zone Authority and its consultants.

29. Territory Insurance Office - Claims

Mr COLLINS to TREASURER

During the period 1 January to 31 December 1987, how many claims have been -

- (a) made on the Territory Insurance Office;
- (b) settled within 48 days of being made; and
- (c) settled within 60 days of being made.

ANSWER

Though short, the honourable member's question will take a long time and considerable expense to answer.

Like all insurers, the TIO maintains such statistics as are necessary for underwriting purposes; however, it is neither practical nor cost effective to maintain statistics of settlement times. To obtain them now would require a search of all files handled by the TIO in 1987. The size of that task can be seen from the fact that in 1987 the TIO handled 3480 claims in the workers' compensation class alone.

I can only indicate to the honourable member that it is TIO policy to handle all claims promptly and fairly. If he has any specific complaints, I would be happy to have them reviewed.

30. Kulgera Tourist Venture

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Has a government loan been given to Mr Jeff Sutton, or a company with which he is associated, for a tourist venture at Kulgera?

If so -

- (a) when was the application made and to whom;
- (b) what is the amount of the loan;
- (c) what are the terms of the loan;
- (d) who approved the loan;
- (e) how was the loan effected and through which government agency; and
- (f) what security is there for the loan?

ANSWER

No government loan has been given to Mr Jeffery Sutton or any company with which he is associated, for a tourist venture at Kulgera. However, financial assistance in the form of an interest rate subsidy of $70 000 was provided by the Tourist Commission to the National Australia Bank in support of commercial borrowings by a company of which Mr Sutton is a director to purchase Kulgera Road Side Inn.

This assistance was made available contingent on the directors entering into an agreement which provided for the upgrading of the Road Side Inn involving a minimal expenditure of $500 000 within 24 months. Many of these improvements are already underway and the Northern Territory Tourist Commission has been monitoring the situation closely to ensure compliance with the agreement.

31. Beaufort Liquor Fees

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TOURISM

1. How much has the Beaufort Hotel -
 - (a) paid in liquor licensing fees since it opened; and
 - (b) outstanding in licensing fees to date?
2. Over what period of time has the Beaufort Hotel accumulated the outstanding licensing fees?

ANSWER

The licence for the Beaufort Hotel became effective on 17 March 1986. A licence renewal fee of $43 721.03 was paid in January 1987. A further licence renewal fee of $31 758.17 was paid in January 1988.

There are no outstanding licence fees to date. The 1988 licence fee will be due and payable on 28 July 1988 and will be based on purchases for the period 1 January 1988 to 30 June 1988.

33. Police Prosecutors

Mr COLLINS to CHIEF MINISTER

1. How many Police Prosecutors are there in Alice Springs?
2. How many Police Prosecutors are there in Darwin?
3. How many cases were prosecuted in Alice Springs in February 1988?
4. How many cases were prosecuted in Darwin in February 1988?

5. What was the average time taken per case in Alice Springs in February 1988?
6. What was the average time taken per case in Darwin in February 1988?

ANSWER

1. There are two (2) Police Prosecutors in Alice Springs.
2. There are seven (7) Police Prosecutors in Darwin.
3. 448 offences were prosecuted in Alice Springs in February 1988.
4. 1068 offences were prosecuted in Darwin in February 1988.
- 5.) No records are kept nor can any meaningful assumptions be
- 6.) made about 'average time taken per case' in either Alice Springs or Darwin.

34. Late Prosecution

Mr COLLINS to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

Does the Honourable Attorney-General intend to try to reinstate a case before the court in Alice Springs which was recently dismissed by the Magistrate because the Prosecution was late?

ANSWER

No.

I understand the case referred to involved a prosecution in February for a summary offence, which was dismissed under s.63 of the Justices Act, because the prosecutor was not present when the case was called.

Under s.162A of the Justices Act upon a request from the Crown a Justice may reserve a question of law arising in connection with the hearing of a matter. The procedure is used only in a limited number of cases where there is an important point of law to be resolved and the matter is otherwise one of importance. Given (a) the minor nature of the offence; (b) the relevant law in relation to dismissal of matters for want of prosecution; and (c) the delay since the Justice made his finding; it seems unlikely the Justice would agree to state a case. Of course such a procedure would not reinstitute the proceedings rather it would only determine the question of law to be considered in relation to later matters before the Court. In any event, however, from the information before me I consider that in this instance the Magistrate's decision would stand if the question of law was considered by the Supreme Court.

You should note that there is no appeal from a dismissal of a complaint (see s.163 of the Justices Act). I do not consider there are any reasons to amend such a provision which generally follows the applicable law throughout Australia.

37. Darwin Institute of Technology Foreign Student Numbers

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many foreign students attend the Darwin Institute of Technology?
2. What is the total amount of fees received this year from foreign students to 31 March 1988?
3. What has been the cost to DIT of the recruitment of foreign students, taking into account the offices opened in Asia, their staffing and trips taken by DIT staff to Asia in the past year?

ANSWER

1. The total number of overseas students at the Darwin Institute of Technology is 60. This comprises 48 full fee paying students including 6 studying the English Language Intensive Course for Overseas Students (ELICOS) and 12 Commonwealth government sponsored overseas students.
2. The total amount of fees received to 29 February 1988 is $171 256. This amount is expected to reach in excess of $250 000 by the end of July when all fees for 1988 will have been collected. It should be noted that some students are paying their fees using the instalment system.
3. Total cost for the period 1 July 1987 to 29 February 1988 is $85 586 which includes agents fees, travel, advertising and other administrative expenses.

The number of trips undertaken by DIT staff to Asia involved 16 officers at a total cost of $40 852. Of this amount, approximately half related to promotion of courses and student recruitment and half to the delivery of off-shore components of courses.

50. Housing Commission Tenancies

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. How many Housing Commission tenancies:
 - (a) ceased in -
 - (i) December 1987,
 - (ii) January 1988, and
 - (iii) February 1988; and
 - (b) commenced in -
 - (i) December 1987,

(ii) January 1988, and

(iii) February 1988?

2. What were the tenancy cessations and commencements for each of the above months, 12 months previously?

ANSWER

Darwin International Grammar School

Mr EDE TO MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is the Mr Koh who is involved with the Darwin International Grammar School that same entrepreneurial disaster area, the Mr Koh who was involved with Raffles and Burgundy Royale when it went bankrupt, and what protection and guarantees has the government extracted from the Darwin International Grammar School concerning the $8.7m investment that it proposes to make into that school?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, here we go again. Before we even get off the ground, the opposition starts knock, knock, knocking.

Mr Ede interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for Stuart's question was heard in silence. The minister's reply will be heard in silence likewise.

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, if the shadow minister for education wishes to make a personal attack on a shareholder of a company that is interested in building an international grammar school here, then so be it. He can go outside and have that argument.

The answer to the question is that Hishamuddin Koh is a shareholder of the company Education Holdings.

Darwin International Grammar School

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Mr Speaker, the honourable minister did not answer the question. I asked what guarantees and what protection the government had for its investment, given the fact that Mr Koh has been involved already in a number of businesses in the Northern Territory into which the government has put money and especially given the fact that, in some of those instances, the Northern Territory government and ordinary businessmen in the Northern Territory have suffered significant financial loss as a result of Mr Koh's involvement. I think it is fair that the minister advise what protections and what guarantees he has sought and had provided to him with regard to the international grammar school.

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): A point of order, Mr Speaker! This is question time. It is not statement time for the opposition. The member for Stuart is arguing a case rather than asking a question seeking facts.

Mr SPEAKER: There is a point of order. I ask the honourable member to reach a conclusion and ask his question.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, I am asking the honourable minister if he will advise this House what protections and what guarantees have been sought and have been provided by the Darwin International Grammar School in relation to the $8.7m which he has promised to provide to it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there are ample guarantees for the Northern Territory government. I might say initially that no money will be paid by the Northern Territory government until the school is operational at the beginning of next year. The Darwin International Grammar School will provide an essential service to the Northern Territory people, and the guarantees in relation to the possibility of its going broke are well and truly covered in an agreement with the Northern Territory government. I have indicated very clearly that no up-front money is required and that any money to be provided will be allocated in the budget. The amount is $1.45m per year over a period of 6 years, and no money is to be paid out until the building is actually constructed.

Darwin International Grammar School

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Yesterday and today, the Secretary of the Northern Territory Teachers Federation, Col Young, said on the radio that he was aware that the minister's office was being flooded with telegrams and letters protesting the government's funding of the Darwin International Grammar School. Are Mr Young's allegations correct?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is the sort of nonsense that we hear from the Northern Territory Teachers Federation Executive. It is trying to beat up a storm over this issue and should be condemned for doing so. I believe that many of the teachers outside this building today are not aware of the facts. Col Young and Bob Wharton have both been deceptive in relation to information.

Mr Bell: Say that outside, Tom.

Mr HARRIS: You should listen!

To say that my office has been flooded with letters is not accurate. I have received 3 letters, 1 from a school and 2 from federation members at regional offices. That is the extent to which my office has been flooded with letters. The Department of Education has received the same letters. The federation executive is trying to beat up a storm by misinforming people in the community, and it stands condemned for that.

Bob Wharton and Col Young, both members of the federation executive, have been playing politics on this issue. To have a person like Bob Wharton, an executive member of the Teachers Federation, seconding motions at an ALP conference condemning the government's handling of education is something which needs to be looked at carefully. I am not objecting to people being members of parties, but I do object to someone who is in an executive position in which he deals with me as Minister for Education moving motions relating to education at an ALP conference. The teachers of the Northern Territory should look very closely at the executive of the Teachers Federation. I believe that, if teachers knew the facts, they would not be demonstrating outside today.

I will point out some of the deceptions that have been perpetrated on the community. The first was the statement from the Teachers Federation that the government would pay $8.7m up-front to the international grammar school. What a load of nonsense! People in the community believed that.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I am sure that, like myself, you heard the question. It was very specific. It asked how many letters and telegrams the minister had received in relation to the government's decision to fund the Darwin International Grammar School. The question was very clear. I can accept that the minister did not understand it but, Mr Speaker, I suggest that you remind the minister of the question and request that he stick to the point.

Mr SPEAKER: I ask the minister to relate his answer to the question.

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, I believe that I have answered the question satisfactorily. There has been deception right throughout this whole exercise and the Teachers Federation executive stands condemned for its actions.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Is it a fact that he knew Hungerford Refrigeration faced a threat of going into receivership about 10 days ago and, if so, why did he neglect to inform either his Chief Minister or the Treasurer? Secondly, is it also a fact that he briefed the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority to try, or that the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority tried of his own volition, to delay the announcement that the company would be put into the hands of a receiver until after this sittings of the Assembly? Thirdly, is it true that the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority, Mr Ray McHenry, flew out to Singapore or other points north on Sunday and will not be available to assist either the minister or the receiver in the following days?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I did not get all 4 points of the honourable member's question.

Mr SMITH: I will repeat them for you.

Mr PERRON: It might have been useful if he had asked them one at a time or had provided me with an advance copy.

In regard to questions about whether or not I was aware of, or tried to defer, any decision by the directors of TIO in respect of whether Hungerford Refrigeration would be placed in receivership, I can assure the honourable member most emphatically that I certainly did not, nor would I at any time even suggest that such a decision should be deferred pending a Legislative Assembly sittings. Clearly, such an action would be grossly improper. It would be absolutely crazy for any politician even to attempt to influence such a commercial decision. My understanding of the situation is that the board of Hungerford Refrigeration has been waiting for some 2 or 3 weeks now for a decision by the federal government on the successful tenderer for an air-conditioning contract for houses at Tindal. The company has been concerned, I believe, about the inordinate and unexplained delay by the Commonwealth. Indeed, it may not even yet have been advised formally whether or not the company, which was one of a small number of tenderers, has been awarded the contract or not.

In response to the honourable member's last question, about the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone, it is true that he left Darwin on Sunday. He is in Singapore. I spoke to him last evening by telephone, as I will be doing regularly during his trip overseas. Obviously, he is available to advise me in that regard. However, the Manager of the Trade Development Zone is in Darwin and is able to assist with these matters. I can assure the Leader of the Opposition, who clearly does not comprehend what is involved in overseas marketing and Trade Development Zone promotion ...

Mr Smith: It doesn't appear you do either.

Mr PERRON: ... that it will involve a series of meetings in several countries and that will take some weeks. You do not organise such an event involving many people, many activities and considerable expense and then decide at the last minute that you will cancel it and stick around Darwin because the Leader of the Opposition wants to try to create a storm in a teacup. He has my blessing and I would have insisted, had he asked me, that he go on such a trip rather than cause enormous damage to that promotion by pulling out at the last minute.

Premiers Conference

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

Compared to the result of last year's Premiers Conference, can he report to this Assembly on the outcome of this year's Premiers Conference and its implications for the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for asking this question because, unlike some of the subjects that have been debated here, the Premiers Conference is a matter of extreme interest to Northern Territory people and to our government because it creates the foundation for our ability to determine a budget for the coming financial year. There has been considerable press discussion about the Premiers Conference and I would like to take the opportunity to outline briefly the results from this year's Premiers Conference for the Northern Territory and how those results compare to the outcomes for other states in Australia.

This year, in a combination of financial assistance grants, hospital grants and what is called the Loans Council Program, which is the general purpose capital grants and loans, the Northern Territory will be provided with $779.6m as compared with $779.5m last year. To all intents and purposes, it is the same dollar figure as for the previous year. As members would be aware, the clear position put by the Commonwealth in respect of all states and the Northern Territory was that funding would be on an equivalent dollar value to the 1987-88 funding in those particular categories.

The funding was calculated on a premise by the federal government of a 5.5% inflation rate in the coming financial year. I must say that we find that prediction overly optimistic and the states generally are of that view. We are concerned that there may be some higher real cuts if the inflation rate rises above the estimated 5.5%. As a result of negotiations during the Premiers Conference, the federal government has agreed that, to the extent that the inflation rate exceeds 5.5%, funding will be increased by that differential percentage. Put simply, for example, if the inflation rate becomes 6.5%, that will mean, on the advice of the Treasurer, that our funding in these categories will be increased by 1%, thereby maintaining the real cuts that have been applied.

Another aspect of the Premiers Conference is a meeting of the Loans Council. Not being a state, the Northern Territory is not a member of the Loans Council, and our representative at the council is the federal Treasurer. All of the semi-government borrowings and the 'global limits' for semi-government loans taken out by Northern Territory governments since self-government have required the specific approval of respective federal Treasurers. Obviously following negotiation with the Northern Territory and submissions from the Northern Territory as to what moneys are required for putting the essential capital infrastructure into the Northern Territory, those Treasurers have approved the levels of loans.

Last year, our semi-government program was set at $65m. We have an agreement with the Commonwealth with respect to any operating losses that are incurred by NTEC as a result of the adjustments that have been taking place in the winding back of subsidies for NTEC and in the adjustment process as the gas pipe system comes into place. I understand that, last year, that amounted to some $6.3m. The preliminary global limit that has been provided for the next financial year is $95m, and that is a $30m increase on the basic $65m. I understand that the arrangement for additional borrowing capacity to meet NTEC operating losses is still in place. That gives us a significantly higher capacity to put in some important capital infrastructure in the Northern Territory and, in that respect, we have done significantly better than the states, all of whom had dramatic cuts made in their semi-government loans programs. I must say that, in this particular area, the Commonwealth government chose to pick out Queensland for special treatment this year, and it has incurred a $367m reduction in its loans program. Of course, as members will be aware from media reports, the Premier of Queensland has refused to sign the loans agreement and that means that the Commonwealth will need to go into bilateral agreements with the various states which have agreed to the global limits rather than merely signing the general Loans Council agreement.

There is an average of something like an 11% reduction in global limits for the states and additional loans of some 30% in the Northern Territory. However, from the finances that have been provided to the Northern Territory in general funding, the $779.6m, the Commonwealth has deducted from our financial assistance grants the $57.5m cut that was recommended by the Grants Commission. It is important to recognise that that figure was never $44m. It was $44m plus the negative special grant that we lost in this year's financing. In terms of our base line funding, it is $57.5m. That has been offset this year by what is known as a special revenue assistance provision for the Northern Territory. A similar provision has been made for Tasmania, Western Australia and South Australia.

Mr Smith: There wouldn't be many people in Tennant Creek who will listen twice.

Mr HATTON: It is interesting that the Leader of the Opposition finds it really boring for people to be informed of what is occurring in relation to the budget.

Mr Smith: It is a very boring delivery.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, that is not a satisfactory situation for us because it still leaves the sword of Damocles hanging over the finances of the Northern Territory with respect to the Grants Commission report. What we have achieved is the right to fight another day. We have an agreement with the Commonwealth to address many of what we believe to be the inaccurate assumptions and calculations that have been made in the Grants Commission's assessment. We will be doing that with the federal government through Treasury over the coming months.

Before I make my final point, I would like to pay tribute to those people in the Northern Territory who supported this government in what obviously has been a very difficult task. Members are aware that the Northern Territory has suffered rather badly and been discriminated against by the Commonwealth, particularly during the last 2 or 3 years. We all know of the difficulties that that has created for the people of the Northern Territory and for this government in seeking to maintain balanced accounts. I appreciate the support that this government received from federal members for the Territory, particularly Senator Collins, and from the Northern Territory Business Council, in lobbying the federal government. I was very disappointed, however, that the Leader of the Opposition saw fit not to open his mouth publicly on the subject and made no representations whatsoever to the federal government.

Mr Smith: That is not true.

Mr Coulter: He made some representations but they were negative.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, my information is that, in fact, the Leader of the Opposition was urging from behind the scenes that the Territory's funding should be cut in order to make life hard for the Territory government and to improve his own stocks in the community. I would like to think that that did not occur but I am afraid my sources are pretty good. I believe that members of the ALP organisational wing were promoting that cause also. That is absolutely disgraceful. I believe that the stunt pulled by the Australian Teachers Federation was disgraceful as well. It was an attempt to play stupid, dangerous politics in the context of the Premiers Conference with a letter that was both nonsensical and inaccurate.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I appreciate that the bulk of the Chief Minister's answer has been relevant to the question which was directly related to how the Northern Territory fared at the Premiers Conference and the implications of the Premiers Conference for the finances of the Northern Territory. The Chief Minister has now strayed from that subject and is making a snide, bitter, personal attack. If he wants to do that, I am prepared to take him on in this House at any time. However, Mr Speaker, I would suggest that it is in the interests of this House and in the interests of your authority in it, that you rule that the Chief Minister confine himself to answering the question.

Mr COULTER: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The honourable member has not yet raised a point of order? What is it?

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, my point of order was made very clear at the outset of my remarks. The Chief Minister is not addressing himself to the question and I would suggest that, for the sake of this House and your own standing in it, you rule that he confine his answer to the question.

Mr SPEAKER: The Chief Minister will relate his answer to the question.

Mr HATTON: Thank you, Mr Speaker. In fact, I was answering the question.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister has just reflected on your ruling and should be asked to withdraw his last remark.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the question asked me to report to this Assembly on the outcome of this year's Premiers Conference and its implications for the Northern Territory. I was referring to a matter that was directly relevant to the Premiers Conference. It concerned a scurrilous letter from the Australian Teachers Federation under the signature of one Di Foggo, containing false allegations in respect of the Darwin International Grammar School, with the clear intention of encouraging the federal Treasurer to reduce the finances to the Northern Territory. That letter could have done untold damage to the funding of government services, including educational services, but I am pleased to report that its impact was so negligible that the Commonwealth did not even mention it. I raise the matter because it is an example of the type of dangerous practice which the Teachers Federation is indulging in with the collusion of the opposition. The letter was an attempt to undermine the ability of the Territory government to put its case to the federal government in order to protect the finances of the people of the Northern Territory. I am pleased to say that the federal government saw through that stupid nonsense and, in fact ...

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Chief Minister has the advantage of having both the question and answer written down in front of him. I would suggest that you direct him to confine his answer to the question and that he stick to his script rather than continuing to trip off into fairyland in an effort to evade the question.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr HATTON: We are becoming used to the opposition's tactic of trying to disrupt us by continually raising spurious points of order.

My point is that some very good Territorians, including Labor politicians, have been prepared to stand up and fight for the Territory. It is a shame that some other people in the Territory have been playing stupid little games which actually threaten the livelihood of members of their own organisation. Fortunately, the federal government respects the fact that we have been managing our finances responsibly and was not prepared to listen to the nonsense contained in the Teachers Federation letter. It has provided us with reasonable finances and, whilst it will be tight, we are confident that we can bring down a balanced budget without any major shocks to the Northern Territory community.

TIO Involvement in Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Unfortunately, personal explanations have to be given at the end of question time and I do not have the opportunity now to respond to that outrageous nonsense from the Chief Minister.

Is the Treasurer aware that the TIO's involvement with Hungerford Refrigeration encouraged local businesses to extend credit to the company? Is he aware that the TIO's involvement was taken as a de facto guarantee of that company's future, and will he now advise the House whether it is his intention to ensure that the TIO makes good any losses incurred by local businesses through their involvement with Hungerford?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is indeed heartening to see that the Leader of the Opposition is now concerned with the fate of Hungerford, particularly in relation to people who may have suffered or are in financial difficulties as a result of his actions. It is to the Leader of the Opposition's shame that a book has been compiled detailing actions of his which have brought this company into the political sphere.

Mr Speaker, I will not digress from the question but, in answering it, I would like to say that the Leader of the Opposition has raised the matter of Hungerford Refrigeration as an issue at 3 very strategic times: the first was before the federal election, the second was before the Barkly election and the third is today. He had to raise Hungerford as an issue today for his own political survival, because he is under threat from the fellow behind him who laughed first.

I can advise honourable members and the Leader of the Opposition that the Territory Insurance Office has assured me that it will look closely at those in hardship, particularly those who have consistently supported the company in the past.

Trade and Tourism Links with Guam

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

During a visit to Guam last year by a group from Darwin, including the Chief Minister and myself, discussions took place regarding the opening of trade and tourism links with the island. Can the minister advise the House of any further developments since then and whether there is any opportunity for long-term trade links with the area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Department of Industries and Development has followed up the visit referred to by the honourable member. An officer has visited Guam to hold discussions with air force personnel concerning specific needs for goods which the Northern Territory might be able to supply, either locally sourced or freighted through Darwin from elsewhere in Australia. An extensive report has been prepared and is now being evaluated and discussed with people who may be able to participate.

One of the severe difficulties we have to face in providing services to Guam is transportation. Air links are not particularly frequent and sea links are even less so. I have been approached recently by a company from Western Australia which is proposing to run charter 707 services from Western Australia to the Philippines and to Guam to supply some of those places with Australian food products. The company is interested in the possibility of making Darwin a stop on that particular route and in ascertaining what might be available here that would fit into its plan. It is very early days at the moment and it would be a brave man who would predict that such trade would commence and become regular because there are so many approvals to be obtained along the line.

It is notoriously difficult for any operator to try to break into the Australian air transport system and compete with international airlines. In particular, companies such as Qantas go to enormous lengths to eliminate or reduce any competition. There are also difficulties in obtaining approval in places like Guam. I understand that the American armed forces operate on a basis of approved manufacturing facilities which are inspected by American officials and approved prior to their taking any large quantities of goods from those particular establishments. If the transportation does not involve large quantities, some of those systems may be bypassed and perhaps that may pertain in our case. We will continue to pursue this possible new destination for Territory-produced goods or goods transited through the Northern Territory which may have an economic benefit to the Territory. If something firm results from it, I will keep honourable members informed.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

On 3 April 1987, did he say in a press release that the investment of Territory funds in Hungerford Refrigeration could be justified by: '(1) an assessment provided by a leading firm of chartered accountants into the company's prospects; (2) a report provided by a professor of mechanical engineering into the company's technological viability; and (3) large export orders that had already been secured by the company'? Will he now table the list of large export orders that had been secured by the company at that time together with the departmental or governmental assessment of that list, the assessment of the leading firm of chartered accountants together with the departmental or governmental evaluation of the assessment and the report of the professor of mechanical engineering with the department critique of that report?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I wonder if the Leader of the Opposition might table his list of questions so that I can keep track of what he is asking. Fair is fair. Could I perhaps have ...?

Mr Smith: I want you to table the reports.

Mr COULTER: Could I have a list of the questions, Mr Speaker? He has asked an inordinate number of questions.

Mr Bell: It is called a question without notice. Answer it.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell will maintain silence. I think the minister's question is quite reasonable.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, the list of questions is quite long and I will provide the Leader of the Opposition with the answers during the course of these sittings.

Mr Smith: Will you table the information or not? It is a simple question.

Mr Bell: It has been in the paper for 2 days and you have not done your homework.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I will not countenance continued interjections from any member, particularly not from the member for MacDonnell who has been warned more than once during these sittings.

Alice Springs Central Business District

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES AND ENERGY

What action is the government taking to ensure that the central business district in Alice Springs north of Stott Terrace will be connected with natural gas?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I think the honourable member is alluding to an issue in Alice Springs which is controversial at the best of times: the tunnelling or trenching of roads. That becomes particularly controversial when it concerns roads that have been upgraded or constructed recently. I am not aware of current negotiations between the company wishing to reticulate the gas and its discussions with the Alice Springs Town Council and the Department of Transport and Works. I believe that some other roads are involved in this reticulation and I will provide the member for Sadadeen with details of the current status of this worthwhile project. It has become complicated because of the trenching and the opening of roads. I understand that the preference of the Department of Transport and Works would be for tunnelling. However, that particular method involves a cost penalty. As I said, I will provide the member for Sadadeen with the latest details of the negotiations.

Borrooloola Community Health Centre

Mr REED to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has a contract been awarded for the construction of the new Borrooloola Community Health Centre and, if so, can he provide details of the project?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Katherine for his question. I am well aware of his interest in that region. Many of his constituents visit that area frequently. After some lengthy negotiations regarding that particular tender, I am pleased to announce that a contract was signed recently with L & R Builders of Tennant Creek for a sum of approximately $638 000. Of course, that represents a considerable saving on that project. I think the original budget figure was about $830 000. The contract should take about 30 weeks to complete. I believe work was commenced during the last week or 2.

The extended negotiations on and assessment of the tenders reflect a vexed question amongst contractors in the Northern Territory at the moment, that of abnormally low tenders. Whilst there is a need to examine fully the merits of the lowest tenderer, in the end it was recommended by the Tender Board that the lowest tenderer be bypassed on this occasion. The second lowest tenderer was L & R Builders of Tennant Creek. That will be excellent for the Tennant Creek community itself. On my recent visit there, members of the local building fraternity were quite delighted with the injection given to their local work levels. I find it quite interesting that now the Tennant Creek business community is finding it most appropriate to deal directly with the Northern Territory government, through its ministers, to establish just what is happening with regard to the community's welfare.

Proposal to Amend Firearms Act

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to CHIEF MINISTER

Following public remarks he made recently regarding his government's intention to amend the Firearms Act without prior consultation with the firearms specialist groups and after being told quite definitely and exactly what the gun lobby did and did not want in respect of his idea to introduce a permit to purchase all firearms, and taking into account the changed views of the Premiers of New South Wales, Queensland and Tasmania in relation to amending their state gun laws, what does the government intend to do now?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Koolpinyah for this question because there is no doubt that firearms legislation has been one of the more interesting political issues in Australia, particularly over the last 6 months. In one respect, I think the honourable member for Koolpinyah is inaccurate in her assumptions. In fact, our government has been working very closely with the various firearms specialist groups. Indeed, the legislation that we have in the Northern Territory provides what are probably the best gun laws in the country and that was put into place in close consultation with the gun community. At the moment, any proposals for amendment to our legislation are being discussed fully with the gun lobby and the executives of the various sporting shooters associations and so on. I believe there is to be a meeting this Friday evening to discuss the legislation.

With respect to the question of the permit to purchase which the honourable member raised particularly, I must advise the House that we have never pressed the point for a permit to purchase but, at the moment, we are faced with a situation where the Commonwealth government has threatened blatantly that, in any state or territory that does not have, amongst other things, a permit to purchase, it will use its customs and excise powers to block the transmission of any firearms into that state or territory. Whether the federal government is capable of achieving that in the states is one question, but its overriding powers on almost everything in respect of the Northern Territory place us in a particularly vulnerable position.

Last year, there was a lot of heat and hullabaloo with special Premiers Conferences being called by Mr Hawke and company to which we were dragged for an urgent debate on guns. I might say here that the gun lobby has since corresponded with me thanking me for putting some rationality into the debate, and that correspondence came not only from within the Northern Territory but also from around Australia in respect of the nonsense that was being propounded by the Labor states and, in particular, by the previous Premier of New South Wales who thought he would make an election issue out of the matter. Recommendations from the Australian Police Ministers Council were due to be discussed last week at the Premiers Conference. It was very interesting to note that, when we reached that item on the agenda paper, the Prime Minister recommended that additional agenda items, including firearms matters, be dealt with by way of correspondence and not be debated at all at the Premiers Conference.

Certainly, Labor governments in this country have learnt their lesson about taking illogical stances in respect of firearms. That is not to say that we should not have strong firearms legislation and reasonable and proper controls. That is also supported by the gun lobby. As far as possible, it is important to avoid the abuse and misuse of firearms and their potential to become a threat to society. We believe that our laws in general require amendment. Before the fuss was raised by New South Wales, we were examining a series of amendments in preparation for holding discussions with firearms groups. We are still discussing those. They include such things as procedures for appeal, the re-registration of weapons, the duration of shooters' licences and permits to purchase. We were being driven to that by the Commonwealth government's threat to use its powers to force us either to enact such provisions or it would ban the transmission of any firearms into the Northern Territory. That was a clear and open threat made at the Police Ministers Conference by the federal government. We have been able to obtain much more rationality from the federal government but there is still much more work to be done. In consultation with the gun lobby, we will examine our legislation through the proper processes. When we have reached what we believe is a reasonable and fair arrangement, we will be in a position to advise exactly what we will or will not do. That will be done by way of debate on bills brought before this House.

Darwin International Grammar School

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

At this morning's stop-work meeting of teachers, Col Young said that the Darwin International Grammar School had received land for the establishment of that school at no cost. Is that true?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is not correct and that is another example of misinformation being provided to the community. It is disappointing. I do not mind people having a say against a particular proposal but the fact is that the Darwin International Grammar School will be required to pay full market value for its lease over the property which may be converted to freehold title after 12 years upon request by the school. It is a condition of government support that the site be used only as a school. Again, we hear carping from members opposite. Unfortunately, teachers have been misinformed once again by the executive of their federation on this very important issue.

The demonstration in front of the Assembly has caused a great deal of disruption to the children of Darwin and their families. It is this misinformation which is causing the teachers to react in this way. If they have the facts and the truth, they will discover that Col Young, Bob Wharton and the Northern Territory Teachers Federation Executive are doing all this for their own political ends. I might add that they have even issued a roster of teachers from different schools to picket the Assembly, not only today but throughout these sittings.

Mr Speaker, I would like to indicate to you the type of nonsense that is being issued. This is from a paper in relation to an industrial campaign relating to DIGS. It indicates that groups of teachers 'should continually troop in and out of the public gallery'. That is the sort of nonsense that they go on with. There is a list of things involved in the deception by Col Young and Bob Wharton who have issued this information. A whole range of untruths need to be refuted. If the teachers knew the facts, I do not believe that they would be standing out there. They would be in the schools where they are supposed to be. What we are doing is establishing an international grammar school to cater for kids from right throughout the Northern Territory.

Mr Ede: They don't care about our kids. They just want to get a few bucks for themselves.

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart should be condemned for that statement. He knows that we are concerned about the kids in the Northern Territory. He is not concerned about the kids in the Northern Territory; he wants them to go interstate. He is not interested in bringing them back here where they should be educated. What about the children at Tennant Creek and in the Barkly region? They need access to education. We do not have boarding facilities that will cater for all of them at the moment. This is part of the whole process.

If Col Young and Bob Wharton want to play politics, they should stand for election, as they have in the past, and they will be beaten again. If they want to stand for the Teachers Federation executive, that is fine but they should keep out of politics.

Reduction in Qantas Services

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TOURISM

What effect will the recently-announced reduction in Qantas services through Darwin have on the incoming tourist market?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there are some difficulties with the proposal by Qantas to cut its 3 services per week down to 2. On the one hand, the new scheduling of the services will allow better flexibility for stopovers for international travellers going out of Australia. However, with the new services, it will certainly be almost impossible to provide direct connections into Darwin from European countries, apart from the UK. I am sure all members are well aware that the northern European tourist market is very important to the economy of the Northern Territory, particularly in the wet season. Most of our visitors who come to the Top End in what are low peak periods as far as the domestic market is concerned will no longer have direct access. I have raised this question with the local manager of Qantas and he is aware of the problem.

Yesterday, I arranged an appointment for the Chairman of the Tourist Commission, Bob Doyle, with the Marketing Manager of Qantas. He is travelling to Sydney today to undertake discussions which, hopefully, will alleviate some of the connection problems. We have asked the General Manager of the Queensland Tourist and Travel Corporation to join with us in putting pressure on Qantas because it also was unaware of the connection problem for inbound tourists. We are certain that Queensland will also suffer on the circular routes that come in through Darwin and go out through Cairns and, in some respects, that could have an effect on the long-term promotion of the market in Queensland. The Tourist Commission is well aware of the problem and I believe we are taking the right steps to try to overcome it.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

When was he first aware of the fact that TIO had nearly doubled its original exposure in Hungerford Refrigeration from $750 000 to about $1.4m? Secondly - and I hope he can answer 2 questions at once - why didn't he see fit to inform the public of the fact that his original statement of the total Territory exposure to the company no longer reflected the truth?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the answer is very simple. The opposition's mentality would have it that this company should have its business discussed on the front page of the newspaper every day. When the TIO Board made its decision on behalf of policyholders to enter into the Hungerford venture, it was always envisaged that there might be a need to provide increased capital for the company. The Leader of the Opposition should remember very well when extra money was required because it was required as a direct result of actions by him which led to a curtailment of credit. It was required when he first started opening his mouth, when he first became a debt collector for the Queensland companies, when he first came into this Assembly and told ...

Mr Smith: It appears that I will be a debt collector for Northern Territory companies now.

Mr COULTER: ... everybody that Hungerford was no good and that we should close it down because it had a problem. Its problem was that it needed money to maintain a liquidity position, as a direct result of the remarks of the Leader of the Opposition. That is a fact and it can be demonstrated.

Mr Smith: Prove it.

Mr COULTER: That is no problem.

The Leader of the Opposition tried to play the white knight yesterday when he told the workers: 'I have come among you to help you'. He was rightly thrown out of the place because the people involved had had enough of him. He closed the place down and then had the nerve to turn up there. However, I digress.

I believe that the TIO provided additional moneys in 2 stages. The first, I believe, involved up to $250 000 and then there was a further $500 000 that actually went into the company.

Mr Smith: When?

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I will provide you with the dates. I think the question asked when it was brought to my attention.

Mr Smith: That is right.

Mr COULTER: A document delivered to me on 7 September 1987 stated: 'In view of these problems and the repeated claims that creditors are not being paid, all of which related to the inadequate funding, the TIO Board has decided, after lengthy discussions, that a further injection of funds amounting to $500 000 should be made to allow the new management a clear run in getting the company onto a profitable footing'.

There was an additional amount of money. I was advised that: 'Following the move to Darwin, which will not be completed for another 2 weeks, and following new overseas orders, trade credit has not been extended to the company in Darwin, most of this part being forced to operate on a cash basis. This is in addition to similar problems ...'. The advice continued: 'The TIO Board has therefore decided to earmark up to $250 000 for temporary cash-flow assistance over the next few months. At this stage, only $100 000 is provided'. That advice was sent to me on 14 May 1987.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, I ask the minister to table the document he is quoting from.

Mr SPEAKER: The member for Ludmilla.

Mr LEO: A point of order Mr Speaker! The Leader of the Opposition has asked you to direct that the Treasurer table the document he has quoted from in this House. He is obliged to table that document.

Mr SPEAKER: Which standing order is the honourable member referring to?

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, I am sure that the Clerk will confirm that the document must be tabled under standing order 255, which refers to documents relating to public affairs.

Mr SPEAKER: The minister shall table the document unless he declares that it contains some confidential material from which he has not quoted.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I read sections from a range of documents which are of a confidential nature. The Leader of the Opposition asked for information on certain matters and I will ensure that ...

Mr Smith: It is the old tale. You are not prepared to let people look at the full story. You quote selectively.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, these are confidential documents.

Mr Smith: That is disgraceful.

Mr COULTER: You asked me for a date and I simply read from my notes concerning the dates and amounts of money. I answered your question.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, may I speak to the point of order?

Mr SPEAKER: The point of order has been ruled on.

Shipping Service Between Singapore and Darwin

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT AND WORKS

In spite of the often-expressed scepticism of the opposition concerning this government's continuous work to establish trade links and infrastructure to support local businesses, I believe that negotiations have been taking place to provide another sea link from Darwin. I ask the minister to advise the House of what is happening in relation to the establishment of a regular shipping service between Singapore and Darwin.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the answer is very simple. Already the local firm of Perkins Shipping Pty Ltd provides an extremely valuable 5-weekly service carrying a mixed cargo. It is the objective of this government to provide frequent and more regular calls to and from the Port of Darwin and one particular target is Singapore, from which transshipment is available to any other port in the world. Darwin's geographic position enables us to provide land transportation to the southern part of Australia. Singapore is some 5 days' shipping time from here and it is obviously logical to use one central road corridor to the south and, in due course, the rail corridor, to provide access from southern Australia to the major markets of South-east Asia.

During my recent visit to the area, I contacted about 10 shipping companies, 4 of which showed significant interest in providing a service. We have provided them with up-to-date information on available freights and projected freights and we trust that, perhaps very shortly, we will see the introduction of a regular, frequent and extremely valuable feeder service to and from Singapore.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

In question time yesterday, I requested the Treasurer to table certain documents relating to his public statements on the viability of Hungerford Refrigeration. Will he now table those documents?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would like to inform the Leader of the Opposition that I will be making a ministerial statement on Hungerford Refrigeration. The question he alluded to yesterday will be fully answered during the course of that ministerial statement.

Pearling Licences

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Why haven't the successful applicants for the 5 licences for cultured pearls recently advertised been informed and allowed to get on with opening up the new fields?

Mr Leo: Because Nick didn't get one.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is interesting to note the interjection from the member for Nhulunbuy. He seems to have some information whose source we would be really interested to know.

Following the agreement earlier this year with the Commonwealth on what has been termed an 'offshore constitutional settlement' whereby the various fisheries in the Northern Territory and Commonwealth waters were divided up by agreement between the Commonwealth and the Territory, the pearl oyster fishery was to be managed by the Northern Territory joint authority in accordance with the laws of the Northern Territory. In fact, that joint authority is an authority under the OCS agreement comprising the federal and Territory ministers responsible for fisheries. Decisions in regard to the pearl oyster fishery in the Northern Territory are to be determined by that joint venture.

As honourable members will be aware, applications for participation in the Northern Territory pearl industry closed on 15 February this year. I advised the House that 21 applications were received to participate in that industry. Between 15 February and mid-April, applications were assessed by 3 officers, 1 from the Commonwealth, 1 from the Northern Territory and an adviser who was an ex-Western Australian public servant who was a participant in a scheme for the development of the pearl industry in Western Australia. That adviser is a very knowledgeable person. To date, however, the joint authority has not made a decision on the recommendations of the joint working party and, at this stage, I cannot advise honourable members when a decision will be made.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

When a TIO management team took control of Hungerford Refrigeration, when was the decision taken to halt production in the company's Queensland plant in order to relocate in the Trade Development Zone? When was the management team in a position to resume full production in the Trade Development Zone? For the export orders received by Hungerford and quoted by him on 3 April, what were the contract delivery dates?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will include the answers to those questions in my statement to this House. As I understand them, the questions are: when did the TIO assume control, when did production halt in Queensland and when did it start up again in the TDZ, and what were the delivery dates for the export orders of which I spoke on 3 April 1987?

Air-conditioning of Preschools

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Acknowledging the recent requests by preschools for the installation of air-conditioning, could he explain his department's policy and what action he intends to take to accede to these requests?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have been set up! I thank the honourable member for his question. I think that every member of this Assembly has been lobbied on occasion by various groups interested in education issues, particularly in relation to the preschools located in their constituencies. The matter of air-conditioning is not as straightforward as it may seem. In fact, some professionals believe that air-conditioning is detrimental to the good health and welfare of children attending preschools. Preschools differ from primary schools because they are set up to assist students in the transition from the home to the school environment. The 4-year-olds who attend preschool move frequently in and out of the preschool building and there is a professional opinion that frequent movement in and out of an air-conditioned environment could be detrimental to health. I acknowledge that there has been concern and, in fact, the government changed its policy. We acknowledged that there was a need to install air-conditioned withdrawal areas in new preschools and that is what the government is doing.

We are also looking at the design of the buildings and their location because we want to ensure that we take account of the natural environment and the prevailing winds. This can make the surroundings much more pleasant than they are at present in some situations. We are also looking at schools that have a particular problem with heat. We have investigated those with a view to having air-conditioned withdrawal areas.

I inform honourable member that I am aware of the concerns that he and other members have expressed in relation to air-conditioning in preschools. There is an opinion that it would be detrimental to health if the whole areas were air-conditioned. That is being examined by the government as well, and I might also say that we are seeking to ensure that all primary schools are air-conditioned. There are some primary schools that still lack that facility and I am sure members would be aware of that.

Thus, the whole issue of air-conditioning in preschools is being examined. We are installing air-conditioned withdrawal areas in new preschools and we are examining older schools with a view to installing air-conditioned withdrawal areas if required. We are also seeking professional advice in relation to whether or not it is detrimental to health if a preschool is air-conditioned.

Company Charges for Children's Travel

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I remind him that, in December 1978, a specific company decided to charge adult rates for children under the age of 13 or 15 without consulting the Northern Territory government or the communities concerned. Could he advise what action he has taken to ensure that, in future, such decisions are taken in consultation with the government and the communities affected?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can advise the honourable member that discussions were held with the company relating to its charging of adult rates for children. That action was acknowledged readily by the company and it indicated that it would rectify the matter. The honourable member suggested that the company ought to be able to consult its records and provide recompense. The company has been advertising and suggesting that communities might provide it with a list of people affected, including dates of travel etc, and it would be more than happy to reimburse them. I have had the assurance of the company that it will not reintroduce such a system. I understand that it regrets the action that was taken.

Services to Intellectually-disabled Persons

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

He gave a commitment prior to the 1987 election that special services and facilities would be provided to intellectually-disabled adolescents and adults. Can he advise the Assembly what steps he has taken to fulfil that commitment?

ANSWER

I thank the honourable member for his question. This follows on from an adjournment speech by the member for Koolpinyah last night. In order to ensure the future of all Northern Territorians, we made commitments in relation to such persons. The number of disabled persons who now reside permanently in the Northern Territory has grown. Some years ago, if somebody had a disabled child, he or she was taken from the Territory to reside elsewhere. As we mature towards statehood, this government recognises that we must provide facilities for all Territorians to ensure that their future is secure in the Northern Territory and they do not have to go elsewhere. To that end, we gave commitments prior to the last election, in particular in 3 areas of providing respite care for the parents who have ...

Mr Bell: I didn't think your election promises mattered.

Mr DALE: They don't to you, but this is another proof that in fact ...

Mr Bell: They don't to the people at Yulara.

Mr DALE: We will get onto that later.

Mr Bell: We will indeed.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, the first project was to provide full-time residential care for socially-incompatible, disabled adolescents and adults.

Mr Bell interjecting

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I am sure that all the people listening on radio will note that the member for MacDonnell continually interjects while I talk about this most serious problem that has needed to be addressed by the Northern Territory government. It is quite clear that the opposition members, particularly the member for MacDonnell, have no concern whatsoever for the disabled people of the Northern Territory or for the parents of those disabled people. He can interject as much as he likes. I will stay on my feet until I can convince him that we in the Northern Territory government will certainly look after these people.

The second project was to fund community-based organisations to enable them to provide full-time residential accommodation for an additional 6 severely intellectually-disabled children aged between 5 and 16 years. The third project was to provide funds for evening and weekend care for disabled children up to the age of 5 years.

In relation to the first project, we have identified a suitable property at No 28 Girraween Road, Howard Springs. We advertised through the usual channels but, in the advertisements seeking changes to the zoning of that particular area, it was referred to as a facility for disadvantaged youth. Unfortunately, those words were totally incorrect.

Mrs Padgham-Purich: So I was right.

Mr DALE: Certainly, you were right. Last night, the member for Koolpinyah rightly pointed out that error. Of course, the error was noticed by the department and it was rectified in subsequent advertisements. The people living in that area have been given a comprehensive briefing. That was delivered by hand yesterday so that they would be fully aware of the type of people to be accommodated in that facility. Of course, the sale is subject to consent approval by the Northern Territory Planning Authority and that will be discussed at its meeting tomorrow. That should be well and truly up and under way. I will not go on at any great length. The capital cost of that project is about $240 000. The operational, ongoing annual budget for that is about $360 000, Mr Speaker, so you can see that, in ensuring the security of the people of the Territory, we put our money where our mouth is.

The second project, the multiply-disabled children's urban facility, will be placed at 46 Chapman Road, Nightcliff. That will provide housing for 6 multiply-disabled children. The capital cost involved is about $220 000, with an ongoing commitment of a further $0.25m in operational costs. The third facility is being negotiated with the Spastics Association, and that facility will be set up at the Henbury Avenue establishment.

I want to point out to the member for Koolpinyah that, of the 3 projects, it is interesting to note that 1 is in the electorate of the Chief Minister, 1 is on my own electorate and the third is in Koolpinyah. We certainly look forward to the people down in Koolpinyah ...

Mr Bell interjecting.

Mr DALE: That is not properly represented and therefore we have to protect the people down there in some way.

Mr Speaker, we are happy that the people in the rural area will be able to provide a much-needed facility for these people and the appropriate respite care that their parents are looking for.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he confirm that, on or about 6 April 1987, he had a meeting with the Northern Territory Traders Association which is, of course, the credit association for the Northern Territory, and can he confirm that, at that meeting, the association informed him of serious concerns it had about the credit-worthiness of Hungerford Refrigeration and, therefore, its potential impact on local suppliers? Can he further confirm that another meeting was held later on the same day at which the association repeated its concerns to the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority, Mr McHenry, and the Directors of Hungerford Refrigeration, Mr Hawke, Mr Temple and Mr Hungerford? At that meeting, was the association requested to withdraw its criticism of Hungerford and, indeed, to apologise to Hungerford for raising those concerns?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, without being specific about the date, I can certainly confirm that I had a visit from 2 persons representing the association to which the Leader of the Opposition has referred. They expressed concern to me that Hungerford Refrigeration had a reputation in Brisbane as a slow payer of bills. They were concerned about the company coming to the Territory and doing business here. They went further than that and said that they would be recommending to members of their association that they be very cautious, or words to that effect, about providing Hungerford Refrigeration with credit.

I recall being somewhat critical of the stance adopted by those 2 people. I did not believe that they were giving Hungerford Refrigeration a fair go at all. The company had been brought to the Northern Territory from Queensland and restructured to some extent. I felt that they were doing a great disservice to a company that was trying to get on its feet in the Northern Territory and also doing a disservice to Northern Territory industry by forcing the company, contrary to government policy, to deal with interstate suppliers. I am sure that they left the meeting feeling quite unhappy because I thought that they were doing a great disservice to the Northern Territory. Subsequent information which I have received, more by rumour than anything else, has led me to be very suspicious of the motives of this organisation.

Mr Smith: Good old character assassination stuff.

Mr PERRON: Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition would certainly know all about character assassination. He is an expert.

In regard to the second meeting referred to by the Leader of the Opposition, I do not recall having any knowledge that the representatives of this organisation met with other parties. They may well have done so. I certainly had no role at such a meeting, nor do I know what transpired there.

Impact of Brisbane Expo on Northern Territory Tourism

Mr REED to MINISTER for TOURISM

Does the Tourist Commission consider that the Brisbane Expo will impact on the tourism industry in the Northern Territory this year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is quite apparent that the Brisbane Expo will impact on Northern Territory tourism. The degree of that impact has not yet been fully assessed. We believe that it will have a negative impact on tourism in the Top End and a positive impact for the Centre and the Tennant Creek area. Bookings held by government tourist bureaus throughout Australia have increased on those held at this time last year. The percentage increase ranges from about 14% to nearly 39% in some of the bigger bureaus and the volume of business that has been written is well above budget expectations. It is a fact, though, that April and May have been quieter months than expected. Obviously, we have a problem in that many people will travel up through the Northern Territory, but will turn off at Tennant Creek and then proceed to Brisbane. The Tourist Commission has spent considerable sums of money to address that problem and will continue to do so. The aim is to promote more extensively the areas north of Three Ways, including Katherine, the Top End generally and Darwin as a dormitory.

I have asked the commission to provide me with information on current sales on a weekly basis to determine whether the drop in tourism in Darwin is likely to be a major problem or not. It does not indicate, at this time, that it will be, but certainly the Brisbane Expo will have some economic effect on the Top End. We have had discussions with a number of the major tour operators to ensure that their packages offering Brisbane Expo visitation extend their tours from Brisbane, up through Mt Isa and into the Northern Territory. I believe some of those packages are selling quite well at this time.

In answer to the honourable member's question, yes, there will be an impact. It is a positive impact in the southern part of the Territory but, to a certain extent, there could be negative effect in the Top End.

Chairmanship of Rural Land Use Advisory Committee

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Given the public rancour attached to Mr Grant Heaslip's dramatic and sudden departure from his position within the CLP, is the Chief Minister confident that Mr Heaslip should remain as Chairman of the Rural Land Use Advisory Committee?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have no problem at all with Mr Heaslip continuing in that role. He was carrying out that role long before he became President of the Country Liberal Party. He was carrying out that function as a representative of the cattle industry along with many other representatives of various groups who comprise the Rural Land Use Advisory Committee. That has nothing to do with his participation in the Country Liberal Party. In respect of the suggestion about rancour, I would place on public record that certainly I have no reason to question the integrity of Mr Heaslip in any way.

Mr Bell: Tell John Hare that.

Mr HATTON: I see no reason whatsoever that anything that may be occurring within my party should affect any government work. We have always disputed the false allegations made by those opposite concerning appointments of persons who happen to hold positions within our political party. The same thing applies in reverse.

Leasing of Vehicles

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT AND WORKS

Recently, he announced that the Northern Territory government would undertake a pilot scheme for the leasing of vehicles. What are the likely advantages that may flow from such a pilot scheme?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the tenders that were assessed and the contract that will be signed shortly indicate that the obvious advantages are immediate savings on the costs of operating part of our vehicle fleet. The system that is being adopted is a full-maintenance leasing system. It is used elsewhere in Australia by major companies. Of course, the member for Casuarina would be well aware of the potential value there and the existence of those schemes. In fact, he initiated the early moves towards assessing the feasibility of such a scheme.

The government has adopted a cautious approach. We are looking to running a 120-vehicle pilot program to assess the overall feasibility and merits of such a scheme compared to our traditional system of purchasing vehicles and maintaining them either through our own resources or, as happens for half the vehicle fleet, through the private market. This 120-vehicle scheme should save us approximately $85 000 directly and there would be other, more subtle, potential long-term savings if the scheme were to proceed into a broader field but those savings would relate to the need for government to provide maintenance facilities etc. There will always be some remaining requirement that government have plant maintenance facilities for its heavy equipment and for essential vehicles that are kept by government. In line with our reduction in manpower, we would look for any savings in manpower through natural attrition.

There were 14 tenders in all, and they revealed some very interesting facts. We gave people the option of 2-year or 3-year lease periods and one might have thought initially that the 3-year period would have led to cheaper rates but, in fact, consistently throughout all the tenders quite the opposite applied. In almost all cases, a 2-year lease period rate was lower than a 3-year. That demonstrates quite clearly something that we have believed in the Department of Transport and Works for some time which is that, in the second and third years of the life of a vehicle, maintenance costs very quickly overtake any benefits in cost savings on the capital investment. The variation in the range of figures quoted by the companies was almost eightfold from the lowest to the highest. I wonder whether the companies that submitted the higher tenders were suggesting Mercedes Benz vehicles for our public service! The rates at the bottom end of the tender were very competitive. I am hopeful that, when we monitor the system in 12 months time, we will see some merit in the system and some direct and indirect savings for the government.

Sponsorship of Commercial Television Program

Mr TUXWORTH to CHIEF MINISTER

During the promos run on the commercial television station last night advertising the late night football game, the subtitles on the screen indicated that the program was brought to viewers with the compliments of Steve Hatton, Chief Minister of the Northern Territory. I raise this because I had a phone call from an interested viewer. Did the Chief Minister pay for this out of his own kick or did Territory taxpayers contribute to it? If the taxpayers contributed to the cost of the transmission, what was that cost?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I was advised yesterday afternoon that, because the mini-series 'Vietnam' commenced last night, Channel 8 was unable to broadcast the program. It hoped to broadcast it later that evening but it needed some financial support. It approached me, as the Chief Minister, and asked whether we would be prepared to provide some assistance. It was interesting - and I am sure, Mr Speaker, you would appreciate the irony - that, for once, people outside the Darwin area had access to the live broadcast of the game via Imparja Television ...

Mr Tuxworth: Not all of them.

Mr HATTON: Those who had access to Imparja Television had access to the broadcast of the game and the people of Darwin did not. I took the decision that we would provide some financial support and that was provided by way of government funds. I am sure the member for Barkly would be well-experienced and briefed in such practices. It is a practice that the government has engaged in for many years and I certainly do not apologise for it. I know there was very strong interest in the north Darwin community in that game. Because of the hour, the cost was not excessive. In fact, for a cost of $500, it was able to be telecast.

Television for Remote Communities

Mr TUXWORTH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Mr Speaker, I support what the Chief Minister has done because I had occasion to do it from time to time myself. I think I did it in relation to cricket as a result of your representations.

Given the fact that many communities are still not receiving television from the satellite, do not have access to commercial signals and require government assistance to receive television, will the government review its policy in relation to providing assistance for groundstations for remote communities such as Pine Creek, Elliott, Borroloola, Hooker Creek and others, which currently do not have the resources themselves to obtain a groundstation to take Imparja Television in order to view what everybody in Darwin had last night for $500?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as the honourable member rightly indicated, it is not the policy of the government to provide groundstations for the reception of such services. It would be a very expensive exercise. I would have to receive advice, however, on the obligations of Imparja itself as the licence holder.

Certainly, the government has taken a decision not to become involved in that area. I will have a look at the matter and determine exactly what it would cost if such action were taken.

Mr Tuxworth: Not a lot of money.

Mr PERRON: I am told that it would cost heaps.

NT Women's Scholarship Award

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

Could he provide details regarding the recently-announced NT Women's Scholarship Award?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. I was pleased to announce this fellowship at a function to celebrate International Women's Day held on 8 March this year.

Mrs Padgham-Purich interjecting.

Mr HATTON: It is very sad to hear such comments from the only woman member of the Legislative Assembly. It is sad that the member for Koolpinyah missed that function because she would have found it very instructive and informative.

This announcement puts yet another election promise into action. Even more importantly, it is another concrete example of this government's steadfast commitment to advance the status of women in the Northern Territory. The NT Women's Fellowship Award is worth $15 000 and will be awarded annually. Each year, it will enable an applicant to travel interstate or overseas to undertake a course of study or training, a research project or practical work experience. The applicants must have been resident in the Territory for at least 3 years and will be expected to show that the work will benefit the Territory and Territory women.

The amount being made available for this fellowship is relative to the present value of a postgraduate award for study at an Australian university or college of advanced education with the additional cost of an economy overseas return air fare if necessary. Having said that, I must point out, however, that the main purpose of the award is not to enable applicants to obtain higher academic or formal qualifications. Nor is it to be used in other cases where alternative funding is readily available or where the purpose of the application can be fulfilled in the Northern Territory. Quite simply, this fellowship is geared to cater for the real needs and aspirations of a wide range of Territory women. Far from being an ivory-tower award, the basis for selection is that applicants can show that the knowledge and skills obtained will be of direct and continuing benefit to the community. The award will be advertised soon in the press and on radio. Applications will close on 29 July 1988 and detailed information is available from the Office of Women's Affairs.

Mr Speaker, it occurred to me while I was in Newcastle Waters to launch the last great cattle drive that the women of the Territory are our quiet achievers. As Henry Lawson asked in one of his classic poems, where would the drover be without his wife?

Mr Bell: Author, author!

Mr HATTON: You would have heard me give the author's name if you had been listening.

Mr Bell: No, the author for your answer.

Mr HATTON: As I thought to myself while at the colonial ball in Elliott, who would organise such important and inspiring community events were it not for women like Margaret MacLean of Elliott? Women in the Territory today, just as much as were their forebears, are unsung heroines. All too often their achievements are overlooked.

Since I became Chief Minister 2 years ago, my government has been listening to women as they voice their needs and concerns. We have been sensitive to their interests. The results can be seen in our actions on issues such as domestic violence and child abuse. The only time that members opposite concern themselves with the needs of women is when they want to score a few cheap political points. It is not surprising that they have not had much to say on the subject since they have no record to speak of. All they have done is undermine our initiatives. We have been busy building a secure future for the men and women of the Territory. This government has been a quiet achiever in its own right. Mr Speaker, you will recall that last year I tabled a report on women living in remote areas. This study examined the diverse experiences of Aboriginal women, women on pastoral properties and women in tourist and mining communities. It looked at their concerns, their aspirations and the barriers they faced.

When I announce the recipient of the inaugural NT Women's Fellowship Award in October, this government will have broken down one of the last barriers and will have widened the choices available to Territory women, wherever they live and whatever their backgrounds. I am confident that, in time, this scheme will produce a group of NT women fellows who are leaders in their fields and whose work will enhance the lives of other Territorians. It is a small but important step towards ensuring that the talents and achievements of women in the Territory are no longer overlooked but are recognised and rewarded.

Radiographer for Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is the government still trying to obtain the services of a radiographer for Alice Springs or does it intend to keep sending x-ray photographs to Darwin for expert interpretation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, of course we are trying to obtain a radiographer for Alice Springs. That goes without saying. I have received expressions of interest from at least 2 private companies that wish to provide radiography services and I will be calling for expressions of interest in the provision of private radiology services for the Alice Springs area. In addition, we are advertising and even looking overseas for an appropriate person to be employed in the Alice Springs area.

Duplication of Vanderlin Drive

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

In relation to the future duplication of Vanderlin Drive from Patterson Street to the McMillans Road roundabout, will he or his department consider the construction of noise abatement devices between the roadway and residences directly abutting the road?

Mr Bell: This is the third time you have asked this.

Mr PALMER: No it's not. I asked him to move the road last time.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can give an undertaking to the member for Karama - subject, of course, to his acceptance of my advice - that, in association with the Minister for Conservation, I will examine appropriate means of noise abatement for people living on the part of Vanderlin Drive that is to be duplicated.

Freeholding of Special Purposes Leases

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

My question relates to the continuing saga of CLP land deals. It concerns the vexed question of the conversion of special purposes leases and I am sure the minister will have the answer on the tip of his tongue. Will Radio 8HA be forced to pay market value to convert its special purposes lease from leasehold to freehold, as the minister said publicly, or will it be allowed to convert its special purposes lease at no cost, as his department has advised?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question is an example of Mr Bell's approach to his role as the opposition's ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will refer to the member by his correct title.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I apologise. The member for MacDonnell's approach to his role in this Assembly and his role as an elected member does no credit to him or his colleagues. As the member for MacDonnell has pointed out, I have said on a number of occasions that there will not be any conversion of special purposes leases without payment. Such a payment, if not made at the time when the lease was obtained, would be made - at market value - at the time of converting the lease.

The member for MacDonnell has claimed untruthfully on a number of occasions that conversions have been made without payment.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I would ask that, if he is unable to produce an answer that he understands himself, the Minister for Lands and Housing at least ensures that his answer does not offend against standing orders. I request that he withdraw the word 'untruthfully'.

Mr SPEAKER: There is a point of order. I would ask the minister to withdraw that reference.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I believe that, in order for me to withdraw that remark, it must be established that my comments were untrue.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! You have requested that the Minister for Lands and Housing withdraw the word 'untruthfully'. Either he should do so in an unqualified fashion ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I ask the minister to withdraw.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I thought that I could speak to the point of order. However, if you rule that I cannot, I shall not.

Mr SPEAKER: No, I am sorry. I have ruled.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw the remark but, again, I point out that the member for MacDonnell has made certain statements which have no basis in fact. I have challenged him publicly on occasions regarding those statements and have asked him to withdraw them or to produce some facts to support them, and he has been unable to do so.

As I said at the beginning, I shall say exactly what the member for MacDonnell has said regarding special purposes leases. Actually, the honourable member obviously is not satisfied with doing things in a sensible and honest fashion and I shall go into some detail regarding this matter.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The honourable minister has just referred directly to the integrity of an honourable member of this Assembly. In fact, he used the word 'dishonest' in association with the member and, for the sake of this House, Mr Speaker, he must withdraw that reference.

Mr BELL: By way of clarification, may I speak to the point of order, Mr Speaker? I do not mind being referred to as 'insensible'. I do object to being referred to as 'dishonest'.

Mr SPEAKER: Will the honourable minister relate to me what he said that has led to the point of order being called by the member for Nhulunbuy?

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I said that the honourable member did not proceed in an honest fashion.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, if I might speak to the point of order, I ...

Mr MANZIE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! You were deliberating, I believe.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! Have you a further argument?

Mr BELL: Yes, Mr Speaker. I believe that reference to Hansard will confirm that the adjectival phrase used by the Minister for Lands and Housing was 'sensible and honest', suggesting that that was not the case with respect to my dealings in this matter. As I said before, I will allow my electorate to judge whether I am insensible. However, I do object to the reflection that I am dishonest.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw the inference that the honourable member was sensible and honest.

Mr Bell: Thank you!

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, on 13 March an article entitled, 'Pay Ups by Leaseholders Are Scandalous - Bell', appeared in the Sunday Territorian. The article contained allegations made by the member for MacDonnell that he had uncovered a scandal in the Department of Lands and Housing over the conversion of commercial special purposes leases to freehold title. The honourable member cited the example of Mr George Brown of Alice Springs who, in 1984, paid $35 000 to have his special purposes lease converted to freehold. He then said, and I quote:

'But a secret Cabinet decision in 1986 allowed the conversion without any charges', Mr Bell said. 'This means Mr Brown and others like him may have been made to pay many thousands of dollars for something that only 2 years later would have cost them nothing. How many are in the same position? This is absolutely outrageous and a major scandal. Governments elsewhere would be forced to resign'.

The article also said:

'The NT government is facing dozens, possibly hundreds of court actions from people who paid to have their special purposes leases converted to freehold previous to 1986', Mr Bell said.

And further on:

Mr Bell said he had received legal advice that people who had paid to convert their leases into freehold 'certainly appear to have the right to have that redressed'.

On 14 March, a media release was issued stating that the honourable member had shown his ignorance of land matters in the Territory. The release stated that there was a simple equation for people converting their special purposes leases to freehold. If they had paid when taking out the lease, conversion would be at nil cost. If they had not paid when taking out the lease, they must pay before converting to freehold.

The issue became complicated when it was discovered the next day that an officer in Alice Springs had sent out letters to 60 holders of special purposes leases offering them free conversion. Actually, the letters were not offering free conversion; they offered the ability to request the minister to offer a free conversion. As a result, I issued another release on 14 March reaffirming my position and stating that the officer had made an error because he had assumed that all 60 had paid when taking up their leases whereas, in fact, 10 had not.

However, I also pointed out that final approval rested with me and, in fact, none of the 10 who had not paid had converted their special purposes leases to freehold without cost. I pointed out also that no secret Cabinet decision had been made in 1986 to allow free conversion of commercial special purposes leases to freehold. The only decision had been made by the then Minister for Lands, now the Chief Minister, and that was to expand the categories of special purposes leases which could be converted to freehold.

The issue became further confused 2 days later on 17 March when a memorandum signed by the Chief Minister on 29 March 1986 was leaked to the media. One of the recommendations approved by the Chief Minister in the ministerial was: 'approve the conversion of remaining special purposes leases to more appropriate forms of tenure, and establish the general conversion purpose policies outlined below'. That was: 'Commercial - conversion to fee simple at no cost where covenants have been complied with'. This was generally taken at face value by the media as supporting the member for MacDonnell. The Chief Minister was set up by a particular reporter on a morning show for a debate with the member for MacDonnell and he did not know ...

Mr Ede: Didn't know what he was on about.

Mr MANZIE: Well, it was put together in such a way that it was very hard to make sense of what was occurring because, again, the member for MacDonnell was throwing in matters which were not based on fact.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I will emphasise for the Minister for Lands and Housing that my question was very specific. It related to the freeholding of the Radio 8HA lease. The honourable minister is reading at length a prepared answer from his department on this matter. He has been on his feet for some 10 minutes now and he has failed to mention the Radio 8HA lease.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! Does the honourable minister wish to speak to the point of order.

Mr MANZIE: Yes, Mr Speaker. The honourable member is now trying to get out of a situation that he has been playing around with for a long time. He has made accusations against me and he has made statements which were not based on fact. It all hinges around a special purposes lease and Radio 8HA. I am not going to let him get away with it. If he wants to make accusations, he will hear the answers. I will ensure that the community is fully aware of the way this member goes about his role and the untruths and the aspersions he casts on members of this community. It is something that he has to live with.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, I am not going to sit here and tolerate being referred to as casting untruths here or elsewhere.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! Does the honourable member wish to make a point of order or not.

Mr BELL: Yes I do, Mr Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER: I suggest you make it in a more gentlemanly manner.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, I ask you once again to request the Minister for Lands and Housing to refrain from using terms like 'untruths'. I may occasionally have to tolerate that in ABC interviews with the minister, but I do not have to put up with it in this House. I ask you to direct the Minister for Lands and Housing to withdraw the word 'untruths' forthwith.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! There is a point of order. I ask the honourable minister to withdraw that remark. The minister will relate his remarks to the question.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw, but I reiterate that the honourable member is quite keen on making statements which are not based on any facts or which are unsubstantiated. I certainly intend to make the community aware of the situation so that people can make a judgment which is based on facts.

The government's position has been consistent throughout this whole debate and the bottom line is that leaseholders must pay at some stage before converting their commercial special purposes leases to freehold. The people who obtained conversion at nil cost were those who paid when taking up a special purposes lease, paid rent over the years which covered the unimproved capital value of the lease at the time when it was taken up, or who had paid a combination of up-front payments and rental which covered the unimproved capital value of the block at the time it was taken up.

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I believe that the minister is deliberately showing contempt for the Chair. You asked him to confine his remarks to the question. He is not confining his remarks to the question. It is my belief that he is showing contempt for the Chair.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. I ask the minister to relate his comments to the question.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, obviously, an answer regarding special purposes leases, claims of conversion at no cost and special deals deserves a complete answer regarding government policy and it requires information to counteract the baseless accusations which have been made by the member for MacDonnell. It is obvious that he does not like the facts being made available to him and he does not like the community to understand the way he carries out his job. He has this particular mental block regarding how business is carried out. The reason is that he bases his ideas on normal ALP actions. When you look at what occurs with the ALP in areas right around Australia and the sort of problems ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! There is no possibility, under any interpretation of any speech made in the history of the Westminster system, that the particular drivel that just came out of the minister's mouth could be considered relevant to the question.

Mr SPEAKER: There is a point of order, and again I remind the minister to relate his comments to the question.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I have made it perfectly clear that those who have not paid will do so before their leases are converted to freehold. Throughout this whole farcical debate, the opposition and the member for MacDonnell have been unable to give a single example of such a conversion taking place, and that includes Radio 8HA. There is no scandal and there was no scandal. There have been no secret Cabinet decision and there will be no court actions.

The member for MacDonnell has made much of a ministerial document which he says supports his claim. It is unfortunate that he has been unable to read the document in its entirety because, if he did so, he would find that it negates his arguments. In fact, the background for the recommendations for freehold conversion of commercial special purposes leases argues that lessees of commercial special purposes leases would have paid whatever was required by the legislation at the time of issue of the SPL. This has been consistently interpreted by the department and successive ministers to mean that conversion to freehold will be given only to those people who have paid for their leases. Whether they have done so through an up-front payment or accrued rental payment at conversion, or a combination of these, is entirely irrelevant. Again, that goes for Radio 8HA. If the member for MacDonnell has one example where such an action - which he claims has occurred hundreds of times - has occurred, I challenge him to produce it. Otherwise, he should do the right thing and admit he made a mistake, and apologise publicly for some of the things that he has said.

Northern Territory Traders Association

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Does he recognise the fact that the Northern Territory Traders Association represents 70 established and reputable Territory companies? Secondly, did he state yesterday in this House that he had suspicions about the association's motives in giving him early warning about Hungerford Refrigeration's creditworthiness? Thirdly, will he now advance that smear with supporting information or will he retract it completely and apologise to the association?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot remember the exact words I used yesterday but no doubt they are recorded in Hansard, as that is what Hansard is there for. I now table a letter which I wrote to the organisation following my meeting with its representatives last year. The Leader of the Opposition may find that letter of some interest.

Mr Smith: Are you going to answer the question?

Mr PERRON: That is all I have to say about it.

Closure of Rolls for Municipal Elections

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

In view of the impending municipal elections and the usual criticism from the Deputy Leader of the Opposition in relation to the issue of rolls, can the he advise this Assembly on procedure and publicity for the closure of rolls for the forthcoming municipal elections?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as usual, the member for Stuart has made remarks about the closure of electoral rolls. It seems that every time there is an election the first thing we can look forward to is a complaint from the Deputy Leader of the Opposition about early closure of the rolls. True to form this year, he jumped on the same tired old bandwagon over the local government elections and put out his normal line. Unfortunately, on this occasion, he not only displayed his usual, naked political adventurism but, worse, he demonstrated his total ignorance of the appropriate legislative requirements in respect of local government elections. I am more than happy to take this opportunity to dispel the gobbledegook of the member for Stuart.

On Territory Extra on 16 March, he complained about the procedures, criticised me as the minister responsible and even lambasted the Electoral Office. He said: 'There has been no advertising put around the place to tell people we are going to close the rolls. You could draw a sinister conclusion that that is basically to keep the newcomers off the roll'. The Deputy Leader of the Opposition then went on to inform listeners that he was writing to me as minister responsible to tell me, and I quote, 'I really think he has gone overboard on this one'.

As I pointed out in my reply to the member for Stuart, the dates for local government elections are determined by the Local Government Act and Local Government (Electoral) Regulations. Section 45 of the act stipulates that an election for each council is to be held on the last Saturday in May of each leap year. Section 51 says: 'Nomination day is the last Friday which is not a public holiday in April of the leap year in which the election is to be held'. Regulation 10 states: 'Close of roll is at 6 o'clock in the afternoon of the last Friday in March each leap year'. Therefore, relevant dates for the 1988 elections were: closure of rolls, Friday 25 March; nomination date, Friday 29 April; and polling day, Saturday 28 May.

As I further explained to the member for Stuart, the practice of fixing election dates by enactment eliminates uncertainty regarding when rolls are next due. When electors fulfil their responsibilities by enrolling for Commonwealth and Territory elections, they are enrolled automatically for local government elections, provided that they reside within a municipal area. The closure of rolls was advertised on public and commercial radio and in the press in the weeks leading up to the closing date. The closure advertisement was translated into 4 Aboriginal languages and broadcast by CAAMA. Information concerning the closure of rolls was also distributed to town camps and Aboriginal organisations in Alice Springs.

Mr Speaker, confronted with the facts, the wild allegations of the member for Stuart collapsed like a pack of cards. Contrary to his assertions on Territory Extra apparently, the closure of rolls was advertised properly and adequately. The only sinister conclusion any sane person could come to is that the Deputy Leader of the Opposition must have been suffering from another of his well-known paranoid hallucinations.

Northern Territory Traders Association

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Yesterday he said, in answer to a question: 'Subsequent information which I have received, more by rumour than anything, has led me to be very suspicious of the motives of this organisation'. He was referring to the Northern Territory Traders Association. Will he provide this House with information to support that smear or will he withdraw the smear?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am glad the Leader of the Opposition is taking an interest in what he sees as an unwarranted smear. He might refer to the comments that one of his colleagues made openly just a couple of days ago in this Assembly about a Mr Koh and his involvement in the Northern Territory. I guess that really he should have a look at that and see if some internal discipline might be warranted.

As the Leader of the Opposition just quoted, I said that information that I had received had led me to be very suspicious of the motives of this organisation, and I stand by that. It is an expression of opinion, and that is my opinion which I gave to this House yesterday. I need do no more than reiterate that that is my opinion.

Women's Advisory Council

Mr DONDAS to CHIEF MINISTER

It was reported recently in the press that a new convenor and new members had been appointed to the Women's Advisory Council. What is the role and the new composition of the council?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as honourable members would be aware, the Women's Advisory Council was formed in 1983. It was intended to provide a mechanism for communication between government and the women of the Territory. Over the last 5 years, the council has proven to be highly effective in this capacity. It has allowed the government to test ideas and has kept us up to date on issues of concern to women. I can assure this Assembly that the Women's Advisory Council is no paper tiger. At times, it has offered hard-hitting advice on the effect of government policies on women and, on other occasions, it has been persistent in advocating action for change.

The Women's Advisory Council can be proud of its legacy. The remote areas report, the drug and alcohol services survey, the sexual assault referral service in Alice Springs, measures to prevent domestic violence - these and other initiatives have been made possible through the work of the Women's Advisory Council. In its 5 years of operation, the Women's Advisory Council has established itself as a means of genuine consultation between the government and the community. I would particularly like to pay tribute today to Mrs June Tuzewski, under whose able convenorship the council has flourished, and those women who have served on the council as members. Their dedication has earned the respect of communities throughout the Northern Territory.

I confidently predict that the new convenor and the members of the Women's Advisory Council will carry on this fine tradition. Ms Schmolke, the new convenor, is a public relations executive who has lived in the Northern Territory for 20 years. She is a Justice of the Peace and has a background of wide involvement with community organisations, including Red Cross and the Penguin Club. Having lived in Tennant Creek, Alice Springs and Darwin, Ms Schmolke will bring to the council an understanding of the Territory's diverse communities and an appreciation of their diverse needs.

Eight new members have been appointed to the Women's Advisory Council increasing its membership to 14. It was decided to widen the scope of the WAC by including representation from Yulara and Borroloola for the first time since the council was established by the CLP government 5 years ago. The new members of the council are: Annette Milikins and Beryl Mulder from Darwin; Josephine Stone from Alice Springs; Kathrina Bryen from Yulara; Nerolie Golder from Nhulunbuy; Heather Galvin from Billengarrah Station via Borroloola; and Mary Yarmirr from Croker Island. Katherine's representative, Stephanie Hill, will continue on the council for a further year.

Ms Beryl Mulder has been actively involved in many ethnic community organisations since she came to the Territory. She is now working in the new regional office of the Office of Multicultural Affairs in Darwin and therefore is well placed to voice the needs and concerns of women from a variety of ethnic backgrounds. Ms Mary Yarmirr is a respected elder of the Minjilang community on Croker Island. She is a trained teacher and has been vice-chairwoman of the Minjilang Council for 8 years. Ms Kathrina Bryen is a coordinator of the Yulara Child-care Centre and an elected member of the Yulara Town Advisory Board. Nhulunbuy's representative, Ms Nerolie Golder, works for Nabalco and is responsible for the development and implementation of the Nabalco equal employment opportunity program. She has had wide experience of the industrial aspects of women's employment issues.

Ms Heather Galvin from Billengarrah Station via Borroloola is active in many community organisations in the Gulf region including the Isolated Children's and Parents Association. Ms Annette Milikins is well known for her work in the welfare field. She has lived in many remote centres throughout the Territory and is currently developing a protective behaviour program in cooperation with schools and community organisations. In addition, she is a board member of the YWCA. The Alice Springs representative, Ms Josephine Stone, is a member of the legal profession and is President of the Zonta Club in that region.

It is obvious that the new convenor and the representatives are extremely well qualified for their appointments. They bring to the council a wealth of experience and a diversity of views. I have no doubt they will ensure the council remains a genuine forum through which the women of the Territory can voice their opinions and aspirations and that the Women's Advisory Council will continue to play its part in ensuring that our government is responsive to the needs of the entire Territory community.

Mr Speaker, I noted some comments made during the adjournment debate last night by the member for Koolpinyah who seems to be under some misapprehension as to our government's role in consulting on and addressing the genuine concerns of women from a wide range of backgrounds throughout the Northern Territory. It is a shame she is not in the Chamber this morning. As it happens, I am hosting a luncheon today for the members of the Women's Advisory Council. I would like to invite the member for Koolpinyah to come along there and express her views on women's matters to the Women's Advisory Council. If she thinks it is a paper tiger, I wish her luck.

Angiography Procedures at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is he aware that angiography is a highly-intrusive radiographic procedure where patient risk increases with any delay in the process? Is he aware that, for the past year, patients undergoing angiography at the Royal Darwin Hospital have had a 1-in-2 chance of the procedure being disrupted by equipment failure, and that delays have now become so common and so intolerable that the unit has had to be shut down?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it would have been beneficial if the member for MacDonnell had given me some notice of a question which relates to so much technical detail.

Mr Smith: Technical detail?

Mr DALE: He has asked me a question about whether or not the equipment is working properly. I would be quite happy to take some advice as to whether or not that is the case. The angiographic unit in Room 4 at the Royal Darwin Hospital was acquired in 1979-80. A new table was acquired in 1986. Its condition is not very good at the moment and the proposed replacement date is in the coming year. We are aware that the unit has probably seen out its useful life but that is what happens with highly-technical and very expensive equipment. Let me say that the cost of that piece of equipment will be some $900 000. We have a full program for replacement of all equipment in the radiology section at the Royal Darwin Hospital.

It has been interesting recently to see how the Leader of the Opposition's denigration of Hungerford Refrigeration virtually put it out of business. He was spokesman for health for a short time whilst the member for MacDonnell was apparently away in the scrub somewhere. He beat up an incredible story. He used a young boy from Darwin to create the impression in the minds of that child's parents that things were not working as well as they should be in the radiology section of the Royal Darwin Hospital. He caused those parents so much trauma that, while he was running around town trying to get all facets of the media to cover the story ...

Mr EDE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister has deliberately moved from answering the question to telling us a story about something completely unrelated. Under standing orders, he has to relate his answer to the question.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I would urge you to dismiss that point of order on the simple grounds that the minister has the right to present an answer as fully as he believes is appropriate. The question concerned radiological matters at Royal Darwin Hospital. The incident to which the minister is referring arose in the radiology unit at the hospital and is perfectly relevant to the question. If members opposite do not like what they are hearing, that is their problem for asking the question.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. The information being given by the minister is directly related to the question.

Mr DALE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. When the parents of that child discovered that they had been misled about the services available at the Royal Darwin Hospital, naturally they started to make public statements expressing their concern about what they had been led to believe. The effect of that flowed through to the general public. The Minister for Transport and Works explained yesterday that the most important thing in business is confidence. There is nothing more important than confidence in the provision of radiology services and health services generally. Once again, members opposite see their role in the Northern Territory as running around the place, not only denigrating industry and causing a lack of confidence in industry, but also using 11-year-olds and the parents of those children to denigrate the health services of the Northern Territory without any good reason whatsoever.

I gave the member for MacDonnell the opportunity to inspect the premises at the hospital. By the way, that was at the same time that the honourable member was interfering politically in the employment of a former employee of his within my department. That is the time that the appointment was cancelled so that the member for MacDonnell could accompany the secretary of the department on an inspection of the equipment in the radiology section. There is equipment at the Royal Darwin Hospital that is approaching the end of its worthwhile life. That is a fact of life. One cannot simply throw out a $1m piece of equipment when it is halfway through its useful life just to satisfy all of the carryings-on of the members opposite.

I am quite happy to advise the member for MacDonnell if he did not take advantage of his inspection of the radiology section at the Royal Darwin Hospital on Monday of this week. I will give him further details of the program. The advice that I have has been compiled on the advice of Dr Sutton, Mr Phil Thornburn, who is medical engineer, and also the person who is in charge at the radiology section at the moment.

File on Radiography Equipment at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Mr Speaker, I have a supplementary question for the minister. Will he confirm that the file on radiography equipment in the administrative section in the Royal Darwin Hospital is missing? What action has he or his department taken to locate that file? Can I assist by providing him with this schedule - which I trust would be part of a file - which indicates that the previous answer given by the minister this morning is quite wrong. The replacement dates of 4 out of the 10 pieces of equipment have been passed long ago.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I do not regard that as being a supplementary question. I regard it as seeking additional information on a wider topic. I would advise all honourable members that I have been fairly lenient with supplementary questions. If the procedure is to continue in respect of supplementary questions, I would remind honourable members to adhere strictly to the rules.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I must admit that I am a little stunned. A moment ago, I talked about interference in the public service by the Leader of the Opposition. We have him on the record of this House saying that, if he were a public servant, he would take information out of files within the public service. In fact, he encourages it.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Standing orders provide that, if the minister wishes to reflect on the behaviour of a member of this Assembly, as he is doing by suggesting that I have been thieving public documents or whatever, he must do so by way of a substantive motion.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, I did not mention the member for MacDonnell. My comments have all been about the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr DALE: Perhaps I can create a point of order now, Mr Speaker. It would appear that the member for MacDonnell supports the Leader of the Opposition in that. I suppose I am to believe that, if there is a file missing from my department and then it is handed across the floor of this House to me, I can take it that the member for MacDonnell found it, and I thank him.

Freeholding of Special Purposes Leases

Mr REED to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

During the adjournment debate last night, the member for MacDonnell claimed that the 8HA radio station in Alice Springs had been able to convert its special purposes lease to freehold title for the sum of $85. This was in contrast to Mr George Brown who paid $35 000 to obtain freehold title for his special purposes lease. Can the minister inform me if this is the case and, if not, what are the facts?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell certainly is a man of great limitations and, last night, I think he nearly reached them. I must admit that I was astonished at what the member for MacDonnell said last night. I honestly did not believe that he would be foolish enough to continue his farcical and unjustified attacks on conversions of special purpose leases to freehold title. I find it absolutely astonishing that a man, who claims to be so aggrieved when it is suggested that he may not be telling the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth, should have the gall to try to mislead the House in the manner that he did last night. Last night, the member for MacDonnell continued his campaign of innuendo against the lands portfolio. He claimed that Mr George Brown had suffered a great injustice.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member cannot imply that any honourable member has tried to mislead the House. I ask him to withdraw that remark.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw the remark.

Mr Bell: It is about the tenth such one you have made this week too.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable minister will be heard in silence.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, last night the member for MacDonnell claimed that Mr Brown had suffered a great injustice at the hands of the government because he had been forced to pay market value for his block of land when he converted it to freehold title. The honourable member's evidence for this alleged injustice was that 8HA had been given freehold title to its lease for a sum of $85.

I have news for the member for MacDonnell. He is wrong yet again. I am getting sick and tired of his countless allegations which, time and time again, have been proved to have no foundation in reality. Surely his leadership ambitions must stop somewhere, Mr Speaker? The fact of the matter is that 8HA has not - I repeat, has not - been given freehold title to its special purposes lease. I made that perfectly clear when the matter was first raised and I made it clear that, if 8HA wanted freehold title, it would have to effect that within the confines of government policy and it would have to pay market value for that land. That is what would happen. I made that clear in my answer to a question yesterday morning. Mr Brown has not suffered from discrimination at the hands of the government. His case falls within the simple guidelines ...

Mr Ede: Is that right?

Mr MANZIE: Too right. I heard that interjection. His case falls within the simple guidelines set down by successive ministers for the conversion of commercial SPLs to freehold title. Quite simply, Mr Brown had not paid for his SPL before conversion and, therefore, he paid for it when it was converted. It was very simple.

The member for MacDonnell tabled a number of letters during his adjournment debate speech last night which, he said, backed up his case. One of those was a letter to Mr Brown from the then Minister for Lands and Housing, the member for Flynn. This letter was sent in response to a query from Mr Brown about why he had been required to pay for his SPL while a Mr and Mrs Smith, who held SPL No 315 in Alice Springs, were not required to pay at conversion. I intend to inspect the letter tabled by the member for MacDonnell because it does not appear to read in quite the same way as the copy that I have been supplied with by my department. The member for MacDonnell read the following passage from the letter:

In 1986, however, the policy was expanded to allow for a greater number of categories of special purposes leases to be converted to freehold. Part of this policy allowed for conversion at no cost.

My copy of the letter does say that, but the second sentence is considerably longer than the one quoted by the member for MacDonnell. In my copy the paragraph reads:

In 1986, however, the policy was expanded to allow for a greater number of categories of special purposes leases to be converted to freehold. Part of this policy allowed for the conversion at no cost in those instances where the lessee paid a market value premium at the time of securing their lease. This occurred in Mr and Mrs Smith's case.

Mr Speaker, I think that that makes the matter very clear. I table a copy of that letter.

As I said, I will inspect the letter that was tabled by the member for MacDonnell last night and, if the 2 copies tally, and I expect they will although perhaps they will not, then I will be forced to ask why the member for MacDonnell quoted only part of the relevant sentence from it. I would like to know also why he saw fit to claim in this House repeatedly that 8HA had been granted freehold title for its special purposes lease at a cost of $85 when, in fact, the title had not been converted at all - and he knows that.

This behaviour from a man who claims to be squeaky clean, eek-eek, and who becomes so upset when his word is questioned, is absolutely outrageous. I find it disgusting that he has the nerve to mislead this House in such a manner and, at the same time, to subject me to allegations of improper behaviour. This is intolerable conduct from the member for MacDonnell. He has shown a lack of intellectual capacity: he cannot understand a simple explanation.

In the beginning I thought that the member for MacDonnell was a reasonable fellow who had a problem with understanding the facts. I thought that, if I explained them very slowly and carefully and perhaps wrote them in big capital letters, he might understand. However, when I heard his performance in relation to the letter, I realised that the facts had no connection with this matter and that he was not interested in them. The only conclusion I can come to is that he is so preoccupied with becoming the Leader of the Opposition that he will say or do anything to get a run in the media and to make himself look good in this Assembly. I am afraid that the only thing he succeeded in doing on this occasion was to tarnish his image even further.

He referred to my answer in question time yesterday as 'calumny'. I will just quote the definition of calumny given by the Australian edition of the Collins Concise English Dictionary. It is: 'The malicious utterance of false charges or misrepresentation'. The definition of 'malicious' is: 'Motivated by wrongful, vicious or mischievous purposes'. Mr Speaker, it is very plain that the member for MacDonnell is guilty of a malicious utterance and utterance of false charges or misrepresentations and that he is motivated by wrongful, vicious and mischievous purposes.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! You have already ruled against the use of such terms as those used in the minister's answer to this question. You also ruled against it several times yesterday. The minister is persisting and I request you to do something a little sterner than ruling him out of order. My point of order is that, if the minister wants to make those accusations about me, he must do so by way of substantive motion.

Mr SPEAKER: I am advised that there is a point of order. Whilst May has allowed the use of the word 'calumny' in the House of Commons, I must ask the minister to withdraw the words he has used.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw the quote from the Collins dictionary defining the word 'calumny'.

Mr Bell: That is not good enough, Mr Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I asked the minister to withdraw and he did so.

Flood Mitigation in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What action, if any, is the government taking in relation to removing sand from the bed of the Todd River in the town section to deepen the river and thus reduce the potential for flooding in Alice Springs?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Sadadeen for his question. To give credit where it is due, I must say that, 2 years ago, he mentioned the possibility of the mining or removal of sand from the bed of the Todd as a flood mitigation measure. As a result of his inquiries, a great deal of work has been carried out on investigating the feasibility of mining sand from the river. However, I would like to discuss that proposal together with a range of other options that are being considered in relation to flood mitigation.

At this stage, I cannot tell the member for Sadadeen exactly what action will be taken. He will appreciate that the flood mitigation studies are continuing and that further talks may be desirable with a range of people and organisations. It cannot be questioned that the need for specific flood mitigation measures is somewhat urgent. The Alice Springs flood in late March peaked at a level of 3.97 m on the Todd River gauge upstream of Wills Terrace, above the previous highest measured level of 3.46 m in March 1983. Overall damage was not as severe as in 1983, but the cost will still be several million dollars in damage to private residences, commercial property and government and council departments.

Flood mitigation measures carried out or in progress before the March flood included the provision of floodplain maps to show the effects of flooding in various degrees, adoption of a land use policy to minimise future flood damage, the establishment of a flood warning system, the setting up of a counter disaster plan to cope with flood emergencies, an assessment of potential flood damage which included identification of flood-prone buildings, and the production and distribution of flood information pamphlets throughout areas likely to be flooded. Measures initiated since the flood include: the reappraisal of the Telegraph Station site for a flood mitigation dam, surveying and mapping by the Department of Lands and Housing of the extent of the flooding, surveying of the Todd River bed to assess silting and scouring, the authorisation of removal of excess sand from the river bed by private contractors and the engagement of the Centre of Resources and Environmental Studies of the Australian National University to carry out a flood damage study.

Of course, the most important measure is the construction of the flood mitigation dam. Honourable members would be aware, because it was publicly announced well in advance, that the government is carrying out hydrological and geo-technical testing of the spillway area of the Telegraph Station site. A trench has been dug and experts will assess the suitability of the area for construction of a dam wall and report to the Power and Water Authority. After that report is received, the government will be in a position to examine the flood mitigation options available to it.

I stress that the government has gone to great lengths to avoid becoming involved in emotional side issues about the Telegraph Station site, despite provocation. It is our intention to gather the necessary scientific information and assess it thoroughly before any further steps can be taken. I reject completely the spurious claims about lack of warning of moves to conduct these tests at the Telegraph Station site. We could not have been more public in our announcement at a well-attended media conference, and full details were then put to an Alice Springs public meeting by an officer of the Power and Water Authority and the Minister for Lands and Housing.

I would like to pay particular tribute to John Van Hoven, the officer in the Water Directorate, for the work that he has carried out on this particular project. He has dedicated himself to the project, and I would like to express my personal appreciation of the work that he has done.

I was disappointed to hear comments from the Director of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority which implied there had been a lack of consultation, particularly when he knows full well that he was invited to the minister's office to be briefed on the government's intention before the public announcement was made. I was disappointed also by criticism of the fact that I met informally with Aboriginal people in Alice Springs to talk about flood mitigation problems. I was asked by those who attended that meeting not to talk publicly about the detail of what was discussed, and I have honoured that agreement despite desperate provocation from members opposite. I will not be speaking about the details discussed at that meeting and the actions that have taken place. I intend to maintain the confidence that I have established with those people and I will not be speaking about that publicly. It is time that this was taken ...

Mr Ede: You haven't been asked to.

Mr COULTER: I have been, Mr Speaker. I have been asked on numerous occasions and I will supply him with details of what information was requested.

This will not be an issue that will be reported on the front page of the Centralian Advocate. I will deal with this in the proper manner and resolve this problem. I commit myself to resolving the flood problems in Alice Springs but it will not be done to the accompaniment of reports on the front page of any newspaper.

It should be clearly stated that the government has a very firm intention to institute adequate and reliable flood mitigation measures for Alice Springs. We will not be distracted by debilitating tangential debates about recreation facilities, alternatives that are not really alternatives, ridiculous claims about Bond Springs Station or any other nonsense that might be dragged across our path. The issues of the actual removal of the sand and the causeway are being actioned at the moment, and I have spoken with a group of potential contractors. It will make quite a substantial difference to the cost of sand in Alice Springs, despite the Deputy Leader of the Opposition's claim that it is 'dirty' sand. I guess there is 'dirty' dirt too, in his definition.

We believe that the price of sand in Alice Springs will be reduced dramatically as a result of this action. There are several actions that must occur before we get into the actual removal of sand. Because the member for Sadadeen brought this to my attention, I will keep him fully informed of the results of those discussions.

Northern Territory Indonesia Joint Trade Working Party

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Could he confirm the establishment of the Northern Territory Indonesia Joint Trade Working Party and, if so, what progress has been made to date towards achieving its objectives?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, certainly I can confirm that a Northern Territory Indonesia joint working party on trade has recently been reactivated. By way of some history for honourable members, the working party was first convened in 1981 and included representatives from the Northern Territory and Indonesia. The group met in Surabaya in January 1982 and again in August 1983 but, unfortunately, the meetings of the group lapsed subsequently.

Earlier this year, the Department of Industries and Development was instrumental in reforming the working party. The Northern Territory representatives include the Department of Industries and Development, including Nortrade. The member for Jingili is on the working party, as are a number of Darwin businessmen with an interest in trading with Indonesia. In addition, the Indonesian Consul to the Northern Territory, Dr Joseph Halim has been invited to attend meetings of the group. The working party met on 2 occasions recently and a further meeting is scheduled for the end of the coming week.

The working party has been established to facilitate trade and other commercial activity between Indonesia and the Northern Territory. Its terms of reference are: to identify reciprocal trade opportunities; to encourage communication and transport facilities between Indonesia and the Northern Territory; to provide introductory and information services for businessmen or government officials; to improve the efficiency of administration and regulatory procedures affecting trade; to improve cooperation between similar interests in particular industries with a view to promoting joint ventures; and to explore opportunities for bilateral trade in commodities where the same means of transportation can be used in either direction.

During a recent visit to the Northern Territory, the Indonesian Ambassador to Australia, His Excellency Ambassador Roesman, expressed support for these initiatives and undertook to promote the working party through appropriate Indonesian officials and with business groups in Indonesia and government leaders. To date, the group has spent some time in identifying factors conducive to an increase in commercial activity between Indonesia and the Northern Territory, and in identifying impediments to such increased activity. Contacts have also been made with Indonesian trade officials in Sydney and Canberra and arrangements are in place for members of the working party to meet with a high-level Indonesian trade delegation that is to visit Australia in July.

The establishment of the working party is tangible evidence of the government's desire to improve trade relationships with its South-east Asian neighbours. To further this aim, subject to negotiation with my Indonesian counterpart, I propose to lead a trade delegation to Indonesia later this year. During this mission, on which I will be accompanied by members of the working party, we would hope to identify opportunities for trade between Indonesia and the Northern Territory and to establish the contacts necessary to further this objective.

Members of the working party are working enthusiastically in an endeavour to improve commercial activities between the 2 countries. For their part, Indonesian representatives, in particular Dr Halim and Ambassador Roesman, have been very supportive of these initiatives, and I look forward to some success from these efforts in the future.

Tiger Brennan Drive

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Mr Speaker, my question is in 2 parts. First, will he accept personal responsibility for the traffic bottleneck which has arisen as a result of the opening of the latter section of Tiger Brennan Drive and, secondly, what does he propose to do about it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unfortunately I am not able to take all of the credit for what is the consequence of a very positive development of our road system - the recent opening of stages 1, 2 and 3 of Tiger Brennan Drive. Certainly, a bottleneck is occurring at the intersection of Frances Bay Road and Woolner Road. What is happening is that traffic from the industrial areas on the Stuart Highway, Palmerston etc are taking advantage of that diversion through Hook Road and travelling along that new section of high-quality road into the city. Of course, that is taking pressure off the Stuart Highway itself. As a consequence of what is happening now, the department is looking at some minor modifications that may need to be made in the interim at that intersection and on Hook Road. These are very minor. In the long term, we will see a great advantage from that section of the road. The next development will be the entry to the CBD that is proposed for 1989-90. That will go on the drawing board next year and bring traffic to McMinn Street. That will provide better access for the ever-growing flow of traffic from Palmerston and the rural area.

The project was completed over a couple of years and we need to acknowledge that about half of the money came from the Australian Bicentennial Roads Development Program. Hopefully, we will have the connection to the city. I say 'hopefully' because it appears there may be some reduction, nationally, in total road funding. It is reported in this morning's Sydney Morning Herald that alarm has been raised by the automobile associations that the Cabinet Expenditure Review Committee apparently has proposed a cut of $50m in the roads program which would mean about a 10% cut in next year's program. That would be quite disastrous.

The article by the Australian Automobile Association indicated that the importance of roads does not lie simply with traffic comfort and expedient entry to and from cities etc. More importantly, there is a direct relationship between road standards and road accidents and fatalities. The association estimates that some 75 additional fatalities and some 2500 additional accidents may result from further reductions in road funding. That was acknowledged recently by the Minister for Transport and Communications, Mr Morris, when he gave some examples of reductions in accidents and fatalities. An example was the Wyong bypass in NSW. The number of accidents fell to 28 per annum on the new road from 38 per annum on the old road. Similar examples would verify the very clear relationship between road standards and accident and fatality levels.

Perhaps I should call, once again, on the dubious influence that the members of the opposition have with the federal government. I urge them to press for a reasonable attitude towards road funding for the Northern Territory and other remote areas. It is understood that the emphasis next year will be on providing higher standard arterial roads to and from ports because they have some alleged economic value. We all might question what additional value there is in saving 5 or 10 minutes in traffic time to and from ports that take 6 or 8 weeks to clear their containers. There is no increase in the number of containers going across those roads. What we need is a fair distribution of funds to the remote, developing areas of Australia in order to provide better and safer facilities.

Mr Ede: The Tanami Highway.

Mr FINCH: Including, as the honourable member for Stuart says, the Tanami Highway. It will be roads within the Northern Territory that will suffer as a result of a 10% cut and a shift towards higher standard roads in major metropolitan areas in the south-eastern bloc which will have a very dubious additional value to the national economy.

Radiology Services at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Has he now established a review team to evaluate radiology services at the Royal Darwin Hospital? Who selected the team and why has the minister decided against appointing an independent peer group review as the opposition suggested?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, one of the healthiest things the government can do in the Northern Territory is not take on board recommendations of the opposition. That is a fundamental health issue. I am very pleased to be advised that, in fact, there is a file missing from my department. I am advised that it was an inactive file. It was a general file about capital equipment 1985-86 and not specific to the radiology section. It reminds me of my period as a policeman. If I was wandering down the street and I saw somebody being ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister has been asked a specific question concerning a supposed review that has been established.

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I have advised honourable members on previous occasions that this part of the parliamentary sittings is broadcast on FM radio. Whilst members of the public have difficulty in hearing clearly when members are interjecting, I also have difficulty hearing points of order when cross-Chamber chatter continues.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, the minister was asked a specific question concerning the setting up of a review into radiology services at the Royal Darwin Hospital. The minister was starting to meander, to use a polite word, into his experience as a policeman. I do not see the relevance of that.

Mr SPEAKER: The minister will relate his remarks to the question.

Mr DALE: In replying directly to the question that the honourable member has asked me, I would also like to make some remarks in respect of a previous question which was asked of me in this Assembly this morning. It concerned the tabling of some documents. I am informed that a file is missing from the section. In the past, if I was wandering down the street and saw somebody with stolen property in his possession, I could charge him with being unlawfully in possession of that property. If the opposition is to retain any credibility whatsoever, it ought to justify how it came to be in possession of apparently stolen goods.

In response to the honourable member's question about a review of radiology services in the Royal Darwin Hospital, that is nothing new. I said in this House some 12 months ago that I would be reviewing all sections of the new Department of Health and Community Services in order to create efficiencies and thereby save funds. Members will recall that I had to find some $5m in savings in the new department. I am pleased to say that, despite the fact that it was an arduous task, I am able to compliment the staff of my department because we have been able to provide effective health services throughout the Northern Territory and to come in on budget for the year.

I have been conducting investigations into the efficiency of all sections of the Royal Darwin Hospital and the radiology section is no exception. I hope the member for MacDonnell has not confused that with an inquiry I initiated recently as a result of the Leader of the Opposition's efforts to use the media to convey an impression to the people of the Northern Territory and the parents of the young child concerned that he was not given appropriate treatment at the Royal Darwin Hospital. The purpose of that inquiry is to determine whether that child was given the best possible treatment available at the Royal Darwin Hospital.

SPEAKER'S RULING

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, I wish to draw your attention to my previous ruling. Whilst May states at page 433 that the word 'calumny' has generally been held to be in order, I have given further consideration to the matter. I believe that the word 'calumny' and its derivatives, when applied to members' statements, are as unparliamentary, if not more so, as the word 'lie', when similarly used. Under these circumstances, in future I will not permit its use in reference to members' statements.

Merger of DIT and
University College of the Northern Territory

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Over the last few days, there has been considerable media speculation regarding the merger between Darwin Institute of Technology and the University College of the Northern Territory. Could he give us a position statement?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. I must admit that I was most concerned that the type of questioning being put forward through the media in relation to the University College had won out in this whole exercise. It is a complete nonsense. It is important for us to remember that we are committed to arriving at a negotiated agreement as far as the merger is concerned. There is a danger that, if the questioning in the media continues to take its present line, people in the community will start to become frightened about what is to happen. I acknowledge the work that is being done by the student and academic unions to try to keep the matters that are being discussed within the right forum. As you would be aware, Mr Speaker, working parties have been established to discuss the issues of how we are to proceed to a merger.

The comments made by Dr Carmel Gaffney from FAUSA and Janie Mason from the UACA this morning spelt out my desire that they approach the merger in a responsible manner and do not become involved in a slinging match in the community. There will be no winners or losers. We are aiming at providing a university for the people of the Northern Territory that our students will be proud of and the people who are part of that university will be proud of. We are aiming at bringing the institutions together in a new format. The government intends to ensure that courses not only have, but are seen to have, high standing throughout the world. The government's concern with the standing of courses is what led it to involve the University of Queensland in the University College. This is not to say that the courses at the DIT are of poor standing. Their standing cannot be questioned because they are nationally accredited, and the community needs to be made aware of that.

We are now in the process of trying to bring together the groups involved, including the academic and student unions. We have working parties addressing the merger issue and the members of the various groups will need to work together to arrive at a satisfactory proposal. That is under way, and I would urge people not to listen to any nonsense that is published in the media. We are moving in a responsible manner to build a sound future for Territorians. We believe that will be the result of the entire exercise.

I indicate to honourable members that it is my intention to make a statement on this matter during the course of the August sittings. I am unable to do so at this time because the Higher Education Planning Group has only just put the working parties in place. They will be reporting to me in mid-July prior to my statement in this House.

Radiography Equipment at Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is he aware of an engineer's report compiled this year into the status and reliability of radiography equipment at Royal Darwin Hospital? Does that report identify 9 major units as being out of action, beneath diagnostic standard or unreliable, and will he explain how he expects the medical staff to treat patients at the hospital using equipment which has been left to deteriorate to this extent?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it amazes me that the opposition appears to have a program aimed at destroying the credibility of various services in the Northern Territory. Health services are obviously at the top of the opposition's agenda. Hungerford Refrigeration was one of its former projects. I have called for an evaluation report on all aspects of the Royal Darwin Hospital and that started as soon as I became minister some 12 months ago. Honourable members do not seem to be complaining about the cleaning at the Royal Darwin Hospital. We were able to assess that function and, if my memory serves me correctly, we were able to make savings of about 20% in respect of the work force there. I was moving towards the privatisation of that section. We were able to negotiate with the union and the people involved and a satisfactory result has been achieved.

That is an example of what I have been doing right throughout the hospital. The Royal Darwin Hospital has 47 separate departments. The radiology section is a very important and integral part of the operation of that hospital. I will be making a ministerial statement on the Royal Darwin Hospital later today. I have made that available to members of the opposition to read overnight and I take it that they will have some positive and worthwhile criticisms to make and will not simply adopt the negative attitude that we have had from them as a result of stolen files and the like.

I pointed out to honourable members last week that I have a list covering the status of the equipment in the radiology section at the Royal Darwin Hospital. I told honourable members at the time that the list and the program that we have under way have been brought together by the now ex-director of the radiology section, the engineer that I have no doubt the honourable member opposite is alluding to, and one of the people from the radiology section at the Royal Darwin Hospital. It is a comprehensive report.

Mr Smith: What are you doing about it?

Mr DALE: It is programmed. The members opposite are saying that one can walk into a radiology section and say that various items will be replaced. Some of the equipment is worth in excess of $1m. There is a regular program in place. In 1985, an expert was called in to assess the situation at that time. Since that assessment was made, we have purchased 5 pieces of new equipment. The expert radiologist at the time reported that, in fact, the equipment in the radiology section at the Royal Darwin Hospital was satisfactory and working well. We have an expert maintenance engineering section at the Royal Darwin Hospital. By the way, that is another area that I will be looking at closely in the near future to ensure that it is achieving the aims that the Royal Darwin Hospital requires.

It is wrong of the opposition to maintain its scaremongering campaign which is sapping the confidence of the people of the Northern Territory and damaging the morale of the 1400 staff at the Royal Darwin Hospital who treat some 100 000 to 120 000 patients per year. The sooner this impotent opposition puts its mind to some of the positive aspects of what is occurring in the Territory, instead of simply being negative for the sake of negativism, the sooner we might get somewhere in terms of maintaining the confidence of the very dedicated staff at the Royal Darwin Hospital.

Constitutional Referendum

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, there is what I believe to be a most alarming provision in the Constitutional Alteration (Rights and Freedoms) Bill currently before the Commonwealth Parliament relating to just terms. Would he advise the House on the provision which, I understand, blatantly discriminates against Northern Territorians?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. I agree completely that the provision relating to 'just terms' in the referendum bill is both alarming and most discriminatory. Basically, it proposes that the Commonwealth, states and territories will be able to acquire property only on just terms anywhere in Australia with one exception - the Northern Territory. In other words, the Commonwealth will be able to acquire from a Territory body politic without just terms, and it cannot do this anywhere in the states. The referendum proposal, as it is drafted, discriminates against Northern Territory Crown property in a most savage and unfair way.

I ask, Mr Speaker, how you can justify a basic guarantee of human rights such as the guarantee of 'just terms' entrenched permanently in the Australian Constitution when it provides for an exclusion to suit the convenience of the Commonwealth? Either it should apply to everyone or not at all. The expressed justification for the exclusion, as derived from the reasoning of the Constitutional Commission, cannot be substantiated. What it is really saying is that, once the Commonwealth sets up a new Territory government and transfers property to it, it should be able to take any Territory property it likes from that government at any later time as the Commonwealth sees fit and without payment. Such a view calls into question the bona fides of a Commonwealth government in granting self-government. What is good enough for every other government or person in Australia is not good enough for the Territory apparently.

It ignores the fact that the assets of the Territory government belong to the Territory community as a whole and are not just the product of Commonwealth transfers. Territorians are entitled to constitutional guarantees just as much as everyone else in this country. For too long, Territorians have been discriminated against constitutionally and it is about time that ended. If the referendum goes through in this form, it will constitute a permanent threat to the self-governing Northern Territory and its property.

On Friday of last week, I telexed various members of the federal parliament regarding this matter, including Senator Fred Chaney, Senator Bob Collins, Senator Grant Tambling, Hon John Howard, Rt Hon Bob Hawke, Rt Hon Ian Sinclair and Mr Snowdon. I would like to read to honourable members the text of that telex:

I must express to you my extreme alarm and concern at one proposal contained in the proposed package of constitutional referenda which would appear to discriminate against the Northern Territory in a totally unjustified manner.

Clause 3 of the Constitutional Alteration (Rights and Freedoms) Bill 1988 would constitutionally guarantee to everyone in Australia protection against acquisition of their property by the Commonwealth, by the states or by Territorians without compensation except, and I repeat except, the property of a self-governing body politic such as the Northern Territory.

There can be no basis for the Northern Territory government to be singled out in this discriminatory way. This is contrary to every concept of equal treatment and fair play. What is constitutionally good enough for every other person, body or government in Australia must surely be good enough for the Northern Territory.

Mr Leo: We are a territory, not a state.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the text of my telex continues:

I certainly do not accept that this provision can be justified by the reasons given by the Constitutional Commission first report April 1988, volume 2, pages 616 and 617, as adopted by the explanatory memorandum of the referendum bill, page 6. These just do not stand up to scrutiny against the need for equal and fair treatment under the constitution. If the Commonwealth wants to transfer property to a new self-governing Territory, it can decide in advance what property it wishes to retain. It does not need an express exception in a constitutional guarantee of just terms of general application to any property in the Territory operating for an unlimited period of time to do this.

In the case of the Northern Territory, the Commonwealth had 1 year to acquire property back from the Territory after the grant of self-government. This period has expired. There is no need to continue an exception as to the requirement of just terms in the case of the Northern Territory for this purpose. If the reason for the exception is to avoid the need for the Commonwealth to pay just terms to the Territory for any Territory land granted by the Commonwealth as Aboriginal land, then the question must be asked: why shouldn't the Commonwealth be liable for compensation in the same way as it would in the states? Apart from Aboriginal land, there would be nothing to stop the Commonwealth at any time in the future acquiring back any Territory government property for any purpose without compensation. If this referendum bill is passed in its present form, it would have the potential to destroy the Territory as a self-governing entity to the detriment of all Territorians and their public assets.

The referendum bill should not proceed in its present form unless this discriminatory constitutional provision, aimed specifically at the Northern Territory government and no one else in Australia, is removed.

Mr Speaker, to comment on the member for MacDonnell's interjection ...

Mr Leo: Nhulunbuy.

Mr HATTON: My apologies, it was the member for Nhulunbuy. I am glad he clarified that. It is exactly because we are a territory that this federal government, in this particular referendum, wants to demonstrate to the whole of Australia and to every Territorian that, as far as it is concerned, we are still a Canberra territory. We are not prepared to accept that on behalf of the Northern Territory people. It is about time the Commonwealth and the people of Australia recognised that Territorians are Australians too, and are entitled to the same rights as other Australians and this, as much as anything else, gives an impetus to the demand for us to move towards statehood as soon as possible.

Constitutional Referendum

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Is it the Northern Territory government's intention to support the Commonwealth government's proposed amendments to the Australian Constitution in the areas of one vote one value, constitutional recognition of trial by jury, constitutional recognition of the role of local government and, indeed, a change to the Constitution which would allow the Houses to sit for 4 years?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that matter is being examined in detail by our government before we adopt a specific position on it. We shall not respond on a gut reaction. I have made a specific comment today in respect of an aspect of the constitution which is of particular urgency to the Northern Territory. However, we will not adopt a firm position on the constitutional issues until such time as the matters have been thoroughly examined. I can assure the honourable member that, at that time, every person in the Northern Territory will be informed about the position of this government in respect of any constitutional amendments.

Under-age Drinking

Mr REED to MINISTER for TOURISM

Mr Speaker, my question is directed to the Minister for Tourism in relation to his responsibility for the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission.

Parents, the general public, the police and the licensees of liquor outlets are genuinely concerned about what appears to be the increasing incidence of under-age drinking. If under-age drinking is a problem within our community, what are we doing about it? As it appears that the problem is difficult to address under existing legislation, what changes in legislation are proposed and what progress has been made towards effecting those changes?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, under-age drinking has long been recognised as a problem in the Territory by public health and community organisations, licensees, parents and others. The Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission has received a stream of correspondence requesting amendments to the legislation to deal with the problem. Members of the Australian Hotels Association have informed the commission that they support more stringent controls. In this context, I have directed the commission, in conjunction with the Northern Territory Police Force, to work towards providing legislation to make it an offence for any person to supply liquor to a person under the age of 18 years on licensed premises or in a public place unless the person receiving the liquor is in the company of his parent, guardian or spouse who is over the age of 18 years. I might add that such an amendment to the Liquor Act has the unqualified support of the police.

This amendment would deal only with a hiatus in the existing law. At present, it is an offence for a licensee or his employee to sell or supply alcohol to a person under the age of 18 years in licensed premises. It is therefore impossible at present to stop another person over the age of 18 years supplying alcohol to a minor, although it is an offence for that minor to consume the alcohol.

A further amendment is also foreshadowed to provide that persons under the age of 18 years will be prohibited from entry to licensed premises except licensed restaurants, dining areas of hotels and taverns, licensed clubs and roadhouses or other areas the commission may exempt from time to time. Such an amendment will allow licensees to refuse entry to their premises to persons whom they suspect to be under age. This practice has already been undertaken by many licensees. It will exclude persons under the age of 18 from environments such as hotels and discotheques which are mainly geared to drinking alcohol. Under-age persons are usually present on such premises at a time when they should be in the care of their families.

In regard to premises which serve food, it is considered that the existing policy should be continued. If an under-age person is with his legal guardian or spouse over the age of 18 years, there should be sufficient supervision and it will be the responsibility of the person in loco parentis to determine whether the charge can drink or not. This policy is consistent with the Territory lifestyle of families attending clubs, restaurants and dining areas at hotels for meals. I trust the member for Katherine's question has been answered to his satisfaction.

Letter Circulated by Acting President of CLP

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer him to a letter circulated to Country Liberal Party members by the Acting President of the Country Liberal Party which says in part: 'There are too many party members pushing their own vested interests'. In that context, can he confirm that senior and influential party members, Helen Galton and Graeme Lewis, recently joined the Darwin public relations firm run by John Hare, the Secretary of the Country Liberal Party? Will he also confirm that, shortly after they joined the firm, the government awarded a major ...

Mr COULTER: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Under standing order 109, this question clearly falls outside the standing orders and I ask that it be disallowed.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, standing order 109 states: 'Questions may be put to a minister relating to public affairs, to proceedings pending in the Assembly, or to any matter of administration for which he is responsible'. The matter that the Leader of the Opposition is about to raise is one for which the Chief Minister is clearly responsible and the Leader of Government Business should have waited until the Leader of the Opposition had finished the question and then he would have understood what it was about.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order at this stage. I would like to hear the whole of the question before I make a ruling.

Mr SMITH: Your wisdom is infinite, Mr Speaker.

Can the Chief Minister confirm that, shortly after Mrs Galton and Mr Lewis joined that firm, the government awarded a major contract for that firm to promote 10 years of self-government? Can he confirm that that contract was not put out to tender, and can he tell the Assembly how much that contract was worth?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the link that the Leader of the Opposition is seeking to make is both mischievous and irrelevant to the issue.

Mr Smith: Tell the people out there. Tell Shane Stone that.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is quoting from a letter. I assume he has a copy of the letter because I can assure the Leader of the Opposition that I have not seen that letter.

Mr Smith: That does not surprise me at all.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, given the Leader of the Opposition's penchant for selective quotation, I would not be prepared to accept that as a total statement of what is in a letter that allegedly has been circulated by Mr Stone. I can confirm that I will seek information to confirm details of contracts that have been let in respect of self-government celebrations. I can confirm that a contract has been let. The principal contract as I understand it - and I stand to be corrected - was with a local company called Barr Woollard Cawse. It may have engaged the public relations firm with which Mr Hare is associated. I will try to have that confirmed and I will seek the details associated with the self-government celebrations.

While I am on my feet, I will take the opportunity to advise the Assembly that we certainly intend to ensure that we celebrate 10 years of successful self-government in the Territory. We will be taking the time to recount the dramatic improvements in the lifestyle and circumstances of people right throughout the Northern Territory that have resulted from self-government. The Northern Territory community as a whole will have a good opportunity to celebrate this most significant occasion in the Northern Territory's history. I am sure that all Territorians will be delighted with the celebrations. It will be a good chance for Territorians to reflect on life before self-government in the days of full colonial rule by Canberra and the frustrations that Territorians lived with in those times, and contrast that with the dramatic improvements in the quality of life, services and facilities and the growth and security that have flowed over those 10 years to all Territorians.

Extensive work has been done to overcome 70 years of Commonwealth neglect, particularly the Commonwealth neglect of the Aboriginal people of the Northern Territory. As a government, we inherited circumstances amongst the Aboriginal communities of absolute destitution and total absence of community services and facilities right throughout the Northern Territory. There is a long way still to go but we have had only 10 years in which to overcome 70 years of neglect of the Aboriginal people and other people throughout the Territory. All Territorians can take the opportunity to reflect back on what it was like before 1978 and on the significant improvements in our lifestyle and the benefits that have flowed to Territorians from having a government that they have elected to make decisions on their behalf.

Landscaping Along Rapid Creek

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Some time ago, I wrote to the minister and requested the upgrading and landscaping of the narrow area of vacant Crown land between the Jingili Water Gardens and McMillans Road along the eastern bank of Rapid Creek. Could he advise what progress has been made on consideration of my request?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I confirm that the honourable member made representations regarding the equestrian access to that area. I have been informed that representatives of the Conservation Commission, the Department of Lands and Housing, the Darwin City Council and the equestrian community have met to consider the establishment of a bridle trail along the eastern bank of Rapid Creek. I have been informed that there is insufficient room to establish a trail between the rear of the blocks and the eastern bank of the creek, although I understand that there is a similar but lesser problem on the western side where there is currently a route along the clear survey line at the rear of property boundaries. The Department of Lands and Housing and the Conservation Commission are evaluating the cost of and justification for a permanent bridle trail and no further upgrading will take place until that evaluation is completed. At that stage, we will be in a position to assess what action is appropriate.

Anderson Proposal

Mr TUXWORTH to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he advise whether negotiations with Warren Anderson for the development of this precinct have been concluded and, if not, what stage have they reached? Can he give an indication as to whether citizens will have an opportunity to peruse and comment on the development proposal? Finally, can he give an undertaking that the financial arrangements relating to the precinct redevelopment will be put to this House before they are concluded and signed?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can advise honourable members that negotiations are proceeding. They certainly have not yet been concluded. As honourable members know, the proposal is for the redevelopment of this government precinct, particularly the construction of a new parliament house and a supreme court. An interdepartmental negotiating team has been formed, headed by the Secretary of the Department of the Chief Minister.

Some rough concept designs have been developed and I would anticipate that, within the next week or so, they will be ready for consideration. I can advise honourable members that, quite naturally and properly, we will refer consideration of the design and structure of the new parliament house to the New Parliament House Committee of this Assembly. That committee will be very actively involved in the processes of approval for what will eventually become the new parliament house for the Northern Territory. Equally, the proposal for a new Supreme Court building will be discussed closely with those who will operate in it, the people who have to physically make the court work. It is intended that, when the concept designs and layouts are finalised, they will be made available for public comment. We see the development as a very significant community asset. Obviously, the community needs to have an input and to accept that this is an appropriate direction to move in.

I am not prepared to give any undertaking in relation to the question about financial arrangements. There are 2 reasons for that. Firstly, we certainly have not concluded the financial arrangements. Secondly, as I have advised publicly, there will be no commitment from government until financial arrangements have been finalised and accepted by Cabinet. The concept, design, layout and the whole financial package must be approved by Cabinet before any commitments are made. Timing is vital if we are to achieve one of the principal objectives of the project which is to create a fiscal stimulant for the economy now rather than 3 or 5 years in the future.

As honourable members would be aware, if construction could commence this year, it would have a significant stimulative effect on the economy this year. To achieve that, decisions would need to be made during the year. Obviously, our government would be responsible for answering any questions and ensuring that people are fully informed of the circumstances. Really, it would depend very much on what the timings were before I would be prepared to make a commitment one way or the other on advising this House in advance of the financial arrangements. However, I repeat that we will be working very closely with the New Parliament House Committee on the assessment of the new parliament house, and with the courts on the court structure. We will seek public comment on the displays and layouts of the proposed precinct.

Mining Conference and Trade Exposition

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What was the outcome of the recent Mining, Petroleum and Suppliers Conference and the attached Trade Exposition?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can certainly advise the member for Karama about the Trade Exposition. There was much criticism about the Trade Exposition suggesting that it was not well-attended and that people did not become millionaires overnight as a result of the expo.

Mr Smith: And many of them would have been misled. Yes?

Mr COULTER: As the Leader of the Opposition says - and he happens to be an expert on the subject - people were misled. A number of contracts were written at the showgrounds that provided opportunity for great stimulus to the Northern Territory economy. I guess the largest would have been that arranged by a helicopter company from Western Australia which, as a result of the expo and the investigations its representative was able to carry out whilst he was here, will base its entire operation in the Northern Territory in future. That operation includes 9 helicopters that it will be operating from here.

That is simply one example of a whole range of contracts that were undertaken. In particular, one large loader was bought on site and the new owner insisted that he drive it home. It was a very large, 4-wheel-drive loader and the new owner of the machine had to be talked into leaving it on the stand. There were a number of other examples. We had people from London who have developed an all-terrain vehicle capable of traversing marshlands. In fact, it is seagoing. The representative flew from London to the mining expo which enabled him to present his product in the Northern Territory. I understand he was very impressed by the amount of activity that is occurring in the Northern Territory.

Other people arrived from Sweden who were able to develop contacts here for the development of their company's product. The ISO assistance, which the Northern Territory government has now entered into to establish an officer within the Office of Industrial Supplies, will concentrate solely on the mining industry, and $100 000 has been provided to the Office of Industrial Supplies to enable that officer to service the mining industry as a result of the activities following the mining expo. His job will be to ensure that local companies obtain a slice of the industry that is developing in the Northern Territory and which is a bright shining star, not only for the Territory, but for the nation as a whole.

Martin Committee Report on Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Is it his intention to table, during these sittings, the report of the Martin Committee into the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority which has now been with the government since July 1987, and is it true that the Chief Minister has expressed his dissatisfaction with the report, due to the committee finding in favour of the authority and its policies and procedures, and has consequently ordered that the report be buried?

Mr MANZIE: A point of order, Mr Speaker!

Mr SPEAKER: Order! When a point of order is raised and I raise my voice, I would ask the honourable member for Stuart to accede to that request. What is the point of order?

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, under standing order 112, questions should not be asked that relate to hypothetical matters or request an expression of opinion. The member for Stuart was promoting a hypothetical situation concerning the Chief Minister, and requested an opinion from me of what the Chief Minister thought about the matter.

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I do not believe there is a point of order. Whilst the honourable member may have made some remarks which could be construed as hypothetical, his specific request or question was whether the report would be tabled.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, following your ruling, I will certainly address that part of the question, which I believe was in order. I have received the report and have requested that a Cabinet submission be prepared so that Cabinet can determine what action it will take. At this stage, I intend to recommend that the report be circulated in certain quarters before its release and tabling in this Assembly. That will allow me to receive comments which will enable me to make ...

Mr Ede: Is the Sacred Sites Protection Authority one of them?

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I am endeavouring to answer a question, but if the member for Stuart wants to provide further information to the House regarding the matter, I am quite happy to sit down and let him do so. I thought that he wished to elicit some information about when the report would be tabled. If he would like to remain silent, I will provide that information. However, if he wants to provide his own information, I am quite happy for him to do so.

Mr Speaker, I intend to present Cabinet with some options regarding the tabling of the report. When Cabinet has made its decision, I will be able to proceed further.

National AIDS Forum

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Recently the Federal AIDS Taskforce and the National Advisory Committee on AIDS were replaced by the National AIDS Forum. Is he able to advise the House whether the Northern Territory is represented on that National AIDS Forum?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am able to advise that a Darwin woman has been appointed to the National AIDS Forum. She is Miss Bernadette Hudson, the team leader in the AIDS education program for Aborigines in remote communities run by the Northern Territory Department of Health and Community Services. I have mentioned the tremendous success of that program in previous sittings of this Assembly.

Apart from being the only Northern Territory representative, Bernadette is the only Aboriginal person appointed to the forum, which comprises members of the National Council on AIDS. In my opinion, she is an excellent choice to represent the Northern Territory. She has worked in the area of Aboriginal health for several years and will be able to provide valuable advice from an Aboriginal point of view. Her appointment to this federal body is an indication of the high regard in which the Territory's Aboriginal AIDS Education Program is held in Australia and overseas. Bernadette was, in fact, one of the key people in establishing the program in remote communities. Development of this unique education program was a team effort under the capable guidance of Dr Shirley Hendy of the Royal Darwin Hospital's Communicable Diseases Centre. Bernadette will be working alongside people such as Professor Peter Karmel, Chairman of the Australian Institute of Health, providing advice to the federal government on AIDS issues. These include medical, legal and scientific aspects as well as education, research guidelines and policy matters. Bernadette will be able to contribute a great deal to the forum's work. She will continue to head teams visiting remote communities in the Territory program. I was concerned that her appointment might mean that she could not continue her work here. However, part of the value of her knowledge in the forum will be her feedback on the effectiveness of the program she is involved in here.

Earlier this year, at an international conference in Sydney, Bernadette presented a paper on AIDS in Aboriginal communities. She has been invited by the World Health Organisation to act as an AIDS consultant to the Pacific island nations. I am very pleased indeed with Bernadette's success in this field. She, among others, is very dedicated to the task of educating Aboriginal people on the AIDS situation. It is tremendous to see the work of an esteemed Territorian being recognised at the national and international level.

Roadside Advertising Signs

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I would like him to assure me that, in the compilation of his department's report on roadside advertising, full consideration will be given to the concerns of small businesses in the Litchfield Shire and in country towns along the Stuart Highway for whom such signs are the most productive form of advertising.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the honourable member is undoubtedly aware that the anticipated policy on roadside advertising has been proposed by a committee which has broad community representation. That policy has been circulated in the community for comment. Sadly, not much objective comment has come from the community. However, the Department of Transport and Works has summarised and assessed the comment which has been made and is preparing a submission for Cabinet to enable the formulation of a policy which will not only take into account the needs of the small businesses referred to by the honourable member but, just as importantly, address safety issues such as location and size of roadside signs. There are some difficulties in balancing all considerations but the matter will be before Cabinet before too much longer.

Screw-worm Fly

Mr REED to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Can he advise whether screw-worm monitoring procedures have resulted in the capture of any further flies?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased to be able to advise the House that monitoring to date has not produced any further evidence of screw-worm flies in this area. I will briefly outline for honourable members the monitoring program that is under way at present.

A grid of 26 traps has been set up over an area with a 50 km radius from the Port of Darwin. Whenever possible, these traps have been cleared daily, with flies being identified on the same day. Six sentinel animals, each of which has an incision on the rump, are located at Berrimah Agricultural Research Centre, the Angliss abattoir and the police stables. Stock inspectors have inspected domesticated animals in the Berrimah-Howard Springs area and will continue inspecting concentrations of stock. Local authorities, Emergency Services, the Conservation Commission, police and health officials have all been briefed on the subject. The Commonwealth and interstate authorities have been made aware of the situation and the actions that have been taken.

Discussions between the Department of Industries and Development and the Agricultural Quarantine Inspection Service have taken place to improve the disinfestation of stock and stock vessels arriving at the Port of Darwin.

Reconfirmation has been sought of the identification of the specimens that were sent to Canberra which first brought word back that they were indeed screw-worm flies. I point out to honourable members that the science of identification of insects is very complex. At times, there are incorrect identifications. Because this is such a serious matter, we will continue to have the insects studied by experts to ensure absolutely that they are the screw-worm fly. It would be a tragedy if they ever get a hold on mainland Australia. We are doing everything that can reasonably be expected. I am pleased to say that, to date, the results have proved completely negative.

TDZ Consultancy Payments

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Did the Trade Development Zone Authority pay nearly $0.5m in consultancy fees in 1986-87 and was one of the chief recipients of those fees Mr K.K. Yeung who was paid a retainer to attract business to the Trade Development Zone plus fees for obtaining letters of intent, plus a success fee for business established at the zone, plus reimbursement of his costs incurred? Are those fees to Mr K.K. Yeung and other consultants approved by the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority and how many businesses have been established at the Trade Development Zone as a result of Mr Yeung's efforts.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the nature of the agreement with Asian consultants who promote the Trade Development Zone is well recorded in Hansard, as the Leader of the Opposition would well know. I recall rereading those questions and answers in Hansard not so long ago and most of the information that he seeks is there.

The fees are paid under contracts which are approved by the Trade Development Zone Authority. As for individual accounts submitted under those contracts, there would be a hierarchy of approval procedures in the Trade Development Zone administration such as accord with the usual audit and accounting requirements.

As for the people for whom K.K. Yeung could claim credit, there is a very long list of people whom we are dealing with continuously as prospective tenants of the zone. In addition, what we have always termed the flagship of the Trade Development Zone, Darwin International Textiles, is a Hong Kong company that operates also in China and Guam. It resulted from promotional activities in Hong Kong and K.K. Yeung is certainly very much to the fore in all of the trade zone's promotions and follow-up contact in that region. It would be unfair of the Leader of the Opposition even to hint that funds paid to this consultant to date as reflected in actual people in the zone to date is all that the Northern Territory has for its money. As I have pointed out in this House many times, as have previous ministers responsible for the zone, you cannot promote a trade development zone in a place like Asia overnight and expect to obtain instant results. The exercise is long and expensive and requires governments to have the courage to follow through. Every state in Australia has agency representation in Hong Kong trying to attract investors and offering incentives. We are not alone in this expensive exercise. We are trying to promote the Northern Territory in order to create employment and diversify our economy which is the very reason for the zone's existence.

Forfeiture of Vehicles under Liquor Act

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TOURISM

Instances have occurred where a vehicle owner has had no knowledge that his vehicle was being utilised for the carriage of liquor into a restricted area. On discovery, the vehicle has been forfeited although a person other than the owner has committed the offence. Does he intend taking any action in relation to the mandatory forfeiture of vehicles seized in connection with offences against the restricted areas provisions of the Liquor Act and why should the owner be unduly penalised by loss of the vehicle?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, late last year Cabinet noted the report by Dr d'Abbs on restricted areas and it directed that the relevant authorities and departments consider the recommendations and report back to Cabinet. The report judged the restricted areas provisions to be a qualified success but it suggested amendments to various provisions, particularly in respect of those dealing with forfeiture. A working party of the authorities and the departments has met and it considers that it is necessary that there be extensive consultation with the affected communities before any final report is made to Cabinet on the restricted areas provisions. However, I can foreshadow that the working group is to recommend the policy that the restricted areas provisions be amended to allow some mechanism so that forfeited goods - for example, vehicles - will be able to be returned in situations where the vehicle clearly does not belong to the offender or such a minimal amount of alcohol is involved as to make that forfeiture draconian. Obviously, there is majority support for forfeiture to remain for those offenders actually undertaking grog-running. I believe that this is a very commonsense approach to the problem in the communities, and the resolution of this problem will be to the satisfaction of the communities.

Martin Committee Report on Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

In answer to my previous question, he stated that he would circulate the report so that he could obtain comments on it. Will he undertake to this House to circulate the report to the authority itself so that the authority will be able to comment on it and make a submission before the matter goes to Cabinet?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart must have listened to some extent and picked up a portion of my answer. As a matter of fact, I intend to circulate the inquiry report to a number of areas, and I believe that it would be beneficial to ask the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority to comment on the recommendations of the report as I believe it would be appropriate also for certain Commonwealth agencies to comment on it. I shall be asking for those comments so that I may present them to my Cabinet colleagues when I present the entire report together with recommendations. I will advise the House that it may be appropriate, after those recommendations have been made and as a result of my Cabinet discussions, that some changes be made to the legislation. Who knows?

One of the groups to whom I will not be giving prior notice in this regard is the opposition because, unfortunately, members of the opposition have a habit of trying to engender conflict in respect of government and Aboriginal relations. Their prior record has been most unfortunate in this regard. This morning's question time and the nature of the questions about the Martin Inquiry are indicative of the attempts by the opposition to create such conflict. However, I will be asking for the report to be commented on by the appropriate people. I presume that the members of the opposition have a copy of the report and that it is a legal copy, because they are pretty good at obtaining and stealing information from reports and ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I ask the minister to withdraw that remark.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw the remark, but I consider that there probably is a prior knowledge ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order, the honourable minister will withdraw without comment.

Mr MANZIE: I withdrew the remark about stolen documents.

Mr EDE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister has withdrawn a remark regarding stolen documents. He made a specific assertion that we were stealing, and that is the remark that must be withdrawn and withdrawn unreservedly.

Mr SPEAKER: I do not believe there is a point of order. I think there was only one reference to 'steal' or 'stolen'.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I believe that there is a knowledge of the contents of the document amongst the members of the opposition, but I will not reflect on how that information has been obtained by them.

However, I intend to proceed with this matter in a steady way, to enable the appropriate people to give their comments regarding the matter. I wish to ensure that, at the end of the day, we have a system regarding the protection of sacred sites in the Territory that works effectively and without conflict, and that achieves the objective which is - and all members of this House would be in agreement with the objective - to ensure that sites of significance to Aboriginal people are protected. We want to end with a situation which does away with the conflict and the problems that the present act seems to present to government and to all Territorians. I hope that we can resolve the situation to the benefit of all Territorians.

Contract for Self-Government Promotion

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Can he confirm that the contract to promote the government's 10 years of self-congratulation - sorry - 10 years of self-government will cost taxpayers about $300 000, and will he explain to the House how senior CLP figures Helen Galton and Graeme Lewis and CLP secretary John Hare are involved in that contract? Thirdly, how will he convince taxpayers that their funds will not be used to promote the Chief Minister and the Country Liberal Party in that exercise?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, a question of almost identical format was asked yesterday and I advised the honourable member that, when I obtained the information, I would answer it. I will do so when I receive the information.

Neighbourhood Watch Scheme

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

Last December, he announced the introduction of a trial Neighbourhood Watch Scheme. What progress has so far been made towards the introduction of that scheme?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, most elements of the Neighbourhood Watch Scheme are already in place in the Northern Territory through the CLP government's community policing initiatives. The modified Neighbourhood Watch Scheme which I announced in the last sittings aims to deter crime, especially housebreaking and sexual assaults in homes, to improve community education on home security and crime prevention and to heighten community awareness of suspicious behaviour. Three areas in Darwin's northern suburbs have been identified for examination for possible inclusion in the Neighbourhood Watch pilot program. These areas are Nightcliff, Millner and the Leanyer-Woodleigh Gardens area. The actual trial will involve 2 of those areas.

I might say that, when I announced this pilot program, the Leader of the Opposition made a public statement to the effect that the profile of his own electorate had changed and that it was not an appropriate area for a trial because the kids had grown up and, as a result, crime rates would not be as bad as they might have been a few years ago. I urge the Leader of the Opposition to spend a bit more time in his electorate because I must advise him that it has the highest crime rate in Darwin.

Mr Smith: You are blaming me for that, are you?

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I am certainly not blaming the Leader of the Opposition for the crime rate. I am just giving him a bit of electorate information to assist him in his job as the local member for Millner, and urging him to spend a bit more time in his electorate. If he believes in a low crime rate in Millner, obviously he is not spending much time in his own electorate. It is sad to say that Nightcliff has the second highest crime rate in Darwin. That has been a matter of some concern to me as the local member, as I am sure it is to the Leader of the Opposition who is one of my constituents.

In the development of this program, letterbox drops were made about 2 weeks ago explaining the basic elements of the Neighbourhood Watch Scheme. Door-to-door interviews were to be conducted in those areas during the weekend of 21-22 May. By the end of this month, police expect to be able to choose 2 areas for the trial. That will be followed by public meetings in those areas to get the program under way. The proposal is for a starting date of 1 July. The introduction of the scheme has already attracted interest from insurance companies wishing to provide sponsorship.

Neighbourhood Watch relies for its success on support from the community, and that cannot be emphasised enough. I urge people to participate actively in this Neighbourhood Watch pilot program because it will only work if the police and the community work together. I can advise that, in my role as the member for Nightcliff, I will be encouraging the Nightcliff community to become actively involved in any trial program that may be conducted in my electorate. If the Millner area happens to be chosen, I am certain the Leader of the Opposition will provide similar support in that area. If it is in the Woodleigh Gardens area, the member for Leanyer would be only too pleased to actively encourage people. It will need promotion from within the community to get it off the ground. Unfortunately, previous trial programs such as that involving the engraving of valuable possessions with identifying numbers have received very limited community response. I note that the Leader of the Opposition is nodding his head. That trial was conducted in the Millner electorate and I think there were only 1 or 2 responses.

Mr Smith: No, there were more than that.

Mr HATTON: There were certainly no more than 5.

Mr Smith: There were 20.

Mr HATTON: The police gave me a number lower than that. In any case, the number was far too low to have been of any effective value.

As I said earlier, Neighbourhood Watch is one of a number of initiatives in our community policing program aimed at crime prevention. Those initiatives include the Cops on Campus program, the work of the Police and Citizens Youth Club and a range of other activities throughout the Territory. The overall aim is to involve the community in its own security and crime prevention rather than adopting what, unfortunately, has become a modern trend in which the community washes its hands of problems on the basis that they are matters for the police. The fact is that, if we want to have a safe society in which crime is avoided and minimised, every member of society needs to become actively involved and accept his or her responsibilities as a citizen in this area, as much as in any other area of society.

Letter Circulated by Acting President of CLP

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

I refer him once again to the now very public letter written by the Acting President of the Country Liberal Party. In point 11 of the letter, the acting president writes: 'I have had a gutful of the antics in this party, both organisational and parliamentary wing. If you want me to remain in the presidency, be prepared to buckle down and work towards good government'. Now that the acting president has joined the rest of the community in recognising this problem, will the government give a commitment to lift its game and start working towards good government?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition is so bereft of anything to say that he has to quote an internal letter of the CLP which discusses party matters which have absolutely no relevance to this House. I can assure the Leader of the Opposition that we are continually working to provide good government for the Northern Territory and to improve the performance of government generally. We will continue to do that in the future. There is one thing that is absolutely certain: the community has absolutely no faith in the Leader of the Opposition or his cohorts who are regarded as a joke in this society.

Local Government Scheme

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

In the early days of self-government, I was involved in the introduction of local government within Aboriginal communities. The minister has now reaffirmed a program to encourage Aboriginal communities to join the local government scheme. Can he advise how many Aboriginal communities have joined the scheme and are there many communities still giving consideration to the scheme?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, local government is very much in the news in the Northern Territory this week with the local government elections coming up. Perhaps the Northern Territory is the only place where local government is really in a growth mode. 12 community government councils are now established in the Northern Territory and that is an increase of 4. A further 4 community government councils are to be established in the very near future as well. Progress is being made towards another 12 and those are spread right throughout the Northern Territory from Yuendumu, Ngukurr, Galiwinku, Gapuwiyak, Hermannsburg, Santa Teresa, Batchelor, Adelaide River, Daly River, Port Keats, Dagaragu and Kalkaringi to Yirrkala.

If the member for Arafura were here, he would be able to tell us how good community government is for communities in the Northern Territory. The people at Nguui adopted community government very recently and have gone ahead in leaps and bounds in that very short period of time. Indeed, the member for Arafura was the immediate past president of the Nguui Council.

There is no doubt at all that the Aboriginal people of the Northern Territory are embracing local government with great anticipation of what it will bring them in the way of being able to cater to their own needs. The community government scheme in the Northern Territory is being looked at by all the states because it has so much to offer, and yet we find that those organisations that are established in the Northern Territory to cater for the needs of Aboriginal people living on Aboriginal land, the land councils, are working actively against community government in the Northern Territory.

Of recent times, we have been close to a community government scheme at Belyuen and at Ngukurr, yet the land councils have gone to those communities after representations from the Office of Local Government over a period of years to establish community government in those areas. The land councils have told blatant lies about the ability of community government to cater for the needs of the people in those areas. They have said that it does not give a community power to make by-laws for its community that have the strength of the Territory law behind them. They have told them a range of things such as that and, in fact, they have frightened the people of Belyuen and Ngukurr and had them write letters under duress saying that they would not take up community government at this time. Within a couple of weeks, when they had had it explained to them, they wrote back indicating that they really want to embrace community government because it will give them the ability to look after their own needs.

I believe that the land councils should stay right out of what is not their business. They are responsible for land. We have seen an Aboriginal and Torres Strait Islander proposal that is fully supported by the land councils and is not based on boundaries worked out over time in consultation with the people. With community government, we have exactly that in place. It takes years of consultation to put a community government scheme in place because it deals with traditional boundaries. Then we find that body, which is supposedly established to look after the needs of Aboriginals, actively working against it. It is shameful. I do not believe it is reflecting the wishes of the Aboriginal people. I am sure that, if the member for Arafura were here, he would back me up on this. I know that it is his view and the view of many other people on the benches opposite but they do not have the guts to say so.

Mr Ede: Make a ministerial statement.

Mr McCARTHY: They do not have the guts to say that they support community government. It is supported around the country except by the land councils because they believe it will undermine their own position. I think it is shameful. I would ask the members opposite to get up and say that it is shameful because they know that it is. They know that the land councils are out to protect their own meagre interests. I believe that is disgraceful and I think that my statement on that should have the support of every member of this House. Community government in the Northern Territory will grow because it has the support of the Aboriginal people.

Mr Leo interjecting.

Mr McCARTHY: It may not have the support of the member for Nhulunbuy ...

Mr Leo: It certainly does have, but if you will not listen to the problems, there is no point in trying. You do not know what you are talking about.

Mr McCARTHY: Where are the problems?

Mr Speaker, the process of getting community government up and running in the Northern Territory will take time. It will take time to have it all in place, but let us not have this organisation set up to support Aboriginal people working against us.

Constitutional Referendum

Mr LEO to CHIEF MINISTER

Noting the long and detailed answer he provided yesterday on the matter of land acquisition in the coming referendum on the Australian Constitution, I would like to ask a very straightforward question. Does he support the concept of one vote one value, will he support the proposed amendments to the Constitution which will enshrine in the Australian Constitution the concept of one vote one value and, if he will not support that principle or, indeed, that referendum, why not?

Mr COULTER: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Under standing order 114, a question fully answered cannot be renewed. That question repeats virtually verbatim one that has been answered fully.

Mr LEO: Mr Speaker, I would like to speak to the point of order. I recall quite clearly the question asked yesterday and the Hansard will bear me out, I am sure, with absolutely scrupulous clarity. In fact, I asked the Chief Minister what his government's position was. Now I am asking the Chief Minister what his position is.

Mr Hatton: You cannot ask for an opinion.

Mr LEO: I am not asking for an opinion; I am asking what his position is. Does he support the principle of one vote one value? It is very simple.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. There is a difference between yesterday's and today's questions.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the question contains a number of potential conflicts. I am asked, firstly, whether I support the principle of one vote one value and, secondly, whether I support the referendum motion on one vote one value. Of course, that is working on the presumption that the referendum bill provides appropriately for the recognition of one vote one value. A very simple, almost simplistic argument, is put forward by members opposite when they say that one vote one value, in a democracy, means that every person is equal and therefore each vote that is cast should have exactly the same power as any other vote. The fundamental principle underlying that is that electorates should all be of the same size. As I understand it, what that proposal is all about is to go from a 20% tolerance to a 10% tolerance.

That is what the argument is about. It is also to enable the federal Constitution to impose conditions on the sovereign states of Australia. As do a multitude of these questions in the referendum, it raises a multitude of questions about where our federation rests today. Are we to accelerate the drift towards a centralist government in Australia or are we to support the principle of a federation of states in Australia? Those are very serious questions that need to be analysed properly and carefully, as do the issues. One of those issues ...

Members interjecting.

Mr Leo: You really are a wimp. You are a wimp.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for Nhulunbuy will withdraw that remark.

Mr Leo: I withdraw, Mr Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER: I would advise honourable members, and this is not the first time, that this part of the parliamentary day is broadcast and, despite the fact that some members might not want to hear either the question or the answer, I believe a fair number of Territorians in the community do, and I ask all members to maintain silence during both the question and the reply.

Mr HATTON: To the interjection from the member for Barkly, perhaps the town of Tennant Creek might be interested in hearing the answer if people there listen to their radios.

Mr Tuxworth: They wouldn't listen twice.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I thank you for those comments.

The member for Nhulunbuy, who is chuckling away in the corner over there, is quite obviously trying to put forward some simplistic question ...

Mr Leo: I just want to know what you are doing.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, if I am to answer the question comprehensively, I will deal with the issues that are involved in such apparently simple questions as, 'Do you support one vote one value?'. As I have said, my government has not yet fully considered the position of the balance. Australia has an imbalance with 80% of its population tucked into a 10% corner in the south east. If all electorates were the same size, power would flow increasingly to the major cities. The concentration of political power in the cities and inevitably the concentration of political attention on the cities and away from the country are serious matters that need to be considered. I know the Labor Party has no interest in this question because it sees its power base as being in the cities.

I am not prepared to make a clear and unequivocal statement because it is essential that the people in the rural areas of Australia, who earn most of the wealth for Australia, should have a reasonable, political voice in the national, state and Territory parliaments. If that means stepping away from the pure concept of one vote one value, so be it. To answer quite simply, I am not prepared to say that I am for or against the referendum. In broad principle, I agree with one vote one value, but it must be balanced against ensuring that there is adequate political representation for the people in the more remote areas of this country. I am not prepared to make an unequivocal statement until I and my government have properly analysed that question.

May Day Celebrations

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

During his address to a May Day gathering in Darwin on Monday 2 May, author Frank Hardy stated: 'The Northern Territory should be proud that it is the only state in Australia that has a public holiday and calls it May Day'. Could the minister confirm if Mr Hardy's statement is accurate and advise in what manner the other states of the Commonwealth celebrate the day that we in the Northern Territory refer to as May Day?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am led to believe that the May Day celebrations were originally a harvest celebration in Merry Old England. Later, the Union of the Soviet Socialist Republics liberated May Day to celebrate its successful October revolution.

Mr Smith: That is nonsense.

Mr Bell: It was in the 1880s.

Mr McCARTHY: You better consult your encyclopaedia. The disparity between October and May results from the western world's Gregorian calendar which is out of step with the one used by the Soviets.

In the later 1940s, we in Australia appear to have done our own holiday duffing when the 40-hour week was introduced. Typically, we could not agree when to celebrate this momentous occasion. This year, Western Australia and Tasmania have a holiday on 7 March, Victoria on 14 March, Queensland and the Northern Territory on 2 May, New South Wales and the ACT on 3 October and South Australia on 10 October. In all but the Northern Territory, it is known as Labour Day. The 10 October holiday in South Australia is getting a little bit closer to the actual revolution. While we did not have rocket launchers parading through the civic square, workers did manage to burn a few effigies this year. I do not believe the date should be cause for concern however ...

Mr Setter: Subversion.

Mr McCARTHY: ... in the hotbed of Jingili. I can assure the honourable member that the Territory is not the only place to celebrate this holiday, nor is it a sign of impending revolution.

National Wage Increase

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

Given that the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission awarded a $6 wage increase to all wage earners on 2 February this year, that the draft orders were ratified in the Territory on 3 March and that the private sector paid the increase to all its workers within 2 weeks of receiving advice from the commission, why has the government still not paid the wage increase to its own workers over 3½ months later?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not aware that we have not paid it to all workers. In fact, we have paid it to some. As far as I am aware, those few that are still outstanding are refusing, for whatever reason, to take it. I will have that checked. These workers have ongoing disputes over conditions and, for that reason, have refused to accept any of the other benefits that have been granted to them. I will have the matter checked and come back to the honourable member.

Kormilda College

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Over the past few days, there has been considerable media speculation about education. Statements have been made on the airwaves that Kormilda College is to be handed over to private interests. Will he comment on that statement?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. There has indeed been some misinformation circulating about Kormilda College. The current position is that Kormilda College is in a transition phase from a government school to a private school. The next step towards privatisation has been agreed to by the Northern Territory government. I am sure that honourable members would be aware of the concerns that government had in relation to the cost of students at that particular college and the need for it to provide access for traditional Aboriginals. The college will be handed over to an interim board and that board is in place - Kormilda College Incorporated. That will occur on 1 July.

As the minister, I will still have control in respect of the activities of Kormilda College. However, the direction that we are moving in is to have Kormilda College completely privatised by the beginning of next year. There is some concern about how that is to occur and I will be paying particular attention to that in the near future. The agreement that has been reached will allow the school to expand its efforts to attract enrolments, particularly from traditional Aboriginal areas. I would say again that it is unfortunate that there has been a great deal of misinformation. The Teachers Federation has made comments to the effect that Kormilda is operating well short of its capacity. Even the member for Stuart has commented in relation to the capacity at Kormilda College, mentioning a figure of 450 vacancies.

Mr Ede: I said it needs another 450 students to be viable.

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, far from having difficulty in filling places, Kormilda has a waiting list. It is limited in the sense that it does not have sufficient classroom space to take in a full complement of boarding students at present.

The government is giving Kormilda the opportunity to obtain funds from the private sector. The school will also have the normal assistance from government by means of the 10% interest subsidy and 5% capital repayments. The school intends to have classrooms built for the senior secondary area, Years 11 and 12, by the start of next year. As we have been saying for some time, schools like this give people a greater range of educational choices and take a load off the government system.

I congratulate all those involved in the Kormilda exercise. It is not an easy task. We have to ensure that the needs of traditional Aboriginals are met. The government has paid particular attention to that and will continue to do so. FEPPi has been closely involved and there has been a great deal of consultation in the communities about the direction Kormilda is moving in. FEPPi's members are to be congratulated for the way they have been involved in that consultation process. I believe that Peter Harris is the person who will bring the Kormilda project together and I wish him every success, together with the college staff.

I have said that I see Kormilda as complementary to and not opposing the Darwin International Grammar School. It is important that both facilities exist. The Darwin International Grammar School is also looking at attracting Aboriginal students but the situation at Kormilda ...

Mr Ede: There are not enough kids to go around.

Mr HARRIS: That is nonsense! The member for Stuart should curl up in a corner following his remarks about the Darwin International Grammar School the other night. I ask honourable members to read what he had to say and to look at my response. Unlike members of the opposition, we are interested in students in the Northern Territory. We want them to pursue their education in the Northern Territory and we will be continuing to follow that objective. We will provide opportunities, whether the member for Stuart likes it or not, for Aboriginal and non-Aboriginal students to have access to education in the Northern Territory. This government fully supports developments at Kormilda. We also want to make it very clear that we will ensure that Kormilda looks after the interests of the traditional Aboriginal people.

Royal Darwin Hospital - Loss of Accreditation

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

If he has read the 1987 Annual Report of the Royal Darwin Hospital Management Board, he will have encountered the following statement: 'There is a loss of accreditation of the Royal Darwin Hospital, due principally to a shortfall in quality insurance programs and the failure of the previous board to examine the perceived full extent of its power under the Hospital Management Boards Act'. What does he intend to do about this?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am aware of that situation. It is a matter which has been discussed previously in this House. I suppose the best way of describing the accreditation process is as one of peer assessment. We are certainly keen to gain that accreditation again and the Chief Medical Officer is working steadfastly towards that goal. Let me say, however, that it has absolutely nothing to do with the actual provision of services to the public at the Royal Darwin Hospital. It is an issue of peer assessment and accreditation will not be given until the professionals go through the process. It must also be noted that a great number of major hospitals throughout Australia do not have this accreditation either.

Katherine Water Supply

Mr REED to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

An article in last night's NT News suggested that the Katherine water supply was contaminated. What action has been taken by the Water Directorate of the Power and Water Authority to ensure that the water supply in Katherine is not contaminated, and can he assure the people of Katherine that their water supply does not pose a health risk?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the NT News of 24 May 1988 indeed carried an article under the heading 'Diarrhoea Incidence Raises Fear'. At first, I was not sure whether it was referring to the performance of the opposition in the Legislative Assembly yesterday, but I read further and discovered that it referred to the Katherine water supply. The Power and Water Authority has denied the press report that pollution in the Katherine water supply is causing residents to suffer from diarrhoea. Katherine's water supply is sterilised and filtered, and is considered to be one of the cleanest in the Territory. Samples taken yesterday at 9 different locations and incubated last night indicated that the supply was clean of organisms. As the dry season approached, Katherine's water supply was blended with more bore water and some residents might have noticed mild effects as a result of that. This was done to ensure there would be no danger of the supply running short during the dry season. Katherine's water supply has been tested and the level of chlorine throughout the system was found to be sufficient to ensure disinfection.

Officers of the Power and Water Authority have liaised with health authorities on the matter. They have been advised that 8 cases of diarrhoea have been treated at the local health centre and all these involved travellers. I understand that the pharmacist who advised the NT News is personally afflicted with giardia and automatically blamed the water supply without having the facts checked. The Minister for Health and Community Services may wish to elaborate further on the matter.

Trade Development Zone

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

In November 1986 the then Minister for Industries and Development, the member for Flynn, stated that 12 firms had signed letters of intent to enter the Trade Development Zone as the result of work done by the authority's sub-consultants. Can the minister confirm that, 18 months later, only 2 of the 12 companies have commenced operations in the zone? Secondly, does he accept that a failure rate of 10 out of 12 is commercial nonsense, and whom does he hold responsible? Thirdly, can he confirm that the sub-consultants were paid fees for getting those letters of intent signed and that those fees total approximately $90 000?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, clearly I cannot provide all that information off the cuff. It is probably correct that 2 companies of the 12 which signed letters of intent have commenced operations in the zone. I do not think that it is true to say that 10 of the 12 have failed. The Trade Development Zone Authority is working constantly on the people who have been to the Northern Territory to examine what the zone has to offer for them, and various negotiations have been occurring continuously with those people, even with people who came down in the first group back in 1986. Negotiations are taking place with these people. There is a range of reasons why the negotiations are sometimes very slow and why sometimes people who are brought fairly well up to the wire, as it were, with letters of intent, subsequently do not proceed. I believe it would be untrue to say, without close examination, that 10 of the 12 have walked away never to return.

In fact, we are now dealing with 1 particular applicant who had reached the stage of a B and P application which was rejected in Hong Kong, we believe, without good grounds. A subsequent appeal has indicated that the gentleman can reapply and possibly be accepted. Thus, there is a possibility that even those who seem to have fallen away completely may come back into the system again. It is very difficult to say exactly who has fallen out of the system totally.

As to the honourable member's question about the amount of money that has been paid to consultants as a result of the issue of letters of intent by those people, I cannot give him that information off the cuff.

Public Service Unattached List

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for LABOUR ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

How many public servants remain on the so-called unattached list and what action is the Public Service Commissioner's office taking to place those public servants in full-time, permanent and productive positions?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the last figures that I have been given on those people who are excess or potentially excess is 60 or thereabouts. I do not have up-to-date figures in my hand, but there were approximately 60 people on that list. The Department of Labour and Administrative Services, through the Public Service Commissioner, has responsibility for attempting to place those people in positions as they become available within the public service. Unfortunately, a number of the people who appear on the excess list are people with professional qualifications and it is very difficult to place them within the public service. There is a procedure that has to be undertaken with people who cannot be placed, but it is the government's intention to place as many as possible. That is an ongoing process. We have brought that number down from about 150 some 3 months ago and therefore there is progress in that regard.

Task Force Report on Aboriginal Health Workers

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Has he received the task force report completed in February 1987 recommending a career structure for Aboriginal health workers in the Department of Health and Community Services? If he has, when does he intend to make a decision on it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, certainly I have. It will come before Cabinet at its next meeting, on 7 June.

Crop Production 1988

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Given the wide variation this year in the wet season, what are the latest estimates on crop production in the Northern Territory and the effect this will have on Top End users?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, early season conditions in our cropping areas were generally favourable and we were expecting a very good cropping season this year. Dry conditions late in December and January reduced the establishment of later planted crops. However, the prolonged wet conditions delayed rice establishment in the Adelaide River area. Just under 9000 ha of crops was established with the majority of this area being grain, sorghum and maize. All districts - the Douglas Daly area, the Katherine area and the Adelaide River area - experienced a short dry spell in January and a prolonged dry spell from late February through March. Although total seasonal rainfall was 95% of average in Katherine and 65% of average in the Douglas Daly, the dry spell particularly late in the season generally reduced the performance of most crops.

As usual, there is considerable variation in crop performance depending on local, seasonal and management factors. Harvesting of crops has commenced and final yields will be known when harvesting is completed in the next 4 to 6 weeks. Maize and soya bean crops were severely affected by the dry spells. Maize particularly is flowering, and soya bean suffered seedling mortality after successfully establishing.

Sorghum and mung bean crops in both the Katherine and the Douglas Daly districts are variable. Some crops sown earlier have yielded or are expected to yield well with slightly over 5 t per hectare being harvested from one paddock of sorghum in the Douglas Daly. Reduced or severely reduced yields are expected in the Katherine district, particularly from crops sown late or in areas that experienced poorer rainfall. A similar situation exists for sesame with a few better crops and many poorer crops.

The only commercial peanut crop grown this year has performed excellently and has a yield slightly over 3 t per hectare from the area harvested to date. This top quality crop has attracted a premium price from the Queensland Peanut Marketing Board and part of it may be retained as seed for sowing in the Northern Territory and in Queensland next year.

Grain head moulds developed on grain sorghum crops in the Douglas Daly district when humid and wet conditions coincided with crop maturation. Such moulds occur fairly frequently in the tropics and have the effect of reducing the palatability and quality of the grain which is important for our product as it is used for animal feedstock. Mould can also produce mycotoxins which can be poisonous to animals. Unfortunately, farmers in the Top End have suffered adverse growing conditions for the third year in a row, resulting in reduced yield and a total crop well below expectations of the area planted. Plantings which were expected to yield in the order of 11 000 t of sorghum and maize are now expected to produce less than 6000 t. The requirements of Top End users of these types of grain are for approximately 10 000 t, thus a significant shortfall exists between the anticipated harvest and the end user requirements.

Replacement of Ambulance at Yulara

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

He will be relieved to know that my question is not about radiology equipment. It is in relation to an equally embarrassing problem for the minister and the government. I refer to the government's election promise to replace the Yulara ambulance. I preface my question by reminding the honourable minister of my comments in last night's adjournment debate when I commented that a potentially fatal situation had developed with respect to the petrol fumes and oxygen mixture in the back of the cabin of the ambulance and that the ambulance itself has stripped a distributor shaft.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! What is the question?

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, I simply want to ensure that the minister is in full possession of the facts. When will the government honour its election promise to replace the Yulara ambulance?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am pleased that the honourable member raised this issue. It is interesting to note that he has run out of all information relative to the radiology section of the Royal Darwin Hospital. Last Friday night, at about 8.30 pm, the ambulance was required to do a halfway meet on the Docker River road to collect a patient who apparently had been bitten by a snake. It was a 240 km drive out there so the ambulance did not do too badly.

During the exchange of the patient from one vehicle to another, apparently they needed to stabilise him and ensure that he was fit enough to continue.

For some reason, I am told that the ambulance motor was left running. If you leave the engine running, fumes enter the vehicle itself. On the drive back, the patient was fairly fit but the doctor became sick. He was a little uncomfortable on the way back because fumes had not cleared from the ambulance.

The technical services manager at Yulara investigated the report that there might have been some problem with the fuel system in the vehicle. He took the vehicle out the next morning to test it. He did everything to try to recreate the situation as it had existed on the 280 km journey. He put it through some rigorous tests and, in the process, did some damage to the gears. The vehicle is broken down at the moment and our technical services people are working on it. I am informed that there is a standby unit there.

As I have said many times in this House, I have had conflicting information from Yulara from all sorts of people. The advice has been from some that they need an ambulance and from others that they do not. I can only take my advice from professional people and, as I told this House a little while ago, I went out to Yulara myself after all sorts of people including the secretary of the department, the regional director and the assistant regional director had been there to negotiate health services in the area. I went there with a deal to put in a new ambulance and I was advised by the doctor that that service was not required, and that it would be a waste of taxpayers' money. I have not had a submission put to me since that time indicating why we would need to replace the ambulance at Yulara.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
National Wage Increase

Mr McCARTHY (Labour, Administrative Services and Local Government): Mr Speaker, to clarify an answer that I gave previously to the member for Stuart on a delay in payment of the wage increase, orders to vary awards had to be raised and signed by the unions and processed through the Conciliation and Arbitration Commission. There was some delay in that regard. It takes up to 4 weeks to reprogram the computer to change approximately 14 000 public servants' pay entitlements. This has been done for most of the groups, and the increase will be paid to those public servants on the next pay day.

Negative Special Grants

Mr SETTER to TREASURER

The federal Treasurer will be bringing down an economic statement this evening. As a result of the Premiers Conference which the honourable Treasurer attended recently, is he optimistic that the Territory will no longer have to face the quaintly-titled negative special grants that have characterised reports of the Grants Commission in the past 2 years?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, all Territorians and, indeed, all Australians will be anxious this evening to hear the economic statement that will be delivered by the federal Treasurer. I am pleased to say that the one-off negative special grant in 1987-88 will not be repeated in 1988-89. There were some positive sides to the Premiers Conference and the amount of money that was received by the Northern Territory, and that included a useful increase in hospital grants. Although the financial assistance grants for 1988-89 have been offset correspondingly, there will be a marginal benefit to the Territory through indexation in the future. There was a higher grant component of the Loans Council capital program, meaning that the Northern Territory will save approximately $1m per year in debt-servicing charges and, most importantly, a very substantial one-off special revenue grant of $57.5m which effectively offsets the Grants Commission recommendations for this year.

With regard to tonight's statements, of course, we have now seen that the Prime Minister is a man of his word and he will not implement a gold tax during the life of this parliament ...

Mr Ede interjecting.

Mr COULTER: We have one of the best and most appropriate forms of mineral royalty payments in Australia, as the member for Stuart has just mentioned. I wonder if his colleagues in Western Australia and Victoria would be pleased to hear of the gold tax and I wonder about the future political careers of the members for Bendigo and Kalgoorlie and a number of other people. We will see what the federal government's reaction to this particular tax will be. Of course, another interesting point that has been leaked, mostly to the newspapers, concerns financial assistance to private schools which has been foreshadowed in tonight's statement. All in all, it will be interesting television tonight, Mr Speaker. We will wait and see what emerges from it.

Policy on M-rated Videos in Schools

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Does his department have a policy on the showing of M-rated videos within schools and, if so, what is it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not aware of the answer to that question at the moment. I will provide the honourable member with an answer at a later hour.

ANSWER TO QUESTION Television for Remote Communities

Mr PERRON (Industries and Development): Mr Speaker, I wish to answer a question asked of me earlier in these sittings by the member for Barkly. The member for Barkly asked whether the government's policy towards the matter of financial assistance to remote communities which wish to broadcast Imparja Television will be reviewed.

Firstly, I would like to give members some brief background information on this issue. I understand that there is some confusion in the community regarding the Broadcasting for Remote Aboriginal Community Scheme, called BRACS, and Imparja's quite separate obligation to provide 8 transmitters for its service in the Territory and South Australia. On 15 September 1987, the federal government announced that BRACS would be implemented to provide remote Aboriginal communities with satellite receive-and-transmit facilities for the provision of ABC radio and television. This financial year, the federal government has allocated $505 000 which will provide services for up to 14 Aboriginal communities. Eventually, 74 communities across Australia are expected to be serviced by BRACS, 28 of them in the Northern Territory. BRACS will not, and has never been intended to, provide communities with the capacity to receive and transmit commercial television. I think that that is a bit of a shame. I understood that people who had facilities to receive ABC satellite television faced a lesser cost to convert to be able to receive Imparja services also, but it seems that the Commonwealth scheme to enable many Aboriginal communities to receive the ABC, in a sense is not designed to help them receive Imparja as well.

As a condition of the central zone RCTS licence, Imparja is under an obligation to provide receive-and-transmit facilities in only 4 Territory communities. Those communities are Alice Springs, Tennant Creek, Katherine and Nguiu. Imparja is also required to provide 4 such sites in South Australia. Imparja is under no obligation to provide those facilities at any other location. Furthermore, I am advised that it does not plan to install such facilities in any other community within the foreseeable future. I hope this has cleared up any confusion that honourable members may have experienced.

Turning to the government's policy on financial assistance to remote communities, neither the federal nor the Northern Territory governments have any form of financial assistance available to remote communities for the transmission of the Imparja service. The federal government will help remote communities on licensing and technical matters but I am advised that this assistance is of a superficial nature. For the present, the Northern Territory government does not intend to provide direct funding to remote communities to enable them to transmit the Imparja or ABC service, as each community would require a transmitter costing approximately $10 000 to $30 000. I understand that the exact price depends on the size of the transmitter required to service the community involved. With conceivably over 100 communities wishing to transmit Imparja in the Territory, the financial scope of such a task would be possibly in the order of $3m. That is certainly beyond the Territory government in today's climate of fiscal restraint.

I am advised, though, that experience in Canada and Alaska has shown that, where a community forms an association to purchase and maintain a television transmitter on a cooperative basis, this has been proven to be the most effective way of providing a satellite television service. Communities which wish to broadcast Imparja or the ABC may wish to take this option which could possibly be pursued through the avenue of the community's local council. I am also advised that individuals can obtain receiving dishes for between $4000 and $8000. A number of houses can then be connected by cable rather than requiring rebroadcast facilities once the signal is received on the ground.

Contract for Self-Government Promotion

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

I remind the Chief Minister that it is now more than 48 hours since I first asked him to provide some simple answers to some simple questions relating to the celebrations of 10 years of self-government. Will he now inform the House whether senior CLP members, John Hare, Graeme Lewis and Helen Galton are involved in the contract to provide public relations for those celebrations through Neilson McCarthy Hare? Is the total promotion contract worth about $300 000? Was the contract awarded through the normal tendering process and, if not, why not? Is this another example of cronyism between the government and its friends in the CLP?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, since the Leader of the Opposition, in the years he has been in parliament, has been unable to identify any examples of cronyism, it is impossible for him to ask whether this is another example. I will confirm that this also is not an example of cronyism. I have undertaken to give the answer. Towards the end of question time today, I will give a comprehensive answer on the arrangements for the public relations and marketing campaign for statehood.

The Leader of the Opposition has been trying to beat up a storm over nothing. He is trying desperately to recover from a disastrous 2 weeks in the Assembly. I can assure him that he has got it wrong again. I will give a complete breakdown on how the contracts were arrived at and how we have worked to ensure that the work goes to local businesses and not interstate businesses.

Road Funding Scheme

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

What is the likely impact on the Territory of the new road funding scheme outlined in last night's economic statement by the federal Treasurer?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am not able to advise in specific terms the outcome of last night's mini-budget statement pertaining to roads. However, a preliminary assessment is that the federal government has pegged back its commitment to roads in 1988-89 from the current $1250m to $1215m and, whilst that is a cut in actual dollars of $35m, in real terms it would represent about $100m. That is a real concern. We are all realists and recognise that there has been a need to curtail overall spending by the federal government. It is unfortunate, however, that a consequence will be that the Northern Territory, which is still developing its road infrastructure, is to be cut short again. Honourable members would be well aware that, following last year's cutbacks, we had a very limited expenditure on new capital works in the roads program and it is quite possible that next year will be tighter still.

Another aspect of the federal Treasurer's announcement was that the previous bicentenary road development fund and the Australian land transport program fund are to be consolidated into a single new fund called the Australian Centennial Roads Development Program. I wonder if that means that the federal government is putting back the road funding system by 100 years!

Mr Bell: It means that Labor will be in government federally for another 100 years.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, I would assume that the member for MacDonnell would be most interested in some of the other features of this new, you-beaut program. Although we do not yet have specific details, we know that there is to be a new category of funding for roads defined as having national significance and high economic benefits.

Mr Bell: The Olgas Road?

Mr FINCH: Unfortunately, it does not include the Olgas Road. It does not include all those roads to the honourable member's remote communities. As far as we can determine, it does not include roads that represent economic development in respect of tourism such as the Kakadu Highway and so on. Hopefully, with a little pressure from our honourable colleagues opposite, and lobbying by all honourable members who have remote electorates, we may be able to have included in this new, you-beaut classification roads that bring significant economic benefits to the Territory. Of course, the preliminary description includes roads, which have high traffic frequency, to ports. As I mentioned the other day, the justification for this is that it will cut the time taken to transport containers to the cities by about 10 minutes, even though it may take 6 weeks to have them cleared from the terminal. I am sure that will give a great boost to the national economy. What it is doing, as far as I can see, and as we feared last year, is pushing the emphasis onto Sydney and Melbourne, providing arterial roads to and from ports and airports for the convenience of those more densely-populated areas. Certainly, this may cut travelling time by about 10 minutes but, at the same time, roads in the electorates of MacDonnell, Stuart, Arnhem, Nhulunbuy and maybe even Barkly, will be put on the back burner. As far as we can ascertain, they do not have priority in the eyes of the federal government.

What we need is a concerted effort by all honourable members to ensure that the federal government is aware of the potential for development in remote areas, and for the need to provide safe and reasonable all-weather access to all communities in the Northern Territory. Hopefully, our honourable colleagues will give some thought to this matter which is critical to the development of our road infrastructure.

Needle Exchange Program to Combat AIDS

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

I remind him of the needle exchange program which is part of the public campaign to prevent the spread of AIDS. My question is in 2 parts. Is he aware that the aiding and abetting provisions of the Criminal Code are an obstruction to this legal exchange program? Secondly, how does he plan to amend legislation to enable the needle exchange program to continue to supply needles without that supply being treated as an offence?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in these 2 weeks of sittings, I think this is the first time that the opposition has been anything like up to the mark. After question time, I will be tabling a bill to amend the Poisons and Dangerous Drug Act. I am sure that all the points that the honourable member has asked about will be covered by that. He will have opportunity to make some input.

I am very much aware of all the impediments to trying to handle the various issues relating to the AIDS or HIV problem in Australia and, for that matter, throughout the world. This government is trying to address all of those problems in a responsible way. We are very much aware of the problems with AIDS and of the need to arm the police with sufficient legislation to enable them to combat the illegal use of drugs. As I say, I will be tabling a bill after question time.

Federal Lands Acquisition Bill

Mr HANRAHAN to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I note that the federal Minister for Administrative Services, Hon Stewart West, has introduced a Lands Acquisition Bill into the federal parliament and that the legislation would have the effect of allowing the Commonwealth to set up a federal mining regime for the first time. Does he see this action as an intrusion into the rights of the states and the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this is a timely question indeed. I have with me the speech which was delivered last night by Hon Stewart West on this particular issue. It is frightening as a matter that affects state rights and the rights of people in the Northern Territory. The Commonwealth government was established to look after a couple of things. Our founding fathers decided that we could trust it with the post office, the army, customs and immigration. Today, it is responsible for 177 different organisations and departments. It has an education department - with no students. It has a very large bureaucracy involved in health matters - and no patients. It would appear, from this legislation which is before the federal parliament, that it will be involved in mining.

There are some very frightening aspects of this policy, including compulsory acquisition. Clause 41 of the legislation that was tabled last evening states that compulsory acquisitions are to be authorised by the minister rather than by the Governor-General as is the current requirement. Not only can it become involved in mining, it can rip off any bit of land it wants anywhere in Australia to establish a mine. Not that it will, Mr Speaker. What we are concerned about is that it will take over all the heavily mineralised zones in Australia and stop anybody from mining them. We do not have a progressive federal government at the moment. We have a government that is out to retard mining and it has demonstrated that time and time again. Take the example of the so-called conservation zone at Kakadu on which nothing has happened. We still do not know its boundaries and Coronation Hill is still in limbo. We have had no decision on whether that mine will be allowed to proceed even though there are $1250m worth of minerals out there, including platinum.

The minister said last night that he believed that 'the process will enable non-controversial acquisition by the Commonwealth of land in public parks to be achieved expeditiously whilst, at the same time, providing sufficient safeguards to ensure that the acquisition powers are not abused'. The Governor-General is removed from the process and the power is placed in the hands of the minister. The process is to provide protection of the states' rights and ensure that environmental and heritage issues are adequately addressed. I would like to see that happen when this Commonwealth mining legislation comes into effect.

Clause 24 relates to exploration and mining on Commonwealth land. In his speech, the minister said:

The government's policy for access to Commonwealth land for exploration and mining does not apply to national parks and Antarctica. The existing Lands Acquisition Act allows for mining and exploration on Commonwealth land. The government has accepted a set of policy principles which it believes should apply in order that a multiple land use policy may be facilitated. Mineral exploration and development on Commonwealth land will be allowed to proceed where these activities do not preclude the purpose for which the land is designated and where they comply with all relevant Commonwealth, state and territory laws and policies. The Commonwealth will acquire mineral rights only where the principal purpose for acquisition precludes mineral development.

Our founding fathers would turn in their graves today if they could see some of the powers which the Commonwealth government has decided to take on. It was set up to run the post office, defence, customs and immigration and is now involved in 177 different departments and organisations. I will be very interested tomorrow, at the Mining Ministers Conference in Adelaide, to ask Mr Kerin just how far the Commonwealth sees itself intruding on this states' rights issue. It does not have a mining act and it does not have a conservation act pertaining to the states. I believe it is an unnecessary intrusion by the Commonwealth into an area which should be dealt with solely by the states.

Manganese Poisoning on Groote Eylandt - Research

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

I remind him that BHP announced recently that it will carry out research in relation to manganese poisoning on Groote Eylandt. Will the Northern Territory government contribute anything towards that research?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would have to seek advice on the precise details of assistance other than the services of Professor John Matthews of the Menzies School of Health Research who has been investigating the syndrome for quite some time. If the member is talking about direct financial input into it, I would need to take advice on that. I will provide the information later.

Cullen Bay Marina

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

This morning, I heard an announcement that the Cullen Bay Marina proposal will proceed. Is he able to give the House details about the commencement of that particular project, the proposed ferry terminal and associated developments such as housing?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. He himself was involved in working towards the development of Darwin's first marina which is awaited with great excitement by the majority of Darwin's population. A development agreement, which is virtually a contract with the developer detailing conditions and entitlements etc, will be signed today by the government and the developer.

The marina was conceived in 1981. A number of potential sites were examined and, in 1983, Cullen Bay was identified as a most suitable site. I suppose the decision was also taken in relation to the potential development of Myilly Point. In 1985, the partners involved in the development applied to the government for land in the area. There was a necessity for rezoning under the Town Planning Act and the project was explained to the public through displays and models etc. The town planning processes of public exhibition and comment were completed in April 1986. A full environmental impact study was completed in July 1987. There was a very rigorous process of assessing the impact on the foreshores of the harbour itself and on the environment generally.

The agreement that is to be signed today outlines the responsibilities of the government. These are limited to the funding of the public facilities such as a ferry terminal and charter boat facilities. The ferry terminal was originally proposed as a stand-alone project to be located at Parliament Park but, following an approach from the developer, the government saw merit in combining it with the marina. This will also give the developer some flexibility in consolidating those water-related activities.

The government's contribution is to be $6m in 1988 values and, for the facilities that are to be provided, we see that as excellent value. That figure is in accord with the proposal for the Parliament Park project some 3 years ago. The facilities will include a terminal building, toilets and a kiosk as well as the pontoons and wharfs etc associated with water recreation and charter boat activities. That infrastructure will be much welcomed by the people who operate ferries on Darwin harbour. At the moment, they have to contend with facilities in the harbour that are not really appropriate to their needs. Their vessels are knocked around during storms and high winds and, of course, facilities for the public are totally inadequate there at the moment. We are therefore looking forward to the next 12 months.

With a positive agreement in place, the developer will now have the opportunity to sell his proposal to potential investors and financiers and to complete the technical requirements under the contract. These include a full technical appraisal which needs to be approved by the various government authorities.

We look forward to seeing this much-needed, tourism-related facility. It could be compared with an investment like Yulara in terms of providing diversity for tourists. We have airline systems coming into place and, hopefully, a new airport terminal. We have modern hotels. As well as the obvious natural attractions of Kakadu and Litchfield parks, we need to provide other options, and we see water-based activities and fishing becoming very attractive to our overseas tourists.

Moneys Owed by Burgundy Royale

Mr TUXWORTH to TREASURER

Can he confirm whether the moneys owed to the Northern Territory government for water, power and sewerage services, and payroll and liquor taxes by Burgundy Royale or the operators of the Beaufort Hotel have been paid in full by the liquidator? If they have not, could he specify those moneys which have yet to be paid?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will give the latest information I have which dates from last week. It is my understanding that no money has changed hands at all at this stage, even for the purchase of the development itself. That would include, of course, moneys owing to the Northern Territory government for power, water and sewerage charges. As I have informed honourable members on many occasions, the Northern Territory government is well protected under the scheme of arrangements that has been entered into with the liquidator. As of last week, I understand that the principal, Westpac, has not yet got its hands on a cheque either.

Mr Tuxworth: How much was outstanding, as of last week?

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I will get a meter reading on that figure and provide it to the honourable member.

Northern Territory Involvement in Nuclear Fuel Cycle

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Can he outline the damage likely to occur to the Northern Territory's economic prospects as a result of the campaign of lies and misinformation embarked on by the Leader of the Opposition ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will withdraw that reference to the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr PALMER: I withdraw the reference which you found offensive, Mr Speaker.

Will he outline the damage likely to occur in view of the obvious campaign of misinformation embarked on by the Leader of the Opposition in relation to the nuclear fuel cycle and the Northern Territory's further involvement in that cycle?

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Clearly, the question should be disallowed because it contains an opinion. The words 'obvious campaign of misinformation' clearly convey an opinion. Questions should be comprised of fact. I would ask that you seek some advice because, in my opinion, the question should be ruled out of order.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is very easy to supply the answer to such a question, and I thank the member for Karama for asking it. I understand that the Leader of the Opposition and I will be debating the nuclear fuel cycle on talk-back radio next Monday. It will be interesting to have a forum where the people of the Northern Territory can obtain a full understanding of the Leader of the Opposition's in-depth knowledge of the nuclear fuel cycle. It is very easy to use scare tactics and phrases like 'nuclear garbage dump', as the Leader of the Opposition does from time to time.

Mr Speaker, it must be remembered that we are talking here about a proposal to create up to 15 000 jobs during construction, 5000 jobs during operation and a potential multiplier effect for 20 000 people. Then there is this NIMBY philosophy that crops up. Of course, that stands for Not In My BackYard. Everybody says, 'What a great idea, but not in my backyard'.

Mr Ede interjecting.

Mr COULTER: Of course, it is difficult, but if we don't have the courage of our convictions and realise the opportunities in the Northern Territory to get that value-added downstream processing in place, we should not be in this Chamber. Let the people judge, but not by the tactics which are being used by the Leader of the Opposition. His use of expressions such as a 'nuclear garbage dump' does him no credit at all.

During the recent mining exposition, I was visited by Gustav Tham from Swede Power. It is interesting to note that Sweden has built its nuclear repository just offshore, underneath the sea, and on a fault line. Yet here, in one of the most geologically-stable parts of the world, we are worried. Did any buildings fall down in Tennant Creek? Was there much damage in that regard? We are talking about 5000 m down in the earth and we are worried about the artesian basin which goes down about 300 m or 400 m. That is nonsense. Let the people of the Northern Territory judge on talkback radio next Monday when the Leader of the Opposition will have the opportunity to expound his in-depth knowledge of my proposal.

The one country in the world that should be terrified of nuclear power is Japan. It suffered the horrific devastation of 2 nuclear explosions. It is the most densely-populated country in the world. There are more people there per square metre than anywhere else in the world, and it is the most geologically-unstable area in the world. It suffers earthquakes, typhoons and extremes of temperature. Nevertheless, the people in Hiroshima today enjoy electricity provided by nuclear power. Yet, in the Northern Territory, one-sixth of Australia, we are worried that we cannot find a small space on the top of the dirt to drill a hole to bury something.

Mr Speaker, that is the reason why Australia has gone backwards on world markets and why we were becoming one of the world's greatest potential banana republics: we refuse to have a go. It is easy for honourable members opposite to identify with that because, as I have said in this Chamber during debates in the last 2 weeks, they have never once created anything except trouble for the Northern Territory.

Hungerford Refrigeration

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Last week, in his speech on Hungerford Refrigeration, the Treasurer stated that that company first became known as a TDZ prospect in September 1986. Was the government informed by the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority that Hungerford Refrigeration had lodged an annual return for the year ended 30 June 1986 with the Office of the Commissioner for Corporate Affairs in Queensland and that that annual return was available, as I understand it, from October 1986? Did the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority inform the government that the annual return indicated that the total liabilities of the company exceeded the assets of the company by $185 000? How did this piece of information persuade the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority and the government to sink taxpayers' funds into the company?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, quite clearly, the question from the Leader of the Opposition is absurd as a question without notice. I suggest that he place the question on notice. However, I remind him of a fact that he well knows. Taxpayers' funds used to assist Hungerford Refrigeration by the TDZ are totally secure. He is aware of that but he has implied in his question that somehow taxpayers' funds are committed. The honourable member is so devoid of positive initiatives for the Northern Territory that, as the Minister for Mines and Energy said, all he wants to do is dance on the grave of Hungerford Refrigeration. However, the company is not finished yet despite the best efforts of the Leader of the Opposition to nail the coffin lid down. The company may be able to get up and bite him on the ankle sooner or later. I suggest the honourable member rationalise his question into either a letter to me or a question on notice.

Women's Issues at Yulara

Mr SETTER to CHIEF MINISTER

Has the Yulara Corporation responded to the issues relating to living conditions for women raised in the study of women living in remote areas?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for his question. When I raised matters relating to the Women's Advisory Council last week, I thought that the member for MacDonnell might raise this particular question because he professes a keen interest in the subject.

Mr Bell: Bring it on for debate. It is No 9 on the Notice Paper. What a wimp!

Mr DALE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The honourable member opposite should be asked to withdraw the comment he made referring to the Chief Minister.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, my defence is truth.

Mr SPEAKER: The member for MacDonnell will withdraw that remark.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, I withdraw unreservedly and apologise to the Chief Minister.

Mr HATTON: Mr Speaker, I can assure the honourable member that his barbs are very blunt by the time they get across to this side of the room.

In February 1986, the Women's Advisory Council commissioned a study into the special needs of women living in remote areas of the Northern Territory, be they Aboriginal women, women living on pastoral properties, in mining towns or in tourism resorts. As part of that study, members of the Women's Advisory Council met with Yulara Corporation executives in December 1986 to discuss a range of issues relevant to women working at Yulara.

Members will recall that I tabled a remote areas report in October last year. Part of the report identified problems associated with the living conditions for some women at Yulara. These problems were associated with accommodation, the absence of child-care facilities, inadequate street lighting and the lack of female representation on the Town Advisory Board. Recognising that adequate community services and satisfactory conditions are crucial if we are to develop a stable work force at Yulara, the NT government decided to act on the issues raised in the report.

The following measures are now in place. Improvements to staff accommodation have been made with the building of 120 one- and two-bedroom units with individual facilities and 56 of these units are now occupied. I can advise honourable members that it is the intention to go to a second stage of the development to complete the task of separating staff accommodation from the main commercial spine into what will essentially become a residential area at Yulara. The location of the residential subdivision away from the tourist thoroughfare will prevent unwelcome intrusions on staff privacy which have been an ongoing concern for staff at Yulara. A child-care facility, licensed at present to cater for 10 children, opened in November 1987. The unit employs a full-time coordinator and 2 part-time assistants. This facility will be expanded to cater for 20 children. Funds have been identified and work has commenced on the provision of underground powerlines to upgrade the street lighting. Women are participating in the decision-making processes in the Yulara community. Of the current membership of the Town Advisory Board, 2 out of 7 members are women, with 1 vacancy.

Mr Speaker, the speed with which the government has acted on these matters is indicative of our genuine concern for the needs of women, especially for those who work and live in remote areas and, obviously, that includes the important new area of Yulara.

Policy on M-rated Videos in Schools

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Is he in a position to reply to the question I put yesterday relating to the policy on M-rated videos in schools?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I had intended to answer that question if the honourable member had not raised it during the course of this question time. There is some concern in the community that the policy of the department is being abused. In 1986, a circular was distributed to all principals. I would like to go through it because I think it is important. The following guidelines were produced to assist in relation to the screening of films and videos for student viewing:

1. the screening of films and videos during normal classroom hours should be restricted to material which has clear relevance to the school's education program;
2. prior to the showing of any film or video material, teachers should ensure that they are familiar with the content and satisfied as to its suitability for the intended purpose and audience;
3. normally, only film or video material with censorship rating of G or C should be shown to students who have not attained the age of 12 years;

4. in any case where material rated PG or PGR is to be screened for an audience of students under the age of 12 years, the prior approval of the school principal must be obtained;
5. in any case where M-rated material is to be screened, the audience should be restricted to students who are 15 years of age or over and the approval of the school principal must be obtained beforehand.
- 6A. if a principal considers it desirable to seek parental permission prior to the screening of any film or video material, parents should be advised of the purpose, title and censorship classification of the material to be screened;
- 6B. where parental permission has been sought but not obtained, students should be excluded by teachers from the classroom or area in which the video or film material is to be shown;
7. in no circumstances should material with a rating of R, X or AO be screened for student viewing.

Mr Speaker, there are 3 other points. I will just read out the final one:

10. schools seeking permission to vary these guidelines in any specific instance should address such a request to the appropriate superintendent.

Mr Speaker, I was concerned when the member for Sadadeen raised this issue because I was aware that there were instances, as I mentioned at the start of my answer, in which that policy was being abused. I have asked the Secretary of the Department of Education to recirculate the policy to ensure that teachers and principals are aware of it and that it is enforced. The government does not accept that M-rated videos should be shown willy-nilly throughout the school system. The policy is very strict and the principals are responsible for ensuring that, if there is any abuse, it is stopped immediately.

Policy on M-rated Videos in Schools

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Will he also distribute those guidelines to school councils so that the parents may be aware of them?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I have no problem in meeting that request.

Air-conditioning Equipment in Schools

Mr EDE to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I am quite sure that he is aware that the resource centre library at Milingimbi and various offices and classrooms of a temporary nature in the education faculty at DJT are unusable because they happen to have installed Hungerford Refrigeration air-conditioning equipment which has broken down. Has his department been able to negotiate some arrangement for the repair of that air-conditioning equipment, which I believe was under warranty from Hungerford, by some other body so that those areas can be made operational again, with the prospect of the costs being recouped from Hungerford at a later date?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, certainly, I was aware of some minor problems with the completion of the air-conditioning system at Milingimbi. I believe that those minor difficulties can be addressed and possibly, even at this stage, have been addressed by the contractor.

Mr Ede: There has been a problem at Milingimbi for 8 months.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart is exaggerating once again in an effort to emphasis a point and, once again, is denigrating this company.

Members interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The minister will be allowed to answer the question without a running commentary.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the technical problems with the installation at Milingimbi were not insoluble. In fact, I understand that the contractor is moving expeditiously to have them dealt with. Similar problems arise in bringing new plant into operation under many contracts. The difficulties at Milingimbi were not insoluble. The basic system is quite sound; in a technical sense, it is a fine product. I emphasise that the problems were minor. If they have not already been attended to, they will be attended to in the very near future.

Supplementary Questions

Mr DONDAS to SPEAKER

In prefacing my question, Mr Speaker, I wonder whether you would give the House a ruling in relation to supplementary questions. Yesterday morning, I attempted to ask the Minister for Labour, Administrative Services and Local Government a question in respect of local government within Aboriginal communities, and I clearly indicated the fact that I wanted to ask a supplementary question. I was denied that right. I intended to ask the question this morning. This morning, the member for Sadadeen was able to ask a supplementary question of the Minister for Education.

Yesterday, the minister had indicated that some resistance was being experienced from Aboriginal land councils to the setting up of local governments. My consequential question to the minister would have been: 'Is he experiencing any resistance from the federal Labor government in regard to the setting-up of local governments?' Yesterday, I considered that to be a very important supplementary question.

ANSWER

I advise honourable members that I will give the matter of supplementary questions some further consideration and advise the House at a later date. In fact, yesterday and on previous days, following some abuse of the system of using supplementary questions, I was ignoring additional questions.

Local Government Scheme

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

This follows from the question I put yesterday about the success of local government within Aboriginal communities. He advised that there was some resistance from the Northern Land Council and other Aboriginal land councils. Is he aware of any resistance from the federal Labor government in regard to the Northern Territory's policy of trying to establish local government within as many Aboriginal communities as possible.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for his question because it is an interesting one. All honourable members would be aware that the federal government is calling on the states to establish local government for Aboriginal people and to support local government for Aboriginal people throughout the country. Yet, we find that it is not being supported necessarily by one federal minister who recently came out in support of a call from the Northern Land Council for a 5-year moratorium on community government in the Northern Territory. I find that rather amazing. I spoke to the federal Minister for Aboriginal Affairs and queried that matter and asked him why the community government scheme currently in existence in the Northern Territory could not be the basis for his proposal for an Aboriginal and Torres Straits Islander Commission. The minister has since written back to me and indicated that the community government scheme would not be suitable for that purpose. I do not particularly see his reasoning for that.

I have written also to all state Ministers for Local Government and the federal Minister for Local Government indicating my concerns with regard to the attitude of the federal minister and the land councils to community government. I understand that, because of comments I made yesterday in this House, it is likely that today the Director of the Northern Land Council will call again for a moratorium on community government for Aboriginal people. I find that rather amazing considering that it is sought to put the ATSIC proposal in place within 6 months. Why would someone call for a moratorium of 5 years on community government for Aboriginal people when ATSIC is being thrust down the throats of Aboriginal people in less than a year? In fact, it was intended to occur within 6 months. Fortunately, that has been put back to a year. I find that absolutely outrageous.

It is obvious to me that some deal has been made between the land councils and the federal minister in this regard, and I would like to make it quite clear that the Northern Territory government will not allow for a moratorium of 5 years on community government. We are committed to local government for Aboriginal people and we are committed to the federal government's policy in this regard.

Pet Meaters and Buffalo Shoot-outs

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

If it is not appropriate for him to answer the question fully, perhaps the Minister for Lands and Housing can respond also.

Can he assure me that the interests of pet meaters will be taken into full consideration in any further shoot-outs of buffalo in the Brucellosis and Tuberculosis Eradication Campaign, and that these small businessmen will be given first option to shoot out any area before the minister sends in his men to eradicate the species?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can assure the honourable member that it is my firm policy, which is well-known within my department, that every possible economic use of animals be exploited prior to what is termed shooting to waste. As honourable members are aware, BTEC means that a substantial number of animals in the Northern Territory must be destroyed over the next 2 to 3 years. I have directed that, wherever the government has an influence on this matter, after harvesting is done by ordinary mustering by the landowner, pet meaters are permitted to slaughter animals in the field. Also, there is an ability for landowners to negotiate with safari operators so that game hunting can take place as well on those properties where animals are to be destroyed.

The matter becomes complicated where different forms of ownership of land are involved. It is principally the private landowner who has control over animals on his land. When it comes to Crown land, the responsibility is divided between the Department of Lands and Housing, which administers all ordinary Crown land, and the Conservation Commission which administers large tracts of land that contain buffalo. Both the department and the commission have responsibility for eradicating disease from lands under their control and they primarily accept the rule. However, the Department of Industries and Development is responsible for the progress of BTEC and it liaises closely with the other authorities involved.

I can assure the honourable member that the subject of access by pet meaters to animals on Crown land has been raised with me within the last 48 hours. I have asked for a special liaison to be established between the Department of Lands and Housing, the Conservation Commission and my department in order to plan more carefully the access by various parties to Crown land to obtain benefit from these animals prior to shoot-outs being conducted. I am sure that the honourable member or the pet meaters concerned will be quick to bring to my attention any situation where they believe liaison has not taken place satisfactorily.

Federal Treasurer's Economic Statement

Mr FIRMIN to TREASURER

I refer to the answer given to my earlier question by the Minister for Transport and Works in which he highlighted the possible $100m cutback for outback road funding in the Northern Territory. I presume the less populous states will suffer as much, if not more, than ourselves. Can the Treasurer advise me what restraint the Commonwealth government has shown in respect of its outlays in last night's economic statement?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, honourable members will be aware that a meeting of conservative premiers attended by the Chief Minister prior to the Premiers Conference produced some very startling information and statistical data which showed that, whilst the states had truly practised restraint, the federal government had not. Last night, we were told that the federal government was reducing its expenditure by 3%. We all know that the states suffered a cut of 4.2% at the Premiers Conference and that the Northern Territory, whose funding was reduced by 5.5%, suffered most of all. The truth is that, when we read the fine print, we find that the Commonwealth is talking about a 3% reduction over 3 years.

Treasury officers have been working during the evening and early this morning to analyse the figures and I can inform honourable members that the Commonwealth performance in respect of its own expenditure cuts can only be described as irresponsible and totally inadequate. It has announced cuts of $982m. However, it is clear that virtually all of these cuts can be attributed to the states and the Northern Territory. While the final numbers have not yet been clarified, it is possible that the Commonwealth has not decreased its own outlays at all. This is a disappointing result. The states and the Territory have all indicated that they are prepared to do their bit to exercise restraint for the good of the country. We had hoped and expected that the Commonwealth would do the same. It seems to me that it is 'do as I say' not 'do as I do'. That is a very disappointing result when one considers that the Commonwealth received an unexpected windfall of over $1000m as a result of the fringe benefits tax. In terms of federal government restraint, the economic statement is very disappointing. Indeed, it is both irresponsible and totally inadequate.

Fire Services in Larrimah

Mr REED to CHIEF MINISTER

In April, I wrote to him on behalf of the residents of Larrimah advising that the township is without any fire protection equipment and requesting that consideration be given to providing some equipment to the town. Is he able to advise whether any equipment will be provided for use by resident volunteers in fighting fires?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Katherine has been doing a sterling job, not only in his own electorate but in the areas surrounding his electorate, particularly to the immediate south, where Larrimah is located. On 19 April this year, the member for Katherine wrote to me seeking the provision of some firefighting equipment for the Larrimah brigade. Unfortunately, the Fire Service was unable to provide any equipment directly to the Larrimah centre because it does not come within the fire control region of the Fire Service. However, I am pleased to say that the director of the Fire Service has been able to make some arrangements. Some equipment will be available to the brigade in Larrimah by July of this year. I thank the honourable member for bringing the matter to my attention.

Equipment for Courses at DIT

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Will he carry out an investigation into problems with the supply of equipment to some courses at the DIT? I cite specifically the journalism course where, after 18 months in the course, students still do not have such basic items as tape-recorders or facilities to undertake interviews. That is just one example. Will he investigate these problems?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will examine the matter and respond to the member for Stuart later. I might say that he has the opportunity to raise such matters during adjournment debates.

Mr COULTER (Leader of Government Business): Mr Speaker, I ask that all further questions be place on notice.

Mr Speaker, you would be aware that yesterday the House adopted the report of the Standing Orders Committee. I ask that you recognise the Minister for Health and Community Services who wishes to be the maiden speaker under the new standing order.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Manganese Poisoning on Groote Eylandt - Research

Mr DALE (Health and Community Services): Thank you, Mr Speaker. What an honour this is!

In response to the member for Arnhem's question regarding Northern Territory funding of research into manganese problems on Groote Eylandt, I advise that the government is not specifically funding that research. However, as I said earlier, we provide significant funding to the Menzies School of Health Research, which is involved in the research team and has had significant input. In June 1987, the department hosted a seminar in Darwin at which one of the major speakers was Professor John Court. There is another problem over on Groote Eylandt in that there are insufficient general practitioners. The people at Alyangula have a doctor available for 2½ days per week. He also services Umbakumba and Numbulwar. I have recently approved in principle, after negotiations with the Angurugu Council, the part funding of another doctor who will be spending a great deal of his time researching the manganese problem.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Contract for Self-Government Promotion

Mr HATTON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition raised a question in respect of the 10-year self-government celebrations. He has exercised great impatience in seeking answers to that question, presumably because he is trying to beat up a storm. One of the reasons why I have taken some time to obtain the answers is the fact that I have not been directly involved in the determination of any of the contracts. I have had to seek the information from within my department.

I can advise that, several months ago, expressions of interest were called for commercial involvement in the ongoing campaign for statehood for the Northern Territory. The significance of 10 years of self-government was to be a lead into the campaign for administrative purposes. Following the consideration of various expressions of interest in respect of the statehood programs, 2 of the expressions of interest were finally selected: Mattingly Woollard Cawrse and Neilson McCarthy Hare. Those 2 organisations were requested to present a joint submission on an awareness, public relations and marketing campaign in respect of the statehood program. The government has paid them for the preparation of such a submission.

Mr Smith: How much?

Mr HATTON: I am not certain of the figure, Mr Speaker. I think it is something in the order of about $2000, but I will not stand fixed on that figure. I have not been directly involved in the details of that particular contract and it was not related to the question asked by the the Leader of the Opposition. I have received that submission and it is being considered.

The contracts are being considered on the basis of Mattingly Woollard Cawrse performing advertising functions for the self-government celebrations. Those 2 organisations are working on the self-government celebrations whilst we are assessing their submissions in respect of the statehood program. The Protocol Unit of my department has been charged with the responsibility of overseeing the self-government celebrations as it has done in the past. I would stress that, because of the significance of attaining a decade of self-government, the 1988 celebrations will be a community program. In fact, all centres across the Northern Territory will be involved from 1 July in a wide range of events and activities. The program of promotion also involves many commercial operators, all of which are Territory based. These include Iloura Television Productions, Channel 8, Imparja Television, the NT News, community groups such as the Greek Community, sporting associations across the Northern Territory, presentations, public relations, Roka Graphics and many town and community groups. The Mattingly Woollard Cawrse and Neilson McCarthy Hare groups are also involved in the preparation of this program.

As well, several government departments have been involved in preparing information and material for the celebrations. The celebrations will involve flag-raising ceremonies, static and mobile displays in most centres, public events such as concerts, firework displays, sporting events, the planting of an avenue of trees to celebrate 10 years of self-government, a major Territory-wide schools competition - the 9 category winners of which will be attending the NT day at Expo 88 in Brisbane in October - and a number of events including a state dinner in Alice Springs on the night of 30 June and in Darwin on the evening of 1 July.

The purpose of celebrating 10 years of self-government cannot be underestimated. We need to remember the generations of Commonwealth neglect up until 1978. We need to reflect on the enormous development that has occurred in the Territory over the last decade in all aspects of Territory life and we need to look forward to a future based on the remarkable achievement of the last 10 years.

It has been 10 years of spectacular development and diversification in the Northern Territory and 10 years of work by the Territory people to build a future for themselves. During June and through to self-government day, I hope that all Territorians will stand back and reflect on the frustration, anger and feeling of impotence that we lived with when we were being governed totally by a public service in Canberra. We should remind ourselves of those frustrating years of impotence and look at what we have achieved as a community over the last 10 years. Whether people have liked some of the decisions that have been made or not, at least those decisions have been made by people elected by them and the people of the Territory have had the opportunity to make their decisions by means of a ballot box. After 10 years, it is time for us to make an effort to reflect so that we can build on that to look forward to the objective of statehood for the Northern Territory.

Reference: Notice of Determination in respect of Gregory National Park (Northern Territory Portion 3124) to the Northern Territory Land Corporation - Northern Territory Government Gazette No G32 of 12 August 1987, page 3.

ANSWER

Details of all grants of land by the Northern Territory to the NT Land Corporation are available on the public record through the publication of relevant notices under section 15(5) of the Crown Lands Act.

The NTLC, NTDLC and CLC are/were independent bodies corporate, not subject to ministerial control. Any questions regarding the disposal of their land holdings are not within the government's province to answer.

Details of any current land holdings of these organisations are available to the public through the Land Titles Office. The honourable member is free to conduct title searches if he so wishes.

Responses to questions regarding what may, or may not, have been discussed by Cabinet are bound by the convention of Cabinet confidentiality.

 - (d) size of school.
2. What was the average recruitment cost per teacher.
3. What was the turnover rate of teachers in secondary schools in the following subjects -
 - (a) Maths;
 - (b) Science; and
 - (c) English.

ANSWER

TEACHER TURNOVER RATES DURING 1980-87

No reliable data is available for 1980 or 1981 as the Northern Territory Teaching Service was only established in July 1981.

1.(a) MEAN YEARS OF SERVICE OF TEACHERS WHO RESIGNED.

1982*	1983*	1984*	1985	1986	1987
3.56	3.51	3.30	3.93	5.0	4.0

1.(b) GENDER OF TEACHERS RESIGNING.

	1982	1983	1984	1985	1986	1987
Males	41%	37%	35%	N.A.	37%	38%
Females	59%	63%	65%	N.A.	63%	62%

1.(c) RESIGNATION RATE BY LOCATION/SCHOOL TYPE.

	1982*	1983*	1984*	1985+	1986+	1987+
Secondary	11.7%	17.1%	19.4%	25%	25%	17.8%
Area	19.8%	14.5%	10.3%	N.A.	N.A.	N.A.

Other	6.7%	4.7%	8.5%	N.A.	N.A.	N.A.

1.(d) The only data available is that shown in 1(c) above.

NOTES

* Extracted from a post graduate thesis presented by a former Department of Education employee.

+ 1985-87 figures obtained from the Department of Education's Computerised Records.

N.A. Not Available.

2. During the last financial year (1986-87) the estimated average recruitment cost per teacher was $5000. The individual costs vary considerably depending on where the teacher was recruited from and whether or not he/she was single or married with a family.

3. Turnover rates of Secondary Teachers who taught Maths, Science and English.

The only figures available are those for 1986 and 1987.

	1986	1987
Maths	32	18
Science	25	14
English	40	17

32. Land Degradation on Cattle Stations

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. Who are the CSIRO officers who claimed land degradation was 'rife' on Territory cattle stations.

2. Where are these officers based.

3. Were these same officers the ones who wrote to you (as reported in the Legislative Assembly) saying that no base data is available on which to judge degradation and sought Territory money to establish this base data.

4. Has a decision been made by government in regard to the CSIRO request for funding to establish a land data base and, if so, what was that decision and, if no, when will the decision be made.

ANSWER

1. As far as I am aware, CSIRO officers have not claimed that land degradation was 'rife' on Territory cattle stations. This statement appears to be a misquote or misinterpretation from the recent CSIRO submission to the Rural Land Use Advisory Committee on Pastoral Freehold. The CSIRO stated, in part, that:

profound changes have occurred in the pastoral lands over the past 110 years, including:

- ° a progression from more palatable to less palatable forage plants.
- ° an increase in the density of trees and shrubs.
- ° accelerated soil erosion.

Although land 'condition' fluctuates with climate, there is nevertheless an overall downward trend in many areas.

Debate on such changes has tended to become polarised between the environmental lobby and the pastoral lobby with the facts as a casualty.

It appears likely that it is the above part of the CSIRO submission which has been misinterpreted and the question is based on a wrong premise.

2. The CSIRO Centre for Arid Zone Research located in Alice Springs.
3. A letter to me from the CSIRO stated that, 'it has not been technically possible to distinguish between natural and grazing-induced erosion'. This implies that until now arguments have been based on an inadequate factual base.

The letter further states that:

CSIRO has recently developed techniques using satellite data to measure the extent of erosion over large areas and to distinguish between that which results directly from grazing and that which is natural. There is also potential on a regional basis for separating recent erosion from that which occurred in the early stages of the grazing industry.

The proposal regarding Territory money was to employ this technology to provide objective information. The proposal was framed as follows:

If the Northern Territory government is willing to cover our costs, we shall be happy to put our technology, database and experience at your disposal so as to provide objective information on the land degradation issue. This might involve a satellite-based survey of the grazing lands of the arid zone. The form of this survey would, of course, be developed in collaboration with your own technical people.

4. The CSIRO proposal was unsolicited and the government at this stage has not determined the future of the proposal. However, the CSIRO has been asked to provide further details for review by officers of interested Northern Territory departments and authorities in the first instance. In addition, CSIRO have been asked to clarify the issue of funding since CSIRO have previously provided such services free of charge.

35. School Film Library Service

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. What money does the Department of Education expect to save (going from past experience) from the decision to pass on transport costs of films to schools outside Darwin of films on loan from the Film Library Service to the schools.
2. Does the government intend to review the above decision and, if so, when.

ANSWER

1. The freight subsidy paid by the Department of Education on film and other library resources borrowed by NT schools was abolished on 12 February 1988 as a result of severe budgetary restraints imposed on the Library Services Branch. The savings resulting from the decision were estimated to be in the order of $5000 per month.
2. Due to the hardship suffered by smaller remote schools which rely heavily on these resources, a decision was taken in late February 1988 to reinstate the subsidy. This has been done progressively, based on an individual school's needs. By the beginning of Term 2, all schools were once again eligible for the subsidy.

36. University College of the Northern Territory
Enrolments

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many students are doing full-time courses at the University College.

2. How many students at the University College have come from interstate.
3. How many students have come because their examination scores have precluded them from entry into interstate universities.
4. What advantage does the Territory government expect from paying the education costs of interstate students with Territory taxpayers' money.
5. What is the annual cost to the Territory taxpayer of the 'connection' between the University College and the University of Queensland.
6. What services are provided by the University of Queensland for the money provided by the Territory.

ANSWER

1. There are 194 full-time students and 261 part-time students.
2. Thirty (30) students have come from interstate.
3. The college does not have this information. It is not a requirement for enrolment.
4. (a) Some students will remain in the Territory after graduation thus adding to the Territory's more highly qualified work force.
(b) Those moving from Darwin will contribute to the number of people elsewhere who have an understanding of the nature of the Territory and will be conversant with Territory problems.
(c) They will demonstrate elsewhere the standards achieved at the University College.
5. The Territory pays a $250 000 annual consultancy fee (1986 levels) to the University of Queensland.
6. (a) Management advice.
(b) Assistance in the selection of academic staff and senior administration staff.
(c) Monitoring the standards of teaching.
(d) Monitoring examination of students.
(e) Assisting UCNT proposals for new subjects.

38. 'Towards the 90s'

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. Is the Education Advisory Council considering a revised edition of the 'Towards the 90s' paper.
2. If so, when will -
 - (a) their Report be available;
 - (b) opportunities be made available for public response to the revised paper; and
 - (c) the Minister undertake to allow a debate in the public arena and in Parliament before a decision on implementation is taken.

ANSWER

1. Yes. The Education Advisory Council has considered a revised edition of the document 'Towards the 90s'. This document is now with the Minister and will be released for further public comment in the near future.
2. (a) As above.
 - (b) Yes.
 - (c) Yes.

39. School Council Regulations

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many full-page advertisements were placed in Territory newspapers recently, to explain the government's position on newly-introduced School Council Regulations.
2. Which newspapers were used.
3. What was the total cost of all such advertising.
4. What is the expected saving of passing the cost of freighting audio-visual material ex-Darwin.

ANSWER

1. Three (3) full page advertisements were lodged.
2. Newspapers used were:-

NT News
Sunday Territorian
Australian Advocate
Barkly Regional
Tennant & District Times

Katherine Times
Katherine Advertiser
Gove Gazette
Litchfield Times

3. Total cost of advertising was $18 443.
4. Freight for film, video and curriculum support resources borrowed from Library Services Branch in Darwin was estimated to cost $30 000 for the period 12 February to 30 June 1988. Of this $9000 was spent on a twice weekly urban courier service to Darwin schools. The cut to centrally funded freight of films and library resources to Territory schools and colleges was a result of severe budgetary restraints imposed on the Department of Education Library Services Branch. With all Branch operational funds reduced, many services were cut for the remainder of the financial year.

Recent negotiations within the various Branches of the Department have allowed the reinstatement of a fully subsidised freight service for all Territory schools.

40. Truancy Officers

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Does the government intend to reinstate Truancy Officers with the Department of Education in 1988.

ANSWER

No provision has been made in the 1988-89 budget estimates to re-establish Truancy Officer positions.

However, the identification of other agencies and procedures to undertake the functions formerly performed by Truancy Officers is being considered by the government.

41. Preschool Vacancies in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. How many 4-year-old children, or children about to turn 4 in Alice Springs are not able to attend preschool on turning 4 because of staff or facility shortages.
2. What is the approximate waiting time for children over the age of 4 years to gain preschool entrance.

ANSWER

1. There are approximately 97 children who will attain the age of 4 years by 31 July 1988 and who are unlikely to be able to enrol until after the August primary intake.

There are no staff shortages as each preschool is staffed according to its entitlement. There is some pressure on facilities at the preschool and early childhood levels at the present time, but demographic projections indicate that this is a temporary phenomenon. A survey is currently being carried out to assess early childhood requirements likely to result from the residential development in the Larapinta area.

2. After a child attains the age of 4 years the average waiting time is approximately 3 months before being enrolled in a preschool.

51. Northern Territory Land Corporation
Receipts

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS

With reference to page 9 of the Northern Territory Gazette No. S56 of 7 August 1987 upon which appear receipts and expenditure of the Northern Territory Land Corporation:

- (i) from which source or sources did the Northern Territory Land Corporation receive $385 961 as indicated; and
- (ii) on which item or items was $96 624 expended.

ANSWER

The receipts and expenditure statement published in the NT Government Gazette on 7 August 1987 relates to the 1986-87 financial year. As the NT Land Corporation was established on 24 December 1986, the statements in respect of the corporation relate to the period 24 December 1986 - 30 June 1987.

I have been advised that receipts for this period include payment for mustering, various lease rentals, deposits and revenue from several land sales in various locations, and operational advances from the Territory. Expenditure items included legal fees, salaries for support staff, administrative costs, and expenses associated with management of the corporation's landholdings.

52. Child Welfare - Custody

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for HEALTH

1. Currently how many children in the Northern Territory are living away from their natural parent/s as a result of actions taken by Community Welfare and Northern Territory courts.
2. How many of these children came from the northern region of the Territory.
3. How many of these children came from the southern region of the Territory.

4. How many of these children live in -
 - (a) foster homes (private families);
 - (b) government-run homes or institutions;
 - (c) private institutions; and
 - (d) other types of accommodation.

5. How many children were taken away from their parent/s on the grounds of -
 - (a) neglect;
 - (b) physical abuse;
 - (c) sexual abuse;
 - (d) parents incapable of looking after their children due to -
 - (i) alcoholism;
 - (ii) drug abuse;
 - (iii) mental state; and
 - (iv) immaturity;
 - (e) poverty; and
 - (f) other.

6. What is the average cost to the taxpayer for the weekly keep of children housed as under question 4.

7. How many hours of court time were taken up by these cases in 1987 in the Territory whether the children were taken away from their parent/s or not.

8. How many of the children currently taken away from their parent/s were interviewed by the Magistrate -
 - (a) alone;
 - (b) with the parent/s in attendance and Community Welfare Officers absent;
 - (c) with Community Welfare Officers and parent/s present; and
 - (d) with Community Welfare Officers present but parent/s absent.

9. How many children have attempted to return to their natural parent/s in 1987.

ANSWER

1. As of the end of April 1988 a total of 199 children were under the sole or joint guardianship of the Minister for Health and Community Services. Of these 52 were in the care of adopting parents and awaiting finalisation of adoption orders. This figure does not include children detained in Correctional Services institutions as a result of justice proceedings.
2. There were 65 children in substitute care in the Northern region i.e. Darwin, Katherine and East Arnhem regions, of whom 7 were placed with relatives.
3. There were 82 children in substitute care in the Southern region i.e. Alice Springs and Tennant Creek regions of whom 26 were placed with relatives
4. The care arrangements for these children were as follows:
 - (a) 73 children were in foster placements;
 - (b) 3 children were in government run institutions;
 - (c) 12 children were in private institutions;
 - (d) 59 children were placed in other forms of care. Of these 33 were placed within their families, 6 were living independently, 6 were in hospital.
- 5a. Welfare statistics do not correlate the numbers of children
- b. in substitute care with child abuse investigations. Such
- c. detail of a client's history is held in the casework files of the individual welfare workers handling the cases.

The reasons for children being found in need of care are usually a complex of factors which include the reason (or generally the group of reasons) for the breakdown in family care and also an account of the inapplicability or failure of the various preventive and supplementary measures applied by welfare workers to endeavour to keep the child within the home.

An incident of child abuse may not require a child's removal from his family, but conversely the child's removal may be necessary for reasons other than abuse.

The reasons for which a child may be taken into care by a welfare worker or a Holding Order granted by a Justice are recorded as follows:

- o Abandoned;
- o Unable or unwilling to maintain child;
- o Maltreatment;
- o No effective control;
- o Harmful to community.

Orders made by the Family Matters Court however, indicate only the section of the Community Welfare Act under which action is taken.

Child Protection figures are correlated with numbers of reports and of confirmed investigations.

In 1986-87 reports of child abuse were investigated in respect of 392 children. Of these cases 205 were confirmed as actual abuse. The distribution of predominant type of abuse in these confirmed cases was as follows:

° Physical abuse	85
° Sexual abuse	49
° Neglect	65
° Emotional abuse	6

- 5d. The reasons for parents being incapable of caring for children are not recorded other than on individual files. These factors listed in the question would be expected to lead to neglect.
- 5e. Poverty, as such, is never a reason for a child to be taken into care. Welfare Branch administers Family Support and Emergency Financial Assistance programs to alleviate poverty.
- 5f. A further category of children removed from their parents' care is that group subject to juvenile justice action. At the end of April 1988 there were 33 children in detention centres and 9 children on remand.
6. Families fostering children who are in the care of the Minister receive a payment of $58 per week per child plus a sum of up to $10 per week pocket money depending on the age of the child.

Children in non-government institutions are also subject to the same rates of support.

It must be noted that depending upon individual need, discretionary payments may be made to, or on behalf of children in care. These payments may be budgeted against any of a number of program areas depending on the reason for the payment.

Complete details of cost of all aspects of substitute care programs would require extensive detailed scrutiny of all client files.

Many non-government institutions, as well as receiving individual fostering payments for service, also receive grant funds through the departments Grants and Subsidies scheme.

The costing of government run institutions is difficult to break down to individual costs per client as the maintenance of the institutions draws on various budgeting categories and the age, length of stay and individual needs of children continually vary.

- 7&8. Application has been made to the Department of Law for information relevant to these questions but the compilation of the information would be most difficult as welfare client records and court costs would need to be correlated for each court sitting in the Northern Territory. It is moreover unlikely that the duration of individual court activities has been recorded.
9. No record apart from individual client files is kept of this matter. If a child should abscond from care it cannot always be clearly determined if he intended to return to his parents or was motivated by more complex desires.

54. School Councils Regulations Advertising

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

What was the total cost of advertising -

- (a) explaining the changes to Schools Councils Regulations; and
 (b) encouraging parents to be involved in School Councils, from February 1988 to the present time.

ANSWER

There were 3 types of advertisements on this issue:-

(a) Minister's statement on School Councils	$ 6 851
(b) Questions and answers about the regulations	$ 5 091
(c) Things which School Councils are doing	$ 6 501
Total	$18 443

55. Territory Super Plastics

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

1. Has the Trade Development Zone taken away the licence to operate of Territory Super Plastics.
2. What was the nature of and cost of the incentive offered to Territory Super Plastics by the Trade Development Zone.
3. What action is the Trade Development Zone taking to recoup the money it put into Territory Super Plastics.

ANSWER

1. No. The Territory Superplastic factory is currently not operating because of a dispute between the 2 partners concerned. Partners have been notified that unless the dispute was resolved quickly and production commenced the licence would be revoked. Discussions between the partners have failed to resolve the dispute and revocation of the licence will proceed as a matter of course.

2. In the agreement, incentives were offered to reimburse the company for freight costs incurred in relocating machinery, additional electrical wiring to accommodate the Territory Superplastic machinery in the factory on the zone, costs for training locally engaged staff, and export freight costs. No export freight costs were incurred. The cost of other incentives are confidential.
3. The Trade Development Zone is fully secured for recovery of all money paid to Territory Superplastic. A Receiver-Manager was appointed by the Trade Development Zone Authority on 3 March 1988 to take control of the company and its assets while the dispute between the 2 partners was resolved. The Receiver is charged with protecting the interests of the Trade Development Zone and other creditors of the company.

Should the company be wound up the Authority will recover its incentives outlays under its security.

57. Advertising Campaign
'We're Building a Secure Future'

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

1. What is the total cost of the current Northern Territory government advertising campaign on the theme 'We're Building a Secure Future'.
2. How much money is being spent on -
 - (i) television;
 - (ii) radio; and
 - (iii) newspaper advertising,for this campaign.
3. Of the money spent on television advertising, how much is being spent on Imparja.
4. How much money is being spent advertising in each of the newspapers in the Northern Territory.

ANSWER

1. $27 725.41.
2. (i) $21 718.64.
 - (ii) Nil
 - (iii) $ 6 006.77.

3. $ 8 520.94.
4. $ 1 880.17 Sunday Territorian
 $ 2 501.60 Centralian Advocate
$ 1 375.00 NT News
- $ 5 756.77 Total Northern Territory
$ 250.00 Bulletin (Interstate)
- $ 6 000.77 Total overall Newspaper Advertising

58. Illegal Grape Varieties Grown in the Territory

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

1. Is the Minister aware of recent discoveries in the Mildura and Menindee areas of illegal grape varieties that are claimed to endanger the Export Table Grape Market (currently worth some $90m to Australia), which could have introduced new diseases into this country to the detriment of the Table Grape Industry.
2. Are any such illegal varieties being grown in the Territory.
3. Is the variety claimed by Territory Grape Farms to be Perlette, indeed that variety: in light of the fact that Territory Grape Farms Perlette comes in after its Flame Seedless, whereas Perlette from other Territory growers comes in ahead of Flame Seedless.

ANSWER

1. The department has been aware since March that some members of the viticulture industry in New South Wales and Victoria may have illegally imported grape varieties.

Commonwealth Quarantine authorities in cooperation with state Departments of Agriculture and CSIRO have conducted investigations into allegations from various sources that illegally imported table grape varieties are being grown in Australia. Following the detection of table grapes with false trade descriptions in Sydney, several properties in the Sunraysia area were searched over the periods 1-4 and 14-18 March.

As a result, 27 properties belonging to 6 growers or companies in the Mildura and Menindee areas were placed under quarantine. No vines or vegetative material may be removed from these properties.

However, movement of fruit is not being restricted as the disease risk is considered to be minimal.

Though exotic plant diseases were not obvious on inspection of the vineyards, grape cuttings from each property were taken and are being grown in quarantine in Victoria. This is for the purpose of virus indexing and for positive identification of varieties. This process may take up to 2 years.

It appears from initial investigations that at least 6 varieties new to Australia are involved.

Where appropriate, prosecutions are being pursued under the Quarantine Act 1908 and under the Export Control Act 1982. However, these actions may not be finalised until the grape varieties are positively identified.

2. Commonwealth Quarantine authorities have advised that it is not possible to determine if these illegally imported varieties have been planted in the Northern Territory at this stage. This cannot be done until the vines are fruiting towards the end of this year.
3. An anomaly exists regarding the maturity times of the grape variety Perlette in the southern areas of the NT. Under normal circumstances Perlette matures earlier than the variety Flame Seedless. However, the reverse has occurred, that is Flame Seedless matured before Perlette. These maturity times will be confirmed during the 1988 growing season. Maturity time, though indicative of variety, is not a conclusive parameter. If doubt to the identity of the variety exists, Commonwealth Quarantine authorities will take cuttings and grow these in quarantine in Victoria. Confirmation of the identity of the variety may take 2 years.

59. Open Space Development Strategy

Mr BELL to MINISTER for CONSERVATION

Will the Northern Territory government carry out the development objectives outlined in the Open Space Development Strategy prepared by Land Systems Pty Limited, dated September 1986.

ANSWER

The strategy will be implemented by its utilisation as a planning guideline by open space managers as part of their normal operations following environmental assessment in accordance with procedures under the Environment Assessment Act.

60. Freeholding of Special Purpose Leases

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

1. How many Special Purpose Leases were there in the vicinity of -
 - (a) Darwin;
 - (b) Katherine;
 - (c) Tennant Creek;

- (d) Alice Springs; and
 - (e) elsewhere in the Northern Territory as at 1 July 1978.
2. For what purposes had these been granted.
 3. How many of these Special Purpose Leases had been granted at 1 July 1978 on -
 - (a) a rental basis;
 - (b) payment of current market value; or
 - (c) some other basis.
 4. If they were granted on some other basis [3(c)], what was that basis.
 5. How many holders of Special Purpose Leases, as of 1 July 1978 were offered freehold title to lots over which the Special Purpose Leases were held for each of the following periods -
 - (a) the financial year 1978-79;
 - (b) the financial year 1979-80;
 - (c) the financial year 1980-81;
 - (d) the financial year 1981-82;
 - (e) the financial year 1982-83;
 - (f) the financial year 1983-84;
 - (g) the financial year 1984-85;
 - (h) the financial year 1985-86;
 - (j) the financial year 1986-87; and
 - (k) the financial year 1987-88.
 6. On what terms were these Special Purpose Leases offered for the above financial years [5(a) to (k)].
 7. How many of these offers were accepted.
 8. How many Special Purpose Leases were granted in each of the following periods -
 - (a) the financial year 1978-79;
 - (b) the financial year 1979-80;
 - (c) the financial year 1980-81;
 - (d) the financial year 1981-82;

- (e) the financial year 1982-83;
 - (f) the financial year 1983-84;
 - (g) the financial year 1984-85;
 - (h) the financial year 1985-86;
 - (j) the financial year 1986-87; and
 - (k) the financial year 1987-88.
9. For what purposes were these Special Purpose Leases granted for the above financial years [8(a) to (k)]?
10. How many of these Special Purpose Leases had been granted in each of the financial years [8(a) to (k)] on -
- (a) a rental basis;
 - (b) the payment of current market value; or
 - (c) some other basis.
11. If they were granted on some other basis [10(c)], what is that basis.
12. How many of the holders of Special Purpose Leases referred to in Question 8 were offered freehold title to the lots over which the Special Purpose Leases were held for each of the following periods -
- (a) the financial year 1978-79;
 - (b) the financial year 1979-80;
 - (c) the financial year 1980-81;
 - (d) the financial year 1981-82;
 - (e) the financial year 1982-83;
 - (f) the financial year 1983-84;
 - (g) the financial year 1984-85;
 - (h) the financial year 1985-86;
 - (j) the financial year 1986-87; and
 - (k) the financial year 1987-88.
13. On what terms were these Special Purpose Leases offered for the above financial years [12(a) to (k)]?
14. How many of these Special Purpose Lease offers were accepted for the above financial years [12(a) to (k)]?

ANSWER

There have been 543 Special Purposes Leases issued for a wide variety of purposes since 1950. A large number of these have been either surrendered, forfeited or converted to an alternative form of tenure.

The detail sought by the honourable member is not readily available and would require a lengthy and expensive exercise to compile.

The government's current policies regarding Special Purposes Leases have been the subject of recent debate in the Assembly and are available by reference to Hansard.

Specific questions relating to any individual Special Purpose Lease the honourable member is concerned about will be addressed if requested.

63. Home Loan Mortgage Transfers

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer the Minister to his press release of Monday, 6 June 1988 in which he said that there had been 457 transfers under the Home Purchase Assistance Scheme regulations promulgated on 31 August 1984.

1. How many of these transfers were within -
 - (a) Darwin;
 - (b) Katherine;
 - (c) Tennant Creek;
 - (d) Alice Springs; and
 - (e) elsewhere.
2. How many people made application for the transfer of their mortgage either verbally or in writing in each of the above centres.
3. What reasons were given for the rejection of applications.
4. How many of those applicants (in Question 2) were told, either verbally or in writing, that the regulations prevented the transfer of a mortgage within the town in which they lived.

ANSWER

1. (a) 402; (b) 7; (c) 2; (d) 46; (e) Nil.

2. Verbal applications are not accepted.

Applications in writing:	Darwin	489
	Alice Springs	53
	Katherine	12
	Tennant Creek	2

3. Most common reasons for rejections:

- Poor conduct of previous account;
- insufficient security offered; lack of equity;
- current ownership of houses other than those specified in transfer application.

4. None that I am aware of as the regulations do not prevent the transfer of mortgage within the same town.

Job Creation

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, to illustrate the importance of my question, I have a graph that shows the Country Liberal Party's promised job growth against the monthly average employment figures for the last 12 months. Mr Speaker, as you can see, but unfortunately our radio listeners cannot, the gap last month was 7000 jobs and it is widening. In the lead up to the 1987 election, the government stated that it had plans to create over 1000 jobs per annum. Where are those plans? Where are those jobs?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Leader of the Opposition has resorted to some interesting theatricals which we are not used to in the House.

Mr Ede: You do not understand the words.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! In the past, I have advised honourable members about interjections during question time, particularly as question time is being broadcast. I ask the member for Stuart to listen in silence.

Mr PERRON: Mr Speaker, the honourable member has resorted to using graphs in the Assembly. Perhaps he should table it but, because it is as big as his desk ...

Mr Smith: I am happy to table a copy.

Mr PERRON: ... perhaps he can set it up outside where members may check its accuracy. Having regard to the accuracy of other statements made by the opposition, particularly in recent times, the public would have good reason to suspect its accuracy.

The government is developing the Northern Territory and I will be speaking more about this in the statement that I foreshadowed this morning. In that statement, the honourable member will be given an indication of the directions this government is taking. It is true that the population of the Northern Territory has been declining of late and this is unfortunate. However, honourable members should bear in mind that, in the period following self-government, the Territory experienced phenomenal growth rates - something like 4 or 5 times those for the rest of Australia - and it was inevitable that, sooner or later, the growth rate would flatten out. Unfortunately, it has done more than flatten out; it has declined.

We cannot ensure that the job-creation rate in the Northern Territory is steady throughout a term of the government's activities because, of course, there are many things which are beyond our control, particularly some of the treatment we receive from time to time at the hands of the federal government. It would not have been unreasonable for the Territory government ...

Mr Bell: It is always somebody else.

Mr PERRON: Not at all, Mr Speaker. Would it have been unreasonable for the Territory government to assume that the federal government might have fulfilled some of its promises over the past few years which would have helped Territory development? I cite the Darwin Airport as an example. No lesser man than the Prime Minister of this country turned the first sod on this project and a vast sum of taxpayers' money was spent on it following that occasion which was, of course, very well publicised just prior to a federal election. Some $18m or $20m was spent on the site, after which the project was set aside. Territorians are supposed to wait for the airport the Prime Minister promised them. The Leader of the Opposition apparently does not think that the state of the Darwin and Alice Springs Airports is detrimental to the progress and development of the Northern Territory.

Mr Smith: When are you going to answer the question?

Mr PERRON: I suggest that he go out into the community and talk with some business people, some investors and some people in the tourist industry and learn the facts of life. I will not pursue this matter further now. The Leader of the Opposition will hear in my statement this morning of the directions of this government for growth and development in the Northern Territory.

Demolition of Marron's Newsagency in Alice Springs

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Recent media attention has focused on the demolition of Marron's newsagency in the Todd Street Mall in Alice Springs. Originally it was advertised that the redevelopment of the site would utilise the facade of the original building and I ask him 2 questions. Firstly, why did this not happen? Secondly, what is being done to ensure that Alice Springs retains some of its older, important buildings?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I must admit that I was taken by surprise when I heard that the building had been totally demolished, and I believe that you experienced a similar feeling. This was because it had been publicly advertised that an application to the Planning Authority to redevelop the site included provision for the retention of the verandah and the facade of the original building.

Most people, myself included, fondly remember buying a newspaper or magazine at this rather distinctive newsagency. I believe that most of us also sensibly realised that the building, as it was, could not be expected to be retained forever. I think everyone was reasonably satisfied with the compromise that was proposed by the developer - that is, to retain the historic facade of the building for use in the proposed development. Even the Alice Springs Branch of the National Trust commented publicly that it was able to accept the proposed compromise as a sensible solution. I might add that I have been approached by a number of long-time Alice Springs residents since this unfortunate happening who have told me that the Marron's verandah that most of us knew was not the original. Apparently, the one that was there was a replacement after the original was destroyed by a somewhat careless motorist in the 1950s. It seems that, like the original axe with 2 new handles and a new blade, everyone accepted it as being one and the same.

The proposal was advertised publicly and the Planning Authority - and, as all members are aware, it has a majority of Alice Springs members on it - gave the go-ahead and everyone appeared to be happy. But, after that, problems arose. The architects and the engineers involved in the reconstruction found that the facade of the old newsagency was unable to cope structurally with its inclusion in the new building. The developer made an approach to the Planning Authority for its consent to make a change to the original approval. The Planning Authority considered the matter and the change was granted. The original facade lacked structural integrity. Again, I believe the decision was justified under the circumstances. However, at the time, the general public - including myself and, I understand, yourself, Mr Speaker - were unable to understand what was occurring. This was because the original proposal was advertised to the public but the change consented to by the Planning Authority was not. Understandably, some people were totally disillusioned by what they perceived to be a deliberate act of bad faith.

In reality, what occurred highlighted an aspect of the planning process that needs attention. It is clear that any changes the authority proposes to make to a previously advertised course of action should themselves be advertised. Had such a course of action been followed in the case of Marron's newsagency, I believe that the end result would have been unchanged. However, I am sure that people in the community would have been far happier if the reasons for the changes to the development had been public information prior to those changes taking place.

I have commenced a process which is intended to look at the shortcomings in this area of the planning process and I intend to discuss the matter with the Chairman of the Planning Authority.

Mr Bell interjecting.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I find it very difficult to continue whilst the member for MacDonnell persists with his inane interjections. They are, however, typical of him. He has a tendency to form fixed ideas which bear no relation to the facts and then to continue to open his mouth to regurgitate these crazy ideas. They bear no relation to fact. I am sure that a number of people in the community are concerned to find out what actually occurred. Obviously, the member for MacDonnell wishes to prevent people finding out the truth. That is not unusual for him. It fits in with his modus operandi.

Mr Speaker, I can assure you and I can assure members of the Territory community that I will continue to pursue this matter until I am sure that people understand the situation, regardless of the attempts by the member for MacDonnell to muzzle me. I have commenced a process of examination of the shortcomings in this area of the planning process and I intend to discuss the matter further with the Chairman of the Planning Authority. I would certainly like to reassure the House and the Territory community of this government's commitment to preserving our past. I believe that a balance must be struck between the legitimate aspirations and rights of owners and developers of private property and the needs of Territorians as a whole in terms of the preservation of their structural heritage.

Mr Speaker, our commitment in the Alice Springs area is very easily seen at the old jail and the old Telegraph Station. I ask you, Mr Speaker, where else in Australia would the original village of any city still remain intact? Alice Springs has its old courthouse, the Residency, the Hartley Street School, the old Alice Inn and the Ghan project, a project that I am sure you are fully aware of, Mr Speaker, and which represents a magnificent effort by the community of Alice Springs, assisted by the government, to preserve part of our heritage. Adelaide House and Les Hansen House are other examples. I personally handed the lease of Les Hansen House to the National Trust last Wednesday. That did not receive much attention in the local newspaper although I saw a headline relating to a claim that some other building was saved through a last minute flurry of action. I was not aware of that. However, I was certainly aware that the government handed over the lease of Les Hansen House to the National Trust last Wednesday in line with its commitment to ensure that our heritage is preserved.

I have met with the Alice Springs Branch of the National Trust. It has undertaken to supply me with details and background information in relation to properties it is concerned about in Alice Springs. I have also asked the Conservation Commission to review and to report to me regarding heritage matters. However, I will certainly not be taking action spurred merely by political rhetoric. The government's record stands firm and I am sure that the utterances of the opposition regarding these matters will be taken in the context in which they are delivered, as an attempt to gain some cheap publicity for the purposes of the by-election.

Demolition of Marron's Newsagency in Alice Springs

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Mr Speaker, together with yourself as member for Braitling, I was seriously concerned about the destruction of Marron's newsagency. On the basis of the minister's answer to the previous question, I have one short question. Can he confirm that the Chairman of the Planning Authority knew of the impending destruction of Marron's newsagency before the event?

ANSWER.

Mr Speaker, obviously the honourable member has a problem with his ears because I explained what occurred. I will, however, repeat it. Originally, an application was made to the Planning Authority for the demolition of Marron's newsagency but the development plans provided for the facade of Marron's - the verandah and the front wall - to be retained and incorporated into the new development. It is rather a simple procedure to understand and I hope the member for MacDonnell understands what that means. Secondly, I pointed out that that was advertised publicly. The community was aware of what was planned and agreed to it.

Mr Bell: The member for Braitling was not.

Mr MANZIE: The member for MacDonnell scoffs, Mr Speaker. I wish he would listen carefully and possibly talk to people in the National Trust who commented on the fact that the facade was to be retained. They thought that was a reasonable compromise in respect of the redevelopment of the Todd Street Mall.

The developer came back to the Planning Authority because of problems relating to the structural integrity of the facade. He applied to the Planning Authority for consent to replace the original facade with something which was similar in design, that retained the old feel of the building, but which was new and had structural integrity. Unfortunately, that application for a change was not publicly advertised. If it had been, I believe many of the problems relating to the destruction would not have occurred because people would have understood what was happening. Consent was given for the changes to be made and, as a result, the entire building was removed with the intention of replacing it with something of similar design.

I have expressed my concern and I have also commented on what I consider a deficiency in planning procedures which allow changes to be made to approved developments without those changes being advertised. I will be examining that matter to ensure that those sort of circumstances do not occur again. I hope that the member for MacDonnell now understands the situation. This is the third time that I have explained it publicly and possibly he needs it explained 3 times before he understands. I am quite happy to give him a private briefing if he still has problems understanding the processes involved.

Northern Territory University

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

During the last sittings of the Assembly, I referred him to press reports relating to the amalgamation of the Darwin Institute of Technology and the University College of the Northern Territory. Last weekend's Sunday Territorian informed us that the amalgamation would involve not only the Darwin Institute of Technology and the University College of the Northern Territory, but also TAFE. What are the latest developments relating to that proposed amalgamation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. The report in the Sunday Territorian was accurate to the extent that a decision has been taken to establish a Northern Territory university by bringing together the campuses of the University College of the Northern Territory and the Darwin Institute of Technology, including the TAFE sector. Legislation to implement this merger will be introduced at these sittings of the Legislative Assembly with a view to having it concluded in October. I need not remind honourable members that the bill to establish a Northern Territory university will be a milestone for higher education in the Territory. I will have more to say on that most important matter when I introduce the bill to the Assembly.

I might say that, throughout this whole exercise, there has been a tremendous amount of goodwill on the part of the people involved, particularly the staff and students at the University College and the Darwin Institute of Technology. I thank them for the way in which they have approached this matter. The report in the Sunday Territorian mentioned Queensland University accreditation. That comment related to the University of Queensland's courses; it did not relate to the other courses provided at the Darwin Institute of Technology.

I might take the opportunity to comment on the interim arrangements and the appointment of the vice-chancellor of the new Northern Territory university. The position of the permanent vice-chancellor will be advertised throughout Australia and overseas in a format that is common to advertising for such positions. The final decision on the permanent vice-chancellor will be taken by the university council when it is established.

As far as the appointment of an interim vice-chancellor or an interim chief executive officer is concerned, during the past few months there has been a great deal of speculation about this position. I must say that I have been very disappointed at some of the nasty remarks that have been made about the Warden of the University College and the Director of the Darwin Institute of Technology. Both these men have played a very important role in developing educational opportunities for Territorians, and I apologise to those 2 gentlemen for the treatment that they have received during this period.

Mr Speaker, I am sure that you would be aware that Professor Thomson has all the qualifications that a position as an interim vice-chancellor or an interim chief executive officer would require. Before announcing who has been appointed to this position, I indicate to honourable members that, included on the selection panel were the vice-chancellor of the University of New England as well as the vice-chancellor of the Wollongong University, together with the acting vice-chancellor of the Curtin University of Technology and the Director of the Queensland Institute of Technology.

Mr Speaker, Emeritus Professor David Caro of Melbourne has been appointed the interim -chief executive officer of what will be our own NT university. Professor Caro is an eminent scholar and university administrator. He was formally the vice-chancellor of the University of Tasmania and, until his recent retirement, he was the vice-chancellor of the University of Melbourne. Professor Caro has a distinguished employment history: he served in Darwin in 1942 with the RAAF; in 1952, he was a lecturer, University of Melbourne; in 1954, a senior lecturer at the University of Melbourne; in 1958, a reader at the University of Melbourne; in 1961-72, he was Professor of Experimental Physics, University of Melbourne; in 1972-77, he was the Deputy vice-chancellor of the University of Melbourne; in 1978-82, he was the vice-chancellor of the University of Tasmania; and, in 1982 until his recent retirement, he was the vice-chancellor of the University of Melbourne. He was also a member of the Tertiary Education Commission of Tasmania, Chairman of the Australian Vice-Chancellors Committee and Chairman of the Antarctic Research Policy Advisory Committee.

Apart from being one of Australia's most distinguished academics and university administrators, Professor Caro has had recent experience in managing a merger during his service in Tasmania and we are indeed most fortunate, I believe, that a person of Professor Caro's standing has accepted the position of interim chief executive officer for the Northern Territory university. I am sure that his involvement during this interim period will assist us greatly during the development stage of our university.

The present University College Warden, Professor Jim Thomson, and the present Director of the Darwin Institute of Technology, Mr Kevin Davis, will continue the day-to-day administration of their respective institutions until the institutions merge to form the new Northern Territory university.

Mr Speaker, I am extremely pleased that a person of such national and international standing as Professor Caro has been found to serve as the interim chief executive officer and I hope that honourable members share my views. I believe that we have the opportunity to put together a university that will provide top class undergraduate and postgraduate courses to people in the Northern Territory and I look forward to honourable members taking part in the debate when I table the bill for the introduction of a Northern Territory university.

SPEAKER'S STATEMENT Supplementary Questions

Mr SPEAKER: Honourable members, I have been giving the matter of supplementary questions consideration since the last sittings. Some members have asked a number of such questions which, in my view, were not truly supplementary. As members are aware, I make every effort to allocate questions equally between both sides of the Chamber. In the past, I have not counted supplementary questions as part of that process and thus some members, who consistently ask supplementary questions, receive an advantage. The House of Representative's practice is spelt out in Pettifer at page 497. In that Chamber, prior to 1950, questions based on answers to earlier questions at question time, including an answer to the immediately preceding question, were not permitted. The introduction of supplementary questions by an amendment to standing orders permitted members to ask questions based on previous answers at question time. It did not, and still does not, permit immediate supplementary questions. The principle of alternating the call between the right and the left is strictly adhered to.

The practice has developed in the Legislative Assembly of permitting immediate supplementary questions requesting elucidation of an answer or part of an answer just given. I might add that this does not accord with the House of Representatives practice. I believe that, provided this system is not overworked, it has its advantages, especially in a small Chamber. The problem is for the Chair to ensure that this system is not used to the detriment of the rights of other members. I am therefore of the opinion that the matter is one which should be considered, firstly, by the Standing Orders Committee and then by this Chamber so that the wishes of honourable members may be taken fully into account when determining the future practice to be followed.

Demolition of Marron's Newsagency in Alice Springs

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

Can he confirm that he was not advised by the Chairman of the Planning Authority of the change in the Planning Authority attitude to the preservation of the facade of Marron's newsagency? Secondly, can he state why, if that is the case, he was not advised of that change in status, particularly in relation to section 32 of the Planning Act which quite clearly lays down the responsibility of the authority to submit to the minister proposals on development of land or planning matters? Thirdly, can he indicate whether he has a policy whereby the Planning Authority should advise him of any proposed changes to any classified building in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is pretty obvious that the answer to the first question is no. The answer to the second is that there is no need to advise the minister of extremely minor changes.

Mr Smith: Extremely minor!

Mr Ede: What!

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, this is ridiculous. The interjections indicate that there is absolutely no attempt by members opposite to try to understand what occurred. They are concerned merely with trying to gain cheap political advantage.

The original application by the developer related to a development on the Todd Street Mall which was to retain a facade, and the development was approved in accordance with the provision of the act. There was no change in the development and there was no change in what was occurring on the site. There was a slight change in a detail relating to the Planning Authority's approval which, when the development is completed, will make no difference to the visual aspect or the siting of the building. Let it sink into the minds of members opposite that the provision that the Leader of the Opposition spoke about was not necessary for that change to be made. I have started a process which will ensure certain things occur in the future. I am sure that it would not have changed the development but public advertising of that change would have made the community aware of what was occurring.

I will put it very simply: the building remains the same, the design remains the same and the appearance remains the same. A small aspect of the consent was changed and I will ensure that that does not happen again. That is very simple. I think that the Territory community should be made aware that the people opposite do not care about truth or answers. They continually interject. As is plain for anyone to hear, their manners in this House are abominable. I do not know what their parents taught them but it is not what my parents taught me and it is not how I taught my children to behave. They could do with some lessons in etiquette.

Draft Bills on Domestic Violence

Mr HATTON to CHIEF MINISTER

I remind the Chief Minister that, during the last sittings of this Assembly, draft bills in respect of domestic violence were tabled. Is it still the intention of the government to proceed with the introduction of domestic violence legislation and, if so, when?

Mr Ede interjecting.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it may be news for the member for Stuart to learn that there are people in the Northern Territory who are interested in the subject of domestic violence even if he is not. It is the government's intention to enact legislation on this very complex subject of domestic violence in our society today. The former Chief Minister tabled a legislative package on domestic violence during the last sittings in order to allow for public comment and debate over a reasonable period. The tabled legislation was circulated to 97 groups throughout the Northern Territory, including the legal profession, women's groups, other bodies and interested individuals.

Many of these groups have provided valuable comment and the feedback has been overwhelmingly supportive of the proposed course of action. However, a number of matters have been raised which warrant serious consideration and these aspects will require further input from magistrates, police etc to allow the government to finetune the legislation. The government is still awaiting comments from a number of organisations, including the Judges of the Supreme Court, the Family Law Court, the Northern Territory Women's Advisory Council, the Human Rights Commission, the Northern Territory Women Lawyers Association, the Northern Territory Law Society and the Department of Aboriginal Affairs. These groups have requested more time to prepare their submissions. Accordingly, it is my intention to introduce the bills in the October sittings of the Legislative Assembly which will fulfil the government's commitment to have legislation in place by the end of this year. The new timetable will allow the proposed public awareness campaign to commence at the same time as the legislation. I anticipate that the scheme itself will commence operating on approximately 1 March 1989.

Flood Mitigation in Alice Springs

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

What progress has occurred towards flood mitigation in Alice Springs since the minister's report to the Assembly in June, particularly in relation to sand mining and the possible building of a dam wall?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for the opportunity to indicate the correct position in relation to the Alice Springs flood mitigation proposals. Naturally, the government is taking very seriously its responsibilities for the Alice Springs community and the potential flood risk to that town. Casual observers in other parts of Australia find it hard to relate to the fact that Alice Springs is a major flood prone area but residents know full well the havoc that can occur. The flood in March this year presented serious problems.

The 400 km² catchment area up stream from Alice Springs has, by virtue of its steep and rocky nature, the potential to deliver floods of major proportions to the town. Heavy rain can result in large flash floods occurring with little warning, often at night. A recently-completed study has found that a 1-in-100-year flood in Alice Springs could cause damage costing $60m. For the benefit of honourable members, I should explain that a 1-in-100-year flood means a 1% chance of such a flood occurring in any year. In such a flood, it is estimated that more than 2000 houses and units would be affected and more than 500 commercial premises. Admittedly, the risk is not large, but the potential remains and the government is implementing the necessary plans to minimise flood damage.

Many flood mitigation measures have already been put in place. These include the flood-proofing of buildings, zoning arrangements, building and development controls, flood insurance, public information and education, flood forecasting, warning and evacuation plans, levees such as those around the water-pumping station, retarding basins in the new urban areas and channel improvements in the Todd River. Surveys and maps which chart the extent and depth of previous floods have also been completed. Sand extraction from the Todd River, which the member for Sadadeen mentioned, is expected to start very shortly. Some 3 months ago, the Department of Mines and Energy called for expressions of interest in such a program and guidelines have been prepared in consultation with the Alice Springs Town Council. We are awaiting a response from the council, which we expect to receive within days, before we give the signal for sand extraction to start. The honourable member would be aware that a considerable amount of sand has already been removed from near the causeway and the process will continue as soon as we have the council go-ahead. Sand will be taken from areas in the river which regularly cause problems during high water flows and the program will be repeated annually for the next 5 years.

However, the removal of sand from the Todd is by no means a complete flood mitigation scheme. The construction of a flood mitigation dam is critical to the success of proper flood mitigation measures. A drilling rig is currently active at the Emily Creek site completing tests for a geotechnical and hydrological report being prepared for the government by Gutteridge, Haskins and Davey.

Mr Ede: It is not.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I hear an interjection from the member for Stuart which illustrates that he does not know what is going on in his own patch. In fact, the drilling rig has come from interstate. I can assure him that it is in the area and that it is about to proceed with drilling.

Mr Ede: It is certainly not drilling now.

Mr COULTER: You said it is not there. You do not even know what is going on in your own area.

Mr Ede: I said it is not drilling.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, when those tests are finished in the near future, the rig will move to the Telegraph Station site to complete a similar study at that location. To gather the necessary technical information, 4 holes will be drilled. Reports on the viability of the 2 sites will be with the government by the end of the year and a decision can then be quickly made about the site where construction of a flood mitigation dam can proceed.

I do not want to pre-empt the findings of those reports, Mr Speaker, but I have to say that previous studies have shown that the Emily Creek site would have limited value in terms of flood mitigation. It is somewhat ironic that the opposition and its hangers-on have sought to make mischief about the Telegraph Station site for their own political reasons. They have alleged that a recreation lake is the government's priority at the site. In fact, in all probability the studies will show that the Emily Creek site would be a far better option for a recreation dam whilst the Telegraph Station offers a superior alternative for flood mitigation purposes. I stress once again that the government is not progressing with any thought of constructing a recreational facility in Alice Springs. The motivation is to build a dam which will protect Alice Springs from flood disaster.

Less than 2 weeks ago, I had an opportunity to brief a group of Alice Springs residents about the flood mitigation dam proposal, including the CLP candidate for the Flynn by-election June Tuzewski. She is fully across the subject and is seeking to be kept fully informed as the results of the studies become available. I urge any Alice Springs resident who wants to discuss flood mitigation plans to consult her. I guarantee that she knows more about the subject than the 2 Alice Springs-based members sitting directly opposite.

Health Services at Ngukurr

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

What is the current situation with respect to the health services at Ngukurr?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. I asked him to wait until halfway through question time so that the shadow spokesman for health would have the opportunity to ask the question. Given that there has been a great deal of comment recently over a TB outbreak in the Katherine region and about health services being supplied at Ngukurr, the deafening silence on these issues from the shadow spokesman for health clearly indicates how little attention the opposition pays to areas such as Katherine. About the only parallel I can draw to the opposition's interest in the subject is the amount of attention the Leader of the Opposition pays ...

Mr Bell interjecting.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The member for MacDonnell will withdraw that remark.

Mr BELL: Mr Speaker, I unreservedly withdraw the allegation that the Minister for Health and Community Services is a dill.

Mr DALE: Mr Speaker, the amount of attention that the shadow spokesman on health and community services pays to the Katherine region and the top end of Australia is matched only by the attention that the Leader of the Opposition gives to Alice Springs. I believe he has been there only once or twice in the last 12 months. I am sure that he will increase his strike rate over the next couple of weeks. The first thing he will have to do is introduce himself to the people of Alice Springs, but I am sure that that can only help our cause.

There has been a great deal of comment over the last few days about the health services in Ngukurr particularly in relation to a number of reports of TB in the Katherine region. The fact is that our policies for the delivery of health services to Aboriginal communities have the flexibility to encompass a number of options. These options have been discussed with the community council and other people in the Ngukurr area. First of all, there is the availability of DAA funding and some communities, particularly in central Australia, have availed themselves of that particular source. That support is provided by DAA from Canberra. The second option is for grant-in-aid funding from the Northern Territory government and this issue provides the council with the funds to operate health services at an agreed level. This support comes through the Northern Territory Department of Health and Community Services.

As I said, these options have been discussed with the community at Ngukurr and we are quite happy to negotiate with it for whatever standard of health service it might wish to establish there. We have had some problems in providing health services there. One of the major issues has been housing for the health workers at Ngukurr and, because there was a lack of suitable accommodation and, I stress, after a great deal of communication with the people at Ngukurr, the 2 sisters were removed from that area in April. They were replaced by a male sister, and I like the note that I have here. It says that he was accommodated in the police station. I do not think that means in the cells; I am sure that it means in the living quarters at the police station. He was there only until mid-July, and has now been replaced by another health sister who has been living in the clinic itself. Construction of the house will be completed shortly and will coincide with the arrival of 2 sisters who have been recruited to work at Ngukurr. Those negotiations are ongoing and I am sure that the people of Ngukurr will have an appropriate health service.

It is appropriate at this time that I give some details on the report of TB in the Katherine and Roper Valley regions over recent times. Up until 12 August 1988, 15 new cases and 2 reactivated cases of TB were diagnosed and notified over the past 12 months throughout the Katherine region. Of these, 14 came from the Barunga Roper Valley area, commonly known as the Roper mobile area. Notifications of TB occurred after a process of contact tracing, investigations and confirmation are therefore the end result of considerable time and effort.

The process of detecting TB in an individual involves firstly a Mantoux test. The skin will react to this injection if the individual is infected. Secondly, an x-ray is taken to confirm the results of the Mantoux test. The individual is then hospitalised for more specific tests - that is, sputum analysis - and is treated and notified on the basis of the overall results. Mantoux surveys of the Roper mobile area have been under way for some months and are still continuing throughout the Katherine region. It is important that these surveys are conducted throughout the region because of the mobility of the Aboriginal population in that area.

Given the known movement patterns of these communities, it was decided by the professional people to screen people from Mataranka, Duck Creek, Hodgson Downs, Hodgson River, Nutwood Downs and Urapunga. These communities were advised of this early in July. The mobile x-ray survey of the Roper mobile area, involving 6 full-time members, commenced on 2 August 1988 and was expected to take 2 weeks to complete. Approximately 500 people will have been x-rayed.

At this point, it is necessary to understand the difference between screening and contact tracing. Screening requires x-raying the total community whereas contact tracing involves investigating those people identified as close associates of a patient. The process at Ngukurr was one of contact tracing. Approximately 70 close contacts of TB-infected patients were investigated by means of the skin test. Of these, only 5 to 10 required a follow up chest x-ray. These contacts were made outside of Ngukurr. Of the 17 TB cases positively diagnosed, 2 are now living at Ngukurr and current indications are that they acquired their illness outside of Ngukurr.

The final results of this TB screening exercise will not be known for at least another 2 weeks. I will give members a brief update in a moment. In the meantime, contingency plans are being developed should the survey produce an unexpectedly large number of individuals requiring further investigation or treatment.

Finally, I am advised that fit, healthy people who come in contact with an open case of TB are unlikely to catch the disease. Several weeks or months of close contact are required. There is an insignificant risk to visitors entering these communities for short periods of time. I am advised that one tourist from Mt Isa, who went through the Katherine region, bought herself a didgeridoo whilst she was there. She went back to Mt Isa, saw the national news coverage of the story from Ngukurr and rang our people to ask what she should do because she felt sure she must have contracted TB. That just shows what the media can do.

Results of the survey to date, and I am talking about advice I have received this very morning, show that 402 people have been x-rayed, 373 have had the Mantoux test and positive results to the Mantoux test were found in 38 people. I am advised that these figures are approximate only. A specialist chest physician from the Communicable Diseases Unit is in Katherine now to read all of the survey films. The specialist is expected to complete his task by the end of this week and I will be happy to report further to this Assembly when the findings of those surveys are known.

I cannot let go by this opportunity to compliment the work of people from the Communicable Diseases Unit in the Department of Health and Community Services and also the excellent contribution of our Aboriginal health workers in the region. Most honourable members will probably be aware that I have put a proposal for a new career structure for Aboriginal Health Workers which, at the moment, is being further negotiated with the unions. I am very hopeful that those negotiations can be brought to a very rapid conclusion so that those people have a professional career path which they can pursue.

I will give an illustration of the magnificent work being done by the Aboriginal health workers. An English woman tourist was injured in a serious road accident near Mandorah a year or so ago. The first person with any qualifications whatsoever on the scene was an Aboriginal health worker called Harry Sing from Belyuen. This woman had a badly crushed arm. Mr Sing attended to her in the first instance and an operation on the woman's arm was carried out later by Dr John Hargreaves who is regarded as one of the leading people in the field of leprosy and microsurgery in Australia and, for that matter, throughout the world. After the initial treatment, the woman went back to England. She flew back to Darwin only last week to thank the people who had treated her, including Mr Sing. The woman's arm had been saved to just above the wrist. The specialists who undertook the follow-up treatment said that, if appropriate treatment had not been given to her at the scene of the accident, she would have lost the arm to the shoulder.

Mr Speaker, I think this speaks volumes about and is a classic illustration of the tremendous work that is being done by our Aboriginal health workers. They ought to be supported. I would certainly like the opposition spokesman on health to get himself across the subject.

Heritage Legislation

Mr EDE to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer him to the destruction of Turner House on 25 May 1986. I have the newspaper reports of that incident with me and he may like to peruse them as he was not in charge of that portfolio at the time. I might remind him that, following that destruction, the opposition introduced legislation to safeguard places registered with the National Trust. In light of that destruction and further destruction ...

Mr COULTER: A point of order, Mr Speaker! This is not the adjournment debate. Standing Order 109 is quite specific in relation to questions to a minister. I will quote it for the benefit of the member for Stuart:

Questions may be put to a minister relating to public affairs, to proceedings pending in the Assembly or to any other matter of administration for which he is responsible.

Mr Speaker, the member for Stuart has been on his feet now for 5 minutes and has not asked a question.

Mr SPEAKER: The honourable member is allowed a reasonable preamble but I request that he ask his question. I advise all honourable members that, once I have made up my mind with or without debate on points of order, I will make a ruling. In some cases, I will allow comments and, in others, I do not require them.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, returning to Marron's newsagency which, as reported on the front page of the Centralian Advocate Newspaper, you yourself referred to as 'a bloody disgrace' ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! Whilst I may have used those words outside the Chamber, I will not allow them inside. I ask the honourable member to withdraw that remark.

Mr EDE: Mr Speaker, I withdraw your remark.

Mr Speaker, the matter itself is far too serious for that sort of levity. In view of both those instances and the postmaster's residence ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will ask his question.

Mr EDE: Will the honourable minister indicate a date by which he will introduce decent heritage legislation which will stop this wholesale vandalism of the heritage of the Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, following that beautiful lecture on the history of some of the events at Alice Springs in the past few years, I think that a simple yes or no answer might be too short. I will try to explain to members and to the general community what our attitude is towards heritage matters and, in doing so, contradict some of the assertions that have been made quite incorrectly by the member for Stuart.

I do remember Turner House, Mr Speaker. I found it to be an excellent venue and an excellent restaurant. In fact, in the very week of its unfortunate demise, I had an excellent meal there with a number of acquaintances. I must admit that there was a tug at my heart strings when I discovered the building had been demolished. However, we cannot stand still in time. There will always be occasions when progress and development overtake the past. We must ensure that we look after some of our history but this government cannot and will not preserve things simply for preservation's sake. We must ensure that we create a climate which allows sensible development to occur and which allows us to retain some of our history ...

Mr Smith: That's what we are after.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, we just had another interjection from the Leader of the Opposition. Brilliant stuff!

I will repeat what I said earlier. Our commitment to heritage matters in the Alice Springs area is very clear and it is very easily seen. I am sure the Leader of the Opposition will visit Alice Springs during the next few weeks. If he had taken his duty seriously, he would have been to Alice Springs already and he would have seen the old jail - a great example of the heritage of Alice Springs. The old Telegraph Station is another example. It is the only place I can think of in Australia where the original village is still there. The old courthouse, the Residency, Les Hansen House, Hartley Street School, the old Alice Inn, the Ghan project - I insist that he take time out from his busy schedule to visit Alice Springs in the next few weeks and see what actions have been taken.

To come back to the Marron's newsagency example, no matter what sort of legislation was in place, we would not have been able to stop what occurred there nor what occurred with Turner House. Legislation is not the answer. I pointed out where a small change in the mechanism of the process of approvals would have prevented what occurred in respect of Marron's newsagency occurring without public notice. That is quite different from its not occurring at all. I will repeat it very slowly for the member of Stuart. It was intended to keep the facade of the building but the engineers pointed out that the structure was such that that was impossible. The architects came up with something sympathetic to the historical concept. The Leader of the Opposition says that I was not told. How ridiculous! Does he think that the Planning Authority has to come to me every time that it gives approval, for example, to change clay bricks for cement bricks or change approved plumbing fixtures to another wall? Of course that does not have to be referred to the minister. How ridiculous! What an assertion!

As I pointed out earlier, when the Planning Authority makes significant changes to a development proposal, I believe that those changes need to be advertised.

Mr Ede: And that is all. That is all.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! There have been far too many interjections during the answer. There will be no more.

Mr MANZIE: Thank you, Mr Speaker. I have pointed out quite clearly that I am going to change the mechanisms so that such incidents do not recur. Everyone can rest assured that the Planning Authority in Alice Springs includes 4 former members of the Alice Springs Town Council. I believe that we have to set up a situation which allows the community input through appropriate channels and, if there is a need to change mechanisms, as there appears to be in this case, that will be done. However, to propose that heritage legislation is the absolute answer and then to demand a commitment is simply naive. It is, however, typical of the opposition which would like to see history stand still. It does not want to see jobs provided. It does not want to see any development. It wants to see the Territory go backwards. We on this side of the House will not let that happen.

Northern Territory Loan Debt

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Yesterday, he confirmed that the Northern Territory loan debt was $1300m which is over $7000 per head of population in the Northern Territory. Would he confirm that this figure does not include statutory authority loan debts of approximately $150m?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would have to check that for the honourable member before being able to confirm it. I am sure that I can do that during the course of today without any problem.

Flood Mitigation in Alice Springs

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

The Hansard of yesterday contained comments and interjections from the member for Stuart which indicated his belief that drilling work for flood mitigation tests at Emily Creek had not started because of objections by Aboriginal traditional owners. Can the minister give details of the situation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, yesterday, the member for Stuart indicated, by way of interjection as usual, that drilling work at Emily Creek had not started because agreement had not been obtained from the Aboriginal traditional owners. In fact, it was rotten bad luck for him because, not only had it not started, as he had suggested, but it had finished. The member for Stuart is wrong again. His casual throwaway lines usually are wrong judging from my experience in this House. As I said, the drilling tests were completed 2 days ago.

In answer to the question on this matter yesterday, I mentioned that the CLP candidate for Flynn, June Tuzewski, had been fully briefed on the fundamentals of flood mitigation plans and that Alice Springs residents would be better served by consulting with her on any matter concerning this subject than with the members opposite. Within one day, that has proved to be sound advice. The member really does not know what is going on in his own patch, as I said yesterday. I am not referring to the honourable member for Sadadeen when I say 'members opposite', as he does happen to have some information about flood mitigation in the Northern Territory and certainly a lot more than the member for Stuart.

The drilling rig at Emily Creek is now in the process of moving to the Telegraph Station site to continue the geotechnical and hydrological studies on flood mitigation in that area. Four holes will be drilled to determine the scientific information needed and a report will be supplied to the government before the end of the year. A decision can then be made about construction of the flood mitigation dam.

Since the Alice Springs flood of March this year, there has been a constant campaign of misinformation about the government's flood mitigation plans. The member for Stuart does himself no credit at all as an active participant in that campaign. His statements on the issue should be treated with extreme caution by Alice Springs residents.

Flood Mitigation in Alice Springs

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

I refer to an answer he gave yesterday on the question of flood mitigation in Alice Springs: 'A drilling rig is currently active at the Emily Creek site completing tests for geotechnical and hydrological reports'. He continued: 'Mr Speaker, when those tests are finished in the near future, the rig will move to the Telegraph Station site'. In light of the information just given by the minister, will he apologise to the House for misleading it yesterday?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, they just cannot help themselves. They have to feel the heat each time, don't they? They try to defend the inane interjections of the member for Stuart. Here is a man who has been to Alice Springs 2 or 3 times in the last year, and once within the last few days to do a few advertisements for the Flynn by-election. It is nice to have him trapeze in when you need him. Don't forget what happened to poor Maggie Hickey when she received support in Tennant Creek, when the member for Stuart tried to ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! I asked a specific question. I asked the honourable minister to confirm that yesterday he gave an answer different to the one that he gave today and to apologise to the House for doing so.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order, but I would ask the minister to relate his remarks more closely to the question.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I feel sorry for poor Di Shanahan if the Leader of the Opposition intends to assist her in any way.

Mr Speaker, may I just check my answer from yesterday regarding flood mitigation to ensure that I am not being quoted incorrectly by the Leader of the Opposition. In fact, I said:

However, removal of sand from the Todd is by no means a complete flood mitigation scheme. The construction of a flood mitigation dam is critical to the success of proper flood mitigation measures. A drilling rig is currently active at the Emily Creek site ...

Mr Smith: No, it is not.

Mr COULTER: I said: '... currently active at the Emily Creek site'.

Mr Smith: It left 3 days ago.

Mr COULTER: Now, Mr Speaker, there we go again. I told the honourable Leader of the Opposition yesterday not to become involved in this because he would get his fingers burnt. By way of interjection, he tried to support the member for Stuart yesterday, and I warned him privately: 'Don't touch this with a barge pole; you will get hurt'.

Mr Speaker, I said that it was 'currently active'. The member for Stuart denied that and he went on to interject - and this is not recorded in Hansard - that we had not reached agreement with the traditional owners.

Mr Smith: He said that it was not drilling. That is right.

Mr COULTER: I said:

Mr Speaker, I hear an interjection from the member for Stuart which illustrates that he does not know what is going on in his own patch. In fact, the drilling rig has come from interstate. I can assure him that it is in the area and it is about to proceed with drilling.

And it is, Mr Speaker. It is certainly not drilling now. Yes, he is correct. However, the interjection that was not recorded in Hansard was that in fact we had not reached agreement with the traditional owners. All members would have heard that interjection, Mr Speaker.

Mr Smith: I don't see that Hansard heard it.

Mr COULTER: I said it is not in there. He does not even know what is going on in his own area. It is a fact that I said it was currently active in the Emily Creek area.

Mr Smith: It is not. It finished 2 days ago.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, today is Wednesday. The crew flew back to Brisbane yesterday and finished testing on Monday. If the Leader of the Opposition wants me to be pedantically correct, it completed its drilling on Monday evening. That is a far more accurate statement than that made by the member for Stuart who lives in the region and does not know that it has happened.

DNA Fingerprinting System

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to CHIEF MINISTER

When will the police introduce a DNA fingerprinting system in the Northern Territory in view of the 100% accuracy of this system of identification which would be of inestimable value in criminal investigation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not have specific information before me to answer the honourable member's question but I will obtain it. However, I can inform her that we are now connected to the national computerised fingerprint network. Honourable members may have noted an item for this in the last budget. The Commissioner of Police informs me that that in itself has proved of enormous benefit in the Northern Territory because the Northern Territory has many transient people. If they get in trouble with the law, their fingerprints can be fed into a computerised system and it can be determined quickly if they are required by any interstate police force. This is a quite revolutionary advance in terms of police methods and police cooperation. In the past, this would have been impossible and, over the years, no doubt people wanted interstate remained undetected by the Territory police because of the huge effort necessary to check manually information supplied from interstate. I will seek the specific information that the honourable member requires.

Home Detention Scheme

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

In February 1988, this Assembly passed amendments to the Criminal Law (Conditional Release of Offenders) Act which provided courts with an alternative sentencing option under the Home Detention Scheme. Recent media reports have questioned the suitability of this scheme for people who are before the court on drink-driving charges. Would he advise this Assembly whether or not the Home Detention Scheme is suitable for people who have been convicted of DUI offences?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, amendments to the Criminal Law (Conditional Release of Offenders) Act enabling a Home Detention Scheme to operate in the Northern Territory came into effect on 3 February this year. Section 19A provides the court with an expanded range of specific conditions available to it. It provides that, where an offender is convicted of an offence and sentenced to a form of imprisonment, the court may direct that the sentence be suspended or that the offender enter into a home detention order. It introduces residential conditions because this was previously not available.

Some magistrates indicated a reluctance to impose such conditions. The defined purpose of the Home Detention Scheme is to provide selected, suitable offenders, who would otherwise be imprisoned, with the opportunity to remain at restricted liberty in a stable environment, conditional upon them accepting and complying with random surveillance provisions. It involves residential restrictions and, where appropriate, participation in educative or rehabilitative programs suited to remedial treatment of causative factors in the offence. This means that an offender under a home detention order, in addition to residential restriction, may be required to participate in existing programs such as an alcohol course or other available educational or training schemes which may be of benefit in overcoming those factors which caused or contributed to the offending behaviour. This is an integral part of supervising home detention orders.

I have advice from the Department of Law that no conflict or anomaly exists in current Territory legislation which precludes the use of home detention as a viable sentencing option for offenders selected as suitable for the Home Detention Scheme and that selection is subject to many terms and conditions which are clearly defined. Territory courts can now suspend prison sentences. They impose and make home detention orders instead, thus avoiding the harmful effects of imprisonment, particularly first time imprisonment.

Home detention is gaining momentum in the Northern Territory since it was implemented just 5 months ago on 3 February. There have been 21 court requests for home detention assessment reports by the Director of Correctional Services. There are 12 offenders, 1 a woman, successfully undergoing home detention. Electronic techniques for keeping home detainees under surveillance are being investigated. The Territory is leading the way in Australia with a true home detention program. Home detention schemes elsewhere are really only early release schemes.

In 12 months in 1987-88, 20% of all sentenced prisoners had been convicted of DUI or drink-related offences. In a 1987-88 survey, 65% of all sentenced prisoners admitted being under the influence of alcohol at the time of the offence. This program is not retrospective. A conservative estimate for the next 12 months is that 200 people may be diverted from imprisonment in an institution. This program is not for diversion from incarceration but is diversion from incarceration in an institution. Offenders must consent, the family's view must be taken into account and, in fact, the family must consent. The program is designed to punish the offender - not to punish the family by loss of income etc - and to protect the community. The needs of the community must be taken into account. The offender may be required to avail himself or herself of treatment to overcome problems which brought him or her into conflict with the law.

One of the main aspects is that it is extremely cost effective. I hope that all magistrates in the Northern Territory take into account what this Legislative Assembly believes is a need in the community. I hope that they take home detention into account when they are bringing down sentences for DUI.

Shared Equity Housing Scheme

Mr BELL to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer him to his government's election promise to introduce a shared equity housing scheme which I point out was a pale imitation of the previously announced Labor policy on capital indexed loans. Why has this election commitment not been honoured?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as I explained at the last sittings, the processes involved in introducing such a scheme are undergoing very close scrutiny. Some problems were found in the process. Obviously, we want to ensure that, when such a scheme is introduced, it meets the aims and the aspirations of ...

Mr Bell interjecting.

Mr MANZIE: The member for MacDonnell asked me the question and, obviously, he wants to give me the answer.

Mr Bell: I was giving you the history, Daryl.

Mr MANZIE: I am quite happy to answer the question, Mr Speaker, but surely he is wasting the time of the House if he wants to both ask and answer the question himself.

We want to ensure that the intent of our shared equity scheme meets the aspirations of Territorians who, for various reasons, are unable to afford the cost of purchasing their first home. When the scheme is eventually introduced, hopefully it will enable those who are less unfortunate than others in terms of finance to be able to purchase a house. I would like to point out to the honourable member that schemes such as the shared equity scheme that was proposed have been tried in other parts of Australia and they have met with limited success. Obviously, we want it to work successfully.

Mr Smith: Why promise it then?

Mr Bell: It was your promise, not ours.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, I hear honourable members asking why we promised it. I let members opposite know in no uncertain terms that we have not stepped back from introducing the shared equity scheme but we will ensure that such a scheme is workable.

Mr Bell: You have not stepped anywhere on it.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, the manners of the member for MacDonnell are appalling but we have become used to them.

As I said, in other areas of Australia, there have been problems. For example, I think the scheme in South Australia had only 6 people avail themselves of it. We certainly want to ensure that ours encompasses more than that.

Mr Bell: It was a dud. Come on Daryl, just tell us it was a dud.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, again, the honourable member will be forced to eat his words, as he has had to on every occasion. I cannot think of an occasion when any accusation made by the member for MacDonnell has proven to be correct. This is another occasion on which he will be found to be wrong.

Public Bus Service for Alice Springs

Mr HATTON to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I refer him to the considerable debate over a long period of time in respect of requests for public bus services in Alice Springs. What steps are being taken in relation to this?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, this has been a vexed question. Over the years, a number of trial services have been introduced to the cost of the Northern Territory government. Mr Speaker, as you would know, those trials revealed that a service did not appear to be viable at the time. The last trial was about 3 years ago and there certainly was insufficient patronage or potential use to warrant the introduction of a regular bus transport system.

However, special contract arrangements exist for schoolchildren. A number of suggestions have been put forward in recent times, including integration of the school system with the public transport system and the use of private contractors. There is potential for the utilisation of some of the smaller, Toyota-type buses which are already operated in the Alice Springs community by various interest groups and which quite often are not fully utilised.

The member for Araluen initiated a committee, including government and town council representatives, to investigate the feasibility of a bus service in Alice Springs. The committee considered that the best way to approach the task would be to conduct a comprehensive survey of the Alice Springs community, assessing its needs and assessing the viable components that might be included in a bus service. The government has committed a sum of $30 000 and, of course, it is seeking input from the Alice Springs community and the Alice Springs Town Council, through its professional officers, to quickly come to a decision as to whether Alice Springs has reached the stage at which a bus service would be viable. We hope that the $30 000 will enable a consultant's study to be completed within a couple of months and we will know then ...

Mr Smith: A consultant investigating a bus service for Alice Springs?

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr FINCH: The member for Millner continues to display his arrogance towards the Alice Springs community. He has no interest in it. His once-a-year visits are nowhere near enough for him to understand the aspirations of the Alice Springs community.

Mr Smith: I know they need a bus service, not an investigation into a bus service.

Mr Bell: How long since you left the wilds of Leanyer?

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, for the benefit of the chirpy member for MacDonnell, I probably spend more time in Alice Springs these days than himself. He need only look at the local newspaper to see how often I am in Alice Springs.

Mr Bell: What do your constituents in Leanyer say about that?

Mr FINCH: I have received direct feedback from people in the Alice Springs community. They are conscious of their need but there is no point in the government introducing a bus service which does not meet the needs of the people. That would be an entire waste of funds. Earlier surveys showed that it would actually be more economic to provide taxis to meet the needs of those people who wanted to use public transport. Mr Speaker, if this economic genius, the Leader of the Opposition, wishes to suggest that the government should spend money on a bus service without proper investigation, then so be it. The people of Alice Springs need to know what sort of hands the Territory would be in if - heaven forbid - there was ever a change of government.

Mr Speaker, we are taking a responsible approach, thanks to the member for Araluen, the members of the Alice Springs Town Council and the various people from the Alice Springs community who sat on the steering committee which resolved to go ahead with a fully detailed, up-to-date study. I expect the results within a couple of months, after which time we will know what service is appropriate.

Ministerial Discretion Under Liquor Act

Mr LEO to MINISTER for TOURISM

My question relates to the minister's responsibility for the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission. I ask him to confirm a response he gave to an interviewer's question on ABC radio this morning. I will quote the response as I recorded it: 'Where cases of hardship have been brought to my attention, we are and have been addressing those particular cases. There is a ministerial discretion through an instruction to the Chairman of the Liquor Commission'. I took that to mean that, in the case of vehicles seized under sections 95 and 96 of the Liquor Act, the minister can exercise some ministerial discretion over whether or not those vehicles may be returned to their owners. Could he confirm that and could he also inform the House how a citizen should pursue the use of that ministerial discretion?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the member for Nhulunbuy is well aware of the current status of the review of the Liquor Act with regard to the forfeiture of motor vehicles following discussions I have had with him during the last couple of days. The government hopes to introduce amendments to the Liquor Act in the October sittings but, of course, we are very conscious of the need to discuss the proposed amendments with the Aboriginal communities. Whilst some discussions have taken place, those discussions will be completed after the current Legislative Assembly sittings, and I am very confident of giving the draftsman time to put those amendments into legislation for introduction at the October sittings.

With regard to my response on ABC radio this morning, I will certainly look at problem areas ...

Mr Leo: Can you exercise ministerial discretion?

Mr POOLE: No, I cannot exercise ministerial discretion. The act ties that responsibility to the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission and existing legislation. We will certainly look at areas of hardship that have been created over the past couple of months since we have been talking about the proposed amendments and, hopefully, those will be rectified by the new legislation.

Darwin and Alice Springs Airports

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

In relation to the Darwin and Alice Springs Airports, is he able to advise the House what we can expect in the federal budget to supplement the resources that he has had available to him from discussions with the federal Minister for Transport and Communications?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unfortunately, I am not privy to the federal government's budget. It has been fairly obvious from comments made to the media by Senator Collins and the member for the Northern Territory that they have been advised that the long-awaited transfer of airports at Alice Springs, Tennant Creek, Katherine and Darwin is about to be announced. Of course, the people of the Northern Territory have been waiting for quite some time to hear what moves will be made, particularly in relation to the Alice Springs and Darwin Airports. The prerogative lies entirely with the federal government which owns both of those airport facilities. I am confident that the 3½ years of suspended animation on construction at Darwin Airport will be resolved shortly. From the noises being made by the media, there is no doubt that the decision will be a positive one.

Regardless of guessing games, I have every confidence that we have waited long enough. I am quite sure that there is no logical or reasonable reason why the federal government should delay its decision any longer. In December last year, the then Minister for Transport, Peter Duncan, gave commitments that a decision would be forthcoming. He thought that would occur in January 1988 and believed the decision would be favourable to proceed on the north side, and to proceed as a matter of urgency. The saga of the Darwin Airport has continued over some 10 years since a commitment was made by the Fraser government in 1983 to proceed with what was then to be a $95m development. That development included a number of additional items which created a strain on the federal Labor government which, quite correctly, sought to review the level of expenditure. That review was to take 6 months commencing in April 1985. The saga has taken a number of turns along the way, including suggestions of construction on the south side. Some $41m was committed in about August 1986 towards such a scheme. Fortunately, that did not proceed.

The Territory government has constructively and continually promoted the project, not only as being of paramount importance to Territorians and paramount importance to the tourist industry, but also as one of the most symbolic projects to be constructed in the Northern Territory during the next decade. That might sound a little far-fetched to some but the business community and the investment community are all looking at a commencement of the Darwin Airport as a symbol that the Territory is progressing. We have had that dead albatross around our necks for far too long. The packages that were put forward by the Territory government included in the early days a suggestion of a minimum development project of some $40m to bring the project back into a reasonable perspective. We then suggested that perhaps the Territory government would spend up to $20m to help the project get going, provided that we could have some equity through private investment in the terminal building. That received some favour from the federal government, and quite rightly so.

In the meantime, the federal government introduced a Federal Airports Corporation late last year. The Federal Airports Corporation was not in the least interested in the Darwin terminal although, when it saw the growth figures for Alice Springs, it certainly was interested in owning Alice Springs Airport for sound commercial reasons. However, the Territory government had an overall interest in all airports in the Northern Territory - Alice Springs, Tennant Creek, Katherine and Darwin - in relation to our overall tourism development plan and economic development of each of the regions.

The federal government committed itself to divesting itself of all airports throughout Australia over a 3-year period. The Federal Airports Corporation was asked to bid against the Territory government in relation to both the Alice Springs and the Darwin Airports. The package that was put forward by the Territory government included immediate commencement. We have already done considerable forward planning and work on conceptual design. We have called for registrations of interest from project managers and have gone quite a way down the track towards getting the project started.

Our package also included a level of development at Darwin of some $65m of infrastructure. It included provision for commuter services as well as international and domestic services. It included provision in our planning for the appropriate level of freight handling. It required a rapid completion of construction because time is the most significant component of concern to Territorians. Our arrangements included provision for transfer of the general aviation area from the south side to the north side, enabling the RAAF to have total occupation of the southern portion of the airport. Included in that transfer were some relocation costs and some subsidies towards having the general aviation area transferred across to the north side expeditiously. It included provision for all of the current employees at the airport. It included a balanced approach to what the cost would be to airlines and to airport users. It is very important that head taxes do not become excessively high and detract from our tourism development. Naturally enough, our package included retention of funds in the Northern Territory to allow for future development.

In Alice Springs, we were looking at an immediate expansion of the terminal to double the floor space. We were looking at a 6-month study, including consideration of international capacity and taking into account the Alice Springs community's desires, parallel taxiways and other things that would take some time to put into perspective. We would then have entered a detailed design phase and would have committed something like $25m towards a major terminal facility to commence as soon as that design phase was finished, with a construction period of 2 years.

I mention all of that because it has been put to me that Territorians might be disadvantaged if the FAC were to become the owner of each of those 4 facilities. I do not believe it would because I have heard clearly from the federal government that, naturally enough, the best bid will win. The details that I have given to members of the House represent the very minimum service, timing and level of expenditure that Territorians can expect regardless of who is to own those Territory airports - and I include all 4 - after Tuesday of next week. We wait with a great deal of anticipation and, I am sure, confidence that, after next Tuesday, we will see a rejuvenation of airport facilities and the general economy associated with them in the Northern Territory.

Gas-stripping Plant at Palmerston

Mr LEO to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Last year, in the budget speech, the minister indicated that contracts would be signed within weeks for the establishment of a joint venture gas-stripping plant at Palmerston. I see no sign and have heard of no announcements by the minister that would indicate that that particular venture is being undertaken. I ask that he indicate what has happened.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Nhulunbuy for the question because, in all sincerity, it is probably one of the most potentially successful ventures that the Northern Territory has ever embarked on. Following the budget last year, we asked for written expressions of interest. Some of the projects that people wrote back to us about are at the high end of the scale - projects costing in the vicinity of $476m. I see the Leader of the Opposition shaking his head. It will be a pleasure to see him at the opening of this plant and I will remind him of the day that he sat in the Legislative Assembly and shook his head because he did not believe that it existed.

The member for Barkly laughs also, and I will remind him of that because I am confident that this project will proceed. The reason why I am so confident is very detailed, but I will try to keep it simple.

Mr Smith: Yes. Tell us.

Mr COULTER: You are about as much use to the Northern Territory as a wheel on a walking stick!

Mr Speaker, the facts are simple. The feed stocks that are required from the gas in some of the petrochemical industries is very complicated indeed, and it is very difficult to put projects of this magnitude together. We are talking of a project that is equal to the total value of the gas pipeline and the powerhouse combined. The member for Barkly would know just how difficult it was to put that deal together. If he has any doubt about the feasibility of this project, I will be happy to provide him with a briefing when we enter into detailed negotiations and heads of agreement on this project. I would like to see the look on his face at that time. I do not think I will see the smirk that he has on his face at the moment ...

Mr Tuxworth: I have never had any doubts about the project.

Mr COULTER: Very good. It is a smile of happiness now, Mr Speaker. I am happy that he has been able to clarify that.

Getting back to the head-shaking Leader of the Opposition, I would love to see him at the opening of this project. Detailed discussions took place in Alice Springs some 2 weeks ago with the operators and the joint venturers of the Palm Valley and the Amadeus Basin gasfields. The gas must be of a certain quality. Just 2 days ago, we spoke with the people from Aluswiss about the feasibility studies that they have embarked on in relation to the conversion of the Gove project to gas. They are back at the negotiating table. They have entered into a feasibility consultancy with a well-known English engineer ...

Mr Leo: They do not like their business being made public.

Mr COULTER: I am quite open about this. It is no secret that they have entered into this agreement to examine the feasibility of converting the power station at Nhulunbuy and the plant itself. Conversion of the plant itself would be a very complicated process.

At this stage, it would appear that, if only 2 of the 7 projects that we are currently analysing were to be successful, we would require $250m of alterations to the gas pipeline because, apparently, it is not big enough to cater for these projects. That includes some $60m for pumping stations and another line that would have to be built from Mataranka to Darwin. It would be necessary to loop the pipeline from Mataranka to Darwin. EEC, the proponents of that proposal, spoke to the previous Chief Minister on a number of occasions to push this particular project and to urge us to sign the agreement that I mentioned in the budget.

I do not want to pre-empt the Treasurer's budget speech, but I think there will be some mention of additional power stations. We have identified some 100 MW of electricity that could be produced from additional power stations to service the mining industry. It is a fact that the pipeline is proving to be too small and therefore we need to examine what will give the best advantage to the Northern Territory. We would like to undertake at least 2 of the big projects and, of course, this is the secret to bringing down electricity prices in the Northern Territory. For example, if we were to have the Gove project, we could reduce electricity from 12¢ a kilowatt hour, the dearest in Australia, to some 7¢ a kilowatt hour but, if we were to go ahead with some of the smaller projects, we would not have enough gas to undertake the bigger projects.

It is a matter of sitting down and seeing which will give the most benefit and the greatest commercial advantage to the Northern Territory. I therefore ask honourable members to be patient for the time being. The range of options that has been presented to us is being analysed in detail. There will be another meeting in Alice Springs in about 6 weeks time. In fact, the TMOC representative is in town for a meeting this evening. Things are really happening in the gas business which has the potential to be the greatest success story that the Northern Territory has ever witnessed. We will get there with a little bit of patience.

Housing Commission Accommodation at Palmerston

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

In view of a statement made in the press last night that 500 houses in Palmerston are currently vacant, can he give a clear indication of what the situation is with Housing Commission accommodation at Palmerston?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, unfortunately, the member for Barkly made allegations on last night's 7.30 Report. He said: 'I think it was mentioned today that there are 500 empty houses at Palmerston. How much revenue do they bring the government? If that becomes 1000, it just gets worse and worse'. I was flabbergasted at the suggestion that there were 500 empty houses in Palmerston. I thought there might be some poetic licence involved and I immediately checked to find out what the facts were. The fact is that, of the 1508 Housing Commission dwellings in Palmerston, 61 dwellings were vacant as of last Friday. Those houses are not vacant because the Housing Commission does not have any tenants for them. They are vacant because their tenants have moved out, either because the house is undergoing maintenance work or because someone is about to move into it.

I would like all members to realise that there are waiting times for all classes of Housing Commission dwellings in Palmerston - that is, as soon as a dwelling becomes vacant, we have somebody ready to move in. People who have no knowledge of the actual situation perpetuate the myth that there are huge numbers of empty Housing Commission houses while people have to queue up to occupy them. The community needs to know that the member for Barkly's allegations on last night's 7.30 Report were totally incorrect. I do not think there would be 500 private residences in Palmerston, let alone 500 empty private residences.

Mr Coulter interjecting.

Mr MANZIE: The member for Palmerston could probably tell me how many private residences there are. I can certainly guarantee that there are not 500 empty private residences and there are certainly not 500 empty Housing Commission dwellings. We have waiting lists for every type of accommodation the commission operates in Palmerston. It is an example of the member for Barkly being so inaccurate that his statement bears no resemblance whatsoever to the facts.

Gas-stripping Plant

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Further to the the minister's answer regarding the gas pipeline and the gas-stripping plant, has he considered the possibility of locating the gas-stripping plant in Alice Springs, particularly in relation to the gas pipeline being now too small to cover all the projects which he has in mind?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that has certainly been an option. Another option is to locate it at Mataranka with a connection to Gove. Those options are being examined in conjunction with the Darwin proposal. As I said, it is a very technical matter. We are engaged in negotiations with pipeline operator CMPS Williams Brothers, Santos Magellan, TMOC, and AGL. All the players involved are working very hard to determine the best site. I might say, Mr Speaker, that the cost of $250m for pipeline alterations is about the same as the cost of installing the pipeline in the first place. We are certainly doing all we can to minimise the cost of the modifications to the pipeline.

There are some strategic advantages in locating the gas-stripping plant in Darwin, in terms of the products which will be developed. For example, we are looking at the production of ammonia for the Ranger Uranium Mine which uses about 13 000 t of ammonia per year.

Mr Collins: It could be transported to Darwin by tanker.

Mr COULTER: We could transport it on the train. That would be the answer. Perhaps some of these projects would make the railway more feasible. However, to answer the member for Sadadeen's question, all sites, including the Mataranka site, are being thoroughly investigated at the moment.

'Towards the 90s Volume 2'

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for EDUCATION

The Department of Education has recently released the discussion document 'Towards the 90s Volume 2'. What process of consultation led to the release of this document and will the community have an opportunity to comment on the suggestions it contains?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for his question in relation to a most important document for people in the Territory. There has been a lengthy process of consultation leading up to the presentation of this document to the community. I released it at the beginning of the second semester so that people would have plenty of opportunity to comment and we would not be accused of introducing the document into the school system just before the holiday period.

It is important to note that there has been a great deal of discussion in relation to the original document. The comments made by members of this Assembly and by members of the community have been taken into account in formulating Volume 2 of Towards the 90s. As a result, changes have been made, such as moving away from disincentives in relation to devolution, the suggestion that schools should pay for curriculum advisory services and the incentive funding by results. Those issues were raised by members of the Assembly and by members of the public as matters of concern. The government has taken account of those comments and has presented the 'Towards the 90s Volume 2' document that we have before us now. I will be tabling the document in the Assembly during the course of these sittings, together with the information papers that accompany it. I look forward to input from members. It is most important that they have input and any concerns that they raise in respect of any issue in that document will be welcomed. There are major issues which the public needs to be aware of and I would urge any member of the community who wishes to become involved in that discussion to obtain copies of the document 'Towards the 90s Volume 2'.

I understand that there is some concern by the Teachers Federation in relation to the matter of master teachers and also the concept of excellence in relation to external assessment. There is need for external validity and reliability of the results coming from our school system. I believe those issues can be debated and argued reasonably.

I hope that the Teachers Federation will take on board the way in which the Council of Government School Organisations is approaching this issue. It has set in place a plan which will enable parents from all of the schools which have councils to comment. There will be a timetable so that the full 8-week discussion and consultation period will be fully utilised. It is important that plans are made to obtain the views of the membership of those particular groups, not simply a few in COGSO or a few in the Teachers Federation. We must have as much comment from the broad membership as possible.

Mr Speaker, I will be tabling the document. I look forward to comment. If members of the public wish to obtain copies, they should contact the Department of Education and copies will be made available. It is most important that people read the document and discuss it so that we know what people's views are when we come to determining government policy.

Project on Darwin Esplanade

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

In his budget speech last year, he indicated that a $25m twin-tower luxury accommodation and office block project on the Esplanade had been commenced and would be completed within 12 months. Can he confirm that one of the reasons why this project has not proceeded according to schedule is uncertainty over the impact of the Anderson proposal on the future of commercial development in Darwin?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will investigate that matter and provide the Leader of the Opposition with an answer during the course of these sittings.

Detoxification Unit at Royal Darwin Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Will he give an undertaking not to relocate the detoxification unit at the Royal Darwin Hospital slap-bang in the middle of the staff accommodation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Royal Darwin Hospital costs the people of the Northern Territory and Australia $1m per week to run. I have given undertakings to this Legislative Assembly that, over a period, I will conduct a total review of all aspects of the management and provision of services at the Royal Darwin Hospital so that we are clear about our aims, provide the best possible service to the people of the Northern Territory and ensure that appropriate resources and staff are in place. It is also necessary that, at the same time, we find efficiencies in that service so that $1m of Northern Territory funds can be utilised in the best possible way.

I gave an undertaking also that the ADT Unit would not be moved if it would cause grave discomfort or concern to people who live on campus at the Royal Darwin Hospital. During one of his infrequent visits to Darwin and in relation to one of the very few areas of the health portfolio in which he takes an interest because he thinks he can cause some sort of industrial action, the honourable member opposite went to a public meeting. That was after I had attended a previous public meeting held by the same people. He suggested to them that they take up a petition and deliver it to the local member, which of course is myself, and that they demand that I bring that petition to this Assembly. That is the way that he goes about his business.

I have certainly made available to him many briefings on various aspects of what is occurring in the Department of Health and Community Services but, of course, he has been busy running around doing other things and looking after his portfolio responsibilities. In fact, I have offered him a briefing on the AIDS situation in a few days time and I am led to believe that he intends to avail himself of that offer.

There has been a great deal of consultation on the various evaluations that I have been talking about and the possible movement of the ADT Unit, not 'slap-bang in the middle of the staff accommodation' at the Royal Darwin Hospital, but in fact on the entrance road to where the people reside on campus at the Royal Darwin Hospital. I have consulted all the people affected. It must be remembered also that we have to take some action regarding ward 5, the psychiatric ward in the Royal Darwin Hospital, and that is part of it. Every person who lives in the units near the psychiatric unit has been consulted and we will be taking further action in due course. At this stage, there is a high probability that the ADT Unit will be moving to the area recommended to me. The interests of the people who live in the residential area will be taken into account. Their privacy will be retained and, given that the Leader of the Opposition does not continue to stir them up, I am sure all those people will be happy with the situation.

Tourism Infrastructure Support

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Unlike previous budgets, there was nothing in the budget papers this year which indicated the ongoing government commitment in this financial year to support for Yulara and the Alice Springs and Darwin Sheratons. What amount of money has been set aside by the government this year for support of those projects?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I did not realise that the new format would cause the trouble for the opposition that it has. I noted that the Leader of the Opposition made great play in the media about the Northern Territory government supposedly hiding millions of dollars which were indicated in last year's budget papers but do not appear in this year's budget papers in relation to infrastructure support for Yulara and the 2 Sheratons. Rather than checking with Treasury and finding out the facts before going to the press, he shot his mouth off and caused a great deal of concern because, unfortunately, a few people do listen to him.

I refer him to detailed budget estimates. At page 79 of Budget Paper No 4 there is a figure of $19.2m for tourism infrastructure support. At page 82, the description indicates that the sum is for tourism infrastructure developments at Yulara, Alice Springs and Darwin.

Mr Smith: I am asking for the breakdown.

Mr PERRON: Oh, the honourable member is now talking about a breakdown whereas, in last night's newspaper article, he alleged that the figures were hidden somewhere in the budget or presumably rubbed out so no one could ever find them. The figure for the total tourism infrastructure is there quite clearly. If the honourable member wants further details, he can ask for them. He does not have to ask for them through the front page of the newspaper, even though that is his option of course.

Trade Development Zone

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

Following his assumption of responsibility for the Trade Development Zone, can he indicate whether he has examined the operations of the zone and the activities of its consultants with particular reference to Mr K.K. Yeung?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for his question. I can advise the House that I have examined the wealth of documentation relating to the activities of the Trade Development Zone and its consultants. I have examined extensive and detailed accounts of the time and expenditure incurred by consultants in the zone, in particular those of Mr K.K. Yeung. I am totally satisfied that the amounts paid in that regard are quite modest, and that the Territory has received excellent value from the performance of its consultants and of Mr K.K. Yeung in particular. In fact, from the accounts that I have examined, it is quite evident that Mr Yeung's commitment to his duties is such that he has incurred substantial time-and-cost losses through his activities on our behalf which have not been charged to the Territory government.

Mr Speaker, others in Australia and overseas obviously do not share the cynicism of the Leader of Opposition about the abilities and the value of Mr Yeung. Honourable members will be interested to learn that the governments of Queensland and Western Australia have sought the services and advice of Mr Yeung in their quest for Asian investment. I have with me a pamphlet which has been issued by the Technology, Industries and Development Authority of Western Australia. That government has asked Mr Yeung to circulate that document and to develop the Western Australian attitude towards business in the Asian region. That is a far cry from the approach of the Leader of the Opposition who has sought to downgrade and denigrate the status of Mr Yeung in Asia. That is a letter from the Western Australian government asking for Mr Yeung's support in the development of Western Australia's interests in Asia. That document is available to all honourable members if they wish to read it.

Mr Ede interjecting.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, it is like the drilling rig at Emily Creek. This fellow cannot help himself. He keeps on saying: 'Hit me in the face. Hit me in the face'.

Mr Ede: You got the wrong creek.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I will answer the honourable member for Stuart. His statement that the Aboriginal custodians had not given permission to drill Emily Creek was not recorded in Hansard because I chose to ignore him. I will acknowledge every interjection that he makes in order to ensure that it appears in Hansard so that historians can realise the stupidity of his interjections.

As recently as July this year, the Technology and Industry Development Authority of Western Australia wrote to Mr Yeung seeking his assistance in distributing and promoting a portfolio investment opportunity in Western Australian industry. It is obvious that the Leader of the Opposition does not share this understanding of Mr Yeung's worth. Only yesterday, I responded to yet another barrage of questions from him relating to the operation of the Trade Development Zone and Mr Yeung.

It was necessary for me also to write to the Leader of the Opposition on that matter. No doubt, he will not be pleased with the contents of the letter. In effect, I told him that I could not trust him with the information about the Trade Development Zone which was a commercially sensitive matter. I also told him that I was prepared to respond only to that part of his series of questions which I considered to be of a factual and non-subjective nature. I think it is necessary that I read the contents of that letter into Hansard:.

Dear Terry,

I refer to your written question No 61 and to the necessarily brief response on my part to several comments thereof. I must say that, if I had more faith in your ability to handle sensitive information, I may have been more cooperative and helpful in my response to the above-mentioned. It is quite evident, however, that the purpose of your questions goes beyond any constructive or genuine interest in the operation of the Trade Development Zone. On your track record to date, I am confident that you would be willing to prejudice sensitive commercial arrangements for short-term political gain and point-scoring.

The Trade Development Zone continues to have significant potential for the development of the Territory. An essential component of realising this potential is entering into commercial arrangements with participant companies. I will not jeopardise these arrangements by allowing each of our negotiating points to be turned into political footballs whose sole purpose is the political point-scoring of the opposition. The Territory simply cannot afford the luxury of indulging you in such matters.

Mr EDE: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Minister for Mines and Energy is impugning the good name of the Leader of the Opposition. As he well knows, answers to question on notice are published and, therefore, there can be no question about the confidentiality or otherwise of any answers to any questions on notice.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I will continue:

When and if it becomes evident that the opposition is seeking to offer constructive criticism on the actions of the government, and able to understand the difference between sensitive and confidential information and public information, my position may be reviewed.

Unfortunately, this course of action is necessary given the dreadful track record of the Leader of the Opposition in matters relating to the Trade Development Zone. He has sought at every opportunity to sabotage the activities of the zone and to disrupt its orderly development. Honourable members will recall his disgraceful attacks on a fledgling Territory company and the role he played in creating difficult financial circumstances for that company. I regret that it has been necessary to treat with extreme distrust this approach from him for information on TDZ activities. However, he has nobody to blame but himself. I take this opportunity to inform honourable members that I have commissioned an independent study to review the marketing and promotional activities of the ...

Mr LEO: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Unless I have read the minister's response incorrectly, he has informed the House that he will abuse question time in that he does not intend to answer pertinent questions asked by the opposition. I am prepared to be corrected. If the minister cares to respond to my point of order, that is fine. I hope he does. However, my understanding of his answer so far is that, as he has said to this House, he intends to abuse question time in the future when he considers that matters relating to financial arrangements in the Territory have been raised inappropriately and therefore should not be answered. I hope that he will respond to my point of order.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order. In fact, the minister is not required to supply an answer. However, I would ask the minister to relate his reply directly to the question.

Mr COULTER: Certainly, Mr Speaker. I was asked what arrangements I had entered into to review the incentives available from the Trade Development Zone. The purpose of this review is to ensure and reaffirm that the strategies and directions of the zone's marketing activities continue to provide maximum benefit for the Territory. This study will draw on our own experiences to date and those of similar authorities in states elsewhere.

The competition for Asian investment in Australia is fierce and it is growing with the establishment of new zones in Australia and overseas. The Territory started first and this study will ensure that we stay in front of the pack. I stress that the government will maintain a strong commitment to the Trade Development Zone. We are in it for the long haul and we will continue to support its progress as it moves towards its long-term goals. There have been some setbacks thus far and no doubt there will be more during the zone's development phase, but that will not deter us from our course.

Mr Speaker, can I draw honourable members attention to the Max Gillies style economist who appeared on the ABC 7.30 Report last night, Dr Nadarajah, a former economic adviser to Jon Isaacs, who canned ...

Mr Smith interjecting.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I hear an interjection and I will have this on the public record. The Leader of the Opposition said that my statement that Dr Nadarajah was an adviser to a former Leader of the Opposition, Jon Isaacs, is rubbish. Let him stand up and deny that in this House.

Mr Bell: Why don't you talk about it instead of screaming?

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I have examined extensive and detailed accounts of time and expenditure from K.K. Yeung. Last night, we had a barrage of Max Gillies economics from a lecturer at the Darwin Institute of Technology. It is unfortunate that he chooses to put himself in that position because he does himself no good and, of course, he reflects on the institute that he represents.

Mr Ede: This is typical. You denigrate anybody who disagrees with you.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, a former adviser to Jon Isaacs has to be held in some esteem even by the Deputy Leader of the Opposition. He was an economic adviser to your party. I had grave fears when the Treasurer brought down the budget yesterday. I thought the headlines would be: 'Water up 2¢ per kilolitre'. My fears were realised in the Max Gillies interpretation ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The minister was asked a question about the Trade Development Zone. He has ranged very broadly across the issue of the Trade Development Zone but he is now talking about and disparaging an academic at the Darwin Institute of Technology.

Mr Coulter: A former adviser to the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr SMITH: Sit down and shut up for a while.

Mr Coulter: I am sitting down.

Mr SMITH: Mr Speaker, he is also talking about water charges. Neither of those subjects have a direct relationship to the matter at hand.

Mr SPEAKER: There is a point of order. I ask the minister again to relate his reply directly to the question.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, yesterday the Leader of the Opposition shook his head about the petrochemical industry in the Northern Territory and the development that will occur there. He shook his head and said it would not happen. Mr Speaker, I will take him out to the Trade Development Zone in March next year and he can tell his story. He has only been there once and I think he was in the boot of a car at the time. I will take him out there in March next year and introduce him to the employees of the Trade Development Zone. He will have the opportunity to tell those 200 or 300 people why he thinks they should not be there.

Rebate for Off-Peak Electricity Use

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

In view of the minister's expressed wish for an increase in the consumption of electricity throughout the community so that the general rates can be decreased in the future as promised repeatedly, would he consider increasing the rebate of 10% for off-peak use of electricity?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I will consider it but I believe, as I stated in the House yesterday, that the real answer to the problem of electricity charges in the Northern Territory is gas flowing through the pipelines. That is the course that we have entered into and that we will embark on to reduce electricity charges in the Northern Territory. We need major utilisation of gas at the end of the pipeline.

Last evening, I met with representatives of AGL and TMOC, the operators of the Amadeus Basin field, and we discussed in detail the ways and means of doing that. We should not be penny-pinching in our approach; we really need the big projects. It is those projects that this government has embarked on, and we will put all our efforts into reducing electricity costs. I will be speaking more about that in my address to the Appropriation Bill today. The real answer is to attract the big utilisers in order to reduce electricity costs, and that is what this government is about.

Employment Statistics

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

On Tuesday, the Leader of the Opposition displayed a big sign relating to labor statistics on employment. Can the minister provide information confirming or denying the position outlined by the Leader of the Opposition?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am delighted to have the opportunity to answer some of the comments made by the Leader of the Opposition. There it is over there and it is taken from the ABS statistics. There has been a great deal of talk about supposedly dwindling employment and population in the Northern Territory. The justification for all of the doom and gloom that has been spread about, mainly by the Leader of the Opposition and others on the opposition benches, is the figures that have come from the ABS. I am sick to death of the selective use of ABS figures, figures that indicate that there is something wrong, without reference to the very positive figures that are there as well. It is very selective and very misleading, and one of the major causes why those few people who are leaving the Territory are leaving, Mr Speaker.

The ABS is a very hard working group of people who produce some very handy statistics but the very small sampling makes it very difficult to arrive at reasonable population figures. Statistics for motor vehicle registrations and power connections etc are very clear but, when it comes to population and work force figures, it is very hard from a small sampling base to arrive at reasonable figures. From March 1987 to March 1988, the number of employed fell by 9600 according to the figures. Unemployment rose by 3200, leaving 6400 people in limbo or having departed. The ABS figures show that the population rose by 3200 in the same period, Mr Speaker. The population figure actually rose in that period yet other figures would tend to deny that. Assuming half of the additional 3200 people were over the age of 15, the rise in unemployment should have been those who lost their jobs - 9600 plus 1600 or 11 200 in total. In the same period, the number in receipt of social security benefits dropped by 1015.

The reverse applied in May and June 1988 where employment figures made a staggering recovery with an extra 4800 jobs since April according to the bureau's figures. We saw a similar rise last year between August and September from something like 7% to 13%. It stayed around 12% or 13% for a period and then dropped back down to 7.4%. It is around that figure now. That is a clear indication that that is a sampling problem. 3000 people have come from the unemployed numbers, leaving 1700 workers coming from out of limbo or from interstate. However, the figures show a decrease in the population over the age of 15 from 106 900 to 105 800. The ABS says the wage and salary earners figure differs from the number employed because they exclude self-employed and a number of other categories in the break down to individual industries. Again, the more the figures are analysed, the harder it is to believe them.

As we know, the construction industry has had its troubles but, according to the figures, it has supposedly gained 1400 people in 12 months. Between December 1987 and January 1988, the wettest and slowest months, the industry went from 3100 to 4600 workers. Manufacturing has picked up 600 jobs and that is probably believable. Finance and property, which members opposite tell us are in a trough, picked up 100 people in the 12 months to March 1988 according to the ABS figures. The big losers are shown as community services which affects both the private and public sectors. These services are down by 4500 jobs and the wholesale and retail trade is down 2500. A closer look at the bureau's breakdown shows that all jobs lost in the community services were in the welfare and miscellaneous services area. 6100 of the 10 500 positions filled in March 1987 have gone in 12 months. The 4500 figure comes after gains in other areas. Quite clearly, that is unrealistic. Because this sort of drop would have a traumatic impact in any community, let alone one as small as the Territory, the ABS admits there must be some doubt about them.

Similarly, the ABS figures show that the wholesale and retail trade lost 2100 positions in a single month, from December 1987 to January 1988. While there is a bit of a fall-off in trade after Christmas, 2100 workers represents 20% of the industry. What is clear is that, as the huge government input in the early years of self-government winds back, we are getting more realistic levels. Population growth has slowed down accordingly. Some people are leaving, as they have always done. At various times of the year, we have lost people from the Territory. Despite the ABS figures, the MBA claims there have been more departures in the construction industry than is usual. But the ABS figures say we are up. This is more than balanced by new arrivals.

There are a number of vacant, established houses in Darwin, and we are all aware of them. We know that the RAAF, for instance, has 400 houses in Darwin.

Most of its people have gone and not necessarily to Katherine. They have gone interstate, and new people have come into Katherine. Those personnel have been replaced in Katherine. The honourable member should look at the new houses occupied on the airforce base and around Katherine East. Those houses have been vacated in Darwin, and I am a victim of that, and they have been taken up in Katherine.

I can prove this because, looking at the ABS figures, the number of domestic power connections has increased by 8% in 12 months. Where a house is unoccupied and power is disconnected, that counts as minus one. However, after taking into account the disconnections, connections have increased by 8%. Private telephone connections increased by 198, minus 0.69% between June and December. These have increased by 535 between December 1987 and June 1988. Business telephones increased by 1120 and 784 in the same periods. Unless people are obtaining 2 or more power connections to their homes, how should we account for that? Unless they are getting multiple telephone connections, how do we account for that? If the figures are wrong, so are the theories.

It is quite clear that, by selectively taking figures out of the ABS reports, we end up with the doom and gloom that the members opposite try to spread around the Territory in an endeavour to cause trouble for this government. That is all they are doing. I cannot fix the difficulties that the ABS has with its figures. It uses a very small sampling base in a very small population. The government does have positive plans for improving employment opportunities which I will be indicating today in my response to the Treasurer's second-reading speech on the budget.

Doctor in Groote Eylandt Region

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

Is he aware that the Groote Eylandt region has only 1 doctor to service a population of some 3000 people and that a patient may have to wait for up to 2 weeks before being seen by a doctor? What is he doing to eliminate this problem?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. To put it into perspective, there are 60 000 people in New South Wales and 40 000 people in Victoria who have to wait up to 3 years for services in the health area. It is a fact that there is only 1 departmental doctor at Alyangula. I believe there is room for another doctor in the area to service Alyangula, Angurugu, Umbakumba and Numbulwar as well. As I have said before, the best option is to get general practitioners interested in taking up these services throughout the Territory because the Northern Territory government cannot possibly continue to provide doctors on wages to provide health services throughout the Northern Territory. If that is the case, of course, the magical Medicare provisions are not available to us and the Northern Territory taxpayer has to pay directly for what should be paid for through the national Medicare system.

Some 2700 people live at Groote Eylandt, according to the 1986 census. Emergencies are dealt with immediately. There is no doubt about that, and I have had no criticism in relation to that. These are handled by the doctor or the patient is immediately flown to Nhulunbuy. The waiting time on non-urgent matters is about 1 week to 10 days. A proposal has been made to the Angurugu Community Government Council for joint funding of a doctor. In fact, I offered some $30 000 to share the burden of providing a doctor at Angurugu. To date, its response has not arrived at my desk.

I also expect that Gemco should pay something towards the provision of an extra doctor there. Those negotiations are proceeding. However, I must say sadly that it does not seem to be showing a great deal of enthusiasm. We will continue to provide the existing service and we will be doing everything possible to encourage a general practitioner to go to that community.

Tourist Numbers

Mr HATTON to MINISTER for TOURISM

I remind him of allegations in the media over some 2 or 3 months about a significant downturn in respect of tourist numbers in the Northern Territory and I refer him to pages 19-22 of Budget Paper No 6 which seem to contradict this. Would he advise on the current state of the tourism industry in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Nightcliff for his question. It is gratifying to have the opportunity to talk about the current state of the tourist industry, particularly in light of the Leader of the Opposition's claim on the radio the other day about doom and gloom and a press release issued last July by the member for Stuart relating to problems in the Northern Territory tourist industry. If my memory is correct, when an unusually inquisitive journalist asked the member for Stuart where he got his facts, he said something to the effect that he had been walking around the streets of Alice Springs and there did not seem to be as many tourists around. It was almost embarrassing.

Mr Ede: I got 20 phone calls afterwards from businessmen telling me that I was exactly right.

Mr POOLE: Oh, yes. Unlike the Deputy Leader for the Opposition, who seems to take great joy in scaring people in industry, we took the trouble of recording many comments from almost everybody in major segments of the tourist industry in the Northern Territory. Almost every operator reported that his figures are as good as last year, if not slightly better. All people in the tourist industry acknowledged that there was a slow start to the season. However, they are quite confident that we will finish with the 10% to 15% increase that we have had for a number of years. It is a fact that the morale of staff in the government tourist bureaus interstate is affected when leading figures in the opposition claim that things are not going well.

I will remember the days in the government tourist bureaus in 1982 and 1983. When a bureau achieved $1m worth of sales, the staff wanted to go out and have a party. Those sorts of figures are now the norm. This financial year, the bureaus wrote 23% more business than they wrote last year. The Adelaide bureau, for example, wrote $2.67m in sales. In the early 1980s, the Alice Springs bureau and the Darwin bureau were lucky if they wrote over $200 000-worth of sales a year. This year, the Alice Springs bureau wrote $1.8m worth of business and Darwin wrote $2.3m. The Brisbane bureau, one of the smallest bureaus in our network, wrote $1.3m worth of business. The Perth bureau, one of our newer bureaus, nearly achieved its first $1m - $980 000-worth of business. The Sydney bureau wrote just under $2m worth of business. Those people should be congratulated, not denigrated for their performance.

There have been accusations for months about directionless, leaderless government. That is quite interesting because private enterprise certainly does not think that if you look at the number of tour operators who have commenced operation: 57 new companies and tours have commenced operation since 1987. Look at the additional accommodation stock that exists in the Northern Territory. Since January 1987, there are 16% more hotels, motels, guest houses and holiday apartment rooms in Darwin alone and a 15% increase in the Darwin area in caravan park sites. In Katherine, in hotels and motels and holiday apartment rooms, there is an 11% increase and a 26% increase in caravan sites. In Tennant Creek, in hotels, motels and guest houses and holiday apartment rooms, there is an increase of 15% and an increase of 29% in caravan park sites. In Alice Springs, for hotels, motels, guest houses and holiday apartment rooms, there is an increase of 7% and 10% increase in caravan sites. In Yulara, for hotel, motel, guest house and holiday apartment rooms, there is an increase of 18%. In Kakadu, for hotel, motel, guest house and holiday apartment rooms, there is an increase of 45% and 118% for caravan park sites. That is not bad for an industry that is suffering a downturn, according to the opposition.

Even when looking at the ABS figures, which opposition members take great delight in flinging about, they miss the key to the whole matter. When talking about the March quarter for 1988, which is probably the worst quarter of any year for the tourist industry in the Northern Territory ...

Mr Smith: I was comparing March against March, Eric.

Mr POOLE: That is right, and the number of available rooms had increased by 11.8%. Guest arrivals were down by 2.3%. What a huge problem, Mr Speaker! The takings from accommodation, which did not receive a mention, were up by 14.3% and, more importantly, room nights, the key to the industry, were up by 4.5%. Thus, the 2.3% decrease over the March quarter was negligible.

We all acknowledge the difficulties that Expo has caused, but it certainly is not having a long-term effect for the industry in the Territory. Caravan park site occupancy for the March quarter was 17.4% compared with 23.2% in the 1987 quarter. They represent the very people whom the tourist industry believes would immediately be attracted to Expo. But the total caravan park capacity increased by 12.1% during this period, and I think that, when the figures are released at the end of the year for the 1988 tourist season, we will have some very good news indeed.

In a casual, throwaway fashion, the opposition has talked about airline capacity and flights to and from the Northern Territory. Domestic capacity has increased by 5% into Darwin since January 1987. It has increased by 15% into Alice Springs and by 30% into Yulara. It is a real worry for the airline industry. Airlines are trying to find enough planes to offer the seats, and believe you me, Mr Speaker, despite what the gentlemen opposite think, airlines do not put aircraft on and fly them around with empty seats. International capacity into the Northern Territory has increased by 24% since January 1987, and it is expected - these are not my figures, but the industry's figures - to increase by a further 17% between November and April.

Mr Ede: What was the 23rd fact? I have just forgotten it.

Mr POOLE: It is quite unbelievable, Mr Speaker. Basically, all I am saying is that opposition members do not know what they are talking about when they talk about the tourist industry. If opposition members, apart from the Leader of the Opposition, had attended the Brojga Awards the other night, they would have seen the confidence of the industry. They do themselves a great disservice because, in effect, they basically downplay the industry and, by preaching doom and gloom, they destroy the morale of the people involved in that industry. Of course, morale is one of the key ingredients to successful selling. I am very confident that the industry will continue, as always, to ignore the members opposite.

Berry Springs Zoo

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING and CONSERVATION

In the budget speech last year, and again yesterday, the Treasurer, to be consistent, indicated that the Berry Springs zoo would be open in December this year. Would the honourable minister confirm that the Berry Springs zoo will open for only 2 weeks in December this year, to ensure that it qualifies for a bicentennial grant, but that it will not open permanently until May 1989 and that a major reason for this delay has been the appointment of additional staff to the zoo?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, hopefully the zoo can open in December and stay open but that depends on the ability of the development to be concluded in time. Obviously, we will not open the zoo prematurely because we want to ensure that it is opened in the best way possible. I think we should be looking at what a marvellous piece of work it is. Over the last few years, a dedicated team of people has developed one of the best zoos in the world. It has been done by people who have had their heads down and their tails up and they have worked non-stop. They have been innovative and have spent a very small amount of money to create something that is worth 4 or 5 times that expenditure. That has been done with sweat and with honest toil. Hopefully, we can have the place open by December but, if it is not finished then, we will have to wait a little longer, perhaps until March or April.

Most certainly, as we did on one occasion previously, we would like to open the premises and let the community see the sort of work that is occurring there. I am extremely disappointed that the Leader of the Opposition is attempting to attack the government in some way with regard to the magnificent work that has been carried out on a development which will be recognised throughout the country as being one of the greatest zoos, not only in this country, but in this region and possibly in the world. I cannot speak too highly of what is occurring at Berry Springs. I am sure that, when the community has the opportunity to see what is being created there, they will realise that the nitpicking, ridiculous accusations the Leader of the Opposition is trying to make today flow from a figment of his imagination.

Again, he is trying to undermine the confidence, not only of the people involved in building the zoo - and again I cannot speak too highly of their efforts - but he is trying to undermine confidence in our community as to what is occurring at Berry Springs which is designed to attract visitors to this area of the Territory. Those visitors will need accommodation. They will need to spend money for food and for entertainment and that will create jobs for our children and for other people who want to come to the Territory because it is a great place to live. It is typical of the negative attitude of members opposite. The sooner the community realises that everything that opposition members say about any sort of development in the Territory is negative and unproductive and, most of the time, totally untrue, the better off we will be.

Mr Smith: If you had provided proper funds for it, you would not have a problem now.

Mr MANZIE: Yes, Mr Speaker. We hope to open the zoo in December. If that is not possible because of construction problems that arise from time to time, we will open it for a short time to allow people to see what is occurring. We will have the official opening when the project is fully completed. An abominable attitude is shown by the members opposite to development in the Territory.

Air-conditioning of Preschools

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Mr Speaker, I noticed in reading the budget papers tabled yesterday, under the heading of 'Education Funding, New Capital Works', that an amount of $1.295m was allocated for the installation of air-conditioning in primary schools. In view of the numerous requests received from preschool parent associations for the air-conditioning of their preschools, can the minister advise if these funds will be used to satisfy their well-founded requests?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I know how the member for Jingili feels in relation to the preschool air-conditioning situation. The government has not changed its stand in relation to its air-conditioning policy. The amount included in the budget specifically refers to the need to air-condition primary schools. It is a matter of determining the priorities. We are committed to air-conditioning primary schools. I have also made it very clear, in responding to a question from the member for Jingili that, where there is an identified need to look at the conditions in the general learning area of preschools, the government will do so. If it is determined that air-conditioning is required, provision has been made in the budget for that to occur.

I make it very clear to honourable members, however, that government policy is not changing. We have made it clear that, in new preschools, we will air-condition withdrawal areas. That is very important. I have also made it clear that there are queries about the health aspect of air-conditioning preschools, mainly because of the age of the children and their movement to and from classroom and outside areas which could create health problems.

It will be necessary to set guidelines for the assessment of preschool air-conditioning requirements. I would also like to make it very clear to the honourable member that, as he mentioned in yesterday's radio program, some parents do not see air-conditioning as a requirement in preschools. Those parents and their concerns have to be recognised. When guidelines are set, we will definitely be ensuring that consideration is given to the views of parents who do not feel that preschools should be air-conditioned. I have asked the department, in line with the standing policy, to investigate all Northern Territory schools with non-airconditioned classroom areas. The department will identify those with design difficulties which aggravate problems of heat build-up. These will be ranked according to the degree of the problems involved and their case for air-conditioning will be assessed by myself according to the policy and available funds. There is money in the budget to address the matter if the need is demonstrated, and I guess we will hear more from the member for Jingili as time goes by.

Sentences in Alice Springs Court

Mr COLLINS to ATTORNEY-GENERAL

When can I expect an answer to a question I have had on notice since March relating to the sentencing by the Alice Springs Supreme Court of people convicted in slaying cases since the introduction of the Criminal Code? For the Attorney-General's information, the matters on which I requested information concerned the nature of the convictions, length of sentences and the actual time served in jail by persons convicted.

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, if the question is on notice, obviously a reply is being prepared and will be forwarded. However, I would like to make one comment. The member for Sadadeen has made some rather strong and stupid accusations and allegations about the operation of the courts. I find it disappointing that attacks on judges and members of our judiciary and court systems are being made by uninformed members.

Mr Collins: I tried to get information but you will not give it to me.

Mr MANZIE: Mr Speaker, he does not understand the court system. He does not understand that the courts are not an arm of government. The judiciary is totally independent of government and any suggestion that the government should have any influence on the judiciary or the decisions that it makes is abhorrent. If they have a problem with the way the courts operate, I would urge honourable members not to attack the judiciary as the judiciary are not in a position to defend themselves, nor should they be.

I will certainly find out why it has taken so long to provide the information to the honourable member. I will ensure that the information is provided to him in writing. If he wants to ask me some specific questions, I could probably provide certain figures in relation to sentencing for murders or the numbers of people who have gone to trial in both Alice Springs and Darwin.

Funding for Private Schools

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Yesterday, the Deputy Leader of the Opposition inferred that the government was unwilling to offer assistance to St Phillip's College whilst at the same time being generous in its assistance to the proposed Darwin International Grammar School. Can the minister clarify the position in relation to government funding of both schools and can he further clarify the future of the proposed DIGS?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. I was expecting a question from the member for Stuart as opposition spokesman on education because he indicated yesterday that he had some questions that he wanted to ask in relation to the Darwin International Grammar School and he made some outlandish remarks about our lack of assistance to St Phillip's College.

The government is very disappointed that the Darwin International Grammar School is facing difficulties. There is no question about that and there are many Territorians who are disappointed that the project is in difficulty. Tremendous benefits would flow from it, not only for people in the immediate area of the school, but right throughout the Territory. In addition, it is a $30m construction project. It will offer a choice in educational opportunities. One of the first concerns of people who are considering moving to a place is the education that will be offered to their children. DIGS is a very important part of that and it is about time the opposition started to acknowledge that the non-government sector has a very important role to play in education. About 18% of our education facilities in the Territory are non-government as compared to 25% in the other states.

The member for Stuart knocked the Kormilda proposal - a proposal which will provide opportunities for Aboriginal children, overseas children and local children, and give people in the bush an opportunity to obtain their education in the Northern Territory. All we have from members of the opposition is a completely negative attitude and they should be condemned for it. We are looking ...

Mr Ede: Overseas students at Kormilda?

Mr Dondas: Wankers.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member for Casuarina will withdraw that remark.

Mr DONDAS: I withdraw it unreservedly, Mr Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! I would suggest that the member for MacDonnell, if he wishes to pay attention to the answer being given by the minister, should dispose of his newspaper and cease his interjections.

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, the government is interested in providing educational opportunities for all Northern Territory students and they should be able to receive their education in the Northern Territory. It was interesting last night that the member for Stuart complained about our jumping in and helping DIGS whilst, on the other hand, he complained that we had been tardy in our response in respect of St Phillip's College. What a load of nonsense that is! We have been helping the non-government schools for years - St Phillip's College, the Marrara Christian School, the Catholic education system.

St Phillip's College received the normal support that we give to others in respect of interest subsidy, capital repayments and per capita funding. In fact, I wrote to Jan Heaslip, the Chairman of St Phillip's College, on 12 May saying that we would be giving them 10% on the college's loan of $1.25m over 10 years as well as a 50% capital repayment for the $853 400 costs of the boarding facilities that they were building. We will continue to support St Phillip's College. We have also given a special boarding subsidy. The opposition spokesman on education should know these things. I query whether he has done his research on this matter. We have also given a number of one-off special grants in relation to outstanding repairs and maintenance. We are looking at other ways in which we can help St Phillip's College play a very important role in our education system. To say that we are not supporting it is absolute nonsense. We will continue to support the Isolated Children and Parents Association.

There are so many benefits that can result from DIGS going ahead. It is disappointing that, at this stage, difficulties are being experienced. The government does not, however, in any way step back from its commitment to assist the Darwin International Grammar School. I recall the nonsense and the lies which were aired in relation to the government's decision to assist the school. We were supposed to be taking money out of the education budget and disadvantaging public education. What a load of nonsense! We were taking steps to advantage the education system, to save money in the long term and to give people opportunities. The opposition education spokesman divided the total cost of the project by the number of students to be enrolled and came up with a ridiculous figure of a government subsidy of $22 000 a head. What a load of nonsense!

I hope that the people who are endeavouring to bring the project together are successful. A number of options are being looked at. There is a meeting tonight of which honourable members would be aware, in relation to a particular proposal which is being put forward. I reiterate the government's line. We will continue to support the Darwin International Grammar School. I make it very clear that no government money has gone into the Darwin International Grammar School. Despite the efforts of the opposition to infer otherwise, we have maintained all along that, until the Darwin International Grammar School opens its doors, the government is not guaranteeing it in any way. It is not offering letters of comfort and no government money will be spent on it until the school is up and running. The offer, however, is still there.

We cannot afford to knock projects such as this. Such projects are very important to the whole education system in the Territory and it is about time the opposition spokesman on education looked at the positive aspects of such projects in providing opportunities for children in the Northern Territory. He should not simply knock it and say it will not work before it even gets off the ground. Let us try to get it off the ground! I wish the people involved in the project well. It will offer tremendous benefits to the people of the Northern Territory.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, I ask that further questions be placed on the Notice Paper. In doing so, Mr Speaker, can I remind honourable members of the sessional order adopted by the House that questions asked during question time or during the adjournment debate can be answered by the responsible minister during the period immediately following question time.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Government Debt

Mr PERRON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, I wish to respond to a couple of questions asked of me by the Leader of the Opposition. My response may help him in his contribution to debate this morning.

Yesterday, he asked me if the figure of $1300m that I had used as total government loan debt included an amount of $150m in statutory authority loan debts. The figure I used does not include that amount and neither it should. The Leader of the Opposition has made a mistake in his calculation of the Northern Territory debt. The figure he eventually reached was about $2400m which included a figure of $251m as semi-government loans on-lent to authorities. The fact is you cannot count those loans twice. The only debt is to the source from which the money was borrowed. The Northern Territory government borrows money and on-lends it to authorities like the Power and Water Authority and the Port Authority. They repay Treasury from their revenue and Treasury then repays the bank which lent the funds or the group who invested in government bonds. It therefore cannot be counted twice as a Northern Territory debt. The Leader of the Opposition should be careful about such double-counting.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
Capital Works Expenditure

Mr PERRON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, another question raised by the Leader of the Opposition, probably with Treasury officers, related to the fact that capital works expenditure appeared to have been reduced from $202m to $177m. Those figures appear on table 5 at page 12 of Budget Paper No 3. The way to look at the global capital works program ...

Mr SMITH: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The information is obviously important and quite significant, but it is not being given in response to a question that I have asked, either in question time or the adjournment debate. Unfortunately, I think the Chief Minister will have to find some other way of delivering his information.

Mr PERRON: That is not a problem, Mr Speaker. I could have provided him with the information but, if he wants to pull a technicality on me, I will cease to answer his query.

ANSWER TO QUESTION
DNA Fingerprinting System

Mr PERRON (Chief Minister): Mr Speaker, the member for Koolpinyah asked yesterday whether the Northern Territory Police Force proposed to introduce a DNA fingerprinting system in the Northern Territory. I am advised by the police that DNA-profiling technology, which I guess is what the member is referring to, is presently unavailable in Australia. Forensic DNA-profiling is used for identification or elimination of suspects by examination of genetic material from blood or semen. The technology has been used on one occasion by the Northern Territory Police Force, via a laboratory in the United States. Three Australian states are preparing for the training of personnel and the establishment of specialised laboratory facilities. The technology is considered to be a major breakthrough in crime investigation and its introduction to the Northern Territory is presently being considered.

Moneys Owed for Services to Beaufort Hotel

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

On a number of occasions, the previous Treasurer stated that it would be a condition of sale of the Beaufort Hotel that moneys outstanding to the Northern Territory government would be paid. In fact, on 2 June last year, the previous Treasurer stated that the government would not reconnect services to the new owner until the debt to the Northern Territory was paid in full. The debt at that stage was over $1m for electricity, $76 000 for water and sewerage charges and $250 000 in payroll tax. Now that the sale has been completed, has the Northern Territory government recovered the moneys owed to it?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I do not have the specific information before me. However, I understand that the settlement in relation to the sale of the Beaufort Hotel has not yet been finalised and that the amounts are still outstanding.

Capital Works Expenditure in Alice Springs

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I refer to a report in the Centralian Advocate last Friday. It quoted budget figures supplied by the opposition claiming that capital works spending in Alice Springs had been slashed by $11.5m to $20.7m this year. As the minister's department is responsible for overseeing the expenditure of a large proportion of the capital works budget, could he please advise the House on the level of capital works to be carried out in the Alice Springs area this financial year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I would certainly be delighted to provide for members of this House, for the public generally and for those people who take a particular interest in question time, information concerning the realities of the capital works program in Alice Springs. Once again, it is unfortunate that there are not only people who deliberately misrepresent or misinterpret the facts but people who either are not able to add up themselves or misinterpret people who misinterpret people who misinterpret. Obviously, the Labor candidate for the electorate of Flynn in Alice Springs thought she could make some gains out of using the ALP's distortionate figures in regard to capital works ...

Mr Bell: There is no such word as 'distortionate', Fred.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the member for MacDonnell may like to take note of the details of the program for Alice Springs, which may be of benefit to some of his constituents.

As the member for Ludmilla stated, the capital works program is largely the responsibility of the Department of Transport and Works. In terms of the department's capital works program, it will inject a cash value of $17.3m into the Alice Springs economy this year, a considerable increase on last year's figure of $14.3m. That is what counts for businesses in Alice Springs - the cash flow into the local economy through construction projects and supplies for them.

Last year, despite cuts in the roads program across the board, roads expenditure in Alice Springs was maintained. In fact, Alice Springs has received favoured treatment from the CLP government, in contrast to the outrageous claims of the Labor candidate for Flynn that it has suffered because of what she calls the 'Berrimah-line syndrome'. Mr Speaker, this government has no concept of a Berrimah line. It has the interests of all Territorians at heart and is extremely fair and reasonable in the allocation of funds to all areas of the Northern Territory.

The Alice Springs region benefits from expenditure in a number of areas. $4.3m has been allocated to power programs, including Aboriginal essential services, $3m to the water program, $6.8m to housing and at least $0.6m to works being carried out by the Conservation Commission. The total of all the allocations that I have mentioned is $32m.

Mr Ede: Not in Alice Springs.

Mr FINCH: Mr Speaker, the insanity of the members opposite! Who will build those projects out in the bush in the Alice Springs region? Predominantly, it will be Alice Springs people who are used to the conditions down there.

Next Monday night, when I am in Alice Springs and I have the opportunity to talk to people who are capable of rational and analytical assessment of what this program is all about, they will have the opportunity to hear what this government is doing for their region. They will appreciate that, in effect, our program has increased, not decreased. The Labor candidate for Flynn is claiming - and I use quotations attributed to her and I guess they have originated from the Leader of the Opposition who has difficulty with simple arithmetic - 2 years ago, $56.7m was the total allocation for capital works in the Alice Springs area. In fact, it was less than that, Mr Speaker, but that is a deliberate misuse or total lack of understanding of what the figures mean. It is claimed that, in 1987-88, the figure was $32.3m. That at least is in the right ball park but it is claimed that the figure this year will be $20.7m. As I have just outlined, Transport and Works alone accounts for $17m. The total of the few items that I mentioned - and that is not a comprehensive list - is $30m. Proportionately, that represents a fairer share, if you like, of the capital works program for Alice Springs.

Mr Speaker, because you are from the region, I am sure that you appreciate that this government's commitment to road programs in that area, to facilities in Aboriginal communities and to the construction of public buildings, has been more than reasonable over the years, and I think that is appropriate. The region down there is developing. I mentioned some of those figures to highlight the total incompetence of the members opposite in simple arithmetic. I despair. I did suggest, perhaps a little tongue in cheek, that the Minister for Education ought to introduce additional adult education classes on simple arithmetic and I would be pleased to help sponsor some students from the opposite side of the House.

In addition to that capital works program, it is important to look at effectiveness. The program last year was in the order of what it is this year, in total terms. Certainly, there has not been a dramatic chop from $30m-odd to $20m as has been alleged.

Mr Smith: Why are you hiding these things?

Mr FINCH: I am not hiding anything. What it did include was $9m for equipment for the power station at Alice Springs - a fine project. But, whilst it did illustrate a commitment to Alice Springs, its effect on the local community is obviously minimal. The effect of this year's budget is far superior to what the figures show.

In addition, the repairs and maintenance program for Alice Springs through the Department of Transport and Works is worth some $8.1m. I am not sure what the repair and maintenance programs of other authorities are worth. I mention that specifically because it is what those small businesses - the electricians, the 2 or 3-man-band people - survive on. That is their bread and butter, and I have mentioned it particularly because Alice Springs' share of the repairs and maintenance program is $8.1m out of $32.6m which is not at all an unfair proportion. I will leave it for the next half hour for the member for Stuart to work out what percentage that is, but undoubtedly he will come up with a figure ...

Mr Ede: Percentage run down.

Mr FINCH: Just to demonstrate his ignorance there, he would be well aware that the total repairs and maintenance program has increased by some $2m-odd to $32.6m total. Alice Spring's share went from $7.2m to $8.1m, $0.9m out of $2.3m or whatever the exact figure was. Certainly, a greater increase, by proportion, than for the rest of the Territory.

That is a clear demonstration of the commitment of the Northern Territory government, the CLP government, and one would hope that we will continue with CLP representation rather than have people in this House who cannot add up. That way, we will be able to get on with the development of this Territory in a fair and equitable way. We have no concept of a Berrimah line, and I despise people who are counterproductive and negative in their input to this debate.

Moneys Owed for Services to Beaufort Hotel

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Is it still the intention of the Northern Territory government, as announced by the Treasurer last year, to reclaim the moneys owing to it by the people, who I think are the previous operators of the Beaufort Hotel, in respect of electricity, water and sewerage charges and payroll tax, and is it the intention to reclaim that money before the final approval is put in place for the new owners to take over?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can confirm to the Leader of the Opposition that it is still the government's firm intention to recover moneys outstanding for charges and taxes owing to the Northern Territory government as a result of the past financial difficulties of the Beaufort Hotel. The understanding is a very clear one between ourselves and the current owners of the hotel. I can inform the Leader of the Opposition that the electricity accounts are being paid now from time to time. There is an outstanding amount up to a certain period. I do not know what the figure is, but the payments have been resumed ...

Mr Smith: But $1m is still owing.

Mr PERRON: Are you asking me or telling me?

Mr Smith: Both.

Mr PERRON: Mr Speaker, it seems that the honourable member has the information he requires on this matter. I do not know why he has asked me the question. However, at no stage has the Territory government moved from its position that debts outstanding to the Territory will be recovered on change of ownership of the hotel.

Review of Regulations for School Councils

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

He has been engaged in a review of the amended regulations governing the operation of school councils in the Northern Territory. Can he indicate what progress has been made, whether changes are likely and, if so, when those changes will be implemented?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. When I initiated the review of school council regulations, I did not realise the extent of the task that I had taken on board. To date, I have spoken with the majority of school councils' representatives. I have spoken with 50 school council representatives and principals. There remain 5 councils that I have to speak with and it is my intention to ensure that I speak with those people prior to making any final decision in relation to the school council regulations.

Before deciding to take that course of action, I checked to make sure that no schools were experiencing hardship at present. No Annual General Meetings were due to take place and no penalties or disadvantages have been imposed on schools at this time. I wanted to make sure that I spoke with all the council representatives face to face. It has been an interesting exercise and some changes will be made. I want to ensure that the regulations will be made and put in place in a responsible manner and, as soon as I have spoken with those remaining councils, I will be making a decision on this issue.

I reiterate that the government was not seeking to deprive parents of the opportunity to attend school council meetings. Indeed, the previous Minister for Education made the following statement: 'I want parents, and the broader community, to be representatives on school councils, and that needs to happen if school councils are going to enter into the process of full devolution'. It appears that the issue of the devolution of powers created the problems that we have today. That matter is being addressed and I will be speaking to the remaining 5 councils in the very near future during the course of my trips throughout the Territory because some of those areas are away from the main centres. The Borrooloola School Council, for example, is one that I have not yet spoken with. Following discussion with those 5 councils, I will be making a decision.

Psychiatric Services in Central Australia

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

This is a further question in respect of the litany of the government's broken election promises from last year. In its lead up to the 1987 Northern Territory elections, the honourable minister will recall his government's promise, inter alia, that it would 'set up an assessment team in Alice Springs to assess the psychiatrically-ill and intellectually-disabled persons who were behaviourally disturbed'. The team was to comprise 'a psychiatrist, a psychologist, social workers and support staff and it would help set up community-based psychiatric services in central Australia'. Can he explain to this House why his government has failed to deliver?

ANSWER

Dear oh dear, it looks as though I have stirred him into a bit of action.

Mr BELL: It is of concern to the people of Alice Springs and the voters in Flynn.

Mr DALE: Last week, Mr Speaker, I clearly indicated the lack of attention of the honourable member to his shadow portfolio responsibilities and urged the Leader of the Opposition to do something about it by giving the very important shadow responsibility for health and community services to the member for Arnhem who was doing a fantastic job in that particular area previously. There is no doubt that the shadow spokesman could be termed only as lazy in relation to his responsibilities. He spends most of his time ...

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! The Minister for Health and Community Services has ...

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr BELL: ... become fairly broad in his answer to the question.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! Order! When I call the honourable member to order, I expect him to resume his seat. There is a point of order. Honourable members must not cast aspersions on other members and I ask the minister to withdraw that comment.

Mr DALE: I withdraw unreservedly, Mr Speaker.

I certainly did call on the honourable member to put a little more endeavour into his portfolio responsibilities in that I had to ask some backbenchers to put questions to me in relation to my portfolio. I am still waiting for him to ask me one on the problem with meningococcal meningitis in central Australia. I have an answer here that I am really keen to give but, unfortunately, the honourable member has not got across the situation yet. He has been busy trying to stir up industrial disputation at the Royal Darwin Hospital.

All of the promises made in respect of my area of responsibility at this time last year have been fulfilled. Indeed, they have been fulfilled on budget. I am very proud of the efforts of the people within my department. I will be making my statement in relation to the Appropriation Bill today. I am sure that the honourable member opposite, all the people of Alice Springs and, for that matter, all the people throughout the Northern Territory will understand that this Northern Territory government cares for each and every person in the Northern Territory.

Mr BELL: A point of order, Mr Speaker! Standing orders demand that an answer be relevant to the question. Not once in that answer did we get from the honourable minister any reference to his election promise in relation to assessment teams or facilities or psychiatric services. It was outrageous.

Mr DALE: In speaking to the point of order, it is fairly obvious that the honourable member does not even recall what he asked. He was referring specifically to the breaking of promises by, in particular myself, during the past 12 months. My answer was absolutely relevant.

Mr SPEAKER: There is no point of order.

Date Industry in Central Australia

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for PRIMARY INDUSTRY and FISHERIES

What plans, if any, does the government have to help further develop the fledgling date industry in central Australia?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, for some time now my department has been undertaking a good deal of work in relation to the fledgling date industry. Indeed, when I was in Alice Springs a few weeks ago, I had the pleasure of visiting some date growers to see the work that is being undertaken and to meet with various people who have an interest in the industry. Some varieties of dates have been shown to have potential for commercial development in central Australia and the Department of Primary Industry and Fisheries has identified an area at Deep Well, south of Alice Springs, which is believed to be suitable for commercial date production. Soil and water investigations in the area indicate that commercial date production might well be viable there. Some tissue-culture plantlets have been imported into the Northern Territory and the department's input into the industry is assisting it to develop.

It is worth noting that an officer of the Department of Primary Industry and Fisheries has recently won a Churchill scholarship - I believe it is the only such scholarship awarded in the Northern Territory this year - to enable him to travel overseas to undertake research in relation to the propagation of dates in the Northern Territory. I am sure that the efforts of that officer will provide a great deal of background information which will be of great interest and value to this fledgling industry.

The department recently imported 10 Zahadi, 10 Khadrany and 30 other tissue-cultured palms from France. These are in quarantine in Darwin. Arrangements are also being made through Dr Carpenter to import 40 offshoots of known commercial date varieties from California during 1988 and a further 60 offshoots during 1989-90 as they become available. These offshoots are for the establishment of a germ-plasm collection/multiplication block at the Arid Zone Research Institute in Alice Springs. Negotiations are being conducted with the Australian Quarantine Service to use a site, possibly near Katherine, as an open quarantine area for the importation of approximately 1000 date offshoots. The reason for choosing Katherine as a possible site for such a quarantine service is to ensure that any diseases that may be introduced in the plants are not transmitted and that other date species are not in close proximity. This would minimise the spread of any disease.

I can assure the member for Sadadeen that the department has a great interest in the possibilities of the date industry. I certainly share that interest, having seen the work undertaken so far in Alice Springs. I will be pleased to keep him informed as further developments occur.

Traffic Problems in Nightcliff

Mr HATTON to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I refer him to the Nightcliff traffic planning study conducted in 1984 and 1985 and subsequent extensive community consultation over a period of some 2 years, particularly in relation to Progress Drive and the Nightcliff shopping centre area, and the method now supported by the community, the government and the Darwin City Council to solve traffic problems in the area. What action is now being taken to implement solutions to overcome the long-standing, unsatisfactory and unsafe traffic situation in that area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, clearly the member for Nightcliff's interest in this subject dates back to his early days in this House. Obviously, he has participated in the appropriate planning studies undertaken over the last 4 years. The traffic congestion that prevails in the Nightcliff shopping centre area, particularly along Progress Drive and at the intersection of Dick Ward Drive, is quite obvious, both during working hours and on weekends.

In addition to the traffic study undertaken by the Department of Transport and Works in 1984, a number of inputs have come from the community generally and from the Darwin City Council. In fact, the member for Nightcliff called a series of public meetings earlier this year to ensure that the public were satisfied with the proposals that were being put forward. These include a roundabout at the intersection of Dick Ward Drive and Progress Drive, and a number of other appropriate measures in the vicinity of the shopping centre itself.

The Northern Territory government is contributing $150 000 to these works. I understand that it was transferred to the Darwin City Council in late July and I have been advised that the council's target date for tenders is September this year. I would assume, therefore, that works will be completed by the end of the year and, one would hope, by the time school holidays commence.

Another important part of the study related to what is referred to as the Nightcliff bypass road, now included in the budget. The purpose of that road is to eliminate through-traffic from the area of the Nightcliff shopping centre. The intention is to reroute commuter traffic and not to detract in any way from the commercial viability of the shopping centre. That $1.2m project is planned for this current year. There are a number of difficulties in relation to the finalisation of the route, but it will be somewhere behind the site of the old Nightcliff drive-in. A number of sacred sites have been identified in the area and we are working with the Kulaluk people to ensure that the route that is selected finally is appropriate and will be acceptable to them.

We would expect that, having resolved all of those matters, survey and design will commence with a target for tenders being let in December, construction to commence in February and completion, we would assume, in about June or July next year. An allocation of some $0.6m has been provided in this budget and, all going well, the project ought to be completed early in the next financial year. The member for Nightcliff's contribution in bringing the community and the technocrats together to find the most appropriate resolution is to be applauded.

Sacred Sites at Mount Samuel

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Has he received representations from the mining industry in relation to purported Aboriginal sacred sites at Mount Samuel near Tennant Creek and, if so, what is the nature of the concerns expressed by the industry?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Karama for his question. Indeed, some newspaper stories have been published regarding Mount Samuel and some industry response has been forthcoming in recent times. I can inform honourable members that, in recent weeks, my office has been deluged - as has the office of the Minister for Lands and Housing - with verbal and written comments about a proposal by the Northern Territory Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority to register a 16 km² site in the Mount Samuel region.

A considerable body of documentation has already built up about this issue, and I must say that valid reasons for concern apparently do exist. The Mount Samuel issue is looking remarkably similar to an earlier controversy about claims of a sacred site at Coronation Hill. Indeed, the Coronation Hill issue has just been brought up to date by the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority itself, with the production of a video called, 'Bulajang Sickness Country'. I watched that video last week and, apart from the professional quality of the narration supplied by the ABC's Tony Walker, I noted its strong anti-mining and anti-development message. I presume the production of the film was requested by members of the Jawoyn community and I would certainly not presume that it was put together as some sort of good idea by the authority itself.

In effect, the video is a sequel to another produced by the authority a couple of years ago which purported to show that the Aboriginal people did not want mining at Coronation Hill, and that Coronation Hill itself was a sacred site of immense importance, even though all the available evidence placed the site somewhat distant from Coronation Hill. I have asked the Minister for Lands, Housing and Conservation, as the minister responsible for the authority, to seek necessary information about the video, and he has put this request to the authority. The information sought concerns the number of copies produced, the distribution list and the cost involved. It is also important to learn from the authority whether or not its board gave approval for the production of the video and whether the responsible minister was consulted before it was decided to proceed with the production.

The Mount Samuel issue raises concerns of similar magnitude to those which troubled this government at Coronation Hill. Without apparent warning, and despite every earlier indication that mining operations and potential projects did not contravene any sites of significance, the authority has announced that it intends registering a site known as the Marla Marla Kanitaji Site Complex, covering the Mount Samuel-Skipper Hill line of outcrop for a distance of approximately 8 km by 2 km. This area is highly prospective for gold, and at least 1 company working within the boundaries of the claimed site has been told by the authority to stop work immediately. Another company has had a granted mining tenement inside the claimed site since 1965.

The Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority has indicated its willingness to work with the companies on what it calls 'site clearance exercises'. It will do that for a fee, and quite a fat fee at that. In correspondence to mining companies, the authority quotes the following schedule: anthropologist's fees at $256 a day and Aboriginal custodian fees of $75 a day, plus travel expenses at 55¢ per kilometre, plus incidentals including food. In all, the quote for the particular site clearance job has a bottom line of just under $3500. That might give a clue to my curiosity about how the production of anti-mining videos is funded.

Perhaps, Mr Speaker, you are wondering why this site claim has emerged only now in one of the Territory's oldest mining regions. It seems that, in this case, there may be a demarcation dispute. Questions about possible sacred sites were first raised, not by the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority, but by a Tennant Creek-based project officer for the Central Land Council. In March this year, the officer wrote a none-too-subtle letter to a mining company active in the region warning that sacred sites might be standing in the way of the company's development plans. He went on to say that the company would be well advised to deal directly with the Central Land Council or else face considerable costs and delays. The officer pointed out that the Central Land Council was empowered to enter into a sacred sites protection agreement.

The company sent the letter to the Director of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority in May and he replied on the same day strongly cautioning against entering into any agreement with the Central Land Council. The director said that the power to identify sacred sites resided only with the authority and that Central Land Council staff would be technically committing an offence if they entered a sacred site. In short, the director noted any such agreement would be in conflict with the provisions of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Act. The authority made it clear to the mining company that it objected strenuously to the Central Land Council muscling in on its territory. The authority has announced its intention to register some 16 km² of the region as a sacred site. Meanwhile, orderly mining development has been disrupted and development plans thrown into confusion.

I have also received some preliminary advice on sites of Aboriginal significance in the Mount Samuel region which appears to be somewhat in conflict with the advice from the authority. All in all, it is a disturbing situation and I believe the mining industry has just about run out of its store of patience in relation to matters concerning Aboriginal sacred sites in the Northern Territory. It may well be that the Territory government's tolerance is likewise being strained and it is my firm view that legislation governing the activities of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority deserves examination.

Development at Manton Dam

Mrs PADGHAM-PURICH to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Having read conflicting reports in the newspapers about the nature and extent of the government's proposed development at Manton Dam, whilst I would not dream of suggesting there was any argument between the Minister for Mines and Energy and the Minister for Tourism on this matter, could he indicate exactly what is planned for the development of the Manton Dam area?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I am speaking in my role as the minister responsible for the Power and Water Authority. As the honourable member would know, Manton Dam has been drained. The contractors are removing trees within the dam and the dam is being cleared to provide a venue for power boating. A road will be made into Manton Dam, a car park will be provided and an area will be cleared of trees.

May I say there have been some tremendous stories about Manton Dam and what is in it. The number of bullets that have been collected in Manton Dam - I will not say, 'would fill a 44-gallon drum' because that got me into trouble once before in this Assembly - is considerable. We have been told that there are Spitfires in there. We were also told that, before the establishment of the crocodile farm, all problem crocodiles were put into Manton Dam. The people clearing the trees are in waders up to their waists and a person is standing by with a shotgun. In fact, one of the operators of a chain saw was concerned for his personal safety the other day because the man supposedly standing guard was more concerned about picking up bullets. He threatened the man's person with the chain saw if he did not keep his eye on potential crocodiles that might come in between the gumboots which he was wearing.

Our intention is quite simple: to provide a venue for power boating in the Northern Territory. However, in doing this, a number of other options have been put to the government. Some people have approached myself and the Minister for Tourism with proposals to open up the area as a tourist resort. These proposals are at a very preliminary stage but some people have realised the potential opportunities that could exist in that region. That is all I would like to say on that. There are no firm proposals before the government to build 5-star motels on the escarpment or indeed 3-star motels on the foreshore of the dam but people certainly have an interest in the area. There is another proposal to lift the wall of the dam by 1.5 m to try to provide a much bigger expanse of water in that region and then to interconnect Manton Dam to Darwin River Dam by way of a pipeline. That is also at a very preliminary stage.

Thus, we have 3 options. The first is to provide a venue for power boating. That is being carried out. The road is being built, trees are being removed, car parks are being built and a beached area will be created at the Batchelor end of the dam. Several people have approached the government indicating that they would like to build in that region. That is all that has happened at this stage. The other proposal is to lift the dam wall by 1.5 m and put a interconnecting pipeline across to Darwin River Dam. The only thing that I am praying for is an early and good wet season to ensure that Manton Dam fills. If you fly over it, you realise how much water has been drained out of Manton Dam. I am hoping for good rains to fill it and allow the people to enjoy speed boating which has been denied to them since the closure of Lake Bennett to such activities.

Water and Sewerage Services in Nightcliff

Mr HATTON to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

In his capacity as minister responsible for the Power and Water Authority, I refer him to extensive representations that I have been making over some considerable time on behalf of the constituents of Nightcliff and Millner in respect of the need for upgrading of the water and sewerage services in that area as a consequence of substantial increases in population density over the last decade or more. Could he advise what progress has been made to provide a modern standard of water and sewerage services to those areas?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Nightcliff for his question. He is only matched by the member for Ludmilla in terms of his enthusiasm to have such issues resolved. I have outlined in the Assembly, on several occasions, the works that are currently proceeding in the Rapid Creek, Nightcliff and Fannie Bay areas at a cost of some $1.65m: the reveal-and-seal technique employed to stop water ingress into sewerage lines. Indeed, there are many problems in those areas and work is proceeding.

There has been an ongoing program to upgrade the sewerage reticulation throughout Darwin. Contracts are currently progressing for stages 4, 5 and 6 in the Rapid Creek, Nightcliff and Fannie Bay areas. As I said, the cost is $1.65m. Excellent results are being obtained from the reveal-and-seal method which uses a closed circuit television camera to reveal faults. Specially developed inflatable packers, in combination with a special liquid grout, then repair the sewer with minimum disturbance to customers. This method also reveals that a high proportion of house drains are faulty and replacement or repairs are carried out as work proceeds. The authority is now confident in this method of sewer main rehabilitation due to the success rate and it will continue to be used for the remainder of the program.

If I could be more specific in terms of contracts and their current status, the Darwin Rapid Creek sewer rehabilitation, stage 4A, is being carried out. It had an extended completion date at the time of this briefing to 7 July 1988. The work being carried out in that area was at a cost of $210 797. The contract was awarded on 10 March 1988 and was running behind program because of the unexpected necessity to replace a larger number of sewer sections than was anticipated. The sewer rehabilitation, stage 6, in the Nightcliff area is at a cost of some $502 000. The work on that is nearing completion. The contractor is currently running over time but he has claimed an extension of time which is being assessed. The new technology is picking up many faults of which we were not aware. I understand that many of the pipes had to be dug up because they were unable to be repaired by the new method.

Stage 5 of the rehabilitation work is at a cost of $742 000. The major work is completed and it is awaiting arrival of special fittings in order to complete minor work outstanding. That has either been completed or will be very shortly. As the Chief Minister mentioned in his speech to the Appropriation Bill, a considerable amount of work is being carried out in that area. Indeed, I understand that the problems will be rectified before this wet season. I anticipate that the people of Rapid Creek, Nightcliff and Fannie Bay will be much happier with the results from the particular method that we are using.

Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I remind him that, during the last sittings, he advised the House that a review was to be conducted of the operation of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority but that it was delayed because the government departments were to be given an opportunity to comment. Has he received those comments from the departments and when will the report be tabled in this parliament?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I advised the House at the last sittings that I would table the report at these sittings. I have no reason to change my advice to the House.

Warumungu Land Claim

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

What is the current position in relation to the Warumungu Land Claim and does he intend to discuss the issues with the Tennant Creek Town Council?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the Northern Territory government has a duty and a responsibility to ensure that the legitimate interests of all its citizens are taken into account in inquiries by the Aboriginal Land Commissioner into Aboriginal land claims. The commissioner's recommendations in regard to the Warumungu Land Claim are now before the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs and the Territory government has a further duty to ensure that issues of detriment arising from the commissioner's recommendations are properly addressed.

The impact of the recommendations on the economic and social development of Tennant Creek, together with the aspirations of the Warumungu people, are recognised in the Northern Territory government's attitude towards these matters. The Warumungu Land Claim was first lodged in November 1978. The inquiry involved 6450 pages of transcript, 313 exhibits and 142 witnesses, and culminated in a 430-page report. Officials of various departments of the Territory government are examining the commissioner's report to determine the appropriate course of action to resolve the matters of detriment. Northern Territory officials have met with the Tennant Creek Town Council and will meet with the town council together with the Central Land Council on about 20 September.

Mr Speaker, the list of matters to be resolved is a lengthy one. However, the principal items are these: to ensure that there is an adequate supply of water to Tennant Creek, both for the present and the future; to protect individual landholders from detriment that would flow from a grant of land; to ensure that there will be ongoing opportunities for employment in mining; to protect the pastoral industry by maintaining fencing in disease control areas; and to ensure that land around Tennant Creek will be available for future urban growth and for the recreation of the community.

The Department of Lands and Housing is well advanced with a structure plan for Tennant Creek, a planning document to which the Julalikari Council has made a major contribution. There is much unreasonable and ill-informed criticism of the Territory government's role in putting its submissions to the Aboriginal Land Commissioner. This criticism comes from those who would have us sit back and do nothing about the matters of detriment which I have outlined. The government has a duty to ensure that these essential public services are maintained and that all Territorians are treated fairly. At the end of the day, these matters will be decided on by the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs. It is to be hoped that the federal government will play a more constructive role in the resolution of issues arising out of the inquiry than it played in the inquiry itself.

Honourable members would no doubt have been quite alarmed at the recent news of a letter which was inadvertently delivered to my office. It was under the official letterhead of the Minister for Aboriginal Affairs and was signed by a private secretary to that minister. It was addressed to a senior private secretary of the federal Minister for Local Government in Parliament House. In that letter, one private secretary suggested to the other that it 'would be desirable to keep the Northern Territory government out of these negotiations ...'. The letter refers to the Warumungu Land Claim and to impending negotiations between the CLC and the Tennant Creek Town Council. The relevant paragraph reads:

It would be desirable to keep the Northern Territory government out of these negotiations as its intention appears to be to prolong any resolution and to seek to gain electoral benefits from racial division. The provision of assistance by the federal government to the town council would prevent the town council from having to look to the Northern Territory government for that assistance.

The letter indicates an appalling attitude on the part of some officers in federal ministerial offices towards the Northern Territory government which is totally unfounded and very wrong. For that reason, I wrote to the Prime Minister as soon as I received advice of this letter, seeking his assurance that its contents did not reflect the federal government's attitude towards the Northern Territory government in these matters and that the letter was prepared without his or his minister's knowledge or concurrence. I further sought his rejection of its contents because it is a fact that the Northern Territory government has a role and a responsibility to place before the Aboriginal Land Commissioner all matters of fact on which he might seek detail in order to test the claimants' case. Nobody else will go before the Aboriginal Land Commissioner to test the strength of claimants' cases and commissioners have on many occasions accepted the views put by counsel for the Northern Territory government in relation to alternative courses of action available to them in respect of land claims.

After the Aboriginal Land Commissioner makes a recommendation to the federal minister, we have a role in pointing out the ramifications of matters of detriment which might arise as a result of his granting land as recommended by the commissioner. As honourable members should be aware, the commissioner merely reports on matters of detriment. He makes no recommendations to the federal minister suggesting that portions of the claim not be granted because of matters of detriment. That is entirely a matter for the federal minister who rightly seeks the views of the Northern Territory government on these matters before determining them.

It should be of great concern to all honourable members that there are those in the federal government who would have the Northern Territory locked out of such negotiations on the basis that we are somehow interfering in these affairs - the affairs of the citizens of the Northern Territory, black and white. In trying to plan for the future of the Northern Territory in towns such as Tennant Creek and trying to ensure that there will be sufficient water supplies, land and opportunities for employment in that region, we are simply fulfilling our responsibilities to those citizens.

Airport Funding

Mr SMITH to TREASURER

Is he aware that his statement this morning on Darwin Airport funding has made him a laughing-stock in Canberra as possibly Australia's only Treasurer who cannot read a budget and who expects to find a statutory authority's financial allocation contained in the Treasurer's budget statement? Secondly, is he also aware that, on the Darwin Airport redevelopment, he has been dubbed a sore winner?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, it is interesting that the honourable member has raised this question because perhaps he can enlighten the House a little further on it. This morning, in commenting on the federal budget, I expressed some concern about an item of great interest to Territorians - the future of airport terminals in Darwin and Alice Springs. Last night, during a budget briefing, I eagerly sought information on how much would be spent on the Darwin Airport this financial year and when it might be commenced. A week or so ago, we were advised that the federal government had decided to transfer both terminals to the Federal Airports Commission in preference to handing both across to the Northern Territory government, which we sought. Honourable members will be aware from statements previously made by the Minister for Transport and Works in the Territory that we were prepared to get on with the construction of the facilities almost immediately upon arrangements with the federal government being completed. We felt that we had the funding capacity in terms of loans to start immediately.

The information that I was able to gather last night was a confirmation that the FAC did see an airport terminal progressing in Darwin at a cost of $65m. However, it did not say very much more than that about allocations as far as this financial year was concerned. My concern has been heightened in reading the answer to a question that was asked yesterday in the Senate by Senator Collins of Senator Evans about the airport project and when it might proceed. I will read a part of the answer that Senator Evans gave to Senator Collins. This is information given as late as yesterday:

The government has taken a decision, in principle, that the facilities should transfer to the FAC. Detailed arrangements for the transfer are currently being negotiated. It is expected that the transfer will take place by the end of October this year. The FAC has indicated that, upon the finalisation of mutually satisfactory financial arrangements which clearly are not in place for that transfer, it will immediately commence the planning of the redevelopment of civil aviation facilities in Darwin, including a new terminal.

Mr Speaker, I think that should be of grave concern to Territorians because we have been led to believe, because of the information given out over the last week or 2, that much-needed work on Northern Territory terminals would begin almost immediately. When an airport terminal has been designed and has had $15m or $18m spent on it, why is there any necessity to undertake some sort of re-evaluation of the proposal?

Mr Smith: Because the original proposal cost $100m.

Mr Bell: How many budget proposals do you knock back, Marshall?

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr PERRON: Why is it unreasonable for Territorians to ask, in relation to such an important matter, when construction will be commenced and how much has been allocated in this financial year? All we are being told is that the matter is being put off and put off and that, in October or thereabouts, the FAC will begin planning for these facilities. We are talking about a very large facility and therefore, if funds are to be spent on it in this financial year, one would imagine that things will have to move pretty fast because half the financial year will be over in another couple of months while it is still undertaking planning.

This is a matter of great concern and interest to Territorians. We welcomed the news that the terminal was to be built. We did not say that the FAC would not receive our full cooperation in building the terminal facilities although it was obviously our preference that the Territory should build and run the facilities. All we are requesting is that reasonable information be given to Territorians and the construction industry in the Northern Territory so that we can prepare for this major project. The opposition tells us regularly that detailed budgetary information is very important to the community. People have a right to know what the government intends to do. It appears that we are being denied information about the Darwin and Alice Springs Airports because the information just is not there. The issue is the intention to commence construction during this financial year. If the Leader of the Opposition can point to a place in the budget where the figure is highlighted, I would be delighted to acknowledge it.

Mr Smith: It is not supposed to be in the budget.

Funding for Northern Territory University

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

The Chief Minister expressed some concern on ABC radio this morning in relation to funding for the Northern Territory university. Is the Minister for Education able to advise the House whether he has any information regarding the funding levels that can be expected for the Northern Territory university next financial year?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the situation of our university differs from that of other universities because ours is new. We are certainly looking very closely at the funding aspects of the Northern Territory university. Most members would be aware that, at this stage, no university in Australia actually knows exactly what it will receive. The budget figures are broad figures which relate to moneys which will be provided for higher education generally. The detail on what we will receive will be included in a schedule to the States Grants Act which will go before the federal parliament in October. Debate will be concluded on that in November. We will be looking very carefully at that and I hope all members take a great deal of interest in that schedule.

The situation at present is that we have established a formula with the federal minister in relation to the establishment of our university. We calculate that the bottom line - and I emphasise that it is a bottom line - is $4m on the basis of students enrolled at present. However, there are many more aspects that need to be considered. It is a new university. There are establishment costs and those matters still have to be negotiated with the federal minister. We will continue to push for full funding. We believe it is our right and I believe that members of the opposition will assist us in that regard. At some stage, we will receive full funding which is our right.

As far as the honourable member's question is concerned, the detail will be known in October when the schedule to the States Grants Act comes before parliament, and we will be commenting further at that time. We emphasise that the formula has been struck. We expect to receive $4m on the basis of that formula but we also expect additional funding in relation to establishment costs and some other matters.

Warumungu Land Claim

Mr TUXWORTH to CHIEF MINISTER

He would probably be aware that, in handing down his report on the Warumungu Land Claim, Justice Maurice noted that he regarded the Central Land Council as a 'hidebound bureaucracy whose lack of sensitivity in matters dealing with land in the Tennant Creek area was of great concern'. The commissioner recommended that a separate land council be formed for the administration of the Warumungu land. Does the Chief Minister support the establishment of a separate land council for the administration of the Warumungu land now that it has been granted?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, to correct the last statement of the honourable member, the land has not actually been granted yet. However, it has been recommended by the commissioner to the federal minister that a land grant be made and I am sure that will occur in due course.

To answer the substance of his question, in this case the Northern Territory government believes that, in accordance with the commissioner's recommendations, an additional land council could be established to administer affairs on behalf of Aboriginals in the Tennant Creek region. Honourable members would be aware that the formation of the Tiwi Land Council has been a great success. It is a land council which administers a much smaller group of Aboriginals. No doubt such Aboriginals have much more common interests in an area than the Aboriginals who comprise the Northern Land Council and the Central Land Council. There has been considerable discussion over the years that Aboriginal groups in the Northern Territory should have bodies representing them that are far closer to them and represent their individual needs better. I am sure the land councils are aware of criticism that has been levelled at them from time to time in that regard. I am pleased to see the commissioner's recommendation that an additional land council should be established to look after this area and I think it is a principle which could be followed through in a number of other areas because other groups of Aboriginals in the Territory have sought from the federal minister that land councils be established to represent them in their areas.

Review of Darwin Town Plan

Mr HATTON to MINISTER for LANDS and HOUSING

I refer him to the current review of the Darwin Town Plan and to the Nightcliff/Rapid Creek study that was carried out in 1985 and 1986 and the wide-ranging community consultation that followed the release of the draft structure plan. Will he ensure that the views expressed by the Nightcliff and Rapid Creek communities will be taken into account and that the recommendations of the community are taken into account and built into the new Darwin Town Plan?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, as pointed out by the member for Nightcliff, the Darwin structure plan is presently on display. We are in the process of receiving final public submissions or expressions of interest regarding the directions and details of that plan. The member for Nightcliff also pointed out that there is a plan which specifically relates to the Nightcliff Rapid Creek area. The honourable member quite properly brought this plan to the attention of constituents in his electorate by displaying it publicly in Nightcliff. It attracted a great deal of community interest and, thanks to his efforts, a large number of residents of the Nightcliff and Rapid Creek area participated in the planning process regarding the future of their community. I believe that is indicative of the efforts of the government to ensure that the community is involved in all aspects of planning and all directions of government which affect their lives and their futures.

I can assure the member for Nightcliff that the views of residents of his electorate will most definitely be taken into account in respect of the final Darwin structure plan as it relates to his electorate. I again congratulate him and point out to other honourable members that planning matters do affect their constituents and, if they can bring such matters to the attention of their local communities and encourage input, the result will be urban planning which reflects the wishes and aspirations of Territorians.

Batchelor College

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Mr Speaker, I have worked with the minister to make Batchelor College an institution which will provide advanced education and university courses for Aboriginal people not only from the Territory but also from nearby states. Can he advise the House on any progress he has made in getting the college established as an autonomous college of advanced education so that it can receive full funding from the federal government and continue the development courses which are supported by all members of this House?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. There has been a move to establish Batchelor College as an Aboriginal tertiary education centre and, whilst the government does not have any general concern in relation to that, there are some major worries about Batchelor College losing its identity as a college which assists in the education of traditional Aboriginals and Aboriginals from remote areas. Batchelor College has performed a wonderful service for the Territory in that respect over a number of years and the Northern Territory government will ensure that it continues to look after the interests of traditional Aboriginals and Aboriginals from isolated communities. That is why I am presently assessing the situation.

Mr Ede: Is it going to be a rainbow philosophy?

Mr HARRIS: Mr Speaker, here we go again! I have indicated the government's concern to the honourable member, who should also be concerned. If urban Aboriginals start attending Batchelor College, the whole situation can change. It is sensitive and it must be looked at in a correct manner.

Mr Speaker, Batchelor College has provided a very positive program for traditional Aboriginals. That must be maintained and that is what we are trying to do. I am surprised at the way in which the member for Stuart, the opposition spokesman on education, continually knocks programs which help Aboriginal people.

Mr Ede: I am not doing that. Don't be ridiculous!

Mr HARRIS: I have no problem with traditional Aboriginals from outside our borders studying at Batchelor College.

The government is considering the issues at present. I am also pleased to note that, at long last, the federal government has recognised the fact that a great deal of good comes out of Batchelor College. I refer to the White Paper on higher education. I will quote from that:

One institution with an impressive record in tertiary education for Aboriginals is Batchelor College in the Northern Territory. This college has specialised in meeting the needs of traditional Aboriginals from remote areas and has attracted widespread support for its programs, particularly in teacher education. To date, however, development of higher education courses at the college has been constrained by the need to rely on annual funding allocations. The government will therefore move to place its funding on a more secure basis for the 1989-91 triennium.

Mr Speaker, I am very pleased to see that, at long last, the Associate Diploma of Teaching at Batchelor College is to be fully funded by the Commonwealth government. We have been fighting for 5 years to have that recognised and for funding to come from the federal government, and we are very pleased to see that this is happening. We are looking at expanding the courses that are available at Batchelor College in relation to health worker training, police aide training and Conservation Commission training. There are a number of other areas, and the Commonwealth government is also looking at funding associate diplomas in relation to some of those areas.

I emphasise again that the government has to look very carefully at protecting the integrity of Batchelor College. It is something precious to us in the Northern Territory, and we will not let it be ruined or destroyed by people coming in with ideas from outside. We are looking for ideas and views from FEPPI, from the Batchelor College Council and from members of the opposition. I am happy to hear the ideas and views of opposition members. I ask members of the opposition to give their views and we will take them on board.

Mr Ede: I have done that. I have been going to the federal government about funding.

Mr HARRIS: You have not done that at all.

It is very important, and I cannot emphasise it enough, that Batchelor College should continue to look after the interests of traditional Aboriginals and Aboriginals from remote areas. We will be pursuing that, and I will be talking further with people who have a direct interest in Batchelor College. We want to work together to ensure that it is able to provide the necessary teaching opportunities for Aboriginal people. I am pursuing that matter and will be making a statement about Batchelor College in due course.

Municipal Services in Alice Springs and Katherine

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

What action has been taken to ensure that services to residents included in the expanded Alice Springs and Katherine town boundaries reflect the level of rates that are paid?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, that is a good question. As honourable members would know, the boundaries of both Alice Springs and Katherine have been extended during this year. Considerable concern has been expressed by rural residents with regard to the potential for fairly hefty rates to be imposed. Those of us who live in rural areas know that, generally, we do not require the level of services that are provided in suburbia. Prior to moving to have the boundaries of the Alice Springs and Katherine Town Councils extended, I sought from those councils their assurance that they would establish advisory committees in order to obtain the views of the people in those extended areas and to ensure that these were taken into account when rates were set. That course of action was agreed to, the advisory committees were established and, in fact, had very substantial input to the councils' thinking on rating for those extended areas.

I have foreshadowed the introduction of a bill to amend the Local Government Act during the course of these sittings. As a part of the amendments, we will seek to provide once again the flat rating option. That was one of the requirements of the rural residents. Certainly, the councils also sought to have that option made available to them again. When we amended the act in 1986, we thought that the flat rating option was still there but a recent court case in NSW indicates that it is not available to councils. We will seek to amend that. Negotiations are continuing with provider departments such as Transport and Works with regard to funding that they would normally have made available in those extended areas. The idea is to have those funds made available to councils so that they can carry out the work that would normally have been done by the government.

There was a fair amount of trauma in establishing the extent of the boundaries of both those towns, and I can understand that. Nobody likes to think that his way of life will be disrupted in any way and that he might have to pay for something that he did not have to pay for before. After speaking to councils and people in rural areas, it was quite obvious that nobody really minded paying if he received the service. The actions that we have taken to ensure that the rate will reflect the level of service will prove to be satisfactory to those people.

Letter to Editor of Panorama Magazine

Mr BELL to Mr SPEAKER

Mr Speaker, I gave notice to you earlier today that I had intended to ask you the following question. I refer you to your letter to the editor of Panorama magazine in relation to the article 'Sea of Stone' written but not edited by Penny Van Oosterzee that I discussed in last night's adjournment debate. How can you justify having written that letter as Speaker of this Assembly and not as the member for Braitling?

ANSWER

Honourable members, I do not believe that the question which has just been asked by the member for MacDonnell is an appropriate one to be asked of the Speaker during question time. I believe that I should reply from the Chair at question time only to questions which relate to my administrative responsibilities as Speaker. However, I have taken note of the question asked by the honourable member and will reply to him in writing as soon as possible.

Emergency Position Indicating Radio Beacon

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Mr Speaker, in view of the heated public debate following recent search and rescue operations following maritime disasters such as those experienced by the cargo vessel Singa Sea and the yachts in the Bicentennial Round Australia Race, could he outline the Territory government's attitude to the carriage of EPIRBs, the emergency position indicating beacons by pleasure craft and commercial vessels?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, matters relating to sea rescue are often brought to our attention by the media. They seem to be headline grabbing and usually are associated not only with loss of life and trauma but are also often extremely expensive operations. What has been of concern to the federal government, and quite correctly so, is the high cost of mounting rescue and search operations. Sometimes the search to find lost boats has a very heavy impact on the public purse. State and territory governments are often involved in such exercises, and at great expense to their budgets.

At a recent Transport Ministers Conference, there was a proposal for an Emergency Position Indicating Radio Beacon system - EPIRB. That system would involve the fitting of a small radio beacon to all vessels that go outside sheltered waters, whether they be fishing boats, commercial craft or pleasure craft. The projected cost of a beacon is $150. Against the potential cost to the public purse and even the capital costs of a small boat owner, $150 is a very small price to pay to ensure that, if there is an emergency, the boat can be located quickly, minimising the cost of the search and rescue and giving a greater chance of preventing loss of life.

The system would operate from a central locating terminal which, at this stage, is proposed for Alice Springs. That would provide some additional capital injection into the Alice Springs area and a few extra jobs. The capacity of the system extends some 600 km offshore. It would offer not only the opportunity to locate quickly and recover vessels offshore, whether they be fishing boats or large ocean-going vessels, but would have application on land. The member for Sadadeen is saying that we must not forget the Todd River. The Todd River might not be an appropriate case but people who venture by vehicle into the remote outback could carry one of these beacons. That could help to save the lives of stationhands or adventurous tourists. The beacon could be either rented or purchased for a total cost of $150. This is a most innovative and imaginative rescue system. It certainly has the support of this government and, I am sure, of all boat owners and users who travel into sometimes very dangerous waters off the north shore of Australia.

Excise on Beer

Mr LEO to MINISTER for TOURISM

My question relates to his responsibilities as the minister responsible for the Racing, Gaming and Liquor Commission. In the interest of lowering the rate of consumption of alcohol and of the CPI in the Northern Territory, will he be instructing the commission to take such steps as are necessary to ensure that licensed retailers pass on the recently-announced reduction in beer excises, particularly those excises which relate to low alcohol beverages?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, there was discussion with the Australian Hotels Association a couple of months ago as to why the retail price of beer did not reflect the differential in impost duties in relation to low alcohol and normal strength beer. The answer from the industry at that time was simply that the difference in tax was not substantial enough to warrant a difference in the retail price. It was only a few cents on a case of beer. I will be talking to the industry about the new excise duties and I will advise the member in due course.

Mount Samuel Mining Tenements

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for MINES and ENERGY

Yesterday, I asked him about mining industry concerns with sacred sites at Mount Samuel. Since that time, the Director of the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority has intimated in the press that the mining industry should have been aware of those sites. Can he further clarify the history of the Mount Samuel mining tenements especially in relation to the so-called sacred sites?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. I do not think we have heard the last of Mount Samuel. I believe that it will be a name that will be as well known as Coronation Hill because, as each day passes, the similarities become more striking. For the benefit of honourable members, the mining industry has been active in this region since the 1930s. The member for Barkly might like to correct me, but I see that he is nodding his head in agreement. Certainly, it has been highly active there in the last 25 years. All this activity has occurred without mention of the existence of sacred sites. Nobody said: 'Do not dig any holes here because this is a sacred site'.

Given that history, it was certainly a reasonable expectation of the mining industry that such impediments did not exist in the region. I understand - and the member for Barkly may be able to give some local knowledge - that some of the exploration licences held and some of the activity carried out in that area was by Aboriginal people. I see the honourable member nodding in agreement on that, and that is a message that has been given to me as well.

Mr Bell: Why don't you introduce a statement so that we can all discuss it instead of asking these repeated questions?

Mr SPEAKER: Order!

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, that is why they were surprised when, 3 or 4 months ago, they were told that the whole of the Mount Samuel area was a 16 km² sacred site complex, and that all mining activity should stop. It is all very well to say that sites of significance were mentioned at an inquiry or at this or that hearing, and that any such reference constituted a world-wide broadcast of the facts of the matter. Quite clearly, we cannot expect the mining industry to be intimately acquainted with such fine detail. It is up to organisations such as the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority to identify areas of significance to the industry. That is one of the major industry concerns about the activities of the authority. In most cases, the authority only makes its concerns known after exploration has occurred, development plans are prepared and considerable cost has been incurred. Mr Speaker, I can tell you when this really came into headlines, if you want a precise date. It was the day that Australian Petroleum, I think it was, announced that it had hit an intersection of 100 g over 2 m. That was the day when the concerns started.

Let me reinforce to the honourable member for MacDonnell ...

Mr Bell: Why don't you do your homework, you mug.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will resume his seat. The honourable member will withdraw that remark.

Mr BELL: I unreservedly withdraw any reference to the capacity of the minister.

Mr SPEAKER: Order! The honourable member will withdraw the remark without comment.

Mr BELL: I withdraw the remark without comment.

Mr COULTER: Mr Speaker, in most cases, the authority only makes its concern known after exploration has occurred. The point that I am making is that, the day that the 100 g intersection was announced, it became a sacred site. I have said many times in this Assembly that it is always the spouting whale that is harpooned. Mining companies would be well advised, in this instance, to keep quiet when they find something. I do not help them in that regard because it is usually fairly exciting information, but we are starting to have detailed analysis of just what happens and just when sacred sites become of significance. That was certainly the day, the very minute, when that company announced that intersection.

It may be surprising news to the authority that the world is not populated solely by lawyers and anthropologists - at least not yet. The authority seems to conduct its affairs in a reactive manner. In other words, you announce what you intend to do and it tells you why you cannot do it. This way of doing business causes great frustration and cynicism and, if the Aboriginal Sacred Sites Protection Authority has a poor reputation in the mining and development industries, it has only itself to blame. The authority and its adherents have a particular way of dealing with cynicism. Anybody who speaks out against their actions is branded as anti-Aboriginal and therefore a racist, and that is the ultimate cynicism.

As the minister responsible for orderly mining development in the Territory, it is my duty to see that a proper balance is achieved between development and the legitimate interests of Territorians, including Aboriginal people. That is what this government attempts to achieve and that is what we will achieve in this particular case. As I said, we have not heard the end of the Mount Samuel episode; it has only just begun. As we have already established today, mining activity in the area began at least as far back as the 1930s, and it should continue.

Undoolya Road

Mr COLLINS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Is he aware of claims that the dirt section of the Undoolya Road, east of the town from the jump-up out to the quarry, is in a very dangerous state, that bulldust abounds and there are great boulders, and that it is claimed that a grader is not sufficient to restore the road to a safe condition? Would he undertake to check with his department the accuracy of those claims and, if they are found to be true, urgently restore that road to a safe condition so that the huge contract for moving 20 000 t of rock out there at the moment can continue?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, to answer the question of whether I am familiar with the actual complaints, I am not. I certainly am aware, however, of the problems with roads, such as the Undoolya Road, which receive fairly heavy and continuous use by large trucks which do not exactly dawdle along. The drivers are out to earn a quid and they want to move as quickly as possible. Other roads in the region, such as the Tanami Road, suffer from similar pressures from heavy vehicles. It is very difficult to keep up with the maintenance of those roads.

An additional problem for officers of the Department of Transport and Works in the Alice Springs region in recent times has been repairing the extensive damage inflicted by the flood. Between $1m and $2m-worth of damage has had to be repaired in the post-flood period. That has tied up the local construction industry's plant and equipment and there has been considerable pressure to finish the job. Honourable members will be well aware that the first priority of the Department of Transport and Works was to open those roads again and re-establish access to communities. That being said, I am sure that the department will address the specific case mentioned by the member for Sadadeen as quickly as possible.

The long-term solution for Undoolya Road and the Tanami Road lies in the actual construction of the roads. The gravel which is used at present is not appropriate for heavy traffic because it is lacking in binding material. Water is also a problem, especially with the Tanami Road. We have to be innovative in overcoming the serious problems of providing long-term access to communities, particularly those in areas that can be of commercial value to the Territory.

Upgrading of Moil Primary School

Mr SETTER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

He would be aware that, during the past few years, the Moil Primary School Council has made various submissions, fully supported by myself, requesting the allocation of funds for upgrading of the school. Indeed, recently he met with representatives of the school council and the acting principal to discuss this matter. Has the school council's submission been considered and, if so, what is the outcome likely to be?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, for a moment I thought the member intended to ask me about preschool air-conditioning. I visited Moil Primary School recently, as the member indicated, and I am concerned that some aspects of maintenance of the school need to be examined in more detail. Officers of the Department of Education will be visiting Moil shortly to assess the situation. They will identify essential maintenance items and items with high educational priority. The council's submission will be fully considered by the department in the context of the total operation of the school. It is highly likely, as I indicated to the people whom I met, that the department will undertake essential services at the school and will then negotiate with the school council in relation to the other items raised in the submission. I can assure the honourable member that the submission will receive full attention. Whether certain requests are carried out will depend on the funds available as well as the expertise that is available to the school council to ensure that, if it is given responsibility for particular activities, those can be carried out effectively.

Firefighting Services in Aboriginal Communities

Mr TIPILOURA to CHIEF MINISTER

What action is the government taking to establish volunteer firefighting services in Aboriginal communities?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot answer the honourable member's question immediately. I will seek some advice on whether the government has any program under way or planned and will advise him on the next sitting day.

ANPWS Charges for Entry to Kakadu National Park

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for TOURISM

The National Parks and Wildlife Service announced yesterday that it would be introducing charges for entry into Kakadu National Park. What effect will those charges have on tourism and on ordinary Territorians who, in going about their usual business, are required to enter into and stay at the park?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the member for Karama for his question. Of course, the announcement made by ANPWS yesterday came as a complete surprise to everyone.

Mr Smith: Rubbish! Come on, you have known that for months.

Mr POOLE: Mr Speaker, it certainly did come as a complete surprise because there had been no discussions with the Northern Territory government or the tourist industry with regard to levels of charges in national parks that are operated by the ANPWS in the Northern Territory.

With regard to the industry, of course, tours have already been sold at rates which do not take these charges into account. The information that we have at the moment from the Director of the ANPWS indicates that park fees will be staged in at Kakadu and that fees already imposed for visitors to Uluru are to be revised. Basically, there will be a fee of $10 for each adult visiting Kakadu from 1 January next year. There will be no charge for children under 16. The fee will cover entry to the park and to the audiovisual display at park headquarters at Kakadu, for which a separate charge is made at present, and recreational fishing, remote-area camping and things such as guided tours.

At this point, I should indicate that we have no disagreement with the ANPWS in relation to the charging of fees for entry into parks on the basis that we believe that, in the national parks, and probably in Territory parks in the future, the user will pay. Considerable amounts of money are collected and spent by governments on maintaining facilities. On the basis of some rough calculations, it is interesting to note that, in Kakadu alone, the federal government will collect in the vicinity of $2.5m per annum. I note in the budget this year that some $3m is to be spent on Kakadu. Of course, that is still a long way from the $70m that was promised many years ago.

I am told that there will be camping fees at developed campgrounds at the East Alligator, Jim Jim and also at the campground at Waterfall Creek when it is completed. These fees will be $5 per night per caravan, $2 per night per tent, and overnight charges of $2 per person per night. In Uluru National Park, a park-use fee, which will be valid for 2 weeks, will be applied from 1 October this year. It will be $5 for an adult. Again, there will be no charge for children under 16. I am pleased to say that an annual park-use fee will be available for regular visitors and local residents, but we have no information as to what that fee will be.

Mr Smith: $20.

Mr POOLE: Fortunately, there will not be any charge for persons engaged on legitimate business or traffic passing through, but therein lies another tale. It is very interesting to note that, despite representations that have been made over many years by the industry and the Northern Territory government - and even, I believe, by members opposite - again this year there is no financial provision to seal the road from Ayers Rock to the Olgas. That is a national disgrace. The damage that is done to vehicles using that road and the accidents that are caused are a matter of great concern to this government. The project first appeared on the design list some 7 years ago, and still nothing has been done. This year, it has been scrubbed off completely.

At both Kakadu and Uluru, charges for commercial filming and still photography were introduced from the first of this month. There will be charges for other commercial activities carried out under permit at both parks from 1 January next year. A proportion of the fees raised will be retained by the ANPWS and applied to park management and park development. However, there seems to be no provision for recompensing the Northern Territory government for the tens of millions of dollars that it has spent to upgrade and maintain roads and to build new roads. The Northern Territory government should have been involved in all talks leading up to this announcement and it is a matter of great concern that our interests have been ignored once again.

The principle of entry fees for national parks and other such facilities is well established. It is a commonplace occurrence for people down south and it is a legitimate means of obtaining funds needed to maintain and further develop visitor attractions. However, we believe that any such fees should be the subject of discussion with all interested parties, including the Northern Territory government and certainly the tourist industry which, after all, provides the transportation to bring the majority of people to visit these attractions. Certainly, sufficient notice should have been given prior to the introduction of charges so that adjustments could be made to tour program costings.

The facilities that exist in the Northern Territory, both at the national park level and in the Conservation Commission park areas, are becoming better and better. In principle, I guess the time has come when the user should have to pay to go into these areas. However, I cannot make the point strongly enough that it is time that the ANPWS actually sat down and talked to the government and the industry prior to doing things such as this which will vitally affect the tourist industry in the Northern Territory.

Upgrading of Gravel Road to East Alligator River

Mr LANHUPUY to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Does the government intend to upgrade the gravel road between the Jabiru end of the Mudginberri turnoff to the East Alligator and, if so, will that benefit tourism in the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I recall some questions from the Leader of the Opposition either late last year or early this year regarding the Oenpelli Road and other roads in the Kakadu area. He was laying the blame for the lack of upgrading at the feet of the Territory government. The situation needs to be explained, particularly in regard to the Oenpelli Road, for honourable members to understand fully the complexities of ownership and responsibility. These are shared over 3 different sections. One section is entirely the responsibility of the federal government through the ANPWS, another section is clearly a Territory road and another section has some relationship with a mining company.

The immediate plan is to upgrade the section from Cahills Crossing to almost halfway back to the highway. That section has already been designed and has been included in the program on a joint funding basis with the ANPWS. We have not heard yet whether it has specific funds for that purpose although it was quite confident that it would obtain its share of the costs of the first section. The next section will be a matter for further negotiation with the mining company concerning the route and its contribution to the cost. The original proposal for an upgraded road in that area was to avoid all of the major creeks by routing it through a section of land that is currently held under lease by Ranger. That involves negotiation. That is the preferred option because it would give far better wet weather access. The other option is to upgrade the existing section of the road. Whilst it would provide improved access for tourists and for people in the Oenpelli area, it would not be quite as good as the other solution. We must await the details of the ANPWS roads budget for this year. However, we are hopeful that it will find funds to accept its fair share of responsibility in providing a safe and reasonable access road into that region.

ANSWER TO QUESTION

Tourist Commission Involvement with the Wynn's Safari

Mr POOLE (Tourism): Mr Speaker, I would like to take this opportunity to answer a question that was raised in the adjournment debate last night by the member for Stuart in relation to the Tourist Commission's involvement with the Wynn's Safari. The member suggested that perhaps the Tourist Commission had not assisted the Wynn's Safari to the extent that it should have. I would like to lay that matter to rest.

The Tourist Commission has been involved in the organisation of the Wynn's Safari for many years. In my former capacity as Chairman of the Tourist Commission, I was instrumental in assisting Hans Thorstrup put together the package that originally started the Wynn's Safari in the Northern Territory. This year, on receiving advice from the Wynn's Safari organiser that the safari would start from Alice Springs and proceed via Darwin to finish in Sydney, the Tourist Commission immediately seized that opportunity of getting what could be termed 2 bites at the cherry and offered total support to ensure the success of the venture. To ensure that we achieved a level of spectator participation, a prologue competition was designed to attract average family travellers and non-competitor travellers to converge on Alice Springs from every capital city. This was strictly a fun competition but we decided to obtain 10 000 Wynn's Safari brochures and distribute them in Australia and overseas through our international network of commission offices. We also provided some medallions, which were quite expensive to produce, and organised media launches for the event in Brisbane, Sydney, Melbourne, Adelaide and Perth. We will be participating in the hosting of a breakfast for finishers of the safari in Sydney.

The event was of great economic significance to the people of Alice Springs. Only last Friday, a local business supplier told me that, in 1 day in that week, he sold $23 000-worth of goods to 1 of the team participants in the safari. It is probably timely to comment quickly on the attitude of some of our local businesses in that regard. I am aware that the operator of one of our roadhouses was approached to provide a refuelling stop for competitors and was offered the assistance of a tanker of gas and a number of people to help pump the fuel into the vehicles to enable them to continue on their way. That would have had a total bill of about $36 000 for 2 hours work. He actually knocked this back on the basis that he had been operating there for 20 years and did not want anyone else to touch his petrol pumps.

There was a total of 210 entries consisting of motorcycles, 4-wheel-drive and 2-wheel-drive vehicles of all descriptions. There were some 93 overseas entries. The support equipment consisted of 6 coaches, 7 trucks, 20 official vehicles, helicopters and light aircraft. There were 12 media vehicles. The international media coverage that will result is tremendous. I would hate to have to put a financial figure on the exposure that the Northern Territory will receive because I understand that regular television segments are carried in the UK, Japan, Germany and North America. It is invaluable exposure.

I am happy to say that the Tourist Commission contributed over $10 000 in cash and at least the equivalent of that amount in time spent in organising media launches, the participation of the interstate bureaux and the provision of maps and all kinds of bits and pieces through the bureaux in the respective capital cities and our overseas offices.

Budget Allocation to Education

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for EDUCATION

The Northern Territory Teachers Federation, the Leader of the Opposition and the President of the Council of Government School Organisations, Richard Creswick, have all claimed the allocation to education in the 1988 budget has been cut in real terms by $3.5m. Is this true? If so, what ramifications are there for education?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, the allegation that the budget allocation for education has been reduced in real terms is unfounded. The allocation has been increased by nearly 6%. Treasury accepts that the inflation rate is about 5.6% and therefore this is a small increase of 0.21%. However, it is an increase and it is not a cut as such to the education budget. If we include the allocations for the Darwin Institute of Technology and the University College of the Northern Territory, we can say that we have increased our allocation by 1.06% in real terms. Alternatively, if the effects of the recent national wage case are included, we can say the real increase in Northern Territory education spending will be more than 2%.

Unfortunately, the time available at these sittings may preclude further debate in relation to the budget for my portfolio. I hope to be able to pursue that later on today but I ask members to read the detailed information and take part in the debate as it progresses. A circular will be sent to schools shortly indicating that it is nonsense to say that there has been a cut to the education budget. Overall expenditure on education will rise by almost 6% over the amount allocated in 1986-87.

There is a strengthened commitment to Aboriginal education, to isolated students and to the special needs of particular schools throughout the Northern Territory. An additional $1.35m has been allocated to the development of community education centres in 8 Aboriginal communities. Members opposite have been pursuing those projects and we are ensuring that they go ahead this year. Increased allocations have been made to improve the provision of vehicles to schools in remote communities, a very important part of providing education in those isolated areas. Above-formula staff have been allocated to 11 Aboriginal community schools and, in addition, above-formula staff are also being allocated to schools in large, isolated centres and in urban areas. I will be elaborating on that subject in my contribution to the budget debate.

To assist isolated students, the government has allocated $186 000 to the home loan video scheme so that students in isolated areas are not disadvantaged by the Commonwealth decision to withdraw funding support for the scheme. I think all members will support that inclusion. The level of per capita funding based on the number of students enrolled in schools has been maintained. For post-primary students in Aboriginal communities, the level of per capita funding has been increased from $90 to $120 per student. There have been increases in a whole range of areas across the education budget, there has been a considerable increase in the allocation for repairs and maintenance and for minor new works.

Before opposition members or members of various organisations comment publicly on so-called cuts to education, they should look at the papers and check their facts because, in this case, they are totally incorrect.

Education has fared very well this year and we will ensure that we continue to provide a very good education system to Territorians.

Failure of Tourist Commission Officer to Acquit Amex Card Expenses

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TOURISM

Can he confirm that, during the period 1984-86, a senior officer of the Tourist Commission failed to acquit - that is, to properly account for - his American Express card expenses on a monthly basis as required by the commission, and that an amount of $50 355 had been spent on American Express without being properly accounted for by that senior officer?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I cannot confirm that. The figures involved are totally strange to me. I will seek information and provide it to the Leader of the Opposition.

Mr SMITH: I have a supplementary question, Mr Speaker.

Mr SPEAKER: As I advised the House last week, the matter of supplementary questions has been referred to the Standing Orders Committee.

Greenhouse Effect

Mr FIRMIN to CHIEF MINISTER

Has the government taken any action to monitor the Greenhouse Effect and its ramifications for the Northern Territory?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, some action is being taken. During the last few years, increasing attention has been focused in the scientific community on what is termed the Greenhouse Effect. Indeed, I raised this matter in the adjournment debate on 24 February this year. Officers of the Northern Territory government have now attended 2 interstate conferences on the Greenhouse Effect and its implications across the world. More interstate conferences are scheduled and we will be attending those.

For those honourable members who are not conversant with the Greenhouse Effect, it is a build-up of major gases in the atmosphere. These gases include carbon monoxide, carbon dioxide and methane. The ceiling of pollutants is causing the earth's atmosphere to become warmer by preventing the escape of heat. In a recent article in the Sunday Territorian, the Director of the CSIRO in Darwin said that the Greenhouse Effect would produce some fairly significant changes in the Northern Territory environment and that we needed to be aware of probable trends. These changes include higher rainfall, a shorter dry season, more cyclones and more intense cyclones, and increased climatic extremes. Also, Alice Springs will receive more summer rain.

Climatic change is not new in the earth's geological history. What is particularly significant in this case, however, is the rate of change. We are not talking about evolutionary change over thousands of years. We are facing the prospect of significant climatic change within the lifetime of people born now. As a consequence of the alteration in weather patterns brought about by the Greenhouse Effect, we can also expect some significant changes to the Territory's land mass. Kakadu, or at least the lowlands of Kakadu, will revert to the mangrove swamp that it was some 6000 years ago. The growth of rainforest in the Top End will increase dramatically and the sea level will rise significantly, thus affecting all freshwater floodplains.

I would invite honourable members to read last Tuesday's NT News which contained an article outlining the alterations to the Darwin coastline which will be brought about by the Greenhouse Effect. The issues are potentially enormous. An increasing number of articles about the Greenhouse Effect are appearing in magazines and I urge all honourable members to follow events in this regard.

The scientific evidence and research available thus far would indicate that the results of the Greenhouse Effect in the Territory will not be as adverse as they will be in other areas of Australia. In some of the southern states, planning has already begun for what will occur when the Greenhouse Effect becomes apparent. Honourable members may be aware that, in South Australia, planning legislation is being reviewed so that damage from the effect may be minimised.

While current scientific research would indicate that the Greenhouse Effect will be less adverse in the Territory than elsewhere, we must monitor the situation very closely and take whatever action is necessary. With this in mind, I wish to advise honourable members that I will be asking a number of relevant organisations located in the Territory to form an advisory committee to the Northern Territory government. In the coming week, I will be approaching the CSIRO, the Bureau of Meteorology, the University College, the Darwin Institute of Technology, the North Australian Research Unit, the Conservation Commission, the Department of Primary Industry and Fisheries and the Department of Lands and Housing to seek their cooperation in relation to the membership of this advisory committee. I envisage the committee being in place within a matter of weeks. It will monitor the scientific research being undertaken in relation to the Greenhouse Effect and resultant climatic changes. It will cooperate with other relevant organisations, both inside and outside Australia, and it will advise the Territory government on any appropriate action that may need to be taken.

Mr Speaker, while it would clearly be wrong to be alarmist, the Greenhouse Effect raises issues of great community concern. It is therefore incumbent on the government to take a responsible approach. We will do this through the establishment of this government advisory committee.

Failure of Minister for Tourism to Acquit Amex Card Expenses

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TOURISM

Can he confirm that, at the date he resigned as Chairman of the Tourist Commission to contest the Araluen by-election for the CLP, he had not given an explanation for an amount of $50 355 of Tourist Commission and taxpayers' money which he had spent against American Express credit cards?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can confirm that I had addressed those matters and had acquitted various amounts of travel expenditure. I am not sure what the final figure was, but all those amounts were audited by the Auditor-General and any balances that were outstanding were paid by myself.

Darwin and Alice Springs Airports

Mr DONDAS to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

Has he had discussions with the FAC to ensure an immediate start for both Darwin and Alice Springs Airports? Is he able to advise whether the FAC will take over the existing Darwin Airport operation?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, yesterday, the Chief Minister expressed some concern, and quite correctly so, that there was inadequate information contained in the announcements by either the federal government or, at the time, by the FAC as to what their specific proposals were for the Darwin and Alice Springs Airports. The only announcement that we had had from our federal representatives was that the projects would be completed within 3 years. Obviously, that is unacceptable to Territorians. No detail was given. There are constraints such as no passenger head charging and no imposts on the federal budget. This government had done its sums and we knew what the whole financial operation of the airports would be. We were confused by what the figures meant and I am sure there is still much to be revealed about how the FAC will finalise its financial packages. However, that is a concern for them, not for us.

What is important to Territorians is when the airports will be commenced and when they will be finished. It is as simple as that. Previously, I had had amicable discussions with the FAC. Since the federal government budget, I have spoken with senior executives of the FAC. I have had assurances from both Mr Bill Swingler and Mr John Spencer, the Executive Officer and the General Manager, that the FAC will commence construction on Darwin immediately following resolution of its financial position and lease arrangements for the Darwin Airport. That is a little vague because, whilst it had been indicated by the federal members that transfer would occur in October, unfortunately there were also some statements indicating that planning would commence after October. Obviously, that is wasting another 2 to 3 months.

The Territory government has put much in place already in the way of planning, conceptual design and the bringing together of project management submissions, and the FAC has assured us that it would more than welcome any support that we can provide. I am pleased to announce that the head of the Department of Transport and Works will be meeting with the FAC next Monday in Sydney to run through all of our information. We will provide every possible support. In the meantime, what is required is for the federal government to expedite the resolution of the financial arrangements. These will be a little bit difficult for it to swallow because, quite logically, the whole project has to stand alone in a commercial sense.

Our figures were verified by the federal Department of Transport and Communications. If our proposals relied on $30m approximately of grant and still required something like a $6 passenger head tax, then something has to be resolved to ensure that the FAC is able to meet the commitments that have been made on its behalf by the federal government. Some would say that this is great for the federal government because it avoids a direct injection of funds. We had believed all along that the federal government had a responsibility. Previously, it had committed $95m in 1983 terms, probably $130m in today's terms. We thought $30m was reasonable and we bent over backwards to make sure the project came together.

Mr Speaker, there have been very positive assurances from the FAC officials. They are extremely confident people and I have a great deal of respect for their commercial ability. They know what the business is all about, they have agreed to cooperate to the fullest extent and I am very confident that we will get construction started by the end of this calendar year, as we proposed in our submission. If they utilise our programming and our support, then I am sure that we can have construction completed by our originally-stated objective of May 1990.

That is what this whole debate is about. That was what the Chief Minister was concerned about yesterday. Unfortunately, the Leader of the Opposition, who has not really shown the slightest interest in this whole matter during the last 3½ years, is not helping things now. His attitude is counterproductive. He is trying to bag a genuine concern the Chief Minister is expressing on behalf of all Territorians. The Territory government is more than happy to provide all of its technical, financial and construction team information. Through the Treasurer, we have agreed also to transfer back the $10m loans entitlement to the federal government for allocation to the FAC so that it can get some cash to commence immediately. The Territory government has done everything possible and will continue to do everything possible to see that this project is completed quickly. Territorians can rest assured that I will maintain a very positive interest in this project, and in Alice Springs Airport, until such time as we see aircraft pulling up at that new terminal.

In relation to the Alice Springs Airport, we will be providing to the federal government our impression of how things ought to be going. On behalf of Alice Springs residents, we will ask that they receive a fair hearing in respect of the forward planning. We have had assurances that the doubling of the existing facility will proceed immediately, and that is fine. But the long-term planning needs to be balanced and needs to take into account the interests of Alice Springs people and, indeed, all Territorians. We will be using our best endeavours, in a constructive manner, to ensure that that occurs.

In regard to the specific question by the previous Minister for Transport and Works, this is a team and there is no doubt that this is a team. The previous Minister for Transport and Works did as much as anybody else to get us to this point, and I acclaim his efforts. He asked about the utilisation of the existing terminal. I understand that that is not contemplated and, in the meantime, some tenders have been let for some concessional arrangements at the existing terminal. I am pleased to note that they are only for a 2-year period. That is a positive indication by the federal government that that old hangar is seeing the last of its days.

Failure of Minister for Tourism to Acquit Amex Card Expenses

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for TOURISM

Can he confirm that, on 7 May 1986, 1 month after he had been elected to this parliament, he still had not explained the $50 000 in American Express credit card expenses that he had incurred in the Tourist Commission and that the Auditor-General was forced to write to the Tourist Commission giving it a deadline of 2 weeks to produce that information that he had failed to supply, as he had been required to do, on a monthly basis, over the previous 2 years?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, again, without looking at the dates, the times and the amounts, I cannot confirm that.

Mr Smith: $50 000.

Mr POOLE: I would certainly dispute the amount of $50 000. Really, off the top of my head, I cannot remember the figures. All the amounts that were owed to the commission, on a Tourist Commission credit card for which the account was paid by the Tourist Commission, were acquitted by myself to the satisfaction of the Auditor-General and members of the Tourist Commission.

SUSPENSION OF STANDING ORDERS

Mr SMITH (Opposition Leader): Mr Speaker, I move that so much of standing orders be suspended as would prevent me from moving a motion of want of confidence in the Minister for Tourism and Minister Assisting the Chief Minister on Central Australian Affairs.

Motion agreed to.

MOTION

Want of Confidence in Minister for Tourism

Mr SMITH (Opposition Leader): Mr Speaker, I move that this Assembly has no confidence in the Minister for Tourism and the Minister Assisting the Chief Minister on Central Australian Affairs as his conduct, when Chairman of the Northern Territory Tourist Commission, evidenced that Mr Poole is not a fit and proper person to hold the responsible position of minister in that, when Chairman of the Northern Territory Tourist Commission: (a) over a period of 2 years, he failed to acquit his American Express Card expenses of $50 000 in a manner determined by the commission; and (b) despite requests from the Auditor-General, he had not acquitted these expenses prior to his resignation from the position of Chairman of the Tourist Commission.

Mr COULTER (Leader of Government Business): Mr Speaker, pursuant to standing order 95, I accept the motion moved by the Leader of the Opposition as a want of confidence motion and ask that any further questions be placed on notice.

64. Tenth Anniversary of Self-Government

Mr BELL to CHIEF MINISTER

Can the Chief Minister provide an itemised account of the expenditure on the celebrations for the tenth anniversary of self-government.

65. Darwin Private Hospital

Mr BELL to MINISTER for HEALTH and COMMUNITY SERVICES

1. How many private ward bed nights have been leased back to Royal Darwin Hospital during the last 6 months.
2. What have been the monthly occupancy rates for both the public wards and private wards during the last 6 months.
3. How much rent will Health and Life Care be paying the NT government for the land on which the new private hospital is being built.
4. How much money has the NT government contributed towards the establishment of the new private hospital.
5. If Health and Life Care sell their private hospital, will there be a breach of contract. If so, what conditions of the contract would have been contravened.

6. To what extent has the initial projected cost of the new private hospital been exceeded and supplemented by NT government expenditure.
7. What level of federal subsidy has been received during the last 6 months for the private wards.
8. What is the expected level of federal subsidy to be provided over a 12-month period for the new private hospital.
9. Will the private hospital be providing a rehabilitation service; if so -
 - (a) at what cost will it be provided to the NT government;
 - (b) how will it be made available to clients, who do not have private hospital cover; and
 - (c) how does the government intend to apply the Work Health Act provisions.
10. What arrangements have been made with doctors for -
 - (a) the provision of specialist services at the private hospital; and
 - (b) remuneration of specialist doctors for their services.
11. What cost sharing arrangements have been entered into enabling economies of scale to occur between the Royal Darwin Hospital and the private hospital for -
 - (a) ambulance services;
 - (b) pharmaceutical products;
 - (c) x-ray films and equipment; and
 - (d) laundry and catering.
12. What arrangements have been made to contract out pathology, radiology, catering and any other services to the private sector.

4 October 1988

In court cases relating to slayings as heard by the Alice Springs Court since the introduction of the Criminal Code 1 January 1983 -

1. How many people have been charged with a slaying offence.
2. How many people have been convicted of -

- (a) murder;
 - (b) manslaughter;
 - (c) committing a dangerous act; and
 - (d) other.
3. What is the average head sentence imposed by the judge on the above convicted persons.
 4. What is the average actual sentence served by the above convicted persons.

67. Treatment of Ear Infections in Schools

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. What are the number and percentages of school-age children, by rural school in the Alice Springs, Tennant Creek and Katherine areas, that have:
 - (a) glue ear;
 - (b) perforated ear drums; and
 - (c) educationally significant hearing impairment.
2. How many of the schools mentioned in question 1 above have Health Workers involved in full time campaigns at the school to treat the conditions.

68. Leased Premises

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for LABOUR, ADMINISTRATIVE SERVICES and LOCAL GOVERNMENT

1. How much space being leased by the NT government as at 1 October 1988 -
 - (a) was occupied; and
 - (b) was unoccupied.
2. What are the locations/addresses of the above leased areas.
3. In each case, what is the length of the lease.
4. What is the monthly cost of leasing those areas not occupied.
5. Are there cleaning contracts for the unoccupied leased areas; if so, what is the monthly cost of the cleaning contracts.

17 May 1988

53. Kormilda College - Expenditure

Mr EDE to MINISTER for EDUCATION

1. What Territory government money has been spent at Kormilda College on -
 - (a) teacher housing;
 - (b) boarder accommodation;
 - (c) classrooms;
 - (d) landscaping; and
 - (e) other areas in Kormilda,
 since the take-over by the new Board of Management.
2. Are there any arrangements to recoup this money.
3. What ongoing commitment does the Northern Territory government have to provide money for Kormilda College.
4. What fee structures are proposed for Kormilda College students.
5. What arrangements have been made over the title of land at Kormilda College with the new Board of Management.

ANSWER

1. Following an estimate by the Department of Transport and Works in mid-1986, which recommended that restoration would cost $2.1m, the following refurbishing and upgrading work was carried out at Kormilda College -

(a) teacher housing	$ 218 000
(b) boarder accommodation	$ 610 000
(c) classrooms	$ 200 000
(d) landscaping	$ 13 000
(e) other areas, including kitchen, administration, services, recreation	$ 462 000
(f) swimming pool	$ 73 000
	$1 576 000

2. There are no direct arrangements to recoup moneys spent on upgrading the facilities at Kormilda. However, with an expected enrolment of 500 students by 1994, the government can reasonably expect substantial savings in the amount of per capita expenditure paid to students at Kormilda once it becomes a non-government school.
3. Provision will be made within the Department of Education's estimates for:
 - ° payment, from 1 July 1989, of recurrent per capita grants and isolated student allowances in respect of students at current rates; and for
 - ° subvention grants in 1988-89 at a similar level to 1987-88 and reducing grants from 1989-90 phasing out at the end of 1993-94 financial year. The level will be set in the 1988-89 budget.
4. The Interim Board of Governors has advised that the fee structure will be variable according to the following parameters:
 - ° the age of the student
 - ° the student's degree of isolation
 - ° whether the student is entitled to an Aboriginal Secondary Education (ABSEC) Grant or Assistance for Isolated Children (the AIC Scheme).

The Commonwealth's student assistance schemes are designed around these above criteria. The NT assistance schemes take into account the student's degree of isolation, handicap and family income.

The base level of fees for both tuition and boarding is $6000 per annum in total, and discounts are offered so as to minimise family contribution and maximise Commonwealth and NT student assistance schemes.

5. The government has recently agreed to grant to the Interim Board of Governors a Crown lease in perpetuity over the land in question.

61. Trade Development Zone

Mr SMITH to MINISTER for INDUSTRIES and DEVELOPMENT

1. How many letters of intent have been signed by firms indicating an intention to establish in the Trade Development Zone.
2. How many letters of intent have been translated into binding agreements to establish in the Trade Development Zone.

ANSWERS TO WRITTEN QUESTIONS

3. Of those binding agreements, how many have been implemented - i.e. how many firms have actually established in the zone.
4. Will the minister table the legal advice, which his predecessor indicated to the Legislative Assembly on 25 November 1986 had been sought on the question, as to whether letters of intent are legally binding documents.
5. What is the total amount of money paid to Mr K.K. Yeung as -
 - (a) retainer;
 - (b) contact fee at the letter of intent stage;
 - (c) start-up fee at establishment in zone; and
 - (d) reimbursement for expenses in promoting the zone since his engagement as the prime consultant.
6. When does Mr K.K. Yeung's current contract expire.
7. Will the contract be renewed.
8. What are the terms and conditions for its renewal.
9. How many days has the Chairman of the Trade Development Zone Authority spent on TDZA business in 1986, 1987 and 1988 -
 - (a) interstate; and
 - (b) overseas.
10. For each of the overseas trips taken by Mr McHenry, what has been -
 - (a) the cost of accommodation;
 - (b) the cost of travel; and
 - (c) the cost of entertainment and other expenses.

ANSWER

1. 21 companies have signed Letters of Intent.
2. 6 companies have signed Primary Agreements following a Letter of Intent, with an additional company (Railex Fadelli) signing an Agreement without a Letter of Intent. Total 7 Primary Agreements.
3. Of the 7 agreements signed, 5 companies have established in the zone. In addition to these 5 companies, 1 other company is currently finalising start-up arrangements. The other is still negotiating on BMP arrangements prior to confirming start-up intentions.

4. A legal opinion from Morris Fletcher & Cross on whether or not the agreements are legally binding on the parties has been sought and obtained. In short, the opinion is that the agreements are legally binding but, for obvious commercial in-confidence reasons, I do not propose to table that response.
5. Moneys paid to Mr K.K. Yeung since 1985 in conjunction with his activities on behalf of the TDZA total $624 127. The specific components of this amount are not appropriate for release as public information and are a matter between K.K. Yeung and the TDZA.
6. As per question 5.
7. As above.
8. As above.
9. Over the period 1986 to 30 June 1988, Mr McHenry has spent 183 days overseas and 45 days interstate.
10. In respect of Mr McHenry's overseas travel over the above period, the total cost thereof amounted to $105 596. It is not proposed to provide a break-up of cost in respect of each trip.

Trade Development Zone

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

Mr Speaker, my question relates to the state of the Trade Development Zone and its management. Was it this year or last year that Mr Col Fuller, the former head of the department and a member of the Board of the Trade Development Zone Authority, informed him of his concerns about payments to Mr K.K. Yeung and, secondly, what action did he take as a result of the concerns raised by Mr Fuller?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, in this Assembly, matters relating to the Trade Development Zone are carried by the minister responsible for the Trade Development Zone. Questions from the honourable member in relation to the Trade Development Zone generally should be directed to the appropriate minister.

Registration of Vehicles from Interstate

Mr FIRMIN to MINISTER for TRANSPORT and WORKS

I refer to a recent television advertising campaign pointing out the need for interstate drivers to register their vehicles after living in the Territory for 3 months or longer. Could he inform the House of the success or otherwise of this campaign?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I can advise the member for Ludmilla that the campaign to encourage interstate transferees to re-register within the Northern Territory has been most successful. That campaign was based on some requirements of the Motor Vehicles Act that were implemented last year requiring that people who moved to the Northern Territory transfer, within a period of 3 months, not only their motor vehicle registrations but also their licences unless there is some good reason for the registrar to grant them a dispensation. The reason for this requirement is quite obvious. Territory roads are very expensive to maintain and there needs to be equity in regard to the third party insurance provisions in that the Territory pool of funds ought to reflect the total use of Territory roads by its citizens.

This has been a problem for some time, particularly in Alice Springs, as you know only too well, Mr Speaker. In fact, some time ago, you drew to my attention various practices of individuals and companies who were bringing fleets of vehicles to the Territory and maintaining their interstate registration for long periods. The Territory's annual registration inspection is most important, particularly in regions where vehicles are used on gravel roads which can lead to a rapid deterioration in the condition and safety of vehicles.

The television campaign has led to a substantial increase in vehicle registrations in the Territory. In the period from 1 July to 12 September, there were just over 3000 registrations in 1987 compared with 3422 this year. August is normally a very heavy registration period and there have been some 400 more registrations this August than last August. I believe these increased registrations are directly attributable to the campaign. It has been extremely successful and the Territory coffers are being appropriately filled. Territorians will no longer have to bear the burden on behalf of companies or individuals from interstate who fail to transfer their vehicle registrations to the Territory.

Trade Development Zone

Mr SMITH to CHIEF MINISTER

The Chief Minister was the minister responsible for the Trade Development Zone during the period to which this question relates. Was it this year or last year that Mr Col Fuller, the former head of the Department of Industries and Development and a member of the Board of the Trade Development Zone Authority, informed him of his concerns about payments to Mr K.K. Yeung, and what action did the minister take as a result of the concerns raised by Mr Fuller?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I rise to make this simple point. Discussions between ministers and their departmental heads or between ministers and board members of authorities which are responsible to them are obviously matters between those parties. There is no possibility of maintaining a working relationship with the public service or board members if the Leader of the Opposition is able validly to rise in this Assembly and ask whether this or that conversation occurred last week, last year or whenever.

Mr Smith: I asked when it took place. I know that it took place.

Mr PERRON: If he has some evidence that he would like to put forward, let him do so. Instead of making snide insinuations that a certain conversation took place, let him put some evidence before us. But, to expect a minister to try to maintain any sort of relationship whatsoever with the public service whilst the Leader of the Opposition has his tape-recorder in the room, which obviously is what he would like to have, is clearly nonsensical.

School Council Regulations

Mr PALMER to MINISTER for EDUCATION

Some time ago, he undertook to review the school council regulations as they apply to the makeup of those school councils. Has that review taken place and, if it is complete, what revisions will he be making to those regulations?

ANSWER

Mr Speaker, I thank the honourable member for his question. Indeed, I have completed the review of the school council regulations. It has been a lengthy exercise. I have spoken to representatives of all school councils and the principals or acting principals of schools. I have spoken also to the Council of Government School Organisations and the Northern Territory Teachers Federation in relation to that review. All points put forward during the course of those discussions and the comments made by members of this Assembly have been taken on board during the formulation of my views. The regulations will be adjusted in due course.

It is interesting to note that, during the course of the review and the discussions, a number of points have been raised that we have been unable to address as yet. In some Aboriginal communities, for example, there were some situations where the councils did not relate to the natural parents. They wanted huge councils. Two such places were Yirara College and Yirrkala. At Ludmilla Special School, there was concern also because there were insufficient parents actively involved who would be able to make up the mix required in the regulations passed in February.

One point that we will have to address at a later stage is in relation to schools which have a large enrolment of Aboriginal students. This was raised during the course of discussions with various school councils. The representation on the school councils did not reflect the large enrolment of Aboriginal students. I have left the matter with the councils at this time. I hope that, where there is a large component of Aboriginal students at a particular school, it will ask FEPI to examine the matter and look after the interests of the Aboriginal students at that school. We will be monitoring that aspect as time goes by.

The changes are as follows. Firstly, the regulations provided that the secretary, with the Minister for Education's approval, could nominate a non-voting person to advise and assist the council. The presence of an advisory secretary's nominee on a school council is regarded as superfluous. The principal has power to discharge any role of council which may have been contemplated for the secretary's representative. I have moved therefore to abolish the position on school councils of the secretary's representatives.

The new role for the principal will be spelled out clearly in an amended regulation. The regulation establishing the position of departmental representative will be repealed. The subregulation making a head teacher an ex-officio member of council will be expanded to require him also to inform the council on education matters. I have looked also to strengthening the role of the school's principal in council affairs to ensure that the principal, when directed by the secretary, informs and advises his council of departmental policy.

The regulations also provided that representatives of certain classes of persons could be coopted on to councils. The term 'coopt' has negative connotations and, in the context of school council rules, is inappropriate. The term 'coopt' was also unclear to those who would use the regulation most. To clarify that position, the word 'invite' is to be used.

There will be changes to provisions for MLAs to be elected to councils. The MLA's term may not exceed 2 years. In the past, a fixed 2-year term was set. The new, flexible term allows the council more discretion when it extends an invitation to the MLA in the first instance.

In the past, the regulation provided for the chairpersons of school councils to be members who were (a) parents of children at that school or (b) parents of children at the school and also government school teachers or government school principals elsewhere. All of those could have been chairpersons of a particular council. The head teacher of a government school, for which the council is established, will not now chair a school council meeting other than for the purposes of electing office bearers. Head teachers who are acting head teachers from any government school will be restricted from being appointed as chairpersons of councils.

Finally, the regulations provided that a school council would not have more than one-third of its total elected membership comprised of Northern Territory Teaching Service officers, Department of Education public servants or full-time employees of government schools. Generally, I found that there is no proven need to limit the numbers of any class of government employee on school councils, other than teachers in a school where a school council is elected. Any ceiling on membership of school councils by other government employees will now be removed, except in exceptional circumstances. Those exceptional circumstances arise when a school council proposes to undertake special functions under section 71C(1)(m) of the Education Act. Such functions relate to a school council selecting staff to perform teaching duties and, in such a case, the one-third ceiling would be extended to limit the number of teachers on the council, both teachers from the school concerned and from other schools.

In the case of the vast majority of councils, those not taking the responsibility for employing teaching staff, the following condition will apply. Of the school council membership, the number who are teachers from within that school will be limited to one-third of the total. That is the situation in most school councils. Where school councils become involved in employing staff to perform teaching duties, the government will limit the number of teaching service members on the council to not more than one-third of the total council membership. I emphasise that it will be entirely up to councils whether or not they become involved in staff selection and, indeed, a number of people to whom I have spoken during the course of this review have expressed reluctance to be involved in that area. I make it clear, however, that the decision on whether or not to be involved will be left to each school council. The government will require school councils which are not involved in that process to limit the number of members who are officers within the meaning of the Teaching Service Act employed at that school to one-third of total council membership. In many cases, councils currently make that provision. Finally, the government will remove any ceiling on the numbers of non-teaching Department of Education employees able to be elected to school councils.

The regulations are being drafted and they will be processed in the normal manner. They will be in place in ample time for the Annual General Meetings of school councils. I would like to take the opportunity to thank all those people who have been involved in the review exercise. It has been a lengthy process. When I stated that I would be speaking to representatives of all school councils, I did not realise just how time-consuming that would be. It has been worth while. Many issues have come to light, issues that still have to be addressed by government. I believe the exercise has indicated the government's willingness to look at issues responsibly and take note of the concerns of the public. I hope that school councils will continue to contact me about their concerns and I will ensure that any such concerns are examined in a responsible manner.
